VIII. 12. Πάλιν οὖν αὐτοῖς ἐδήλωσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς λέγων Ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου· ὁ ἀκολουθεῖν μοι οὐ μὴ περιπατήσῃ ἐν τῇ

Jesus declares Himself the Light of the World (VIII. 12-20)

VIII. 12. πάλιν οὖν αὐτοῖς ἐδήλωσεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς.<sup>1</sup> The introductory πάλιν does not fix the context of the discourse which follows, for it is merely resumptive or indicative of the beginning of a new section, as at v. 21 (see on 1st). Verses 12-20 have points of contact with c. 7 (cf. 7th and 8th), and it is possible (although not certain; see on 7th) that they should be taken in continuation of the sayings 7<sup>th-20</sup>. If vv. 12-20 follow directly on 7th, as we take them, we must suppose the words of 8th to be addressed to the Pharisees, who proceed (8th) to find fault with them. This, indeed, is implied in αὐτοῖς. Nevertheless, the proclamation "I am the Light of the World" recalls such sayings as 7<sup>th, 20</sup>, which were addressed to all and sundry.

ἐδήλωσεν λέγων, λέγων introducing the words spoken; see on 3rd, and cf. Mt. 14th.

ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου. This is one of the great "I am's" of the Fourth Gospel, for which see Introd., p. cxviii.

Just as the word of Jesus about the Living Water (7<sup>th, 39</sup>) may have been suggested by the water ceremonial at the Feast of Tabernacles, so it has been thought that the claim "I am the Light of the World" may also have a reference to the festal ceremonies. On the first night of the feast, there was a ceremony of lighting the four golden candlesticks in the Court of the Women (see v. 20), and there is some evidence for the continuance of the ceremony on other nights. This may have provided the occasion for the words of Jesus about light and darkness. But Philo's account of the Feast of Tabernacles would furnish an equally plausible explanation. He says that this feast is held at the autumnal equinox, in order that the world (κόσμος) may be full, not only by day but also by night, of the all-beautiful light (τοῦ παγκάλου φωτός), as at that season there is no twilight (de septem. 24). We have in this passage a close parallel to τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου, but no stress ought to be laid upon such verbal coincidences. The passage of Philo shows, however, that the Feast of Tabernacles suggested the idea of light to some minds.<sup>2</sup>

The Hebrews had thought of God as giving them light, and as being their light. "The Lord is my Light" was the confession of a Psalmist (Ps. 27<sup>1</sup>); "The Lord shall be thy everlasting Light" was the promise of a prophet (Isa. 60<sup>1</sup>). The later Rabbin applied the thought to the Messiah: "Light is the Name of Messiah," they said.<sup>1</sup> The vision of Deutero-Isaiah was larger, for he proclaimed that the Servant of Yahweh would be a Light to the Gentiles (Isa. 49<sup>1</sup> 49<sup>6</sup>; cf. Lk. 2<sup>32</sup>). But the saying ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου goes far beyond this, for the κόσμος (see on 1<sup>9</sup>) includes all created life.<sup>2</sup> There is no Hebrew parallel to be found for such a thought,<sup>3</sup> the expression of which here is thoroughly Johannine in form. See Intro., p. cxviii.

In the Prologue, the Word of God is spoken as of the Light. John the Baptist was not the Light, but he came to bear witness of the Light (1<sup>9</sup>), which was τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀληθινόν, lighting every man (1<sup>9</sup>). In the Person of Jesus, the Light came into the world (3<sup>19</sup>), as Jesus Himself said, ἐγὼ φῶς εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐβλάστη (12<sup>8</sup>). And so here (8<sup>12</sup>) and at 9<sup>5</sup>, the majestic phrase ἐγώ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου is put into the mouth of Jesus.

In the Sermon on the Mount, according to Mt. 5<sup>14</sup>, Jesus said to His hearers ἡμεῖς ὅτι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου. This is apparently to say more than Paul said to his converts when he called them φωστῆρες ἐν κόσμῳ (Phil. 2<sup>15</sup>); and it is not certain that Mt.'s Greek rendering of our Lord's words is accurate here.<sup>4</sup> But if it is precise, the application of the words τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου to faithful citizens of the kingdom of heaven must be wholly different from its application when Christ used it of Himself and said, "I am the Light of the World." This is to make an exclusive claim, such as could be made by no other speaker, although others might claim to share in the assurance of Christ that His people are, as contrasted with non-Christians, the world's light. Cf. 7<sup>38</sup> and the note thereupon.

<sup>3</sup> Westcott quotes from Buxtorf a sentence from the Jerusalem Talmud (Sabb. c. 2) to the effect that "the first Adam was the light of the world"; but the parallelism seems to be only verbal. Indeed, the Hebrews had not any clear idea of the κόσμος as an ordered universe of being.

<sup>4</sup> Abbott (Diat. 1748; cf. 435) urges that Mt.'s report must be wrong, and that what Jesus really said was, "Ye Are the Light of the World." But there is no evidence for this, nor would it suit the context, Mt. 5<sup>14-16</sup>.

σπουδῆς, ἀλλ' ἔξει τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς. 13 εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ὁ ἀπολασθῆναι μὴ οὐ μὴ περιπατήσῃ ἐν τῇ σκοτίᾳ. To "follow" Jesus is to walk in the light. It is the first act of discipleship (1<sup>9</sup>), and the last precept in the Gospel enjoins it as the essential thing (21<sup>25</sup>). See 12<sup>36</sup>. Jesus Himself is "the Way" (14<sup>6</sup>).

The Hebrew verb הלך "to walk" is often used in the O.T. figuratively of conduct in general (e.g. 2 Kings 20<sup>3</sup>), and is sometimes, when used in this sense, rendered in the LXX by περιπατέω (e.g. Prov. 8<sup>20</sup>, Eccles. 11<sup>7</sup>). This use of περιπατέω is found only once in the Synoptists (Mk. 7<sup>1</sup>; cf. Acts 21<sup>28</sup>), but occurs over 30 times in Paul, and frequently in Jn. (see 12<sup>36</sup>, 1 Jn. 1<sup>6, 7</sup>, 2<sup>6, 11</sup>; cf. 2 Jn.<sup>6</sup>, 3 Jn.<sup>3, 9</sup>). It is, in fact, a Hebraism.

The contrast between the Two Ways, of Darkness and of Light, is not peculiar to Jn. (cf. Barnabas, § 18), but it is a favourite topic in his Gospel (see, for "walking" in light or in darkness, 11<sup>9</sup> 12<sup>36</sup>, 1 Jn. 1<sup>6, 7</sup>). Job (29<sup>9</sup>) speaks of the days when God watched over him: "and by His light I walked through darkness" (cf. Mic. 7<sup>8</sup>). This is part of the thought in "he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life"; but it is less explicit. The Light of God is the Light of Life (τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς).

The Odes of Solomon several times express the idea of the believer walking in the Light of Christ, e.g. "He set over [His way] the footprints of His light, and I walked therein" (vii. 17; cf. xxxix. 7, xxxii. 1).

The phrase τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς may mean the Light which imparts life or illuminates life; or it may mean the Light which issues from Life. We have seen that in 6<sup>35</sup> the primary meaning of "I am the Bread of Life" is understood by the evangelist to be "the Bread which gives life" (6<sup>35</sup>), but the deeper meaning of "the Living Bread" is not excluded (6<sup>51</sup>). So here we must allow for a double suggestiveness in the phrase τὸ φῶς τῆς ζωῆς. When we apply such concepts as ζωῆς, φῶς, to God or to Christ, we cannot treat them as if we knew them to be fundamentally distinct. They are qualities or aspects of Absolute Being, and it is beyond our powers to define them adequately or explain their mutual relation. In the Fourth Gospel, Christ is the Light: He is also the Life (11<sup>25</sup> 14<sup>6</sup>). Perhaps Light is Life, in its essence; perhaps Life, truly understood, is Light. See on 1<sup>9</sup>, and Intro., p. cxl.

18. εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι. For the "Pharisees," see on 7<sup>32</sup>, and cf. 12<sup>14</sup>. Their objection was that the testimony of Jesus to His own claims was not admissible, according to the rules of evidence which governed the controversies of the Rabbis (see on 5th). Self-witness was always suspect, and might be disregarded as being untrue.

14. The answer of Jesus κἀν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ, ἀληθής ἐστιν ἡ μαρτυρία μου is in formal contradiction with His former admission ἐὰν ἐγὼ μαρτυρῶ περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ, ἢ μαρτυρία μου οὐκ ἔστιν ἀληθής (5th, where see note); but there is no real contradiction, for here he takes higher ground, so to speak, than on that occasion, and claims that the Divine origin and dignity of which He is conscious justify Him in bearing witness to Himself. This is the very badge of Deity (see v. 18), although it is true that no individual man could claim it (as He had said, 5th). He alone could be called ὁ ἀμύνης, ὁ μάρτυς ὁ πιστὸς καὶ ἀληθινός (Rev. 3rd).

ὅτι οὐδα πῶθεν ἦλθον, "because I know (with complete knowledge) whence I came," sc. at the Incarnation (cf. 1st 13th 16th).

καὶ πῶς ὑπέσχετο, "and whither I go"; see on 7th for ὑπέσχετο used of "going to the Father."

The words which follow, ὑμεῖς . . . ὑπέσχετο, do not appear to have been present in the texts known to Origen, but the omission is readily explicable by homoioteleuton, ὑπέσχετο . . . ὑπέσχετο.

ὑμεῖς δὲ (ἢ ἢ ἢ) οὐκ οὐδατε πῶθεν ἔρχομαι. That is, they did not know of His heavenly origin, although (like the Jewish interlocutors of 7th) they may have known that He was of the family at Nazareth.

ἢ πῶς ὑπέσχετο. See on 7th.

BDNT support ἢ; the rec., with sLWΘ, has καὶ.

16. The Pharisees had complained that the self-witness of Jesus was unsupported and therefore untrustworthy (v. 13). In v. 14 Jesus has answered that their objection, however sound if applied to a mere man, fails in His case: they do not know His origin or His home. He now adds that their judgment is superficial because of this ignorance of His true being.

ὑμεῖς κατὰ τὴν σάρκα κρίνετε, "you judge superficially"; cf. for κατὰ τὴν σάρκα, 1 Cor. 1st 2nd, 2 Cor. 5th. The Pharisees had done just what He had previously warned them not to do, when He said μὴ κρίνετε κατ' ὄψιν (7th).

κρίνω ἢ ἐμὴ ἀληθινή ἐστιν, ὅτι μόνος οὐκ εἰμὶ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ πᾶς κόσμος

ἐγὼ δὲ κρίνω οὐδένα. The ultimate purpose of His coming into the world was to save it, not to judge it (3rd); and if an individual man would not obey His word, Jesus did not judge him then: the spoken word would judge him at the Last Day (12th). At that Great Assize, the Son of Man will be the Judge (see on 3rd 5th, and Introd., p. clviii). But the saying ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα refers to the action of Jesus during His public mission on earth, and not to the future judgment of the world. There is a sense in which He did judge, or discriminate between one man and another, during His earthly ministry (see vv. 16, 26); but ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα expresses not only that this was not the purpose of His mission (see 3rd), but that it was not His habit. It was a charge made against Him that He did not discriminate sufficiently, that He consorted with publicans and sinners (Mk. 2nd, Lk. 15th), that He did not repel the sinful woman at the Pharisee's house (Lk. 7th). Even in the case of the adulteress whose guilt was proved, when judgment must have been condemnation, He said οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω [8th]. His example was consonant to His own precept μὴ κρίνετε (Mt. 7th).

This saying of Christ ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω οὐδένα is found only in Jn., but its genuineness becomes the more apparent the more closely it is examined. It is a paradox, for it is seemingly contradicted in the next verse, but it is one of those terse, pregnant paradoxes of which the Synoptists have preserved many examples.<sup>1</sup>

ἐὰν κρίνω δὲ κτλ., "but if I judge, my judgment is sound," i.e. not merely true, but soundly based and complete. Cf. ἢ κρίνω ἢ ἐμὴ δικαία ἐστίν (5th, where see note).

The judgment of Christ is not that of a single individual, for μόνος οὐκ εἰμὶ, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ πᾶς κόσμος με. Cf. vv. 25, 29, for the same thought, and again 16th οὐκ εἰμὶ μόνος, ὅτι ὁ πατήρ μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐστίν. The consciousness of this perpetual association with the Father is explicitly claimed by the Christ of Jn.; but it is implied, too, in the bitterness of the cry "Why hast Thou forsaken me," which is recorded only by Mk. and Mt. Herein was the anguish of the Cross, as they picture it.

The general principle to which the Pharisees appealed, sc. that judgment, like testimony, must not depend on one individual, is well illustrated in a Jewish saying (Pirke Aboth, iv. 12, quoted by Westcott), "Judge not alone, for none may judge alone save One."

ἢ μαρτυρία ἀληθῆς ἐστίν. 18. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ,

17. γέγραπται. In generally has γεγραμμένων ἐστίν where the Synoptists would have γέγραπται (see on 2<sup>17</sup>). But γεγραμμένων ἐστίν here is attested by M only; all other authorities give γέγραπται, which must therefore be regarded as the true reading. Abbott (Diat. 2588a) suggests that γέγραπται ἐστίν is used here to introduce a quotation not given exactly.

ἐν τῷ νόμῳ κτλ. This is a free reference to the maxim of evidence in Deut. 10<sup>10</sup> (cf. Num. 35<sup>10</sup>, Deut. 17<sup>9</sup>; and see 1 Cor. 13<sup>1</sup>, 1 Tim. 5<sup>19</sup>). For another reference by Jesus to this legal maxim, cf. Mt. 23<sup>16</sup>.

The phrase "your law" challenges scrutiny. Jesus accepted the "law," i.e. the Old Testament scriptures, very explicitly (see Introd., pp. cxlvii, clv); and it is unlike the way in which He was accustomed to speak of it, that he should say "your law," thus dissociating Himself, as it were, from any recognition of its authority. He is represented in 10<sup>34</sup> as again using this expression, and in 15<sup>25</sup> as speaking to His disciples of Scripture as "their law," i.e. the law of the Jews. It is true that in 8<sup>37</sup> and 10<sup>34</sup> the phrase appears in controversy with the Jews, and it might be thought that it supplied an argumentum ad hominem. Those who disputed with Jesus were shown to be in the wrong, on their own principles. But in the equally argumentative passage 7<sup>19</sup>, 23, He speaks of "the law" and "the law of Moses"; and no such explanation can be given of the phrase "their law" in 15<sup>25</sup>, which would definitely dissociate Him from the people of Israel, by suggesting that their Scriptures were not His Scriptures. In every place where δ νόμος is mentioned by Him in the Synoptists, whether it refers to the law which He came "not to destroy, but to fulfil," or in a wider sense to the O.T. books, He always says "the Law" (cf. Mt. 5<sup>17, 18</sup> 7<sup>12</sup> 11<sup>13</sup> 12<sup>50</sup> 22<sup>40</sup> 23<sup>2</sup>, Lk. 24<sup>45</sup>, Mk. 7<sup>12</sup> 10<sup>5</sup> 16<sup>7</sup>); the word νόμος does not occur in Mk.).

It is difficult to think that in these Johannine texts (8<sup>37</sup> 10<sup>34</sup> 15<sup>25</sup>) the words of Jesus have been exactly reproduced.<sup>1</sup>

18. The use of ἐγὼ εἰμι in solemn affirmation has been discussed in Introd., p. cxviii; and the present passage provides an instructive example of this usage.

ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ. This is the style of Deity. As the Pharisees had urged, a man's witness about himself

καὶ μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ δ πέμπας με Πατρός. 19. ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ
Παὸς ἐστίν ὁ Πατὴρ σου; ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς. Οὕτως ἐγὼ οὐδαμὸς οὐτὴν τὸν Πατέρα μου· εἰ ἐγὼ ᾄδω, καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου ἂν ᾄδῃτε. 20. Ταῦτα is not trustworthy (v. 13); but Jesus replies to it by expressing Himself in terms which suggest His Divinity. This, however, is not said explicitly; and the point of His answer which the Pharisees understand is that He says that there is a second Witness, sc. His Father who sent Him (cf. 5<sup>32</sup>). There is a prophetic passage, Isa. 43<sup>10</sup>, which has close verbal relations with this and v. 28: γένοσθε μοι μάρτυρες, καὶ ἐγὼ μάρτυς, λέγει κύριος ὁ θεός, καὶ ὁ παῖς μου ὃν ἐξελέξαμαι, ἅνα γνώσῃτε καὶ πιστεύσῃτε, καὶ σωθῆτε ἐκ ἐγὼ εἰμι. The thought in Isa. 43<sup>10</sup>, however, is of witness being borne to Yahweh (1) by the people, (2) by His Servant, and, according to the LXX interpolation, (3) by Himself.

For the witness of the Father to the Son, see on 9<sup>37</sup>.

19. καὶ ἐστίν ὁ πατὴρ σου; This is the rejoinder of the Jewish objectors. They understand that by ὁ πατὴρ (v. 16) Jesus means God the Father, and they do not ask "Who is He?" But they say "Where is He?" This second Witness, of whom Jesus had spoken, is not visible, and therefore (according to the Rabbinical doctrine of evidence) no appeal can be made to Him.

The answer of Jesus is, in effect, that their ignorance is invincible. God cannot, of course, be perceived by the senses. He is appealing to the witness of One whom no man can see.

οὐτὴν ἐγὼ οὐδαμὸς οὐτὴν πατέρα μου. There is no inconsistency with 7<sup>23</sup> εἰ οὐκ οὐδαμὸς, for there Jesus speaks only of the Jews' knowledge of Him as man, and of the family at Nazareth; here He speaks of their ignorance of His true Personality, which is Divine (cf. v. 14). Being ignorant of this, and therefore of His relation to the Father, they betray ignorance also of the Father Himself. Cf. οὐκ ἐγνώκατε αὐτόν (v. 55), and οὐκ ἐγνώσαν τὸν πατέρα οὐδέ ἐγὼ (16<sup>7</sup>). See Mt. 11<sup>27</sup>, Lk. 10<sup>22</sup>.

εἰ ἐγὼ ᾄδω, καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου ἂν ᾄδῃτε. This principle is repeated 14<sup>7</sup>, εἰ ἐγνώκατέ με, καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου ἂν ᾄδῃτε (cf. 12<sup>42</sup> and 14<sup>7</sup>), and it is deep rooted in the Fourth Gospel. Jesus came to reveal the Father, not only by His words but by His life.

Note that εἰ ἐγὼ ᾄδῃτε of this verse is replaced by εἰ ἐγνώκατέ με at 14<sup>7</sup>, showing what precarious ground we are on when an attempt is made to distinguish οὐδέ from γεγνώκατε (see on 1<sup>20</sup>).

τὰ ῥήματα ἐλάλησεν ἐν τῷ γαζοφυλακίῳ διδάσκων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπίσταν αὐτῶν, ὅτι οὐκ ἔγνωσαν ἡ ἕρα αὐτοῦ.

21. Ἐπειὸν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῦ Ἔγω ἴστέγω καὶ ζηγήσεται με, καὶ ἐν

20. ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα. Emphatic, and therefore placed at the beginning of the sentence.

ἐλάλησεν ἐν τῷ γαζοφυλακίῳ. The γαζοφυλάκιον was the name for the treasure-chamber of the Temple (cf. Mk. 12<sup>41</sup>, Lk. 21<sup>1</sup>, and a Macc. 3<sup>4</sup> 4<sup>40</sup>). It abutted on the Court of the Women, and against its walls were placed chests, trumpet-like in form, as receptacles for the offerings of the worshippers. It is not probable that Jesus was teaching within a treasure-chamber, and so it seems that ἐν should be taken as denoting proximity only, "near the treasury" (cf. ἐν δεξιῷ τοῦ θεοῦ, Rom. 8<sup>34</sup>). Hence ἐν τῷ γαζοφυλακίῳ διδάσκων ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ means "teaching in the Temple precincts (see on 1<sup>24</sup>) near the treasury chamber," i.e. in the colonnade between it and the open court (cf. Mk. 12<sup>41</sup>). The hall where the Sanhedrim met was hard by, and probably within earshot of the place where Jesus was teaching.

καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐπίσταν αὐτῶν κτλ., "and yet" (καὶ being used for καίτω, as often in Jn.; see on 1<sup>29</sup>) "no man took Him, because His hour was not yet come." This is almost verbally repeated from 7<sup>30</sup>, where see note. For οὐκ ἔγνωσαν ἡ ἕρα αὐτοῦ, see also on 2<sup>4</sup>.

Jesus develops His lofty claims: some of the Jews who hear believe (vv. 21-30)

21. The occasion of the discourse which follows is not mentioned. It may be a continuation of what precedes (see on v. 26), and if so οὖν may be causative, having reference to the fact that Jesus had not been arrested (v. 20; cf. 7<sup>30</sup>). But perhaps οὖν is used as a mere conjunction (see on 1<sup>25</sup>), and πάλιν only marks (as in v. 12) the beginning of a new discourse. It is not possible to assign every discourse in Jn. to its original occasion; and one of the many rearrangements of the Gospel (that of F. W. Lewis) would place 8<sup>21-30</sup> after 7<sup>30</sup>. Ver. 21 reproduces, though not verbally, the warning of 7<sup>30, 34</sup>, and its last clause is addressed in identical terms to the disciples at 13<sup>39</sup> (where see note). But πάλιν is not to be taken as an allusion to the repetition of 7<sup>34</sup>; as has been said, it may only mark the opening of a new discourse or paragraph (v. 12, 10<sup>7</sup>; and see on 1<sup>26</sup>).

εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς. ΝΙΔΘ add ὁ Ἰησοῦς (from 7<sup>30</sup>), but om. κβδλτω.

τῇ ἀμαρτίᾳ ἧμῶν ἀποθανοῦσθε ἵνα ἐγὼ ἰδέγω ἡμᾶς ὃ ἴδνασθε ἐλάττω. 22. Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι Μὴτι ἀποκτενεῖς ἑαυτὸν, ὅτι λέγει Ὅπου ἐγὼ ἴδέγω ἡμᾶς ὃ ἴδνασθε ἐλάττω; 23. καὶ ἔλεγον αὐτοῖς Ὑμᾶς ἐκ τῶν κάτω ἐστέ, ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω εἰμι: ἡμᾶς ἐκ τούτου τοῦ ἐγὼ ἴδέγω. For this verb and its usage in Jn., see on 7<sup>30</sup>. "I go away," sc. to God.

καὶ ζηγήσεται με. As in 7<sup>34</sup>, this is the search of despair; they will seek Jesus as their Messiah, when it is too late. καὶ οὐκ ἐγήρησεν με is added by a few manuscripts from 7<sup>34</sup>, where it is part of the text; but it is implied in any case.

καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀμαρτίᾳ ἧμῶν ἀποθανοῦσθε, "and ye shall die in your sin," an O.T. phrase (cf. Ezek. 3<sup>18</sup> 18<sup>14</sup>, and especially Prov. 24<sup>9</sup> ἀποθνήσκει ἐκ φόβου ἐν ἀμαρτίᾳ, of which LXX rendering the phrase in the text may be a reminiscence). It is repeated v. 24, where see note. Those who too late seek Jesus as the Messiah, shall die in a state of sin, unredeemed by Him.

ἵνα ἐγὼ ἴδέγω ἡμᾶς ὃ ἴδνασθε ἐλάττω, "whither I go ye cannot come"; this is repeated verbally at 13<sup>34</sup>, where it is addressed to the disciples. Cf. 7<sup>34</sup>, where the same thing (in substance) was said to the Jews, and see the note there.

22. Ἐλεγον οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, sc. the Jewish objectors. μὴτι ἀποκτενεῖς ἑαυτὸν κτλ., "Is He going to kill Himself, that He says, 'Whither I am going ye cannot come'?" This is a quite different rejoinder from that of 7<sup>34</sup>, made in reply to the same warning, the occasion and the interlocutors both being different. It has often been suggested that the rejoinder carries a scornful allusion to the belief that the depths of hell were reserved for suicides (cf. Josephus, H. J. III. viii. 5, ἕδωκε σκοπιώτατος); but this is not certain. In any case, the Jews speak ironically: "If we cannot follow you, it must be because you will be no longer alive." The saying of mystery, "Whither I go ye cannot come," which was uttered more than once (7<sup>34</sup> 13<sup>39</sup>), naturally provoked different comments from different persons.

23. καὶ ἔλεγον. The rec. has εἶπεν, but κβδλτω have the imperfect ἔλεγον, which suggests that what follows was a habitual saying of Jesus. He leaves their taunt unanswered, but adds that His origin and natural home were different from the origin and home of "the Jews." It was not surprising that they did not understand Him when He said that He was moving to a region where they could not follow. Cf. Mt. 6<sup>21</sup>. "ὅπου ἐκ τῶν κάτω ἐστέ," "You are from beneath," i.e. "of the earth." Cf. ἐπι τῆς γῆς κάτω (Acts 2<sup>26</sup>). κάτω does not occur again in Jn. (but cf. 8<sup>9</sup>).

κόσμου ἐστί, ἐγὼ οὐκ εἶμι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. 24. εἶπον οὖν ἡμῖν ὅτι ἀποθάνοις ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ἡμῶν· ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ πιστεύσωμεν ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι, ἀποθάνοις ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ἡμῶν. 25. ἔλεγον οὖν ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω εἶμι. The contrast is the same as that of 3rd. The implied argument, sc. that the Jews' failure of understanding has its root in moral causes, has met us before (5th 17th), and is repeated 8th.

ἡμεῖς ἐκ τούτου τοῦ κόσμου ἐστέ. BT give the emphatic τούτου τοῦ κόσμου here, but the more usual τοῦ κόσμου τούτου in the second clause of the verse (so W in both clauses). MDLTA give τοῦ κόσμου τούτου in both clauses, and ὁ κόσμος οὗτος is the order in every other N.T. passage where the expression occurs. So, too, we always find ὁ αἰὼν οὗτος (except Mt. 12th).

The idea of imperfection which the word κόσμος, the totality of created being, suggests in Jn. has been noted on 1st. This idea is specially brought out in the phrase ὁ κόσμος οὗτος. When thus limited, the word does not embrace any plane of creation other than that of earth (12th), and "this world" is contrasted with the spiritual or heavenly world, as being in a special degree affected by evil powers (16th) and as awaiting the Judgment (9th 12th). The kingdom of Jesus is not of "this world" (18th), from which He passed after His Passion (13th). It is the place of our earthly discipline (1 Jn. 4th), in which he who hates his life shall keep it to life eternal (12th). The phrase occurs with a like hint of evil, 1 Cor. 3rd 5th 7th.

So here it is said of the Jews ἡμεῖς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐστέ. Cf. for the same construction εἶμι ἐκ, 1 Jn. 4th αὐτοὶ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου εἶμι.

ἐγὼ (emphatic) οὐκ εἶμι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. Cf. 17th 24th. It is the perpetual theme of the Fourth Gospel that He who was not "of the world" came "into the world" for its rescue.

24. εἶπον οὖν ἡμῖν, sc. at v. 21, where see note.

ἀποθάνοις ἐν ταῖς ἁμαρτίαις ἡμῶν, the singular τῇ ἁμαρτίᾳ being changed to the plural. To this no significance is to be attached, as when phrases are repeated in Jn., there are generally slight verbal alterations (see on 3rd).

ἐὰν γὰρ μὴ πιστεύωμεν ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι, ἀποθάνοις κτλ. Jesus repeats with an awful solemnity that if His hearers do not accept Him for what He is, they will die in their sins. ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι may mean "that I am from above," as He had just asserted of Himself, ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἄνω εἶμι. But if this be the construction, it is very elliptical. It is more probable that we should take ἐγὼ εἶμι absolutely, "I am He," i.e.

αὐτῷ Σὺ τίς εἶ; εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Τὴν ἀρχὴν ὃς τὴν καὶ λαλῶ ἡμῖν. 26. καλλῶ ἔγωγε περὶ ἡμῶν λαλεῖν καὶ κρίνειν· ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας

"I am the Divine Deliverer," as at vv. 28, 58, and 13th. For this use of ἐγὼ εἶμι as the equivalent of the Hebrew אֲנִי־אֵלֹהִים, see Introd. p. cxx, where the expression is more fully discussed. We may here particularly compare Isa. 43rd ἐγὼ πιστεύσωμεν . . . ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι (see on v. 18). Jesus had uttered His message; henceforth they had no excuse for their sin (15th).

26. ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ Σὺ τίς εἶ; The Jews are puzzled by the last words of Jesus. They sounded like the Divine proclamations in the prophetic books. Who is this, that says I AM? And they ask Him, "Who art Thou?" (cf. 1st). But He gives no direct or simple answer (cf. 19th). Cf. 10th for a similar question, and a similar indirectness of reply.

τὴν ἀρχὴν ὃς τὴν καὶ λαλῶ ἡμῖν, "Primarily (in essence), what I am telling you," i.e. "I am what my words reveal." We have already noted (see on 3rd and cf. 10th 12th 14th 16th) that λαλεῖν cannot always be sharply distinguished from λέγειν; and the constr. ὃς τὴν καὶ λαλῶ is similar to ὁ λόγος ἐν ἐλάλησεν of 12th, or ταῦτα λαλῶ of v. 28.

τὴν ἀρχὴν is never used in Jn. for "from the beginning," which is expressed by ἐξ ἀρχῆς (16th), or more frequently by ἀπ' ἀρχῆς (15th, 1 Jn. 1st and passim). In the LXX τὴν ἀρχὴν often stands for "at the beginning," "at the first"—e.g. Gen. 43rd, Dan. 9th (LXX), and Dan. 8th (Theod.)—which is a sound classical construction. (Cf. Herod. viii. 133 ἕντες ἀρχὴν ἐπὶ 4, "being originally seven in number.") But in the present passage the rendering "I have spoken at the beginning" is inadmissible, inasmuch as the verb is in the present (λαλῶ) and not in the aorist (ἐλάλησα). These considerations seem to rule out the R.V. "Even that which I have also spoken unto you from the beginning."

The R.V. margin treats the sentence as a question, and for the relative ὃς substitutes ὅτι. Thus τὴν ἀρχὴν ὅτι καὶ λαλῶ ἡμῖν; is translated "How is it that I even speak to you at all?" This rendering has the support of Chrysostom, and there is no doubt that τὴν ἀρχὴν may stand for ὅλος, ὁππῖου, especially in negative sentences. An apposite parallel to such a use is found in Clem. Hom. vi. 11, εἰ μὴ παρακολούθεις οἷς λέγω, τί καὶ τὴν ἀρχὴν διαλέγομαι; (a sentence in which some have found an echo of v. 25). The answer of Jesus, according to this view, is a severe rebuke, which has a note of impatience, comparable to Mk. 9th, "O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you!" But it is difficult to connect a rebuke

of this kind with the words which immediately follow in v. 26, καλλὰ ἔγω περὶ ἑμῶν λαλεῖν.

The Latin and Syriac vs. take the sentence as affirmative, not as interrogative; and herein they are probably right. But neither can be followed in detail. Syr. sin. gives "The chief is that I should speak myself with you, seeing that I have much that I should speak concerning you and judge"; but this provides no answer to the question "Who art thou?" Some O.L. texts give "initium quod et loquor uobis," i.e., "I am the Beginning (cf. Rev. 21<sup>b</sup>), that which I am saying to you"; but τὴν ἀρχὴν could not be attracted to εἶ in this way. The Vulgate has "incipitium quia et loquor uobis," which is still farther from the Greek.

We come back to the rendering, "Primarily, I am what I am telling you," as the least open to objection of the many renderings that have been offered of this difficult passage. τὴν ἀρχὴν means fundamentally or originally, or in colloquial English, "at bottom." In reply to the question "Who art thou?" Jesus declares to the Jews that He is essentially what His words reveal, in particular such words as ἐγὼ ἐκ τῶν ἀνω εἰμί (v. 23), and (above all) ἐγὼ εἰμι (v. 24).

26. καλλὰ ἔγω περὶ ἑμῶν λαλεῖν καὶ κρίνω. This seems to take up the teaching of v. 16 above. Jesus does not dwell upon His answer to the question "Who art thou?" He goes on with His discourse, as there was much still to say. With καλλὰ ἔγω λαλεῖν cf. καλλὰ ἔγω λέγων of 16<sup>a</sup>, a comparison which confirms the conclusion (reached in the note on 3<sup>12</sup>) that λαλεῖν and λέγων are not sharply distinguished by Jn., and that they are sometimes interchangeable.

καὶ κρίνω. His discourse was of judgment. He had already said twice to the Jews that they would die in their sins (vv. 21, 24), a κρίσις to which the words of v. 16 lead up.

ἀλλ' ὁ πέμψας με ἀληθῆς ἐστίν κτλ. This is again resumptive of v. 16, where Jesus had said that His judgment was true, because it was not His own, but reflected the judgment of the Father who had sent Him. The adversative ἀλλὰ points back to the objection which He continually rebuts, sc. that He has no authority behind Him. "Whatever objection you raise to my claim to judge, you must remember that He who sent me is true." See on v. 16 above; and cf. 3<sup>18</sup> 7<sup>b</sup>.

ἐγὼ δὲ ἤκουσα παρ' αὐτοῦ, ταῦτα λαλῶ εἰς τὸν κόσμον. Cf. 15<sup>18</sup> πάντα ἃ ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς μου ἐγνώρισα ὑμῖν, and see vv. 38, 40. Here the sayings "heard from the Father" were sayings of judgment, as at 5<sup>30</sup>, καθὼς ἀκούει κρίνω. And, κόσμον. 27. οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οἱ τὸν Πατέρα αὐτοῦ λέγειν. 28. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ὅταν ὑψώσῃτε τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, τότε γνώσεσθε οἱ ἐγὼ εἰμι, καὶ ἐν' ἐμᾶυτοῦ ποιῶ οὐδέν, ἀλλὰ καθὼς ἐβλάξην με ὁ unlike those of 13<sup>18</sup>, they were spoken "to the world" (cf. 15<sup>20</sup>).

To speak εἰς τὸν κόσμον is a constr. that is not found again in Jn.; but cf. 1 Cor. 14<sup>2</sup> εἰς ἀέρα λαλοῦντες, Mk. 13<sup>37</sup> εἰς πάντα τὰ ἔθνη οὐκ κεραιθῆναι τὸ εὐαγγέλιον.

ταῦτα λαλῶ. So κβδLNTWΔΘ, but minor uncials substitute λέγω for λαλῶ.

27. οὐκ ἔγνωσαν οἱ τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ λέγειν. This is one of the evangelist's comments on his narrative (see Intro., p. xxxiv), and it seems to confirm what has been said on v. 25 about the Jews' misunderstanding of the words of mystery which Jesus had uttered.

28. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, "Jesus therefore said," sc. because of their misunderstanding. κδNTWΔΘ add αὐτοῖς, but om. BLTW; κδ further add πάλιν.

ὅταν ὑψώσῃτε τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, "When you shall have lifted up," sc. on the Cross, "the Son of Man." See on 3<sup>14</sup> for ὑψοῖν in Jn., and cf. 12<sup>32</sup>. In the present passage ὑψοῖν must relate to the lifting up on the Cross, and not to the "lifting up" of the Ascension, for the latter was not in any sense the act of the Jews, as the Crucifixion was (cf. Acts 3<sup>14</sup>).

τότε γνώσεσθε οἱ ἐγὼ εἰμι, "then ye shall know that I am (the Son of Man)," the predicate of ἐγὼ εἰμι being understood from the preceding clause of the sentence. Otherwise, we must take ἐγὼ εἰμι as used absolutely, as in v. 24 (cf. 8<sup>28</sup> 13<sup>18</sup>), the phrase being then identical with the self-designation of Yahweh in the prophets, יְהוָה "I (am) He" (see Intro., p. cxx). On either interpretation, the style of the sentence is that of Divine proclamations: cf. Ezek. 11<sup>10</sup> ἐπιγνώσεσθε οἱ ἐγὼ κύριος.

Too late, the pressure of facts, the fall of Jerusalem and the like, would convince them of the truth of His words: "cognoscetis ex re, quod nunc ex uerbo non creditis" (Bengel). This, rather than the conviction of sin wrought by the Holy Spirit (16<sup>8</sup>), seems to be the force of τότε γνώσεσθε.

οἱ governs not only ἐγὼ εἰμι, but also the next clause ἐν' ἐμᾶυτοῦ ποιῶ οὐδέν κτλ. This had been said before, 5<sup>30</sup> (cf. 12<sup>49</sup>). For its significance, see note on 5<sup>10</sup>. Ignatius (Magis, 7) has ὁ κύριος ἀνεῦ τοῦ πατρὸς οὐδὲν ἐποίησεν, a reminiscence of these Johannine phrases.

ἀλλὰ καθὼς ἐβλάξην με ὁ πατήρ. Cf. v. 26, and see Πατήρ, ταῦτα λαλῶ. 29. καὶ ὁ πῆμφας με μετ' ἑμοῦ ἔσται" οὗκ ἀρνήσει με μόνον, ἔτι ἔγώ τ' ἄρα τὸ ἀρῶντά ἀπὸ τοῦ πάτρός. 30. Ταῦτα αἰετοῦ λαλοῦντος πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν.

14. 17. After πατήρ, BFA add μου, but om.  $\kappa\delta\text{LNT}\theta$ . W om. ὁ πατήρ.

ταῦτα λαλῶ: ταῦτα referring to the specific teachings of this section. Cf. 12<sup>30</sup> ταῦτα ἐλάλησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, and v. 30 ταῦτα λαλοῦντος. With the sentence καθὼς εἰδεδίκεν . . . λαλῶ, cf. the parallels 12<sup>30</sup> and 14<sup>31</sup>.

29. καὶ ὁ πῆμφας με (see on 3<sup>17</sup> for the mission of the Son) μετ' ἑμοῦ ἔσται κτλ. This has already been said at v. 16, ἔτι μόνος οὗκ εἶμι, ἀλλ' ἔγώ καὶ ὁ πῆμφας με, and is repeated 16<sup>30</sup> in a different context. Much more is implied here than in the saying of Peter that "God was with Him" (Acts 10<sup>36</sup>), for all through Jn. the ineffable union of the Son with the Father is behind the narrative (cf. 10<sup>36</sup>).

οὗκ ἀρνήσει με μόνον. ΠΑΝ add ὁ πατήρ unnecessarily; om. BDLTW $\theta$ . The union of the preincarnate Son with the Father (12<sup>37</sup>) was continued after the Incarnation.

31 is causal, "because I do do the things pleasing to Him." Thus at 13<sup>30</sup> Jesus tells His disciples that by keeping His commandments they will abide in His love, even as He by keeping His Father's commandments abides in the Father's love. The adj. ἀρῶντός occurs again in Jn. only at 1 Jn. 3<sup>23</sup>, and there, as here, of doing the things that are pleasing to God, i.e. of keeping His commandments. See, for a similar use of ἀρῶντός, Ex. 15<sup>26</sup>, Wisd. 9<sup>17</sup>, Isa. 3<sup>37</sup>.

For the thought that the continual aim of Jesus was to do the will of the Father, cf. 4<sup>34</sup> 5<sup>30</sup> 6<sup>38</sup>. Here He claims αἰώνως (πάντοτε) to do that which is pleasing to the Father, a claim which implies a consciousness of sinlessness (cf. v. 46 below).

The language of Ignatius (Magis, 8), ὅς κατὰ πάντα ἐπηρώτησεν τὸ πῆμφαντι αὐτόν, seems to rest on this verse.

30. ταῦτα αἰετοῦ λαλοῦντος. "As He was saying these things." The gen. absolute is infrequent in Jn., partly because of his fondness for parataxis; he never uses it in his report of the words of Jesus.

πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν. For this favourite phrase of Jn., see on 4<sup>39</sup>, where (as here) belief in Christ is due to what He said rather than to the "signs" which He wrought. Those who "believed in Him" were fewer in number than those who "believed Him"—a larger body who are addressed in the next verse, and of whom some, as the sequel shows, soon began to cavil at His teaching.

31. Ἐλεγεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς πρὸς τοὺς πεπιστωμένους ἀπὸ Ἰουδαίου: ἔάν ἡμᾶς μείνητε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ, ἀληθῶς μαθηταὶ μοῦ ἔστε, 32. καὶ γνώσεσθε τὴν ἀλήθειαν, καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια ἐλευθερώσει

Jesus tells the Jews who are inclined to believe Him, that truth would emancipate them from the slavery of sin (vv. 31-34)

31. Ἐλεγεν οὖν . . . πρὸς τοὺς πεπιστωμένους ἀπὸ Ἰουδαίου, "So He began to say to the Jews that believed Him," i.e. those who had been impressed by His recent utterances (but cf. vv. 33 and 40). πιστεύον followed by a dative does not represent so high a degree of faith as πιστεύειν εἰς τινά; but it indicates a stage on the way to discipleship. You must believe what a man says before you can believe in him. For the constr. πιστεύειν εἰς τινά, see on 12<sup>32</sup>; and cf. the note at 6<sup>30</sup> on πιστεύειν τινί. For the constr. ἔλεγεν πρὸς τινά, see on 2<sup>17</sup>.

ἔάν ἡμᾶς μείνητε ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τῷ ἐμῷ κτλ. Cf. 2 Jn.<sup>9</sup>, where we have μὴ μείνητε ἐν τῷ διδαχῇ τοῦ Χριστοῦ θεῖον οὐκ ἔχει. In v. 37 and at 5<sup>30</sup> a different metaphor is employed, sc. that of the λόγος of God abiding in the believer. But (see on 5<sup>30</sup>) the two expressions "abiding in His word" and "His word abiding in us" come to the same thing. See also on 6<sup>30</sup>, 15<sup>3</sup>.

ἀληθῶς μαθηταὶ μοῦ ἔστε. This is the highest rank among Christians, sc. those who have reached the stage of discipleship. See on 15<sup>3</sup>, where this is repeated.

32. καὶ γνώσεσθε τὴν ἀλήθειαν. For the conception of ἀλήθεια in Jn., see on 14<sup>17</sup>; and cf. vv. 40, 44, 45.

καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια ἐλευθερώσει ἡμᾶς. The words express a great principle, which is applicable in many directions, and which has been enunciated by Jewish and heathen teachers as well as by Christian. It was a Stoic paradox εἰς μόνον ὁ σοφὸς ἐλευθερὸς καὶ πᾶν ἄρῶν δοῦλος (Cicero, Parad., 5). This was repeated in another form by Seneca, "unum studium uero liberat e quo liberum ficit, hoc est sapientiae" (Ep. lxxxviii. 2). Philo, in the same spirit, wrote a book to prove that the σκωδαίος is free (quod omnis probus liber sit). In another book (de confus., Aug., 20) he asks τίς οὖν ἐλευθερία βεβαιώματα; to which he gives the answer ἡ τοῦ μόνου θεωρεῖα σοφῆς. But there is no trace of generalisations of this kind either in O.T. or N.T.

The freedom which truth brings (in the view of Jn.) is emancipation from the slavery of sin. This appears from v. 34, where see note. In v. 36 the Son is said to be the Agent of this emancipation (ἔάν ὁ υἱὸς ἡμᾶς ἐλευθέρωσῃ); and the juxtaposition of vv. 32, 36 is instructive, when the great utterance ἐγὼ ἡμᾶς ἡ Δεῖξάνα (14<sup>b</sup>) is recalled. The purpose of the self-consecration of Jesus is declared (17<sup>10</sup>) to be that His disciples may be ἡγιασμένοι ἐν ἀλήθειᾳ.

ἡμᾶς. 33. ἀπεκρίθησαν πρὸς αὐτὸν Σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἔσμεν, καὶ οὐδεὶς δεδουλεύκαμεν πάντως· πῶς σὺ λέγεις ὅτι Ἑβραῖοι γενήσασθε; 34. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν δοῦλος ἐστὶν τῆς ἁμαρτίας.

There is, perhaps, a hint of the emancipating influence of truth at 17<sup>17</sup>: "The law came by Moses, but grace and truth by Jesus Christ." See note in loc.

33. ἀπεκρίθησαν πρὸς αὐτὸν. So  $\omega$ BDLW $\epsilon$  33 (see for the constr. on 2<sup>b</sup>); but NT $\alpha$  have ἀπεκρ. αὐτῶν. Those who made the answer which follows were not the Jews who "believed Him" (v. 31), but the Jewish objectors, with whom throughout the rest of this chapter Jesus is engaged in controversy. He could not have charged "the Jews who believed Him" with seeking His life (vv. 37, 39).

καὶ οὐδεὶς δεδουλεύκαμεν πάντως. This was, of course, not true. The captivity in Babylon was only one instance of the contrary; and they were under the yoke of Rome even while they were speaking. But they would not admit, even to themselves, that they were not a free people. They were not bondslaves (δεδουλεύκαμεν), indeed, but Jesus had not used the word δούλος yet. Their petulant retort really marked the uneasy consciousness that they were not as free as they would like to be: "How sayest thou, Ye shall become free men?"

34. ἀπεκρ. αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς. B omits the art. before Ἰησοῦς here (see on 1<sup>20, 20</sup>). αὐτοῖς refers to the hostile Jews who are in view throughout the rest of the chapter.

Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, calling attention to a solemn pronouncement summing up what He has just said. Cf. vv. 51, 58; and see on 1<sup>21</sup>.

πᾶς . . . δούλος ἐστὶν τῆς ἁμαρτίας. D  $\delta$  and Syr. sin., with Clem. Alex. (Sitrom. ii. 5), omit τῆς ἁμαρτίας. The omission would not, however, alter the sense, which must in any case be that the sinner is the slave of sin (or of the devil).

πᾶς ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἁμαρτίαν means (as it does I Jn. 3<sup>4, 8</sup>) "every one who lives in the practice of sin," just as ὁ ποιῶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν (3<sup>21</sup>) means "he who lives in the practice of truth."

35. Ὁ δὲ δούλος οὐ μένει ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα· ὁ υἱὸς μένει

It is habitual, rather than occasional, sin that is here in view when it is said that a man mastered by it is a slave.

The Hebrews regarded sin in the light of violation of God's law, rather than as a state of slavery. This latter doctrine is Greek rather than Hebrew; it is not often expressed by Greek writers so clearly as by Xenophon: ὄντις σὺν ἀρχαίᾳ ἐπὶ τὸν δαδ τοῦ σώματος ἕθουῶν, καὶ δὴ ταῦτος μὴ δύναται πράττειν τὰ βέλτεστα, νομίσει τοῦτον δυνάτερον ἑαυτοῦ; "Hicoria, ἔφη (Memorab. iv. 5, 3). Cf. Æconom. i. § 22. Paul has the same idea when he speaks of sinners as δούλοι τῆς ἁμαρτίας (Rom. 6<sup>17, 20</sup>), but it does not appear elsewhere in his epistles. He dwells often on the freedom of the Christian from the yoke of the Jewish law (Gal. 5<sup>1-12</sup>), but that is a different conception. In 2 Pet. 2<sup>19</sup> we have the phrase δούλοι τῆς φθορᾶς, which is parallel to δούλοι τῆς ἁμαρτίας. But it is remarkable that the idea of sin as a master which makes slaves of men is found in the N.T. only here, and at Rom. 6<sup>17, 20</sup> 2 Pet. 2<sup>19</sup>. It is not quite apposite to cite Jas. 1<sup>25</sup> 2<sup>12</sup>, 2 Cor. 3<sup>17</sup>, which express the principle that the Christian law is a law of liberty.

Jesus tells the Jews that they are only slaves without tenure in the household of God: they are not true sons of Abraham, for they try to kill Him: their father is the devil. It is just because they have not God for their Father that they will not believe Jesus, who offers them eternal life (vv. 35-51)

35. In the report of this discourse, there is at this point a sudden change of metaphor. In v. 34 the δούλος is the slave of sin (or of the devil); but in v. 35 a contrast is drawn between the positions of the δούλος and the υἱὸς in a household presided over by its rightful master. A slave may be cast out at any moment; he has no covenant with his master. But if the heir emancipates him from his state of serfdom, sc. to his lawful master, he becomes a free man and obtains a footing in the house comparable to that of a son. This seems to be the trend of the argument, but it involves a transition from a particular conception of the δούλος to a quite different conception.

ὁ δὲ δούλος οὐ μένει ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. The slave has no tenure. The story of Hagar and Ishmael (Gen. 21<sup>10</sup>) suggests itself, but it is not clear that Jn. intends any allusion to it, or to Paul's use of it (Gal. 4<sup>30</sup>). If a slave offends his master, he is liable to expulsion from the household. This seems to be meant as a warning to the Jews, who are really slaves because of their sins, that they have no fixed tenure in the household of God (cf. 4th for οἰκία as equivalent to "a household").

εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. 36. ἂν ὅν δ' ἴδῃς ἑλευθερώσῃ, ὅπως ἐλευθεροῖ ἑαυτὴν. 37. οὐκ ἔστι σκόρπια Ἀβραὰμ ἕνεκα· ἀλλὰ ἑγγενεὶ με ἐλευθερῶσαι, ἔστι ἐ λόγος δ' ἑμοῦ οὐ χωρεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν. 38. ἐγὼ δ' ἐώρακα

δ' οὐκ ἔμεναι εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. A similar contrast between the slave and the son appears Heb. 3<sup>d</sup>, where (quoting Num. 12<sup>d</sup>) Moses is described as a faithful servant (θεράπων) in the house (οἶκος) of God, but Christ as the Son of that house. For the οἰκία of the Father, cf. 14<sup>2</sup>; and for the permanence of a son's tenure in his father's house, cf. Lk. 15<sup>21</sup>; τίμων, οὐ πάντως μετ' ἐμοῦ εἶ. For the phrase εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα in Jn., see on 4<sup>14</sup>.

The last clause, δ' οὐκ ἔμεναι εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, is omitted by *κ*WT 33 124 and in the quotation of the passage by Clem. Alex. (see on v. 34). But the omissions here and in the preceding verse only serve to show that the difficulties of the argument were felt by scribes and exegetes alike. It is possible that the whole of v. 35 is an early gloss, brought in from familiarity with such passages as Gal. 4<sup>20</sup>, Heb. 3<sup>d</sup>.

38. ἂν ὅν δ' οὐκ ἑλευθερώσῃ ἑαυτὴν. If v. 35 is part of the original text, then this sentence has in view the fact that the son and heir had a special privilege in the emancipation of his father's slaves. Cf. Gal. 5<sup>1</sup>. But if v. 35 may be treated as a gloss, then v. 36 relates itself naturally to v. 34: "You are the slaves of sin; but if the Son (δ' οὐκ) used absolutely, as at 3rd) make you free (cf. v. 32), you will be free indeed." What the Son does will be ratified by the Father.

37. οὐκ ἔστι σκόρπια Ἀβραὰμ ἕνεκα. "I know that you are of the stock of Abraham, but, despite that, you are the slaves of sin, for you seek to kill me, my word not being operative in you." This seems to be the sequence of the argument. The metaphor that they are the slaves of sin and need emancipation is now dropped; and Jesus tells them in the verses which follow that, sinners as they are, it is the devil who is their spiritual father.

ἔστι ἐ λόγος δ' ἑμοῦ οὐ χωρεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν. Cf. v. 31 above; and see note on 5<sup>2</sup>, where we have τὸν λόγον αἰῶνι οὐκ ἔρχετο ἐν ὑμῖν μένοντα, which means almost the same. The real cause of the Jews' enmity to Jesus was a moral cause; His revelation did not abide or work in their hearts.

παρὰ τῷ Πέτρῳ μου λαλοῦ· καὶ ἑμεῖς οὐδ' ἐξήκουσατε παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς

χωρεῖν is used transitively 2<sup>d</sup>, and this use, "to hold," is common. But in the present passage it is used intransitively, and its precise meaning is hard to define. In 2 Macc. 3<sup>20</sup> it is used of the spreading of a report τὰ μὲν καθ' Ἡλιόβουρον . . . οὐτως ἐξήρσαν; and the R.V. renders here "my word hath not free course in you," or, as Moffatt puts it, "makes no headway among you." This is, perhaps, to introduce the idea of movement a little more than is justifiable. Of the Latin versions, a has requiescit, c has est, and Jerome's Vulgate has capit. Accordingly, the R.V. margin gives as a possible rendering "hath no place in you,"<sup>1</sup> which would almost identify χωρεῖν here with μένειν at 5<sup>26</sup>. We may compare Xenophon, Œconom. c. 20 § 21, τὸ γὰρ τῶν μὲν δαπάνης χωρεῖν ἐγγεῖαι . . . of expenses continuing undiminished.<sup>2</sup> This we take to be the true meaning of χωρεῖ ἐν ὑμῖν, "continues in you," with a suggestion of operative activity. Jerome's literal rendering non capit in uobis, "does not hold in you," means the same thing.

38. The true text of this verse is doubtful, there being variants for nearly every word.

Westcott-Hort read: ἐ ἐγὼ ἐώρακα παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ λαλοῦ καὶ ἑμεῖς οὐδ' ἐξήκουσατε παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ποιεῖτε, giving as the "Western" reading ἐγὼ δ' ἐώρακα παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ μου [ταῦτα] λαλοῦ καὶ ἑμεῖς οὐδ' ἐξήκουσατε παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ ὑμῖν ποιεῖτε.

ΚΔΝΤΔΘ and Syr. sin. support the insertion of μου (om. BCLTW) after πατρὶ in the first clause, and of ἑμῶν (also found in C) after πατρὸς in the second clause.

ἐξήκουσατε in the second clause is read by κ<sup>2</sup>BCLW<sup>6</sup>, but κ<sup>2</sup>DFAN and Syr. sin. have ἐπαράκατε, probably by assimilation with the first clause: the rec. τῷ πατρὶ in the second clause (for τὸν πατέρα) is due to the same cause.

The Vulgate has: "ego quod uidi apud patrem loquor, et nos quae uidistis apud patrem uestrum facitis," and with this the evidence of Tatian agrees.

If the pronouns μου and ἑμῶν are omitted, δ' πατὴρ must stand for the same person in both clauses, and the second clause would have to be imperative: "do ye therefore the things

ἡμῶν ποιεῖτε. 39. ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπαν αὐτῷ Ὁ πατήρ ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ ἐστιν. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Εἰ τέκνα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ἐστε, τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ποιεῖτε. 40. τὸν δὲ ἰσχυρῶς με ἀποκρίθους, which ye heard from the Father." But this does not agree well with the context.

We translate: "I speak of what I have seen with my Father; but (and being used for δὲλλὰ; see on 1<sup>19</sup>) you do what you heard from your father," sc. the devil (v. 41). ἰσῶς and ἡμεῖς are placed for emphasis of distinction at the beginning of the two clauses respectively.

ἰσῶς & ἡμεῖς ἀποκρίθησαν ὑμῶν πατρὶ μου λαλῶν. Cf. v. 28 above, and see especially on 5<sup>18</sup>. πατρὶ τῷ πατρὶ μου, apud patrem, is not to be referred to the pre-incarnate life of the Son (cf. 1<sup>7</sup> παρὰ πατρὸς), or interpreted with Abbott (Diat. 2355) as "in the home of my Father," i.e. heaven. The reference is to the perpetual vision which the Incarnate Son had of His Father's will (see 5<sup>19</sup>). For ἡμεῖς ἀποκρίθησαν as occasionally used of spiritual vision, see on 3<sup>22</sup>. For λαλῶν in Jn., see on 3<sup>21</sup>.

καὶ ἡμεῖς οὖν (cf. 16<sup>23</sup>) κτλ. The contrast between λαλῶν and ποιεῖτε is marked. Jesus speaks of the truths which the Father has given Him, but the Jews do the sinful things which the devil suggests, the pres. tense ποιεῖτε indicating a continual doing. τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν is identified with τοῦ θεοῦ below at v. 44; but this has not yet been made explicit by Jesus, and, in fact, the Jews' reply shows that they do not yet understand the tremendous severity of His words.

39. ὁ πατήρ ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ ἐστιν. "Our father is Abraham." They repeat what they have said before (v. 33). It was true, in so far as their physical pedigree was concerned; but Jesus tells them that they are not true sons of Abraham if their conduct is unlike his. His reply is almost in the words used by Paul οὐδὲ ὅτι εἰσὶν σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ, πάντες τέκνα (Rom. 9<sup>7</sup>). He had admitted (v. 37) that they were σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ, but this natural descent did not, by itself, guarantee all the privileges which belong to the τέκνα who are Abraham's true heirs (cf. Gal. 3<sup>7</sup>).

εἰ τέκνα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ἐστε, τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Ἀβραάμ ποιεῖτε. "If you are Abraham's children, do Abraham's works," ποιεῖτε being imperative.

ποιεῖτε, although only read by B, is probably the true reading,<sup>1</sup> and should be rendered in the imperative mood, with Syr. sin. ποιεῖτε ἄν (W omits ἄν) is read by M<sup>c</sup>CLNW; but

ἀνθρῶπον δε τὴν ἀλλάθειαν ἡμῶν λαλῶμεν, ἢν ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ. τοῦτο Ἀβραάμ οὐκ ἐποίησεν. 41. ἡμεῖς ποιεῖτε τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν. εἶπαν αὐτῷ Ἡμεῖς ἐκ πορείας οὐκ ἐγεννηθήμεν, ἔνα Πατέρα this requires the rec. ἴτε instead of ἐστε in the first clause, while ἐστε is read by M<sup>c</sup>DLT.

40. τὸν δὲ, "but as things are," ἐκρίθη με ἀποκρίθους: cf. v. 37 and 3<sup>26</sup>.

ἀνθρῶπον. A difficulty has been found in the use of this word as applied (here only) to Himself by Jesus. Nowhere else in the N.T. is He described as "a man," for Rom. 5<sup>18</sup> and 1 Tim. 2<sup>8</sup> both imply that He was ἀνθρῶπος in a unique sense. Cf. Acts 2<sup>22</sup> 17<sup>31</sup>, where He is spoken of as ἀνθρῶπος. But it is hypercritical to find offence in this manner of expression. It would be out of place in the writings of a second-century theologian, who had reached the point of seeing the difficulties in the formulation of the doctrine of the Incarnation; but for a first-century writer, who was combating with special care the idea that Christ had not come "in the flesh," it is quite natural.<sup>4</sup> The expression is used sine preiudicio deitatis, and that Jesus should have described Himself as "a person who has spoken the truth to you" in discussion with Jews who did not accept Him as divine is not surprising.

ἢν ἤκουσα παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ. This is the perpetual teaching of Jesus in the Fourth Gospel, sc. that His words reveal the mind of the Father, who taught them to Him; cf. v. 26 and the references given in the note at that place.

τοῦτο Ἀβραάμ οὐκ ἐποίησεν. Abraham welcomed the heavenly messengers (Gen. 18<sup>7</sup>); he did not seek to kill them.

41. Paulatim procedit castigatio is the comment of Grotius on the severe denunciation which follows.

ἡμεῖς ποιεῖτε τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν. "You," with emphasis, "do the works of your father," sc. the devil, although that is not yet said explicitly.

The Jews still misapprehend what is meant. They say, first, that if it is being suggested that they are not the legitimate descendants of Abraham and Sarah, it is not true; and secondly, that if it is spiritual and not physical descent that is in question, then their Father is God. The sentence is very much compressed.

ἡμεῖς ἐκ πορείας οὐκ ἐγεννηθήμεν (so BD<sup>6</sup>; σὲ γεννηθήμεθα is the rec. reading with M<sup>c</sup>CD<sup>2</sup>NWTΔΘ). It has been held by some expositors, both ancient and modern, that the Jewish disputants mean to affirm by these words the legitimacy of the spiritual relation of Israel to Yahweh. See on 1<sup>18</sup>

ἔρχομαι τὸν Θεόν. 42. εἶπεν αὐτοῦς ὁ Ἰσραήλ ἐπὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ Πατρὸς ἡμῶν ἦν, ἠγαπήσατε ἐν ἡμῖν ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἦμα· οὐδὲ γὰρ for the conception of Israel as Yahweh's wife, and Israelites as His children, in contradistinction to the heathen or Samaritans. Idolatry was fornication, and those who went after other gods were τῆνα πορνείας (Hos. 2<sup>d</sup>). This is a possible interpretation of ἐκ πορνείας οὗς ἐγεννήθημεν, and accords well with what follows; but it is simpler to take the words literally and to regard them as a reaffirmation of σπέρμα Ἀβραάμ ἔσμεν . . . ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν Ἀβραάμ ἔσται (ἡν. 33; 39), "we were not begotten of fornication" (see on 1st).

ἔνα πατέρα ἔχουμεν τὸν Θεόν. As for spiritual parentage, it was a fundamental and often expressed principle of the Israelites that Yahweh was their Father; cf. Ex. 4th, Deut. 32<sup>d</sup>, Isa. 63rd 64th. This is a wholly different figure from that of Israel as Yahweh's wife, and it is difficult to believe that there is a sudden transition from the one figure to the other, as we must suppose if ἡμεῖς ἐκ πορνείας οὗς ἐγεννήθημεν is to be interpreted of spiritual fornication, i.e. idolatry.

The sentence "We have one Father, even God," is, then, not to be taken in strict connexion with what immediately precedes. It is a new plea, put forward for the Jewish disputants, who are beginning to understand that Jesus has been speaking of spiritual, not natural, parentage.

43. The rec. adds οὖν after εἶπεν, with κDΔ; om. BCLNTWFS.

εἰ δὲ Θεός κτλ., "If God were your Father, you would love me." This is the same argument as that in I Jn. 5th 8, sc. "If you were the children of God, you would love God, and, as whoever loves a father loves his son, therefore you would love Jesus, His Son." The Jews have turned the argument, so that now spiritual fatherhood is in question, and Jesus shows them what the consequences of this spiritual fatherhood must be.

ἐγὼ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον, sc. "for I, even I who speak to you (ἐγὼ being emphatic), came forth from God," i.e. in the Incarnation. ἐκ Θεοῦ is a phrase that has found a place in the Nicene Creed; while as early as 196 B.C. Ptolemy Epiphaneus was described as σπέρμα θεοῦ ἐκ Θεοῦ καὶ Θεοῦ.<sup>1</sup>

Attempts have been made to distinguish ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ (cf. 16th) and ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ (cf. 13th 16th), but they will not bear scrutiny. See on 1st; and cf. 16th and the note there.

For ἐξῆλθον ἐκ, see on 4th.

ἐπ' ἡμεῖς ἐλθῆναι, ἀλλ' ἐκείνός με ἀπέστειλεν. 43. διὰ τί ἡνὴν λαλοῦν τὴν ἡμῶν οὐ γινώσκετε; ὅτι οὐ δυνάσθε ἀκούειν τὸν λόγον τὸν ἡμῶν. 44. ἡμεῖς ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστὶν καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας καὶ ἤσο (cf. I Jn. 5th). The present tense is emphatic, "and I am here." οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐπ' ἡμεῖς ἐλθῆναι. This is repeated from 7th and with the same significance, "I have not come of myself," i.e. without a Divine mission, "but God sent me." For this "sending" of Christ by the Father, see on 3rd; and cf. 17th.

For ἀκούειν in Jn., see on 1st, 19th.

43. διὰ τί ἡνὴν λαλοῦν τὴν ἡμῶν οὐ γινώσκετε; For λαλοῦν, see on 4th; it does not mean "talk" in any disparaging sense (as it sometimes does in classical writers), but "manner of speech." The Jewish disputants did not appreciate the spiritual idiom of Jesus' words, in which they did not recognise the Divine accent.

ὅτι οὐ δυνάσθε ἀκούειν τὸν λόγον τὸν ἡμῶν. ἀκούειν with the accusative always means in Jn., to perceive by hearing, as distinct from hearing with appreciation and intelligence, when ἀκούειν takes the genitive (see on 3rd and cf. 5th). Here, then, the incapacity of the Jews for "hearing" the message of Jesus is an even graver disability than that of their failure to understand it. As He said at v. 37, His λόγος or message had no place in them. It did not appeal to them at all. Their incapacity was, as it were, a spiritual deafness, and not merely an intellectual stupidity. See on 12th; and cf. v. 47 below.

The contrast in the two clauses of the verse is between γινώσκουσιν and ἀκούουσιν rather than between λαλοῦν and λόγος. There is a difference between the usage of these words, but it cannot be sharply pressed in Jn.: see on 3rd.

44. ἡμεῖς (an emphatic beginning) ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστὶν κτλ., "You are of your father, the devil." Similar language is ascribed to Jesus Mt. 13th 33.

The sentence would admit of the translation, "You are of the father of the devil" and Hilgenfeld, with some other critics, have found here a trace of Gnostic doctrine. According to the Ophites, Ialdabaoth, the God of the Jews, was the father of the serpent (Iren. Hæres. I, xxx. 6, 10). But such a notion is not relevant to this context, the evangelist representing Jesus as telling the Jews plainly for the first time that they are the devil's children, a climax of denunciation to which the preceding verses have led up. Closely parallel in language and in thought is I Jn. 3rd ὁ πῶν τὴν ἀμαρτίαν ἐκ τοῦ διαβόλου ἐστίν, ὅτι ἐπ' ἀρχῆς ὁ διάβολος ἀμαρτάνει.

For the constr. εἶναι ἐκ, see on v. 23 above.

τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν θλίτε τοὺς. ἑκείνος ἀθρομακτόνος ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ οὐ ἔστηκεν, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλήθεια ἐν αὐτῷ. ἔσαν λαλῆ τὸ ψεύδος, ἐκ τῶν ἔβαν λαλεῖ, ὅτι ψεύστης ἐστὶν καὶ ὁ πατὴρ καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν θλίτε τοὺς, "And your will is to do the lusts of your father," θλίτε indicating a settled purpose of will.

ἀθρομακτόνος occurs elsewhere in the Greek Bible only at 1 Jn. 3<sup>14</sup>. In the Apostolic Constitutions (viii. vii. 5) the devil is alluded to as ἄθρομακτόνος ὄφης.

That he was "a murderer from the beginning" is probably a reference to the Jewish doctrine that death was a consequence of the Fall, which was due to the devil's prompting; cf. Wisd. 2<sup>24</sup> φθόνῳ δὲ διαβόλου θύματος ἀεργῶν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, and see Rom. 5<sup>12</sup>. ἀπ' ἀρχῆς is used thus in 1 Jn. 3<sup>8</sup> (quoted above); cf. Eccl. 3<sup>11</sup>, Mt. 19<sup>8</sup>. See on 15<sup>27</sup>.

The allusion, however, may be to the murder of Abel by Cain. At 1 Jn. 3<sup>12</sup> we have Καὶ ἐκ τοῦ ποιητοῦ ἦν καὶ ἑσθάζει τῶν ἀδελφῶν αὐτοῦ, and three verses after we find ὁ μισῶν τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ ἀθρομακτόνος.

Whatever be the precise reference of the words ἑκείνος ἀθρομακτόνος ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, their appositeness to the argument is derived from the fact that the Jews were seeking to kill Jesus (see vv. 37, 40), who now explains to them that their murderous intent is due to their spiritual parentage. They are doing the works of their father (v. 41).

καὶ ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ οὐκ ἔστηκεν. οὐκ is read by κB*DLNWΘ, and must be preferred to the rec. οὐχ. Hence we have ἔστηκεν, and not ἔστηκεν, which would be the perfect of ἔστημι, used like a present, "has no footing in the truth." But ἔστηκεν, the impf. of ἔστημι, follows naturally after the impf. ἦν, non stetit, as the Vulgate renders it.

ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀλήθεια ἐν αὐτῷ. For ἀλήθεια in Jn. see on 1<sup>14</sup>. Mention of the falsehood of the devil may have primary reference here to his deceitful words of temptation (Gen. 3<sup>1</sup>), which led to sin and death.

For the phrase "the truth is not in him (us)," cf. 1 Jn. 1<sup>8</sup> 2<sup>4</sup> and 1 Macc. 7<sup>23</sup>.

ἔσαν λαλῆ τὸ ψεύδος, ἐκ τῶν ἔβαν λαλεῖ. It is the devil's nature to be false; "when he tells a lie, he speaks out of his own inmost being"; cf. Mt. 12<sup>34</sup> ἐκ τοῦ περισσεύματος τῆς καρδίας τὸ σπῆμα λαλεῖ. Much stress is laid in Jn. on the repeated assurance of Jesus, ἐγὼ εἶμι θνατοῦ οὐκ ἐλάλησα (12<sup>40</sup>); and see on 7<sup>17</sup>. His words always express the mind of God; while the devil's words only express his own false nature. In contradistinction to this, it is said (16<sup>13</sup>) that the Holy Spirit will lead into all truth, because "He will not speak of Himself (δὲ ἑαυτοῦ), but will speak of that which He shall hear." This contrast is noted by Origen (Comm. in Joann. 346).

Westcott would render the sentence differently, sc. "Whenever a man speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own, for his father also is a liar." But it is difficult to supply a new subject to the verb, between ἔσαν and λαλεῖ.<sup>1</sup> The point is not that the Jews have been lying, for they have not been charged with lying up to this point (cf. v. 55), but that they are following the promptings of their father the devil, who is both a murderer and a liar, in seeking to kill Jesus. And this leads up naturally to the next verse. They are trusting to the promptings of a liar, but they will not trust Jesus who tells them the truth. Indeed, it is because He speaks the truth that His words are unwelcome, for His hearers are spiritual sons of one in whom the truth is not.

45. ἐγὼ δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω, οὐ πιστεύετε μοι, "But as for me (ἐγὼ being placed first for emphasis), because I speak the truth, you do not believe me." Truth is uncongenial to them. Cf. 3<sup>18</sup>; and see on 16<sup>7</sup> for τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω, πιστεύειν τοῖς is not to be confused with that deeper faith which is expressed by πιστεύειν εἰς τινά (see on v. 31).

46. τίς ἐξ ἡμῶν ἀλέγει με περὶ ἁμαρτίας; No answer to this challenge is recorded. Probably no answer was attempted. His hearers did not understand, of course, that Jesus was literally χωρὶς ἁμαρτίας (Heb. 4<sup>15</sup>); but they could prove nothing to the contrary, and they knew it. The phrase ἀλέγειν περὶ ἁμαρτίας occurs again 16<sup>7</sup>, where see note.

After a pause, as we may suppose, Jesus then resumes the argument, "If I tell the truth (and none of you has accused me of being a liar), why do you not believe me?"

διὰ τοῦτο ὑμεῖς οὐκ ἀκούετε, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἐστὲ. 48. Ἀπεκρίθησαν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ εἶπαν αὐτῷ Ὁ καλῶς λέγομεν ἡμεῖς ὅτι Σαμαρείταις εἶ σὺ καὶ δαιμόνιον ἔχεις; 49. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς Ἔργα τὰ ῥήματα τοῦ Θεοῦ. For this phrase, see on 3<sup>34</sup>.

The principle that it is only the true child of God who can hear God's words is frequently stated in Jn.; see on 7<sup>37</sup> and on 8<sup>28</sup> above. The man who is not "of God" is not in spiritual affinity with Divine things, and does not catch the sound of the Divine voice. As has been pointed out already (see on 3<sup>27</sup>), ἀκούειν with a following accusative signifies in Jn. a spiritus hearing, while ἀκούειν with a genitive implies a hearing with intelligence, the appreciation of the meaning of what has been said. Thus at I Jn. 4<sup>7</sup> the distinction between the man who is, and the man who is not, ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ is that the former understands the apostolic teaching (ἀκούει ἡμῶν), while the latter does not understand it. This is not exactly the distinction drawn out here, where the contrast is between the man who is spiritually deaf and the man who hears God's voice, although he may not be able perfectly to interpret it.

ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἐστὲ. We should expect οὐκ ἐστὲ to precede ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ (as at 10<sup>20</sup>), but emphasis is gained by altering the order of the words from that in the first clause of the verse.

48. οὐ καλῶς λέγομεν ἡμεῖς κτλ., the emphasis resting on ἡμεῖς: "We are right, after all." For καλῶς λέγειν, cf. 4<sup>17</sup> 13<sup>18</sup>.

Σαμαρείταις εἶ σὺ. For Σαμαρείταις, cf. 4<sup>22</sup>. Jesus had been combating their claim to be the true children of Abraham (vv. 39, 40), and had thus challenged their boasted spiritual privileges. This was a principal point with the Samaritans, who would never allow that the Jews had any exclusive right to the promises made to Abraham and his seed. And so, observing, as they thought, that Jesus agreed with their despised Samaritan neighbours, they said contemptuously, "You, after all, are only a Samaritan."<sup>1</sup> The position of σὺ at the end of the sentence is emphatic.

καὶ δαιμόνιον ἔχεις. This had been said before (7<sup>30</sup>, where see note) by the people, and it was said again (10<sup>20</sup>). The Jewish disputants say it here, with a touch of contempt: "You must be mad, or you would not talk in this way."<sup>2</sup> There may be an allusion to the charge recorded by the δαιμόνιον οὐκ ἔχει, ἀλλὰ τῷ τὸν Πάτρια μου, καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀπαμάρτυρέ με. 50. Ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ ἔγραψ τὴν δόξαν μου ἕως ἄν ἔλθω καὶ κρίνω. 51. Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ἅν τις τὸν ἔμῳν λόγον τηρήσῃ, θάνατον οὐ μὴ θεωρήσῃ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

Synoptists (Mk. 3<sup>23</sup>) as having been made against Jesus by scribes from Jerusalem, that "He casts out demons by the prince of demons"; but the emphasis laid in Jn. on demonic possession is always in connexion with the dementia which was supposed to be its consequence (see Intro., p. cixxvii). It is not put forward in Jn. (either at 7<sup>30</sup> or 10<sup>20</sup>) as a sign of wickedness, which is implied in Mk. 3<sup>23</sup>.

49. Jesus does not take any notice of the imputation, "You are a Samaritan." That was not so offensive to Him as it was intended to be, for He looked to the day when the rivalries between Jews and Samaritans would disappear (4<sup>23</sup>). His reply is mild and calm: "I am not mad." His claim to be God's messenger and to speak with a delegated authority (v. 42) did not arise out of a disordered brain, but from His fixed purpose of "honouring His Father," τῷ τὸν πατέρα μου. Cf. 7<sup>18</sup> ὁ ἔγραψ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ πλάσματος αὐτοῦ. For ὁ πατήρ μου, see on 2<sup>16</sup>.

His Jewish adversaries, on the other hand, had been insulting, ὑμεῖς ἀπαμάρτυρέ με. Cf. 5<sup>38</sup>, where it has been said ὁ μὴ ἔμῳν τὸν υἱὸν οὐ τιμᾷ τὸν πατέρα.

50. However, He goes on to explain that their insulting words did not affect Him. Ἐγὼ δὲ οὐ ἔγραψ τὴν δόξαν μου: If He did so, it would be nothing (cf. 5<sup>18</sup> 7<sup>18</sup> 8<sup>26</sup>).

ἔστιν ὁ ἔγραψ καὶ κρίνω, "there is One who seeks (my honour), and (in doing so) pronounces judgment (as between us)."<sup>1</sup> It is only the δόξα that comes from God that is worth having (5<sup>44</sup> 8<sup>26</sup>). To win the approval of God for any act or thought is to be "judged"; and this Jesus applied to Himself, strange as the thought may be to us of the Father "judging" the Son. But we cannot separate ἔγραψ from κρίνω, and ὁ ἔγραψ refers to the Father as seeking to honour the Son (see on v. 54).

There is no incongruity, even of expression, with 5<sup>38</sup>, where the office of the judgment of mankind is reserved to the Son Himself.

51. ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν introduces a summary (see on 1<sup>21</sup>) of what Jesus has been leading up to (cf. vv. 34, 58). If they keep His teaching, they will have eternal life.

ἅν τις τὸν ἔμῳν λόγον κτλ. So M<sup>BCD</sup>LW; the rec., with NO, has τὸν λόγον τὸν ἔμῳν (from v. 43). "To keep the word" of Christ or of God (τὸν λόγον τηρεῖν) is a characteristic phrase in Jn.; cf. vv. 52, 55, 14<sup>30, 31</sup> 15<sup>30</sup> 17<sup>8</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>8</sup>. It is practically identical in meaning with τῆμιν τὰς ἀπολλεῖ τὰς ἡμέρας (see on 14<sup>31</sup>; and cf. Introd., p. lxvii). Cf. 5<sup>24</sup>, where he who "hears" and "believes" is promised eternal life; and see 11<sup>26</sup> 12<sup>25</sup>.

The phrase "shall never see death" is a Hebraism for "shall never die." See on 3<sup>9</sup> for ἰδῆν, used as θαυμάειν (see on 2<sup>20</sup>) is used here, in the sense of "participate in" or "have experience of." "To see death," meaning "to die," is found Pa. 89<sup>24</sup>, Lk. 5<sup>26</sup>, Heb. 11<sup>8</sup>. The promise given here is not, of course, one of exemption from the death of the body, which is not in question. But the man who "keeps the word" of Christ has eternal life already. See 14<sup>20</sup>.

To the Jews' suggestion that Jesus is not as great as Abraham was, despite His claims, He replies that He was in existence before Abraham (vv. 52-58)

52. ἄBCWΘ omit the rec. αὐν (so N) after εἴπω.

For ὁ Ἰουδαῖος (cf. vv. 22, 31, 48, 57), see on 1<sup>19</sup>. They misunderstood the meaning of Christ's saying, interpreting it of exemption from physical death. They thought He was mad: νῦν ἐγνώσαντες, "now we are sure," ὅτι θαυμάσιον ἔχει. Cf. v. 48.

Abraham and the prophets had "kept the word" of Yahweh, and yet they had died (cf. Zech. 4<sup>9</sup>). Was Jesus really claiming to be greater than Yahweh? Was His word more powerful? He ventured to say ἔάν τις τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσῃ, οὐ μὴ γένηται (the rec. has γένηται, but with insufficient support) θανάτου εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα.

μου τηρήσῃ, οὐ μὴ γένηται θανάτου εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. 53. μὴ οὐ μάλιστ' εἰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀβραὰμ, ὅστις ἀπέθανεν; καὶ οἱ προφῆται ἀπέθανον τίνι σακτοῦν σοῦσι; 54. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς Ἐάν τις ἐὰν ἐλάττω ἡμῶν, ἢ δόξα μου οὐδὲν ἴσται ὁ Πατήρ μου ὁ δοξάζων με, ὃν ἡμεῖς λέγομεν ὅτι θεὸς ἡμῶν ἐστιν, 55. καὶ οὐκ ἐγνώκατε αὐτόν, ὅστις ἀπέθανεν. The relative ὅστις does not occur again in Jn., although we have ἦεν (1 Jn. 1<sup>7</sup>) and 3<sup>24</sup>. How could Jesus claim exemption from death for those who kept His word, when the saints of old, Abraham and the prophets, had died like every one else?

(about 280 A.D.) there is found, as restored by the editors: [τῶς ὄντως] ἄν τὸν λόγον τοῦ[τω ἀκούσῃ, θανάτου] οὐ μὴ γένηται. If the conjectural restoration is accurate, this closely resembles Jn. 8<sup>38</sup>, and in any case οὐ μὴ γένηται provides a parallel.

53. μὴ οὐ μάλιστ' εἰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀβραὰμ; Cf. the similar question at 4<sup>14</sup>.

τίνα σακτοῦν σοῦσι; They are beginning to suspect that His claims are blasphemous, an accusation which has not yet been made in this discourse. Cf. 5<sup>18</sup> 10<sup>38</sup> 12<sup>7</sup>. Who does He really claim to be? As usual, Jesus gives no explicit answer to this question; but, having first defended Himself again in reply to the charge of undue self-assertion (vv. 54, 55), He makes a statement which implies that He is greater than Abraham (v. 56).

54. ἔάν τις ἐλάττω (so ἄBC<sup>2</sup>DW, against δοξάζω of LN and the rec. text) ἡμῶν, ἢ δόξα μου οὐδὲν ἴσται. Cf. v. 50 and 5<sup>21</sup>. In all these passages δόξα signifies honour (see on 1<sup>14</sup>), and the contrast is between the δόξα that men can bestow and that which comes from God.

ὅστις ὁ πατήρ μου ὁ δοξάζων με. "it really is (ὄντως being placed first for emphasis) my Father who honours me"; i.e. primarily by the honour given to Him in the power to do divine acts, which is a form of the Father's "witness" (5<sup>31</sup>, 32), but more generally the reference is to the honour and glory of His mission (3<sup>18</sup>, 17) throughout His Incarnate Life, although this the Jews could not recognise. See on 17<sup>25</sup>; and cf. 2 Pet. 1<sup>17</sup>, λαβὼν παρὰ θεοῦ πατρὸς τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν, referring to the Voice at the Transfiguration. See also on 1<sup>14</sup>.

ὃν ἡμεῖς λέγομεν (cf. 10<sup>36</sup> for constr.) ὅτι θεὸς ἡμῶν ἐστιν. So they had said (v. 41). This is, for the first time, an explicit identification by Jesus of ὁ πατήρ μου with the God of Israel.

55. καὶ οὐκ ἐγνώκατε αὐτόν. So at 16<sup>7</sup>; and cf. 1<sup>10</sup> 17<sup>25</sup>, 26.

ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτόν. ἀν εἶπε ὅτι οὐκ οἶδα αὐτόν, ἔσονται ὅμοιοι ὑμῖν ψεύσται· ἀλλὰ οἶδα αὐτόν καὶ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ τηρῶ. 56. Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἠγαλλιάσατο ἰνα εἶπῃ τῆν ἡμέραν τῆν ἐμὴν, καὶ εἶδεν ἐγὼ δὲ οἶδα αὐτόν. Cf. 7<sup>38</sup> ἐγὼ οἶδα αὐτόν ἐτι παρ' αὐτοῦ εἶμι, and for the same claim, the verb γινώσκω being used, cf. 10<sup>12</sup> 17<sup>26</sup>. See note on 1<sup>20</sup>.

This unique knowledge of the Father, Jesus could not disclaim without denying the validity of His mission: ἔσονται ὅμοιοι ὑμῖν ψεύσται. He had not yet directly accused the Jewish objectors of lying, but He had told them that they were the children of the devil, who is the father of lies (v. 44).

ὅμοιοι ὑμῖν. So ABDW<sup>6</sup>. ὑμῶν is read by κC<sup>1</sup>NTA (cf. Job 35<sup>9</sup>), which would be doubtful Greek.

τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ τηρῶ. See on v. 51 above.

86. Jesus now explains that He is truly "greater" than Abraham (cf. v. 53).

Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ἠγαλλιάσατο (exultavit, cf. 5<sup>20</sup>) ἰνα εἶπῃ (this is the reading of κAB<sup>2</sup>) τῆν ἡμέραν τῆν ἐμὴν, i.e. probably the day of Christ's birth or appearance in the flesh (cf. Job 31). "The days of the Son of Man" (Lk. 17<sup>22</sup>, 30) was the Rabbinical description of the Messianic age generally.

The moment in Abraham's life to which reference is made is not certain. Many expositors have referred to Gen. 17<sup>17</sup>, where Abraham "laughed" at the idea of Sarah becoming "a mother of nations," but this was the laughter of incredulity. That Abraham "received the promises" is noted at Heb. 11<sup>10</sup>, and it is probable that the Rabbinical idea was that Abraham had welcomed the implicit promise that Messiah should be born of his seed, in which all nations were to be blessed (Gen. 12<sup>3</sup>, quoted Gal. 3<sup>8</sup> as Messianic). Westcott quotes a Jewish tradition (Beresheit, R 44) that Abraham saw the whole history of his descendants in the vision of Gen. 15<sup>41</sup>, when he "rejoiced with the joy of the law." With this agrees 2 Esd. 3<sup>14</sup>, "Abraham . . . thou lovedst, and unto him only thou shewedst the end of the times secretly by night."<sup>1</sup>

The constr. ἠγαλλιάσατο ἰνα εἶπῃ seems to mean "exulted in the anticipation of seeing," which is not far removed from "desired to see"; and this rendering is adopted several times in the Latin version of Origen (Lommatæsch, vi. 38, ix. 145, xiv. 425; cited by Abbott, Diat. 2688), and also appears in the Syriac commentary of Isho'dad, which embodies much early material. We should expect an infinitive instead of ἰνα εἶπῃ, but ἰνα cannot be judged incorrect. Milligan<sup>1</sup> cites from a third-century papyrus ἐχάρη ἰνα οὐ ἀσπάζομαι, "I was glad to have an opportunity of greeting you."

καὶ ἐχάρη. 57. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰουδαῖος πρὸς αὐτόν Πεντήκοντα ἔτη οὕτω ἔχει καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἑώρακέ σε; 58. εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ἰησοῦς Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι ἐγὼ εἶμι.

καὶ εἶπεν καὶ ἐχάρη. This seems to say that Abraham in the other world was joyfully conscious of Christ's appearance in the flesh, a strange and mysterious saying, which is taken up in one of the legends of the Descensus ad inferos. There it is said that when the news of Christ came to Hades there was joy among the O.T. saints, καὶ εὐχῆς ὁ πατὴρ ἡμῶν Ἀβραὰμ μετὰ τῶν πατριάρχων καὶ τῶν προφητῶν ἰουδαίῳ, καὶ χαρῆς ὁμοῦ πλησθέντες εἶπον πρὸς ἀλλήλους.<sup>2</sup>

87. καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἑώρακέ σε; The Jewish objectors are represented as interpreting the reply of Jesus to mean that Abraham, while alive on earth, had seen Him. The rec. καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἑώρακες; is strongly supported, being read by κ<sup>2</sup>ACDN; but the true reading seems to be καὶ Ἀβραὰμ ἑώρακέ σε; "And did Abraham see thee?" This is read by κ<sup>2</sup> and supported by Syr. sin. and the Coptic vss. (including Q). BW<sup>6</sup> have ἑώρακες. The reading ἑώρακέ σε; εἶπεν would be in uncialς εωρακεσεν, which by dropping one ε would become εωρακεσεν or ἑωρακες; εἶπεν, and then ἑώρακες; was corrected into ἑώρακες, the rec. reading. In v. 56 Jesus had not said that He had seen Abraham, but that Abraham has seen Him, or His day; and there is no reason to suppose that the Jews are represented as misquoting His words, as we must assume if the received text be followed.

πεντήκοντα ἔτη οὕτω εἶμι. Chrysostom reads τεσσαράκοντα, but this is plainly due to an attempt to reconcile the statement with such passages as Lk. 3<sup>3</sup>. At fifty years of age, the Levites were supernannated from further service (Num. 4<sup>2</sup>), and all that the sentence means is, "You are not yet an old man." Irenæus, however, resting his argument on this passage, concludes that Jesus was not far short of fifty years of age at the conclusion of His earthly ministry (Har. ii. xxii. 6), and that therefore its duration exceeded the single year which the Synoptists suggest.

88. ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν. We have had this solemn form of affirmation (see on 1st) twice before in this discourse, at vv. 34, 51; and in each case, as here, it sums up what has gone before.

πρὶν Ἀβραάμ γενέσθαι ἐγὼ εἰμί, i. e. "before Abraham came into being, I AM." The contrast between the verbs γένεσθαι and εἶναι is as unmistakable as it is in Ps. 90<sup>2</sup>, πρὸ τοῦ ὄρου γενεθῆναι . . . ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰῶνος ἕως τοῦ αἰῶνος σὺ εἶ, "before the mountains came into being . . . from age to age THOU ART."<sup>1</sup> Of God it could not be said that He "came into being" or "became," for He IS. Cf. 1st and Col. 1st for this absolute use of εἶναι; see also on 1st. It has been pointed out already (see Introd., p. cxxi) that ἐγὼ εἰμί used absolutely, where no predicate is expressed or implied, is the equivalent of the solemn Je suis, I (am) He, which is the self-designation of Yahweh in the prophets. A similar use of the phrase is found at 13<sup>19</sup>. It is clear that Jn. means to represent Jesus as thus claiming for Himself the timeless being of Deity, as distinct from the temporal existence of man. This is the teaching of the Prologue to the Gospel about Jesus (1st 14); but here (and at 13<sup>19</sup>) Jesus Himself is reported as having said I (am) He, which is a definite assertion of His Godhead, and was so understood by the Jews. They had listened to His argument up to this point; but they could bear with it no longer. These words of mystery were rank blasphemy (see 10<sup>28</sup>), and they proceeded to stone Him.

For other occurrences in Jn. of ἐγὼ εἰμί without a predicate following, see 6<sup>30</sup> 9st 18st, as well as vv. 24, 28 of the present chapter.

The angry people would stone Jesus, but He escapes from them into hiding (v. 59)

59. ἦσαν οὖν λίθους κτλ. So again at 10<sup>31-32</sup>, when He said "I and the Father are One," the Jews attempted to stone Him for blasphemy. The Temple was not finished, and stones

IX. 1. Καὶ παράγων εἶδεν ἀνθρώπων τυφλὸν ἐκ γενετῆς. 2. καὶ were lying about its courts (cf. Mk. 13<sup>3</sup>); Josephus (Antt. xvii. ix. 3) gives an account of the stoning of soldiers in the Temple precincts.

Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἐκρύβη, "But He hid Himself," as again at 13<sup>36</sup>.

After ἱεροῦ the rec. text (so N<sup>6000</sup>) adds διελθὼν διὰ μέσον αὐτῶν (from Lk. 4<sup>30</sup>) καὶ παρήγεν οὐτως, probably suggesting that the escape of Jesus from the angry Jews was miraculous. But of this there is no trace in the true text, ending with ἱεροῦ, which is supported by MBDW<sup>6</sup> latt sah arm. The words παρήγεν οὐτως are added in the rec. text to the interpolation from Lk. 4<sup>30</sup>, in order to introduce c. 9.

See 10<sup>28</sup>, where Jesus again escapes from the hostile Jews.

IX. 1. 2. The narrative of c. 9 may be intended to follow immediately the disputes of 8<sup>31-32</sup>, but there can be no certainty as to this. The day on which the blind man's sight was restored was a Sabbath (v. 14), as was also the day of the impotent man's cure at Bethesda (5<sup>10</sup>), but there may have been a considerable interval between the two healings. The next note of time that we have is the mention of the Feast of Dedication (10<sup>22</sup>), and there is no doubt that cc. 9 and 10 must be taken together. The tone of the questioning and of the words of Jesus in c. 9 is different from that of c. 8, where the Jews become fiercely indignant with the claims which Jesus puts forward. It is probable that 9<sup>1</sup> marks the beginning of a fresh section of the narrative, which has no special relation with that of c. 8. The story in 9<sup>1-28</sup> is told very vividly and with much lively detail.

1. καὶ παράγων εἶδεν κτλ. This is an abrupt beginning, but the introductory καὶ is thoroughly Johannine. παράγων does not occur again in the Fourth Gospel; but cf. 1 Jn. 2st 17.

τυφλὸν ἐκ γενετῆς. Probably the man was a well-known figure, as he begged for alms (v. 8) near the Temple or at some other much-frequented place. γενετῆς does not appear again in the N. T., but the phrase τυφλὸς ἐκ γενετῆς is common in secular writers (see Weststrate).

It is not reported of any other case of healing in the Gospels that the person cured had been sick, blind, or lame from his birth (cf. Acts 3st 14th), and some critics have found here an ἤρτησαν αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ λέγοντες ῥαββί, τίς ἡμαρτεν, οὗτος ἢ οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ, ἵνα τυφλὸς γεννηθῆ; 3. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς instance of Jn.'s alleged habit of magnifying the miraculous element in the ministry of Jesus (see Intro., p. cxxx). This healing goes beyond any of the healings of blind men recorded by the Synoptists, Jn., after his wont, selecting one typical and notable case for record (see below on v. 6).

Diseases of the eye are common in the East, and it is not surprising that blind folk should have been brought for cure to Jesus. There is no mention in the O.T. of a blind person being cured (unless the case of Tob. 11<sup>12</sup> be reckoned as such); but to the prophet the blessings of the Messianic age included the opening of the eyes of the blind (Isa. 35<sup>5</sup>), and the Baptist was reminded of this in connexion with the cures wrought by Jesus (cf. Mt. 11<sup>5</sup>). Mk. records two special cases, sc. at Mk. 8<sup>23</sup> (to which further reference must be made) and Mk. 10<sup>46</sup> (cf. Mt. 20<sup>32</sup>, Lk. 18<sup>35</sup>). See also Mt. 9<sup>27</sup> 12<sup>22</sup> (cf. Lk. 11<sup>14</sup>) 15<sup>20</sup> 21<sup>14</sup>. But the singularity of the case recorded by Jn. is that the blindness is said to have been congenital.

There is a passage in Justin (Tryph. 69) which seems to presuppose a knowledge of this verse. Justin has quoted Isa. 35<sup>5</sup>, and he proceeds: πηγή ὕδατος ζῶντος παρὰ θεοῦ ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ γνώσεως θεοῦ . . . ἀνέβλυσεν, sc. Christ, τοὺς ἐκ γενετῆς καὶ κατὰ τὴν σάρκα πηροῦς καὶ κωφοῦς καὶ χωλοὺς ἰάσατο (cf. Apol. i. 22). πηροῦς is used of blindness, as well as of other bodily disabilities; but, apart from that, the phrase ἐκ γενετῆς indicates a knowledge of Jn. 9<sup>2</sup>, for it occurs nowhere else in the Gospels, nor is the circumstance that Jesus healed men of congenital infirmities mentioned elsewhere in the N.T.

9. ἤρτησαν αὐτὸν οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. These disciples may have been His Jewish adherents, as distinct from the Twelve, or the Twelve or some of them may be indicated (see on 2<sup>7</sup>). But the nature of the question which they put betrays an intimate relation of discipleship (note the word Rabbi, and see on 1<sup>20</sup>); and the close connexion of c. 9 with c. 10, in which the discourse about the Good Shepherd seems specially appropriate to the inner circle of His followers, suggests that οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ here at any rate includes the Twelve.

τίς ἡμαρτεν κτλ. The question is as old as humanity. The first of the alternative answers suggested is that the man himself had sinned and that his blindness was a punishment divinely sent. As to this, it may be true in an individual case, but the whole drift of the Book of Job is to show that suffering is not always due to sin, and with this may be compared the words of Jesus at Lk. 13<sup>34</sup>, 4 (see on 5<sup>14</sup> above). In this particular instance which drew forth the disciples' question, as the man had been blind from birth, if his blindness was a punishment for his own sin, it must have been prenatal sin. This was a possibility, according to some Rabbinical casuists (see Beresith, R. xxxiv, cited by Wetstein). Cf. v. 34. It is hardly likely that the questioners had in view sins committed in a former body, although the doctrine of the pre-existence of souls was not unknown to later Judaism; cf. Wisd. 8<sup>18</sup>, 20.

The other alternative answer, as it seemed to the disciples, was that the man's blindness was divinely sent as a punishment for the sins of his parents, a doctrine which is frequently stated in the O.T. (Ex. 20<sup>7</sup> 34<sup>7</sup>, Num. 14<sup>18</sup>, Ps. 79<sup>8</sup>, 109<sup>14</sup>, Isa. 65<sup>6</sup>, 7). This was the doctrine of punishment which Ezekiel repudiated, declaring that justice is only to be found in the operation of the principle, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. 18<sup>20</sup>).

The question of the relation between sin and suffering was discussed by the Gnostic Basilides in a passage quoted by Clem. Alex. (Strom. iv. 12), but although the problem raised is similar to that in the text, the discussion does not contain any allusion to the story before us.

3. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς. See for the omission of δ before Ἰησ. on 1<sup>20</sup>.

The answer of Jesus to the questioners approved neither of the alternatives which they put before Him. His answer, as set forth by Jn., is that the man's blindness was foreordained so that it might be the occasion of the exhibition of Divine power in his cure, ἵνα φανερωθῆ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ.<sup>1</sup> Cf. 5<sup>26</sup> for the witness borne to the Divine mission of Jesus by His ἔργα; and 11<sup>4</sup> (where see note), where the sickness of Lazarus is said to have been "for the glory of God, that the Son of God may be glorified thereby."

The doctrine of predestination is apparent at every point in the Fourth Gospel, every incident being viewed sub specie aeternitatis, as predetermined in the mind of God. See on 2<sup>4</sup> and 3<sup>14</sup>.

4. ἔμε δέει ἐργάζεσθαι τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πέμψαντός με. So Ἡ<sup>2</sup>ACNTAB, the Lat. and Syr. vss. (including Syr. sin.). But Ἡ<sup>2</sup>BDLW read ἔμεθε δέει, and for τοῦ πέμψαντός με, κλw read τοῦ πέμψαντος ἡμεῖς. The latter variant may be rejected, both on the MS. evidence and because the phrase "He that sent me" is characteristically Johannine (see on 4<sup>24</sup>), while "He that sent us" would be foreign to the phraseology of the

ἡς ἡμέρα ἐστίν ἔρχεται νύξ ἣν οὐδεὶς δύναται ἀργυλεῖσθαι. 5. Ἦταν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἃ, φῶς εἶμι τοῦ κόσμου. 6. ταῦτα εἶπον ἔκτιστον χαμίαι

Gospels. But ἡμέρα δὲ ἀργυλεῖσθαι, etc., would give a tolerable sense (see on 3<sup>11</sup>). It is adopted by Westcott-Hort, and by the R. V., as having the weight of uncial authority, the combination of  $\aleph^b$ BD (and also apparently the evidence of Origen) being strong. Yet although it is true of all of us that "we must work while it is day" (cf. Eccles. 5<sup>10</sup>), "the works of Him that sent me" in this passage has special reference to the ἔργα τοῦ θεοῦ, such as were made manifest in the cure of the blind man, which could not be wrought by the disciples, but were the "signs" of Jesus alone. In the doing of such ἔργα Jesus never associated others with Himself.

Nor, again, is it in the manner of Jn. to report a mere maxim of experience, such as "We must all work while it is day" would be. The force of δὲ goes deeper, for the words of Jesus here (vv. 3, 4) express that Divine predestination of events which is so prominently brought out in Jn. (see Introd., p. ciii, and on 2<sup>4</sup>). The man's blindness had been fore-ordained in the Divine purpose ἵνα φανερωθῇ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐν αὐτῷ (v. 3); and in like manner there was a Divine necessity that Jesus should do the works of "Him that sent Him" (see on 4<sup>4</sup> for this phrase). The only reading that brings out the force of the passage and gives consistency to the sentence is the rec. reading εἶμι δὲ ἀργυλεῖσθαι τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πέμφσαντός με.

Some expositors find in these words an allusion to 5<sup>17</sup> ὁ πατήρ μου ἔως ἄρτι ἐργάζεται, καὶ νῦν ἐργάζομαι (see note in loc.); this healing at Siloam, like the healing at Bethesda, having been wrought on a Sabbath (v. 14). But the allusion to 5<sup>17</sup> is doubtful.

ἡς ἡμέρα ἐστίν. The day is the time for labour, while the night is for rest (Ps. 104<sup>27</sup>); and the day is none too long for its appointed task. Jesus had already spoken of the shortness of His time (see on 7<sup>36</sup>). The "night" was coming for Him in this sense only, that when His public ministry on earth was ended, the "works" which it exhibited would no longer be possible.

Ἦταν with the pres. indic. occurs in Jn. only here and at 21<sup>19, 20</sup> (but cf. 12<sup>36</sup>), and is in these passages to be rendered "while" (cf. 13<sup>36</sup>, where, followed by ὅτι, it is "until").

Ἦταν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἃ, φῶς εἶμι τοῦ κόσμου. We had in 8<sup>12</sup> the majestic claim ἔγώ εἰμι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου (see note in loc.). Here it reappears, but not in so universal or exclusive a form: ἔγώ is omitted; so is the article before φῶς, and it is introduced by a clause which seems to limit its application to the time of the ministry of Jesus upon earth. "While I am in the world, I am a light of the world." He says; and He proceeds to impress His meaning upon His hearers by restoring his sight to the blind man. When Jn. says that Christ was "in the world" (2:19) he refers quite definitely to the period of His historical manifestation in the flesh (cf. also 17<sup>11</sup>); and the context in the present passage shows that the same meaning must be given here to ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. Christ is always, and always has been, and will be, τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου; but that thought is not fully expressed by Ἦταν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἃ, φῶς εἶμι τοῦ κόσμου. The thought here is that it had been eternally ordered in the Divine purpose that He should "work the works of God" during His earthly ministry; and another way of expressing this is to say that while He is in the world He is, inevitably, a light of the world, whose brightness cannot be hidden.

ἃ. Jesus is represented here (as also at 5<sup>6</sup>) as curing the sufferer without waiting to be asked. This is unlike the Synoptic narratives of healing, e.g. Mk. 8<sup>23</sup>, the cure of the blind man at Bethsaida, who was brought to Jesus by his friends. In that case, however, as in this, Jesus is said to have resorted to the use of physical means for the recovery of the patient, sc. the eyes were treated with spittle (cf. also Mk. 7<sup>33</sup>).

The curative effects of saliva (especially of fasting saliva) have been, and still are, accepted in many countries. "Magyars believe that styes on the eye can be cured by some one spitting on them."<sup>1</sup> A blind man who sought a cure from Vespasian asked "ut . . . oculorum orbis dignaretur respergere oris excremento" (Tacitus, Hist. iv. 81). Lightfoot (Hor. Hebr. in loc.) quotes a Rabbinical story which embodies the same idea. It was, apparently, a current belief in Judea that spittle was good for diseased eyes, and that Jesus accommodated Himself to that belief it is reported both by Mk. and Jn., although in neither case is it stated that He Himself accepted it as well founded. This tradition of Jesus curing blindness by means of His spittle is not found in Mt. or Lk. It is evidently the oldest tradition.

Severus Sammonicus, a second-century physician, quoted by Wetstein, prescribes the use of clay for smearing bad eyes, "turgentibus oculis uli circumline caeno."<sup>2</sup>

These strange remedies may be compared with those mentioned in a second-century inscription:<sup>3</sup> Οὐλοκρίσις Ἀπρη στρογγύτη τοφάβη ἐχρημάτουντο ὁ θεὸς ἐλάβην καὶ λαβέν αἶμα ἐξ

καὶ ἐποίησεν πηλὸν ἐκ τοῦ πτύσματος, καὶ ἐπέχρισεν αὐτοῦ τὸν πηλὸν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, 7. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ὅπως νίψαι εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν.

διεκτυρούσας λευκοῦ μετὰ μέλιτος καὶ κολλυρίου στυπτηρίας (cf. the mixture of clay and spittle) καὶ ἐπὶ τρεῖς ἡμέρας ἐπιχρίσεται ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς (cf. ἐπέχρισεν . . . ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, v. 6) καὶ ἀνιβλάσκει καὶ λαλοῦσιν καὶ πηχρῶσιν αὐτὸν ἐν δημοσίᾳ τῷ θεῷ.<sup>1</sup> ἔπυνον χαμαί. πτύσιν occurs again only Mk. 7<sup>25</sup> 32<sup>2</sup>; it should be noted that at Mk. 8<sup>26</sup> Jesus spat into the eyes of the blind man, πτύσας εἰς τὰ ὄμματα αὐτοῦ. χαμαί only occurs again 18<sup>9</sup>.

ἐπέχρισεν. So M<sup>2</sup>ADNW<sup>2</sup>; BC* give ἐπέχρισεν. In the N.T. ἐπιχρῶν occurs again only at v. 11.

The true text (M<sup>2</sup>BLN<sup>2</sup>) proceeds: αὐτοῦ τὸν πηλὸν ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, i.e. "and smeared its clay" (i.e. the clay which He had mixed with His spittle) "on the eyes." The rec. text after ὀφθαλμοὺς adds τοῦ τυφλοῦ, "He smeared the clay on the eyes of the blind man."

Irenaeus has a curious comment on the use of clay. He says (Har. v. xv. 2) that the true work of God (cf. v. 3) is the creation of man, "plastatio hominis," and he quotes Gen. 2<sup>d</sup> of God making man out of the dust of the earth. He concludes that the use of clay for the cure of the blind man was similar to this; being blind from his birth, he had virtually no eyes, and Jesus created them out of the clay.

7. ὄψεαι. See on 3<sup>2</sup> for ὄψεσθαι, a favourite verb with Jn. νίψαι. For the imperative, see on 3<sup>2</sup>. εἰς τὴν κολυμβήθραν. The man interpreted this command (v. 11) as meaning, "Go to the Pool, and wash." νίψαι εἰς τὴν κολ., however, may be translated as "wash in the Pool," εἰς being often used where the verb of motion is not expressed but only implied, e.g. λαθὼν καθήρτισεν εἰς πόλιν κτλ. (Mt. 2<sup>13</sup>; cf. Mt. 4<sup>12</sup>), and cf. ἐπιτεταγγεῖται εἰς ἕνα τόπον (20<sup>7</sup>). See, further, on 19<sup>12</sup>.

The man, apparently, was not directed to bathe in the Pool, but only to go there to wash off the clay with which his eyes had been smeared. The Egyptian vs. render νίψαι as meaning "wash thy face" (cf. v. 20).

The Pool of Siloam (there are two pools) is situated to the south of the Temple area, at the mouth of the Tyropoeon Valley. It is mentioned Isa. 8<sup>10</sup>, where "the waters of Siloam that go softly" are contrasted with "the waters of the Euphrates, strong and many," which typify the Assyrian power;

βήθραν τοῦ Σιλωάμ (ὃ ἑρμηνεύεται Ἀπειταλμένος). ἀπέλθεν οὖν καὶ νίψατο, καὶ ἤλθεν βλέπων. 8. Οἱ οὖν γαίοντες καὶ οἰ θεοποιῶντες

cf. also Neh. 3<sup>15</sup>, Lk. 13<sup>4</sup>. The waters which gather in the Pool are connected by a subterranean tunnel or conduit with the Virgin's Well (see on 5<sup>7</sup>). ἡρῶν, missis, is the roof of the name Siloah, or Siloam, which, thus means, etymologically, "sent," this name having been given to the Pool because the water is "sent" or "conducted" thither by the artificial aqueduct which goes back to the time of Hezekiah, or even earlier.<sup>1</sup>

In the note δ ἑρμηνεύεται Ἀπειταλμένος we observe the tendency to interpret Hebrew proper names for his Greek readers, of which we have many instances in Jn. (see on 1<sup>20</sup>). Σιλωάμ δ ἑρμηνεύεται Ἀπειταλμένος is exactly parallel to Κηρῶς δ ἑρμηνεύεται Πέτρος (1<sup>28</sup>). Hence it is unnecessary, and even perverse, to seek esoteric symbolism in the note δ ἑρμ. Ἀπειταλμένος, such as is suggested by commentators who call attention here to the fact that Jesus was "sent" by God (6<sup>57</sup> etc.). The evangelist knew that the name Siloam was given to the Pool because the water was conducted or "sent" there artificially; and he naturally passes on the information to his readers.<sup>2</sup> The word "Siloam" is not strictly a proper name, and this Jn. indicates by prefixing the article, τοῦ Σιλωάμ, as in Isa. 8<sup>10</sup>, Lk. 13<sup>4</sup>.

ἀπέλθεν οὖν καὶ νίψατο, καὶ ἤλθεν βλέπων. B omits οὖν . . . ἤλθεν, an omission due to homoioteleuton (ἀπέλθεν . . . ἤλθεν). The man did as he was bidden. He was able to find his way to the Pool of Siloam, for he was no doubt familiar with the streets near the place where he was accustomed to solicit alms. Apparently, he had some confidence in the power of Jesus to heal him, for he did not hesitate, as Naaman did when bidden to bathe in the Jordan.

ἤλθεν βλέπων. The mention of his neighbours in the next verse suggests that ἤλθεν means that he went home after he had visited the Pool. At any rate, it is not clearly said that the cure was instantaneous (but cf. v. 11). The restoration or improvement of sight may not have been observed for a day or more; and some days may have elapsed between v. 7 and v. 8. See v. 13 τὸν ποτε τυφλόν.

8. The lively account which follows, of the experiences of the blind man who had recovered his sight, may go back to the evidence of the man himself.

αὐτὸν τὸ πρότερον, ὅτι προσαίτης ἦν, ἔλεγον Οὐχ οὕτως ἔστιν ὁ καθή-μος καὶ προσαιτῶν; 9. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον ὅτι Οὐτως ἔστιν ἄλλοι ἔλεγον Οὐχί, ἀλλὰ ἄλλοις αὐτῷ ἔστιν. ἑκαῖνοι ἔλεγον ὅτι Ἐγὼ εἰμι.
 10. ἔλεγον οὖν αὐτῷ Πῶς οὖν ἠρεχθίσαν σου οἱ ὀφθαλμοί;
 11. ἀπεκρίθη ἑκαῖνος Ὁ ἄθρωπος ὁ λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς πηλὸν ἐποίησεν καὶ ἐκέχρησέν μου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς καὶ ἐπῆν μοι ὅτι Ὑγαγε εἰς τὸν Σιλωὰμ καὶ νίψαι· ἀπελθὼν οὖν καὶ νίψάμενος ἀνέβλεψα.
 12. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ποῦ ἔστιν ἑκαῖνος; λέγει Οὐκ οἶδα.

οἱ θεωροῦντες αὐτὸν ὅτι κτλ. θεωρῶν is used here (see on 2nd) as "taking notice," as at 10th 20th etc. They noticed the man because he was a familiar figure, as a blind beggar. Burney urges that ὅτι must mean "when," and that it is a misrendering of the Aramaic particle ܩ, which might be translated either "that" or "when." But this is unnecessary. They had noticed the man formerly because he used to beg from them; cf. 12th.

For προσαιτῆς (KABC*DNWΘ) the rec. has τυφλός.
 With ὁ καθήμενος καὶ προσαιτῶν cf. Mk. 10th τυφλὸς προσαιτῆς ἐκάθιστο παρὰ τὴν ὁδόν. A blind man begging by the wayside is a common figure in the East.

9. His neighbours and those who had formerly noticed the poor man, were not sure of his identity, now that his sight had been restored. His appearance would naturally be changed. Some said he was the man, others thought not. But he himself (ἑκαῖνος, cf. vv. 11, 12, 25, 36) set them right. ἐγὼ εἰμι, "I am the man." This is a simple affirmation of identity, not to be confused with the mystical use of ἐγὼ εἰμι in Jn. (see Introd., p. cxx).

10. πῶς οὖν ἠρεχθίσαν σου οἱ ὀφθαλμοί; The fact that the man's sight had been restored is not challenged; it is only the manner of the cure that is in question. See vv. 15, 19, 26.

11. Ὁ ἀνθρ. ὁ λεγόμενος Ἰησοῦς κτλ., "the man who is called Jesus," etc. He does not yet acknowledge Jesus as the Christ (cf. v. 36).

ἕγαγε εἰς τὸν Σιλωὰμ καὶ νίψαι. Some Latin and Syriac renderings give "wash thy eyes"; the Egyptian versions have "wash thy face." (See on v. 7 above.)

νήψάμενος ἀνέβλεψα. For ἀναβλέψαν of recovering sight, see Tob. 14th, Mt. 11th, Mk. 10th, Lk. 18th; and cf. Lk. 4th. The aor. ἀνέβλεψα would suggest that the man was cured immediately after the washing at the Pool of Siloam; but cf. v. 7 above. Strictly speaking, the verb is inappropriate to the case of congenital blindness; but a parallel is cited from Pausanias (Mezson. iv. 12. 10), in which a man, who is described as τὸν ἐκ γενετῆς τυφλόν, after an attack of headache recovers his sight (ἀνέβλεψεν ἀπ' αὐτοῦ), although only temporarily.

13. Ἄγουναι αὐτὸν πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους, τὸν ποτε τυφλόν.
 14. ἦν δὲ σάββατον ἐν ἡ ἡμέρᾳ τὸν πηλὸν ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἀνέβλεψεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοῦς. 15. πάλιν οὖν ἤρώτων αὐτὸν καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι πῶς ἀνέβλεψεν. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς Πηλὸν ἐπέθραξέν μου ἐπὶ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς, καὶ ἐνίψαμν, καὶ βλέπω. 16. ἔλεγον οὖν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων τινὲς Οὐκ ἔστιν οὗτος παρά Θεοῦ ὁ ἄθρωπος, ὅτι τὸ σάββατον οὐ τηρεῖ. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον Πῶς δυνατόν ἄθρωπος ἀμαρτυροῦν

12. Ποῦ ἔστιν ἑκαῖνος; See on 7th for the same question.

13. The cure was so striking, and the technical breach of the Sabbath so obvious, that some of those who had been interesting themselves in the case brought the man that had been cured before the Pharisees, as the most orthodox and austere of the religious leaders (see on 7th). This was not on the day of the cure, but on a later day. Note τὸν ποτε τυφλόν.

14. ἦν δὲ σάββατον (cf. 5th) ἐν ἡ ἡμέρᾳ (so KBLW, but the rec. has simply ἔτι, with ADNTAΘ) τὸν πηλὸν ἐποίησεν. It was the kneading of the clay that primarily called for notice, as it was obviously a work of labour and so was a breach of the Sabbath.

15. πάλιν οὖν ἤρώτων κτλ. The questioning (see v. 10) had to begin all over again, for this was an official inquiry, and the brevity and sharpness of the man's answers now show that he is tired of replying to queries as to the manner and circumstances of his cure.

16. There was a division of opinion among the Pharisees who heard the story of the man whose sight had been restored. The strict legalists among them fastened on one point only, viz. that the Sabbath had been broken. οὐκ ἔστιν οὗτος παρά Θεοῦ ὁ ἄθρωπος, "this person is not from God," i.e. has not been sent by God, has no Divine mission. For παρά cf. 1st, also 1 Macc. 2nd 17, and see on 6th for the deeper meaning which παρά Θεοῦ has elsewhere.

ὅτι τὸ σάββατον οὐ τηρεῖ. This was the charge that had been made against Jesus on a former occasion, when He healed the impotent man at Bethesda and told him to carry his mat away (5th). There was a twofold violation of the Sabbath laws apparent in this case, for not only had the clay been kneaded (v. 14), but it was specially forbidden to use spittle to cure bad τοιαῖτα σημεῖα ποιεῖν; καὶ σχίσμα ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς. 17. λέγουσιν οὖν τῷ τυφλῷ πάλιν τί σὺ λέγεις περὶ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι ἠνίκαξίν σου τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς; ἢ εἶπεν ὅτι Προφήτης ἐστίν. 18. οὐκ ἐπίστευσαν οὖν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι περὶ αὐτοῦ ὅτι ἦν τυφλὸς καὶ ἀναβλέψας, ὡς ὅπου ἐφώτισεν eyes on the Sabbath: "As to fasting spittle; it is not lawful to put it so much as upon the eyelids."<sup>1</sup>

It is curious that the phrase τὸ σάββατον τηρεῖν does not occur again in the Greek Bible; but τηρεῖν is a favourite verb with Jn. (see on 8<sup>40</sup>).

Others among the Pharisees took a larger view of the situation, probably such men as Nicodemus or Joseph of Arimathea. They called attention to the σημεῖα of Jesus as wonderful, no matter what the day was on which they were wrought. πῶς δύνανται ἄσθματος ἀμαρτωλῶς (this word "sinner" is only found in Jn. in this chapter) τοιαῖτα σημεῖα (see on 2<sup>12</sup>) ποιεῖν; How could a sinner do such things?

καὶ σχίσμα ἦν ἐν αὐτοῖς. Cf. for similar divisions of opinion, 7<sup>49</sup> 10<sup>19</sup>; and see also 6<sup>26</sup> 7<sup>13</sup>.

17. λέγουσιν οὖν τῷ τυφλῷ πάλιν, "they," sc. the Pharisees collectively who were present, "say again to the blind man," i. e. they resume their inquiry, to get more details.

τί σὺ λέγεις περὶ αὐτοῦ; "What do you say about Him?"

ὅτι ἠνίκαξίν implies that as Jesus had opened his eyes, the man's opinion was worth having. "What do you say, inasmuch as it was your eyes that He opened?" conveys the sense. For the constr., cf. 2<sup>19</sup>. Burney suggested that ὅτι is here a mistranslation of the Aramaic relative ܘܢ, and points to the Vulgate qui aperuit. But it is not necessary to appeal to an Aramaic original here. See Abbott, Diat. 2183.

The man's answer was προφήτης ἐστίν. He did not say that Jesus was "the prophet," as the multitude said after the miracle of the loaves (6<sup>14</sup>), but only that He was "a prophet," a simple answer like that of the Samaritan woman (4<sup>19</sup>), i. e. that He was an extraordinary person who could do extraordinary things.

18. Up to this point the Pharisees have not directly challenged the statement that the man's sight had been restored, having confined themselves to the question about the breach of the Sabbath which was involved. But the answer of the man, προφήτης ἐστίν, leads the more hostile of them (of Ἰουδαῖοις, see on 5<sup>17</sup>) to suspect collusion between Jesus and the patient, and so they summon the parents for further inquiry as to their son's blindness and its cure.

τοὺς γονεῖς αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἀναβλέψαντος, 19. καὶ ἐφώτισεν αὐτοὺς λέγοντες Οὐδὲν ἐστὶν ὁ υἱὸς ἡμῶν, ὃν ἡμεῖς λέγομεν ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγενήθη; πῶς οὖν βλέπει ἄρτι; 20. ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ καὶ εἶπαν Οὐδὲν ἐστὶν οὐδὲν ἐστὶν ὁ υἱὸς ἡμῶν καὶ ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐγενήθη. 21. πῶς δὲ νῦν βλέπει οὐκ οἴδαμεν, ἢ τίς ἠνοήσεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς; ἡμεῖς οὐκ οἴδαμεν αὐτὸν ἰσχυρίσασθε, ἥλικίαν ἔχει, αὐτὸς περὶ αὐανοῦ λαλήσει. 22. ταῦτα εἶπας οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ ὅτι ἐφοβοῦντο τοὺς Ἰουδαίους; ᾗς γὰρ συνετίθειτο οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἵνα ἐάν γονεῖς occurs in Jn. only in this chapter: the word in the N.T. is always used in the plural.

19. The Pharisees now cross-examine the parents, in strict fashion. "Is this your son? the son whom you say was born blind? How is it that he now sees?"

ἄρτι is a favourite word with Jn., and signifies "at this moment," as distinct from the vaguer νῦν, "at the present time." Cf. v. 25, 13<sup>7</sup>. ss. 1612. ss.

20. ἀπεκρίθησαν οὖν οἱ γονεῖς κτλ. κΒ support οὖν, which is omitted in the rec. text, αὐτοῖς being put in its place (om. κΒLW).

The parents were anxious to avoid responsibility in the matter of the cure, being afraid of the Jewish leaders (v. 22). They admit, of course, that the man was their son, and that he had been born blind, but they disclaim all knowledge of the manner of his cure. Perhaps they had not been present when Jesus smeared the man's eyes. At any rate, they repudiate with special emphasis any knowledge of who it was that healed him: τίς ἠνοήσεν αὐτοῦ τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς; ἡμεῖς οὐκ οἴδαμεν.

21. αὐτὸν ἰσχυρίσασθε, ἥλικίαν ἔχει, "ask him, he is of age," and therefore a legal witness. ἥλικίαν in the Synoptists always means "stature," but in this passage and at Heb. 11<sup>12</sup> it means "age." ἥλικίαν ἔχει is a good classical phrase, and is found in Plato. αὐτὸς περὶ αὐανοῦ λαλήσει, "he will tell you about himself." The parents were much alarmed.

αὐτὸν ἰσχυρίσασθε is omitted by κ*W B and the Sabinic vss. (including Q), a remarkable combination.

22. ταῦτα εἶπαν . . . ὅτι ἐφοβοῦντο τοὺς Ἰουδαίους. The fear of "the Jews" (see 1<sup>16</sup> 2<sup>19</sup>), the Jewish opponents of Jesus, whose leaders were the Pharisees, was very definite (cf. 7<sup>19</sup>). They were determined to check His success, and to put down His popularity. Cf. 7<sup>44</sup>.

ἥς γὰρ συνετίθειτο, they had formed a compact (cf. 7<sup>10</sup> 8<sup>49</sup>), and decided that strong measures must be taken against any one confessing (see on 1<sup>20</sup>) Jesus as Christ. He had not yet declared Himself openly in Jerusalem (10<sup>25</sup>), but it had been debated whether He were not indeed the Christ (7<sup>40</sup>).

τις αὐτὸν ἀμαρτωλὸν Χριστὸν, ἀπονομήσας γένεταί. 23. διὰ τοῦτο οἱ γονεῖς αὐτοῦ ἔλεον ὅτι ἤακτιαν ἔχει, αὐτὸν ἐκρωτίσασα. 24. Ἐβάρησαν οὖν τὸν ἀβθρῶνον ἐκ δευτέρου διὰ ἦν τυφλός, καὶ ἔλεον αὐτῷ διὰ δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ ἡμεῖς οἴαμεν ὅτι οἱ οἱτοὶ ὁ ἀβθρῶνος ἀμαρτωλὸς ἐστίν. 25. ἀπεκρίθη οὖν ἐκείνους ἔτι ἀμαρτωλὸς ἵσταν

Except when Jn. is interpreting Μεσσίας (14<sup>26</sup>), this is the only place in the Gospel where we find Χριστός without the def. article: "if any one should confess Him as Christ." Cf. Rom. 10<sup>9</sup> for a similar constr.: ἐὰν ἀποκηρύξῃς Κύριον Ἰησοῦν, "if thou shalt confess Jesus as Lord."

ἀπονομήσας, "excommunicating." The word is found in the Greek Bible only here and at 12<sup>24</sup> 16<sup>8</sup>. Full excommunication involved a cutting off from the whole "congregation of Israel" (cf. Mt. 18<sup>17</sup>); but it is probable that the lesser penalty of exclusion from the synagogue for a month (the usual period) is all that is indicated here. That he who acknowledged Jesus as the Messiah was to be treated as ἀπονομήσας is mentioned again 12<sup>62,1</sup>.

ὅτι ἤακτιαν ἔχει, αὐτὸν ἐκρωτίσασα (so MBW). ὅτι is recitantis, purporting to introduce the actual words spoken. Note that the order of the words has been changed, for in v. 21 we have αὐτὸν ἰσρωτίσασα, φλέσας ἔχει. Jn. is not punctilious in his narrative about reproducing the exact words or the order of words (see on 3<sup>16</sup>).

24. The Jewish leaders summon the man himself for re-examination (ἐκ δευτέρου, cf. v. 17). They now press him on the point of his former evidence, which they suggest was not true.

Ἄς δόξαν τῷ Θεῷ. This does not mean here "Thank God" (cf. Lk. 17<sup>37</sup>), but it is a form of adjuration meaning "Speak the truth," as at Josh. 7<sup>18</sup> (cf. 1 Esd. 9<sup>7</sup>).

ἡμεῖς οἴαμεν ὅτι οἱτοὶ ὁ ἀβθρῶνος ἀμαρτωλὸς ἐστίν, "we know," speaking with ecclesiastical authority, "that this man is a sinner," although the blind man had said (v. 17) that He was a prophet. They suggest that the man was lying, and was in collusion with Jesus.

25. The shrewdness and obstinacy of the man reveal themselves in his answer. He refuses to discuss their assertion that Jesus was a sinner. "One thing I know, that being a blind man, now I see." That is all he will say.

οὐκ οἴα: ἐν οἴα, ὅτι τυφλὸς ἐν ἡμέρι βλέπω. 26. ἔλεον οὖν αὐτῷ Τί ἐποικείν σοι; πῶς ἠροκίεν σοι τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς; 27. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ἔλεον ἡμῶν ἦν καὶ οὐκ ἠκούσαμε: νί πῶλον θέλετε ἐκείνους; μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς θέλετε αὐτοῦ μαθηταὶ γενέσθαι; 28. καὶ ἐλοκίβησαν αὐτὸν καὶ ἔλεον Σὺ μαθητὴς εἶ ἐκείνους, ἡμεῖς δὲ τοῦ Μωϋσέως ἱσταν μαθηταί: 29. ἡμεῖς οἴαμεν ὅτι Μωϋσῆς λαλάσκειν ὁ Θεός, τοῖτον δὲ οὐκ οἴαμεν πῶθεν ἵσταν. 30. ἀπεκρίθη ὁ ἀβθρῶνος καὶ ἔλεον

26. Accordingly his questioners attempt a further cross-examination, hoping to elicit some damaging admission.

27. The man who has recovered his sight now becomes irritable, and turns on his questioners: ἔλεον ἡμῶν ἦν καὶ οὐκ ἠκούσαμε, "I told you already (v. 15), and you did not hear," i.e. you did not heed. Ram. 13 have ἐκνοκίεσασα for ἠκούσασα, and the O.L. r has credidit, an attempt to interpret ἠκούσασα.

μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς θέλετε αὐτοῦ μαθηταὶ γενέσθαι; "Surely you do not wish to become disciples of His?" He could not refrain from this ironical gibe, which he must have known would irritate the Pharisees. καὶ before ἡμεῖς, "you also," suggests that it was known that Jesus had made some disciples already, and that the Pharisees were aware of it.

28. καὶ ἐλοκίβησαν αὐτόν, "and they reviled him." Having failed to get anything out of the man which might be damaging to Jesus, they angrily accuse him of being on the side of Jesus.

Σὺ μαθητὴς εἶ ἐκείνους, "you yourself are a disciple of that fellow." ἐκείνους conveys a suggestion of contempt; and, as Bengel says, "hoc vocabulo remouet Iesum a sese."

ἡμεῖς δὲ κτλ., "we, on the contrary, are disciples of Moses," as all orthodox Rabbis claimed to be.

29. ἡμεῖς οἴαμεν (cf. v. 24) ὅτι Μωϋσῆς λαλάσκειν ὁ Θεός (cf. Heb. 1<sup>1</sup>): that was why they were proud to be disciples of Moses.

τοῖτον δὲ οὐκ οἴαμεν πῶθεν ἵσταν. They profess complete ignorance of the antecedents of Jesus. Some of the people of Jerusalem knew, indeed, whence He came, τοῖτον οἴαμεν πῶθεν ἵσταν (7<sup>37</sup>, where see note), although there was a deeper sense in which none of the Jews knew it (8<sup>14</sup>). But the Pharisees would not admit that they either knew or cared what was His origin or who were His kindred.

30. The man whose sight had been restored is now thoroughly angry, and he goes on to argue in his turn, shrewdly enough, beginning with a mocking retort.

αὐτοῖς Ἐν τούτῳ γὰρ τὸ θαυμαστὸν ἵσταν, ὅτι ἡμεῖς οὐκ οἴδαμε πῶς ἐστίν, καὶ ἠνοήξεν μου τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς. 31. οὐδὲν ἐστὶ μαργαλιῶν ὁ Θεὸς οὐκ ἰσχύει, ἀλλ' ἰδὲν τὴν θεωρεῖς ἢ καὶ τὸ θάλαμα αὐτοῦ ποιεῖ, τοῦτου ἰσχύει. 32. ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος οὐκ ἠνοήξεν ὅτι ἠνοήξεν τις ἐν τούτῳ γὰρ (this is the order of words in MBLΘ) τὸ θαυμαστὸν ἵσταν κτλ. "Why, then, here is an astonishing thing, that you (ἡμεῖς, whose business it is to know about miracle-workers) do not know whence He is, and yet (καὶ) He opened my eyes!" Syr. sin., with a δ ε ff<sup>3</sup>, om. γὰρ, D and e replacing it by οὐν; but γὰρ must be retained. Bias says that we should treat the sentence as an interrogative, "Is not this, then, an astonishing thing?" (see Abbott, Diat. 2683). But it is simpler to take γὰρ as referring back to what had just been said, "Why, if that be so, etc."

Ὁν καὶ for καὶ, see on 1<sup>10</sup>.
31. The argument is clear. God does not hear the prayers of sinners. Miracles are granted in answer to the prayers of a good man. Jesus has worked a miracle. Therefore Jesus is a good man.

οὐδὲν, "we all know," introducing a maxim which no one will dispute; cf. 3<sup>4</sup>, 1 Jn. 5<sup>14</sup>.

ἁμαρτωλῶν ὁ θεὸς οὐκ ἰσχύει, "sinners are not heard by God," ἁμαρτωλῶν being put in the first place (with KALNWTA, but BDΘ have ὁ θεὸς ἁμαρτωλῶν) for emphasis. ἰσχύει here takes the genitive, because it implies a hearing with attention; see on 3<sup>4</sup>.

The principle that God does not hearken to the prayers of sinners appears frequently in the O.T.; cf. Job 27<sup>9</sup>, Ps. 66<sup>1</sup>, Isa. 1<sup>16</sup> 59<sup>1</sup>, Ezek. 8<sup>12</sup>, Mic. 3<sup>4</sup>, Zech. 7<sup>14</sup>. For the converse principle, that God hears the prayer of a godly man, cf. Ps. 34<sup>12</sup> 145<sup>19</sup> Prov. 15<sup>22</sup> Jas. 5<sup>16</sup>.

ἰδὲν τῆς . . . τῆς θάλαμα αὐτοῦ ποιεῖ, τοῦτου ἰσχύει. That Jesus "did the will of God" is a frequent thought in Jn.; see on 4<sup>34</sup>. For the answer always given to His prayers, cf. 11<sup>42</sup> 41.

32. ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος. The phrase ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος or ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος occurs Lk. 1<sup>7</sup>, Acts 3<sup>1</sup> 11<sup>18</sup>, and is common in the LXX (s.g. Chron. 16<sup>28</sup>, Ps. 25<sup>9</sup> 90<sup>1</sup>, Eccles. 14<sup>17</sup>, Jer. 2<sup>3</sup>, etc.), as it is in the papyri. But ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος does not occur again in the Greek Bible, the nearest phrase being ἐξ αἵματος, Prov. 8<sup>2</sup>. (Weiststein illustrates it freely from non-Biblical authors.) We have here an instance of the interchangeability of ἐκ and ἀπὸ which we have already observed in Jn. (see on 1<sup>14</sup> 6<sup>7</sup>).

ἐκ τοῦ αἵματος κτλ., "Since the world began it was unheard of that any one opened the eyes of one who was born blind."

ὀφθαλμοὶ τυφλοῦ γεννημένου 33. εἰ μὴ ἦν οὐκός παρὰ Θεοῦ, οὐκ ἠθέλησα ποιεῖν αὐδίν. 34. ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπαν αὐτῷ Ἐν ἁμαρτίᾳ σὺ ἐγεννήθης εἰς, καὶ σὺ δίδασκας ἡμᾶς; καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω.

35. Ἦκουσαν Ἰησοῦς δεῖ ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω, καὶ εὐρὺν αὐτὸν εἶπεν Ὡς πιστεύεις εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; 36. ἀπεκρίθη

It is this point, viz. that the blindness was congenital, that is insisted on throughout; whereas in the case of the cure of the man at Bethesda, the circumstance that he had been infirm for thirty-eight years (5<sup>7</sup>) passes out of view at once, and attention is concentrated on the fact that he was cured on a Sabbath day.

33. εἰ μὴ ἦν . . . ποιεῖν οὐδέν. This was a principle recognised by Nicodemus (3<sup>2</sup>), with which reference is made again at 10<sup>31</sup>. "If this man were not sent from God (cf. v. 16 for παρὰ Θεοῦ), He could do nothing," sc. of this wonderful nature.

34. The Pharisees will not stoop to refute a low person who ventures to argue with them; but the retort ascribed to them is weak, for it admits what they had previously questioned (v. 19), viz. that the blindness was congenital, and assigns as a reason for it the man's prenatal sin (cf. v. 2).

ἐν ἁμαρτίᾳ (the emphatic words beginning the sentence) οὐ ἐγεννήθης εἰς. Cf. Ps. 51<sup>2</sup>; and for εἰς of. 13<sup>16</sup>.

σὺ δίδασκας ἡμᾶς; Every word is scornfully emphatic, καὶ ἐξέβαλον αὐτὸν ἔξω. This does not signify "they excommunicated him" (v. 22), a formal act which could only be done at a formal sitting of the Sanhedrim. It only means "they put him out," sc. of their presence; cf. note on 6<sup>7</sup>, where ἐξέβαλλον ἐκ is shown to be a Johannine phrase.

(vv. 35-36)

35. Ἦκουσαν Ἰησοῦς. K<sup>2</sup>B omit δ before Ἰησοῦς, perhaps rightly; see on 1<sup>30</sup> 40.

When Jesus heard of the repulse of the man by the Pharisees, after his courageous utterances, He sought him out. With εὐρὺν αὐτὸν cf. 1<sup>28</sup> 5<sup>14</sup>.

σὺ πιστεύεις εἰς τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; The form of the question presupposes an affirmative reply, "Thou, at least, believest in the Son of Man?" The man's simplicity and constancy, in the presence of those whom he had good reason to fear, show Jesus that he is already on the way to become a disciple. Not only did he assert before the Pharisees that his Healer must have a Divine mission (παρὰ Θεοῦ, v. 33), but his κεῖνος καὶ εἶπεν Καὶ τίς ἐστίν, Κύριε, Ἰσα πιστεύσας εἰς αὐτόν;

37. εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς Καὶ ἔσρακας αὐτόν καὶ ὁ λαλῶν μετὰ faith was beginning to go deeper. He was on the point of believing in (see on 1<sup>24</sup> for the force of πιστεύσας εἰς . . . and cf. 4<sup>20</sup>) the Son of Man (see Introd., p. cxxxix). This is the criterion of Christian discipleship which was placed before him.

We follow NBDW and Syr. sin. in reading τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ ἀβραάμ. But ALG and most vs. read τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ, which is the usual title in Jn. when confession of faith is in question. See, e.g., 1<sup>26</sup>, 4<sup>9</sup>, 11<sup>22</sup>; and cf. Mt. 16<sup>14</sup>. According to 20<sup>31</sup>, the purpose of the Fourth Gospel is that readers may believe that "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." But if "the Son of God" were the original reading here, it is surprising that scribes should have altered it to "the Son of Man," which does not appear in any of the other confessions of faith; while the change from the unusual "Son of Man" to "Son of God," the usual title in similar contexts, is easily explicable (see 6<sup>30</sup> for a similar alteration by scribes). Further, v. 36 shows that the would-be disciple did not understand who was meant by "the Son of Man" or that Jesus was claiming such a title for Himself. As we have seen (1<sup>24</sup>), the Messiah was popularly designated "the Son of God," but "the Son of Man" was not a recognised Messianic title (see Introd., p. cxxx). The man to whom Jesus spoke was evidently puzzled (cf. 12<sup>36</sup>).

36. ἀπεκρίθη κεῖνος καὶ εἶπεν καὶ τίς ἐστίν, κύριε; For this BW have the shorter form καὶ τίς ἐστίν, ἔφη, κύριε;

The man had accepted Jesus as a prophet (v. 17), and so he was ready to act on whatever Jesus bade him. He will put his trust in the "Son of Man" if he is told who He is, and where he may find Him.

καὶ τίς ἐστίν; "Who then is He?" For the initial καί, cf. καὶ τίς θέλωτα σωθῆναι; (Mk. 10<sup>50</sup>, Lk. 18<sup>26</sup>) and καὶ τίς ἐστίν μου πλησίον; (Lk. 10<sup>39</sup>). Cf. also 14<sup>22</sup>.

He addresses Jesus with respect: κύριε, "sir" (see on 12<sup>30</sup>). κύριε generally comes at the beginning of the sentence, but here and at v. 38 it comes at the end.

Ἰσα πιστεύσας εἰς αὐτόν, taking up the words of Jesus in the preceding verse. There is an ellipsis before Ἰσα, which has full telic force. "Who is He? for I want to know in order that I may put my trust in Him." Cf., for a similar constr., 1<sup>22</sup>.

37. The reply of Jesus, beginning καὶ ἔσρακας αὐτόν, has a special force as addressed to a man who had been blind from his birth. "You have seen Him." This was one of the first blessings which came to him through "the opening of his σοῦ ἰκεῖνός ἐστιν. 38. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν Ἰησοῦς, Κύριε καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ.

39. Καὶ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς Εἰς κρίμα ἔγω εἰς τὸν κόσμον τοῦτον eyes." In his case, faith followed immediately on the "seeing" of Jesus, in marked contrast with the case of those to whom it was said ἠσπάρατί [με] καὶ ὁ πιστεύει (6<sup>30</sup>, where see note).

καὶ ὁ λαλῶν μετὰ σοῦ κεῖνός ἐστιν, "He who is talking with you is He." Cf. 4<sup>26</sup> for a similar discovery of Himself to the Samaritan woman. For κεῖνός, used by the speaker or narrator of himself, see on 19<sup>5</sup>.

38. The man's response is unhesitating: πιστεύσας, κύριε, "I believe, Lord"; κύριε being now used with a respect which has passed into reverence (see on 1<sup>20</sup> 4<sup>2</sup>), for the narrator adds καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ, "and he worshipped Him." προσεκύνην (see on 4<sup>20</sup>) is always used in Jn. to express divine worship.

The man who has been cured of his blindness now passes out of the story.

The whole of v. 38 and the words καὶ εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς in v. 39 are omitted in N<sup>2</sup>W, the O.L. δ, and the fourth-century Coptic MS. described as Q. The O.L. δ also omits the clause, with the exception of καὶ προσεκύνησεν αὐτῷ. Such a consensus of Greek, Coptic, and Latin authorities for this omission is remarkable, as a textual phenomenon; but the omission cannot be original.

The inner meaning of the healing, and the condemnation of the Pharisees (vv. 39-41)

39. Here is given, in brief, the interpretation of the story, for this miracle was a σημεῖον (v. 16). The cure of the man's blindness was symbolic of the giving of spiritual vision to those conscious of their spiritual blindness, who are therefore willing to be healed. But some do not feel the need of a Healer. This is the dividing line between man and man. And the mission of Jesus leads up to judgment, according as men do or do not recognise their Deliverer in Him.

εἰς κρίμα ἔγω εἰς τὸν κόσμον τοῦτον ἔλθομαι. Cf. 16<sup>30</sup> 18<sup>37</sup> for the saying "I am come into the world"; and cf. also 6<sup>14</sup>. For the phrase "this world," see on 8<sup>23</sup>. It means the earthly world, the home of fallen man, which is therefore imperfect. κρίμα (a word not found again in Jn.) is the result of a κρίσις or act of distinguishing between good and bad, and so of judging. So the sentence means, "It was with a view to that ultimate ἦλθον, ἵνα οἱ μὴ βλέποντες βλέπωσιν καὶ οἱ βλέποντες τυφλοὶ γίνωσται. 40. ἤκουσαν ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων ταῦτα οἱ μὲν αὐτοῦ ὄντες καὶ εἶπαν αὐτῷ· Μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς τυφλοὶ ἐσμεν; 41. εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ decision which shall distinguish man from man that I came into this world," special emphasis being laid on ἴνῃ.

There is no mention of the Agent of this Judgment, i.e. of the Personality of the Judge, and so there is no inconsistency with <sup>317</sup> (cf. 8<sup>12</sup>). Jesus does not say here that He came to execute judgment (cf. 5<sup>22</sup>), but in order that by His coming men might be tested and so judgment reached at last. The supreme test, as always (cf. v. 35, and see on <sup>315</sup>), is faith in Himself. Those who recognise Him for what He is are in one category; those who fail to do so, in another.

He came, not only to give recovery of sight to the physically blind (Isa. 61<sup>2</sup>, quoted by Himself Lk. 4<sup>18</sup>), but to open the eyes of the spiritually blind. It was the challenge of a prophet, "Look, ye blind, that ye may see" (Isa. 42<sup>19</sup>); and Jesus came to bring this illumination to those conscious of their blindness, ἵνα οἱ μὴ βλέποντες βλέπωσιν.

There is also a severer purpose in the coming of Jesus. It was ἵνα . . . οἱ βλέποντες, τυφλοὶ γίνωσται, "that those who see should become blind" (cf. Mk. 4<sup>12</sup>). There is a darkening of moral vision which is caused by complacent satisfaction with the light that is already enjoyed (cf. Rev. 3<sup>17-19</sup>). Those who see only dimly, and do not desire to see more clearly, lose the power of sight wholly; they become blind. This was the end of the Pharisees (the "blind guides" of Mt. 23<sup>16</sup>), who did not see anything exceptional in Jesus. They could not see at first, because they would not; and so the judgment of blindness fell upon them. See further on <sup>1200</sup>.

40. Some Pharisees who were near overheard what Jesus said, and interjected the scornful question, "Are we also blind?"

ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων . . . οἱ μὲν αὐτοῦ ὄντες. The Sinai Syriac renders "who were near Him," μετὰ indicating proximity in place, but not necessarily any attachment of discipleship. See τοὺς πτωχοὺς γὰρ πάντοτε ἔχετε μετ' αὐτῶν (12<sup>13</sup>); and cf. Mt. 9<sup>15</sup>. The crushing reply of Jesus (v. 41) to their question forbids the hypothesis that these Pharisees are to be reckoned among the half-believing Jews mentioned at 8<sup>12</sup>.

μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς τυφλοὶ ἐσμεν; "Are we also spiritually blind," we who are the recognised religious teachers of the nation? The form of the question, μὴ καὶ ἡμεῖς . . ., suggests that a negative answer is believed by the questioners to be the obviously true answer. See on 6<sup>17</sup>.

Ἰησοῦς· Εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε, οὐκ ἂν εἶχετε ἁμαρτίαν· νῦν δὲ λέγετε ὅτι Βλέπωμεν· ἡ ἁμαρτία ἡμῶν μένει.

X. 19. Σχίσμα πάλιν ἐγένετο ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις διὰ τοὺς λόγους τούτους. 20. ἴλαγον δὲ πολλοὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν Δαιμόνων ἔχει καὶ μάλιστα·

41. The answer of Jesus is as overwhelming as it was unforeseen. The Pharisees had expected that He would say, "Yes, you are blind, despite your authoritative position as religious guides" (cf. Mt. 23<sup>16</sup>). But instead of that, He said, "No, you are not wholly blind; that is the worst feature of your case."

εἰ τυφλοὶ ἦτε, οὐκ ἂν εἶχετε ἁμαρτίαν. If they were wholly and involuntarily blind to the presentation of the Divine which Jesus embodied, they would not be blameworthy for refusing to acknowledge it. Cf. εἰ μὴ ἦλθον καὶ ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἴδοσαν (15<sup>22</sup>). But this was not their situation. The perpetual reproach with which Jesus challenged them (cf., e.g., 8<sup>47</sup>) was that their failure to accept Him was a moral failure. Their self-satisfaction prevented them from seeing what they ought to have seen in Him (see on v. 39 above). Their claim to "see," βλέπωμεν, was arrogant, and shut them out from the larger vision which had offered itself (cf. Prov. 26<sup>12</sup>). So "your sin abides," i.e. is not removed.

ἡ ἁμαρτία ἡμῶν μένει. There is a sin against light which is eternal in its consequences. Cf. Mk. 3<sup>28</sup> for the Synoptic form of this tremendous judgment.

X. 19. The sequence of ideas brings vv. 19-29 into direct connexion with c. 9 rather than with 10<sup>38-39</sup>, and they are printed accordingly at this point. See Introd., p. xxiv, for some considerations which favour the order 9<sup>11</sup> 10<sup>18-20</sup> 10<sup>21-12</sup> 10<sup>30-32</sup>.

Diversity of opinion about Jesus (vv. 19-22)

σχίσμα. A division of opinion had appeared before among the crowd (7<sup>12</sup>), but this was among the Jewish critics of Jesus, the Pharisees, who were not all of one mind about Him. πάλιν refers back to the σχίσμα of 9<sup>15</sup>, which had originated in the cure of the blind man, and which is still apparent.

20. Δαιμόνων ἔχει. This was an easy way of accounting for the strangeness of the teaching of Jesus, and we have had it before 7<sup>20</sup> 8<sup>12</sup>; cf. Wisd. 5<sup>4</sup>, and see Introd., p. clxxvii. μάλιστα. This verb occurs only here in Jn.

τί αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε; 21. Ἄλλοι ἔλεγον ταῦτα τὰ ῥήματα οὐκ ἔστιν δαιμονιζομένου μη δαιμόνιον δόματα τυφλῶν ὀφθαλμοῖς ἀνοίξει;

22. Ἐγένετο τότε τὸ ἐγκαίνια ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις<sup>23</sup> χειμῶν ἦν<sup>24</sup>

τί αὐτοῦ ἀκούετε; "Why do you heed Him?" ἀκούειν with the gen. always indicating in Jn. a hearing with attention and appreciation (see on 3<sup>9</sup>). The question betrays a certain uneasiness on the part of the questioners.

21. Others were less swayed by prejudice. "These are not the words of one possessed with a devil." δαιμονιζοῦσθαι is a familiar verb in Mk. and Mt., but it occurs only here in Jn., who prefers δαιμόνιον ἔχειν.

"Can a devil open the eyes of blind people?" Mt. represents the Pharisees as admitting the possibility of miracles wrought by demonic agency (Mt. 12<sup>24</sup>), but this idea does not appear in Jn. To open the eyes of the blind is a Divine prerogative (Ps. 146<sup>8</sup>).

ἀνοίξει, κBLW@ fam. 13; the rec. has ἀνοίγειν.

The Feast of the Dedication: Jesus admits that He is Messiah, of which His words should have been sufficient proof (vv. 22-25)

22. ἐγένετο τότε τὸ ἐγκαίνια ἐν τοῖς Ἱεροσολύμοις. τότε is read by BLW, but it has been replaced by ἐδὲ in WAD@ and the rec. text. τότε is not common in Jn., and indicates here that some time had elapsed since the last date mentioned, viz. the Feast of Tabernacles (7<sup>27</sup>). Chapters 8 and 9 describe a period of continual controversy with the Pharisees, which was brought to a head by the healing of the blind man and the claims subsequently made by Jesus. The Feast of Tabernacles was celebrated about the month of October, and it was now December. Jn. is forward to give dates when he can (see Intro., p. cii).

The Feast of the Dedication (ἑορτή, "Renewal") was instituted by Judas Maccabæus to commemorate the purification of the Temple from the pollutions of Antiochus Epiphanes by the dedication of a new altar (1 Macc. 4<sup>36-39</sup>, 2 Macc. 10<sup>6-9</sup>), and was kept at the winter solstice (Chislev, 25); and during the following week Josephus notes that it was customary to light the lamps on the "candlestick" as a mark of rejoicing, and that the Feast was sometimes called τὰ φῶτα (Antt. XII. vii. 6). The ceremonial was similar to that of Tabernacles (2 Macc. 10<sup>6</sup>), the idea of light being conspicuous in both festivals. Hence the words "I am the Light of the World" (8<sup>12</sup> 9<sup>6</sup>) would have been equally illustrated by the ritual of Tabernacles or of Dedication.

23. καὶ κριτέτεροι δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ ἐν τῇ στοᾷ τοῦ Σολομῶνος. 24. ἐπέκλεισαν οὖν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι καὶ ἔλεγον αὐτῷ Ἔως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἰρεῖς; εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός, εἶπὸν ἡμῖν παρρησίᾳ.

It was not a matter of obligation to attend at Jerusalem for the Feast of τὰ ἐγκαίνια, which might be observed elsewhere; and Jesus is not represented by Jn. as "going up" to Jerusalem for it. It happened that the season of the Dedication came on while He was there, and, as Jn. notes, it was winter.

Ἱεροσολύμοις. ABLW@ prefix τοῖς, which κBLW@ omit. Jn. usually omits the article before Ἱεροσόλυμα (see on 2<sup>22</sup>; and cf. 1<sup>16</sup>).

χειμῶν ἦν. The rec. prefixes καί, but om. κBLW@.

22. "It was winter, and Jesus was walking in the Temple, in Solomon's porch." That is, He was giving His teaching under shelter, because of the severity of the season, in the eastern cloister of the Temple precincts (for τὸ ἱερόν, the Temple enclosure, see on 2<sup>14</sup>). This vivid touch suggests that the writer is thoroughly familiar with the place and the conditions under which instruction was given there. At the time when the Fourth Gospel was written, the Temple had been for some years in ruins; but the note of time and circumstance is easily explicable, if we have here the reminiscence of an eye-witness of the scene.

24. ἐπέκλεισαν οὖν αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι. "The Jews (see on 1<sup>19</sup>) surrounded Him," sc. that they might settle the question as to His claims.

Ἔως πότε τὴν ψυχὴν ἡμῶν αἰρεῖς; "How long dost thou hold us in suspense?" This rendering of the R.V. is probably accurate, although no exact parallel for ψυχὴν αἰρεῖν in this sense has been produced. We have the phrase at Ps. 25<sup>2</sup> 86<sup>4</sup>, meaning "lift up my soul," and so Josephus uses it (Antt. III. ii. 3). Here it is, "How long do you excite our spirits," i.e. arouse our expectations?—in other words, keep us in suspense. The expression is idiomatic Greek, and has survived in modern Greek: ὅτι πότε θεὸς μᾶς βγάξει τὴν ψυχὴν, "How long will you plague us?"<sup>1</sup> εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστός κτλ. "If thou be the Christ, etc.," σὺ being emphatic, "If you are really the Christ."

εἶπὸν ἡμῖν παρρησίᾳ. Cf. Mt. 26<sup>28</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>27</sup>; and for παρρησίᾳ, see on 7<sup>5</sup>.

25. "Art thou the Christ?" is one of those questions which cannot be answered by a direct "Yes" or "No," if misunderstanding is to be avoided. If He had said "Yes,"

 ἃ ἐγὼ ποῶ ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Πατρὸς μου, τούτα μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ·

they would have assumed that He claimed to be the Messiah of Jewish patriotic expectation; and this He was not. But He could not say "No" without disavowing His mission. So He answers by saying (1) that He had told them already, and (2) that His works sufficiently exhibit Him as the Anointed of God.

Ἡ<sup>25</sup> D omits αὐτοῖς, but ins. Ἡ<sup>25</sup> ABLWΘ. B omits ὁ before Ἰησοῦς, as it frequently does.

εἰπὼν ἑμῶν (see on 6<sup>26</sup> 11<sup>20</sup>). The only open avowal by Jesus of His Messiahship recorded by Jn. before this point in the narrative is at 4<sup>26</sup>, and this was addressed, not to the Jews but to the Samaritan woman. But He had told them indirectly, and more than once (e.g. 5<sup>20</sup> 8<sup>24</sup> 10<sup>25</sup> 9<sup>27</sup>; cf. 2<sup>16</sup>); if their thoughts had been in tune with His, they would have understood.

τὰ ἔργα. For ἔργα used of the "works" of Christ, see on 5<sup>20</sup>.

The place of "signs" as generating faith in Christ has already been discussed (see on 2<sup>11</sup>); here He speaks, as at 5<sup>20</sup>, of the value of His "works" as "witnessing" to His claims, which is the same thing put into different words. His works bear witness as to the kind of Messiah which He is. For the idea of "witness" in Jn., see Introd., p. xcii.

For the phrase "the Name of my Father," see on 5<sup>26</sup>. The works of Jesus were done, not only as the ambassador of the Father and sent by Him (see on 3<sup>17</sup>), but as by one to whom the "Name," that is the providential power of the Father, had been given (see on 17<sup>11</sup>, and cf. 14<sup>26</sup>). There is no special reference to the invocation of the Name of God comparable with the invocation of names of power common in Gnostic magic. In the Fourth Gospel the ἔργα of Christ are the ἔργα of the Father (cf. v. 37).

The Jews do not believe in Jesus, because they are not of His flock. He is their true Shepherd, would they but recognise it; other shepherds are false guides (vv. 26-29, 1-6)

26 ff. In our arrangement of the text we have at v. 26 the first appearance in Jn. of the image of Jesus as the Shepherd, and of His followers as His sheep. The image is introduced without any explanation, but it is apparent from the Synoptic Gospels that it was one which Jesus often used, and which must have been familiar to His disciples. He called them His "little flock" (Lk. 12<sup>28</sup>); and He declared His mission to be primarily addressed to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel" (Mt. 10<sup>6</sup> 15<sup>24</sup>). One of the most touching of His parables is that in which He compared Himself with a shepherd seeking a lost and strayed sheep, while the rest of his flock are left temporarily by themselves (Mt. 18<sup>11</sup> Lk. 15<sup>4</sup>). The wandering crowds move His pity, because they are as "sheep without a shepherd" (Mk. 6<sup>34</sup>, Mt. 9<sup>36</sup>). He told His disciples, in words from Zechariah, that when their Shepherd was smitten, they would be like sheep scattered abroad (Mk. 14<sup>27</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>31</sup>). This was one of the illustrations by which Jesus was accustomed to describe His own ministry; and the apostolic writers speak of Him in the next generation as the "Shepherd of souls" (1 Pet. 2<sup>25</sup>), "the great Shepherd of the sheep" (Heb. 13<sup>20</sup>), without adding any comment or explanation.

This imagery, natural to a pastoral people, was already familiar to the Jews. In the Psalms, Yahweh is the Shepherd of His people (Ps. 23<sup>1</sup> 77<sup>20</sup> 79<sup>13</sup> 80<sup>1</sup> 95<sup>1</sup> 100<sup>2</sup>; cf. Ezek. 34<sup>12-16</sup>). And it is particularly to be observed that Messiah is spoken of in the O.T. as a Shepherd. Micah (5<sup>4</sup>) and Isaiah (40<sup>11</sup>) both speak of the future Deliverer as one who will feed His flock; and in the Psalms of Solomon (xvii. 45) the same picture is found of the Messianic king tending the flock of Yahweh. Cf. 2 Esd. 2<sup>24</sup>. This idea of the Messiah as Shepherd is developed in the verses which follow here.

The sequence of thought in vv. 26-29, 1-18, must now be set out. In v. 24, the Jews ask Jesus for a plain answer to the question, "Art thou the Messiah?" In the note on v. 25 it has been pointed out that an answer "Yes" or "No" might have been misleading. Jesus first replies that He has, in effect, told them already, and then that His "works" should be a sufficient witness. He now goes on to give a fuller answer. The reason why the Jews did not realise at once that He was the Messiah was that they were not His true "sheep." Were they His sheep, they would recognise His voice as that of their Shepherd, and would follow Him unhesitatingly (v. 27). He it is indeed who gives His sheep eternal safety, and no one can snatch them out of His hand, or out of the hand of God who gave them to Him (v. 28). They are "the sheep of His hand," as the Psalmist has it (Ps. 95<sup>7</sup>).

It ought to be possible always to recognise a true shepherd. He comes into the fold through the door, and does not climb over the wall, as a thief would do (v. 1). The porter opens the door to him, and the sheep recognise his voice: he calls them by name, and leads them forth (v. 3). He leads and they follow, recognising his voice (v. 4), while they would run from that of a stranger (v. 5). But the Jews did not understand what bearing this allegory had on the question they had asked, sc. "Art thou the Messiah?" In particular, they cannot perceive what or where is the door into the fold by which the true shepherd enters. So Jesus explains this.

"I am the Door," He says (v. 7). Accordingly all claiming to be your Messianic shepherds who did not pass through this Door are thieves and robbers (v. 8), as is further established by the fact that the sheep of Israel did not attend to them (v. 8). "I am the Door," and not only for the shepherds, but for the sheep. I am the Door for the shepherds because I am the Door for the sheep. It is only through me that you can enter the fold of safety, and be led out into good pastures (v. 9). The thieves and robbers come only to destroy and kill. I am come to give life abundantly (v. 10).

And then the main theme is resumed, the metaphor of the Door having been explained. I am the Good Shepherd, who gives His life for the sheep, unlike the hireling who runs away when there is danger (vv. 11-13). I know my sheep, and they know me (just as the Father knows me and I know Him), vv. 14, 15. I have other sheep besides those of the Flock of Israel: them also I must lead, and they too shall hear my voice. So shall there be One Flock and One Shepherd (v. 16).

The Father loves me, because I am thus laying down my life, to take it up again (v. 17). My death is voluntary. But the Father knows and approves. Indeed this is His commandment (v. 18). The fact is, that I and my Father are One (v. 30).

28. Ἄλλα ἡμεῖς οὐ κατανοεῖτε, ὅτι οὐκ ἐστὶ ἐκ τῶν πρόβατων τῶν, but the rec. has οὐ γὰρ ἐστὶ. The thought is the same as that at 8th, where see the note. Those who are not of the flock of Christ have no faith. This is natural, for faith, in the Fourth Gospel, is born of a certain spiritual affinity.

The rec. adds at the end of the verse καθὼς εἶπον ὑμῶν, with AD; but these words are not found in  $\alpha\beta\lambda\omega\theta$ , and cannot be regarded as part of the true text. If genuine, they must refer to something that has preceded, and cannot be associated with what follows (Tatian links them with v. 27). It is not easy to find any previous saying of Jesus in Jn., to which καθὼς εἶπον ὑμῶν could be referred at this point, if the words

ἡμῶν. 27. τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἐκ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούουσιν, καὶ γινώσκουσιν αὐτὰ, καὶ ἀκολουθοῦσιν μοι, 28. καὶ οὐκ ἔδωκα αὐτοῖς ζωὴν αἰώνιον, καὶ οὐ μὴ ἀπολλοῦνται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, καὶ οὐχ ἁρπάξαι τις αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς μου. 29. ὁ Πατήρ μου ἔδωκεν μοι πάντων were genuine, other than such passages as 8th mentioned above (cf. 6th 11th 14th). Even if the traditional arrangement of the text be followed, there is nothing in vv. 1-18 which says expressly that those who are not of Christ's flock have no faith. Probably καθὼς εἶπον ὑμῶν is the interpolation of a scribe working on the displaced text, who wished to connect τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἐκ τῆς φωνῆς μου, 26, 27, with those of whom (as he supposed) vv. 1-18 had already told.

27. τὰ πρόβατα τὰ ἐκ τῆς φωνῆς μου ἀκούουσιν, sc. hear with obedient attention. Cf. vv. 3, 16; and see on 3rd.

The rec. has ἀκούει (from v. 3), but  $\alpha\beta\lambda\omega\theta$  give ἀκούουσιν (cf. v. 16). So we have here the plural ἀκολουθοῦσιν, while at v. 4 we have ἀκολουθεῖ.

The sheep, in Eastern lands, follow the shepherd, who always goes before and leads. Cf. Ignatius, Philad. 2, ἔσθου δὲ ὡς ποιμὴν ἐστίν, ἑκεί ὡς πρόβατα ἀκολουθεῖτε.

καὶ γινώσκουσιν αὐτὰ. Cf. v. 14.

28. καὶ οὐκ ἔδωκα αὐτοῖς ζωὴν αἰώνιον. (This is the order of the words in  $\alpha\beta\lambda$ .) This was the gift of Jesus to His sheep, i.e. to His faithful disciples, as promised 6th. Cf. 1 Jn. 2nd 21st.

For ζωὴν αἰώνιον, see on 3rd 14th above.

καὶ οὐ μὴ ἀπολλοῦνται εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. These sheep of His will not be lost finally. See on 3rd; and cf. 6th, 17th 18th. The words recall the Synoptic parable of the lost sheep rescued by the Shepherd.

καὶ οὐχ ἁρπάξαι (so  $\alpha\beta\omega\gamma\delta\theta$ , while MDL have ἁρπάξαι) τις αὐτὰ ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς μου. This had already been promised by Jesus (6th). For ἁρπάξαι in a similar sense, cf. v. 12; the verb has occurred before at 6th.

29. ὁ Πατήρ μου ἔδωκεν μοι πάντων μετῶν ἐστίν. The textual variants are puzzling. For  $\delta\epsilon$  ( $\alpha\beta\gamma\delta\theta$  syrr. sah.),  $\alpha\beta^* \lambda\omega$  latt. have  $\delta\epsilon$ ; and for μετῶν ( $\alpha\beta\lambda\gamma\delta\omega$  Syr. sin. sah.),  $\alpha\beta\theta$  latt. have μετῶν.

Thus the weight of MS. authority favours the reading  $\delta$  . . . μετῶν. The Vulgate, following the O.L., clearly supports this: "pater meus, quod dedit mihi maius omnibus est." But the meaning then must be: "As for my Father, that which He has given me (i.e. my flock of sheep) is greater than all." This is quite unsuited to the context, as not only here, but in vv. 1-18, the main thought is of the weakness of the μειζων ἐστίς, καὶ οὐδεὶς θύναται ἀρπάζειν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς τοῦ Πατρὸς.

1. ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν, ὃ μὴ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας εἰς sheep and their dependence on the Shepherd's strength. To introduce at this point the idea of the Church as a mighty organisation would be wholly irrelevant, and the reading δ . . . μείζων is to be rejected.

ὃ πατὴρ μου must be the subject of ἐστίν, and δε must be preferred to δ. The neuter singular is used several times in Jn. to denote the sum-total of those who have been given by the Father to the Son; and probably through reminiscence of such phrases as πᾶν ὃ δέδοται μοι (6th), and see note on 6th) and πᾶν ὃ δέδοκται αὐτῷ (17th), δ has got into the text at this point. μείζων has then been changed to μείζων, so as to agree with δ.

Burney<sup>1</sup> found in the aberrant δ . . . μείζων an illustration of his theory that in the Fourth Gospel we have to do with a translation from an Aramaic source, ܡܝܙܢ . . . ܗ being rendered δ . . . μείζων, instead of δε . . . μείζων. This ingenious argument is, however, not necessary, as the variants can be explained otherwise.

The rendering, then, of the text which we adopt is simple: "My Father, who gave (them) to me, is greater than all things," i.e. is all-powerful. For the "giving" by the Father to the Son, see on 3rd; and cf. 17th.

καὶ οὐδεὶς θύναται ἀρπάζειν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς τοῦ πατρὸς. Jesus has already given the assurance that "no one will snatch His sheep away from Him." They are the sheep which His all-powerful Father has given to Him, and He adds (as self-evident) that "no one can snatch them away from the Father." See Deut. 32nd οὐκ ἴσταν δε ἐξελείψαι ἐκ τῶν χειρῶν μου; and cf. Isa. 49th 51st. This is at the heart of the comfortable saying of Wisd. 3rd δικαίων δὲ ψυχὰι ἐν χειρὶ θεοῦ.

The allegory of the Sheep and the Shepherd follows at this point. No one can snatch the sheep of Jesus from His safe-keeping, and He proceeds to explain with emphasis that it is only with Him that safety is assured (see Introd., p. xxiv).

X. 1. ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν. For this solemn prelude to sayings or discourses of special significance, see on 1st. It is never used abruptly to introduce a fresh topic, out of connexion with what has gone before, nor does it begin a new discourse. It always has reference to something that has been said already, which is expanded or set in a new light (cf. 8th, 21, 28). Thus it introduces here the allegory of the sheep in the fold who recognise their shepherd, which arises out of the pronouncements

τὴν ἀλλὴν τῶν προβάτων ἀλλὰ ἀναβαίνειν ἀλλαχόθεν, ἐκεῖνος κλέπτει ἐστίν καὶ ληστής. 2. ὃ δὲ εἰσερχόμενος διὰ τῆς θύρας ποιμὴν ἐστί τῶν προβάτων. 3. τοῦτε δὲ θυρωροὶ ἀνοίγει, καὶ τὰ πρόβατα τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ ἀκούει, καὶ τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα φωνῶν κατ' ὄνομα καὶ in vv. 26-29. To begin this allegory by "Verily, verily," is exactly in the Johannine manner.

Verses 1-5 are a παραομιλία of general application, of which Jesus explains the reference to Himself and His flock in vv. 7-16.

The ἀλλὴν τῶν προβάτων is the open courtyard in front of the house, where the sheep were folded for the night. The word is used thus in Homer, where the Trojans are compared to ὄες κλυτὰμένης ἀπόδος ἐν ἀτλή (Iliad, iv. 433). So Josephus represents Abraham as sitting παρὰ τῆς θύρας τῆς αὐτοῦ ἀφῆς, where the LXX has σκηπῆς (Gen. 18th; cf. Ant. i. xi. 2). A shepherd, who had access to the courtyard, would naturally come in and go out by the θύρα. See on v. 16; and cf. 18th, 16 for these terms.

ἀλλὰ ἀναβαίνειν ἀλλαχόθεν, "but one climbing up another way," i.e. a man who gets over the wall into the courtyard. ἀλλαχόθεν (4 Macc. 1st) is a legitimate form for ἄλλοθεν, and is found in the papyri (see Moulton-Milligan, s.v.). It does not occur elsewhere in the N.T.

ἐκεῖνος, inserted for explicitness, as Jn. so frequently uses it (see on 1st).

ἐλέστης ἐστίν καὶ ληστής, "is a thief and a robber"; he has, presumably, come to steal the sheep and to carry them off with violence. See further on v. 8. ἐλέστης is used again of Judas (13th) and ληστής of Barabbas (18th). Cf. Obad.<sup>5</sup> for ἐλέστης and ληστὰς coming by night.

2. ὃ δὲ εἰσερχόμενος ἐστίν. On the other hand, a man coming into the court or fold by the door presumably is entitled to do so. He is a shepherd, whose business it is to look after the sheep. He is ποιμὴν προβάτων (Gen. 4th). The application of this to Jesus comes later. So far the picture is true of all sheepfolds and shepherds.

3. τοῦτε δὲ θυρωροὶ ἀνοίγει, "to him the doorkeeper opens" the door when he comes. This, again, is part of the general picture. It does not appear that in the allegory the θυρωροὶ is significant. In every parable there are details in which a spiritual meaning is not necessarily to be sought.

καὶ τὰ πρόβατα τῆς φωνῆς αὐτοῦ ἀκούει ἐστίν. The sheep hear his voice with obedient attention (see v. 27) and the note on ἀκούει with the gen. at 3rd). That is, they recognise his voice as that of a shepherd.

ἔξγει αὐτά. 4. ὅταν τὰ ἴδια πάντα ἐβδάλῃ, ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν πορεύεται, καὶ τὰ πρόβατα αὐτῶν ἀκολουθεῖ, ὅτι οἰσάν τῆν φωνὴν αὐτοῦ. 5. Ἄλλοτριῶν δὲ οὐ μὴ ἀκολουθήσουσι, ἀλλὰ φεύξονται ἐκ αὐτοῦ, ὅτι οὐκ οἰσάν τῶν ἄλλοτριῶν τῆν φωνήν. 6. Ταύτην τῆν τὰ ἴδια πρόβατα φωνεῖ κατ' ὄνομα. Several flocks under different shepherds might be brought into the same fold for a night. All the sheep might discern the note of authority in the voice of any lawful shepherd. But it is only the sheep of his own flock that a shepherd will call by name. This he does, as he leads them out to pasture; and it is only "his own sheep" that follow.

φωνεῖ. So MABDLW, as against the rec. καλεῖ (ΓΔΘ). Jn. prefers φωνεῖν to καλεῖν; but cf. Isa. 40<sup>26</sup> 43<sup>1</sup> 45<sup>2</sup> for the use of καλεῖν with ὄνομα. See on 1<sup>48</sup>.

It is still common for Eastern shepherds to give particular names to their sheep, "descriptive of some trait or characteristic of the animal, as Long-ears, White-nose, etc."<sup>1</sup>

4. ὅταν τὰ ἴδια πάντα ἐβδάλῃ. So κ<sup>α</sup>BDLΘ, but AΓΔ read πρόβατα for πάντα. The rec. has καὶ ὅταν (with ADΓΔ), but MBLWΘ omit καὶ. It probably came in from καὶ τὰ ἴδια in the preceding verse. "When he has put out (of the fold) all his own": he is careful to forget none, as he leads his flock to pasture. ἐβδάλειν suggests a certain measure of constraint, the shepherd thrusting out a sheep that delays unduly in coming forth at his call.

The shepherd, having collected his own flock from the fold, goes before them (ἔμπροσθεν αὐτῶν). At 3<sup>28</sup> ἔμπροσθεν is used of priority in time; here it refers to space, as at 12<sup>32</sup>. His own sheep follow him (cf. v. 27), because they know his voice (cf. vv. 25, 3).

5. They will not follow an ἄλλότριος, that is, any one who is not their own shepherd, whether he be the legitimate shepherd of another flock, or an impostor and a thief (v. 1). Rather will they run away from him, for they do not know or recognise his voice. This, as we shall see (v. 8), is a specially significant feature of the allegory. Cf. v. 26 above and v. 8 below.

ἀκολουθήσουσι. So ABDΔ, but κLWΘ have ἀκολουθήσουσιν. 6. ταύτην τῆν παροιμίαν εἶπ. κL. παροιμία occurs again in N.T. only in Jn. 16<sup>25</sup>,<sup>26</sup> (as well as in 2 Pet. 2<sup>18</sup>, where it introduces a quotation from Prov. 26<sup>11</sup>). On the other hand, παραβολή does not occur outside the Synoptists, except at Heb. 9<sup>9</sup> 11<sup>29</sup>. In the LXX both words are used to translate παροιμίαν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς; ἱκανοὶ δὲ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τίνα ἦν ἡ ἀλλάξις αὐτοῦ.

7. Ἐπειὸν οὖν πάλιν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι ἴψῃ: in Ezek. 12<sup>23</sup> 18<sup>2</sup>, the LXX having παραβολή and Symmachus παροιμία. In Eccus. 47<sup>27</sup> we find Solomon's ἠδαι and παροιμίαι and παραβολαὶ all mentioned together.

Etymologically παραβολή suggests the placing of one thing beside another (παραβάλλειν) or a comparison, while παροιμία is derived from παρ' ὄρου, something said "by the way." But the distinction sometimes put forward, that παραβολή always stands for a fictitious narrative, intended to instruct the hearer, as in the "parables" of Christ, while παροιμία is a "proverb," a terse saying of wisdom, cannot be sustained. Thus in the passage now under consideration, παροιμία is the description of the allegory of the Shepherd and the Sheep, while at Lk. 4<sup>23</sup> the proverbial taunt, "Physician, heal thyself," is called a παραβολή (cf. Lk. 5<sup>26</sup>). And in Ezekiel παραβολή is sometimes descriptive of an allegory (17<sup>22</sup>), and sometimes signifies a "proverb" (16<sup>24</sup> 18<sup>9</sup>). Cf. Eccus. 8<sup>8</sup>, 39<sup>9</sup>, for the παροιμίαι of the wise and their hidden meaning.

All that can be said about these two Greek words here is that Jn. uses παροιμία, while the Synoptists prefer παραβολή, both doubtless going back to the Hebrew שֵׁנָה, a saying or discourse which, either from its terseness or its veiled significance, may need explanation before it can be fully understood.

This παροιμία of the Shepherd and the Sheep was addressed to the Jews (see v. 25): εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς. They, however (ἱκανοὶ, for clearness as to the persons indicated; see on 1<sup>9</sup>), did not understand its application; and accordingly Jesus proceeds to explain how it bears on what he had told them (v. 26). The idea of a shepherd as a spiritual leader was, of course, quite familiar to them (see on v. 26), as were also the ordinary habits of shepherds and sheep. But what they did not realise was the appositeness of the allegory in vv. 1-5, in relation to their question, "Art thou the Messiah?" (v. 24). In particular, what was the Door through which Jesus said the true shepherd must come?

Jesus is not only the Shepherd, He is the Door (vv. 7-10).

7. εἶπεν οὖν πάλιν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. οὖν is here more than a mere conjunction; it was because they did not understand that the explanation which follows was given. "Accordingly, Jesus said to them again"; πάλιν also being emphatic (cf. 8<sup>12</sup>, 21).

ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων. 8. πάντες ὄνοι ἤλθον πρὸ ἐμοῦ κλέπτει εἰσὶν καὶ λησταιῶν ἅλλ' οὐκ ἔγνωσαν αὐτῶν τὰ πρόβατα.

The rec. adds αὐτοῖς after πᾶσι, but om. κ* B.

ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῖν. Cf. v. 1; and see on 1st.

ὄνι (resistantis) is omitted by BL, but is found in MADWΘ.

ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων. For the use in Jn. of the dignified prelude ἐγὼ εἰμι, which marks the style of deity, see Introd., p. xviii.

ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων must mean primarily the gate by which the sheep enter and leave the οἶκός, and this would also be the gate used by the shepherd. The phrase cannot be translated, however, "the gate to the sheep," although that is involved. Cf. ἡ πύλη τῶν ἵππων, "the horse gate" (2 Chron. 23<sup>10</sup>), meaning the gate by which the horses enter. "The sheep gate" (cf. 5th) in Neh. 3<sup>1</sup> is ἡ πύλη ἡ παραβατικῆ. Jn. never uses πύλη, while θύρα occurs again 18<sup>10</sup> 20<sup>10</sup>.

When Jesus announces here that He is ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων, the primary meaning is that He is the legitimate door of access to the spiritual οἶκος, the Fold of the House of Israel, the door by which a true shepherd must enter. In v. 9 the thought is rather that He is the door which must be used by the sheep.

For ἡ θύρα, the Sahidic supports ἡ ποικῆν, which is adopted by Moffatt as the true reading here. But, apart from the fact that ἡ θύρα τῶν προβάτων has the weight of MS. authority overwhelmingly in its favour, ἡ ποικῆν would not fit the argument at this point. The Jewish inquirers could not have failed to understand that Jesus claimed to be the Shepherd (see v. 26); their difficulty was as to the interpretation of the Door which was so important in the allegory of vv. 1-5. Verses 7-10 are taken up with the explanation of this: "I am the Door," a figure verbally inconsistent indeed with the image of the Shepherd entering by the door, but being quite intelligible when taken by itself. See further on v. 9.

8. πάντες ὄνοι ἤλθον πρὸ ἐμοῦ κλέπτει εἰσὶν καὶ λησταιῶν. So κ* ABDLW; but κ* om. πρὸ ἐμοῦ, with most vss., including the Latin, Sahidic, and Syriac; and Westcott-Hort treat the words as a "Western and perhaps Syrian" gloss. On the other hand, they may have been omitted by scribes to lessen the risk of the passage being interpreted as if it applied to the O.T. prophets.<sup>2</sup> πρὸ ἐμοῦ must relate to priority in time

(cf., e.g., Neh. 5<sup>10</sup>). But even if the words be omitted, ἤλθον involves a "coming" in the past; and we must translate "all that came before me are thieves and robbers."

The reference is, undoubtedly, to v. 1. He who enters the fold by any other way than the "door" is "a thief and a robber." Now Jesus claims to be the Door of the Fold of the Flock of Israel, and hence it follows that all who sought a way of access to the sheep before He was manifested as the "Door" may be described as "thieves and robbers." This, nakedly stated, is a harsh saying. But, if the sequence of the argument be followed from v. 23 onward (see on v. 26), it is not so intolerant as it sounds (see also on 14<sup>9</sup>). The distinction that is being drawn out is not that between the ministrations of older prophets and teachers, and the perfect ministration of Jesus, but rather (as Chrysostom points out) between those who falsely claimed to be heaven-sent deliverers and the true Messiah Himself.

The methods, e.g., of Judas of Galilee, who instigated the people to revolt against Roman taxation about the year A.D. 6, were violent, and led to murder and robbery (so Josephus, Antt. xviii. 1. 6; cf. B. J. ii. viii. 1 and Acts 5<sup>20</sup>). According to Acts 5<sup>20</sup>, Theudas was an earlier impostor of the same type, although Josephus (Antt. xx. v. 1) seems to put him later, if indeed he is describing the same person. And, apart from Judas and Theudas, we have the testimony of Josephus (Antt. xvii. x. 4, 18) that at the beginning of the first century Judaea was the scene of innumerable risings and disorders, which were caused, in part at any rate, by current misinterpretations of the Messianic idea, associated by the Zealots with militant activities. It is true that we have no knowledge of any Jew before Barcochba (A.D. 135) who claimed explicitly to be the Messiah. But there were many pretenders to the office of leadership of the nation, and to such the words of Jesus, "thieves and robbers," were fittingly applied. And the present tense εἰσὶν confirms the view that His allusion was to leaders of revolt who belonged to the first century, some of whom were probably living at the time.

The convincing proof that none of these was the divinely appointed Shepherd of Israel was: οὐκ ἔγνωσαν αὐτῶν τὰ πρόβατα, "the sheep," sc. the true sheep of Israel, who are alone in view throughout this chapter, "did not listen to them" (cf. vv. 4, 5, where it was pointed out that sheep recognise their true shepherd's voice, while they will not listen to one who is only an impostor). It was just because the Jews who were arguing were not the true sheep of Israel that they did not accept Jesus as their Shepherd (v. 26).

9. ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ θύρα· δι' ἐμοῦ ἔάν τις εἰσέλθῃ, σωθήσεται, καὶ

9. ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ θύρα. This is repeated from v. 7, a repetition in the Johannine manner (see on 3<sup>10</sup>), a slight change being made in the form of the saying. In v. 7 the stress is laid on Jesus being the Door through which a lawful shepherd would enter. But here the thought is simpler. He is the Door through which the sheep must enter the fold, a saying which is not relevant to the allegory of this chapter, but is consonant with the teaching of Jesus as presented by Jn. elsewhere. He is the Door into the spiritual fold, as He is the Way (and the only Way) of access to the Father (14<sup>6</sup>; cf. Eph. 2<sup>18</sup>, Heb. 10<sup>20</sup>). The αὐλή (see v. 1) to which He is the Door is the fold of the house of Israel, the Jewish fold; nor has anything been said up to this point which suggests any wider fold (cf. v. 16, where the Gentile fold is indicated for the first time). But the saying I am the Door has always been quoted, from the first century onward, as having as wide an application as the parallel saying I am the Way.

Clement of Rome, commenting on Ps. 118<sup>19, 20</sup>, speaks of "that gate (πύλη) which is in righteousness, even in Christ" (§ 48). Ignatius (Philad.) speaks of Christ as being θύρα τοῦ πατρὸς, "through whom Abraham and Isaac and Jacob enter in, and the prophets and the apostles, and the Church." Both these passages seem to carry an allusion to ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ θύρα. So also Hermas (Sim. ix. 12) has: ἡ πύρα αὐτῆ καὶ ἡ πύλη ὁ οὐδὲ τοῦ θεοῦ, the explanation being added that the Rock is ancient, but the Gate recent (καινὴ), because "He was made manifest in the last days of the consummation," . . . ἵνα οἱ μέλλοντες οὐκ ἐσθῆναι διὰ τῆν βασιλείαν εἰσελθεῖν τοῦ θεοῦ, words which recall the teaching of v. 9. According to Hegesippus (Eus. H.E. II. xliii. 8), James, the Lord's brother, was asked by inquirers τίς ἡ θύρα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ; which carries an allusion either to this passage or to a Synoptic precept such as Lk. 13<sup>24</sup> ἐγινώκετε εἰσελθεῖν διὰ τῆς στενῆς θύρας (Mt. 7<sup>13</sup> has πύλην).

Two reminiscences of the Johannine "I am the Door" may be quoted from Gnostic sources. In the hymn in the second-century Acts of John (§ 95), we find the phrase θύρα εἰμι σοι [τῷ] κροισσῷ με, ὁδὸς εἰμι σοι παραδείτῳ. The image of one knocking at a door is not identical with that of one entering by it; but it probably goes back to Jn. 10<sup>9</sup>. Again, Hippolytus cites Jn. 10<sup>9</sup> from a Naassene writer in the form ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ πύλη ἡ ἀληθινή, and he represents the Naassene as adding ὁ δῶναται σωθῆναι ὁ πύλαις ἐσθῆτος, ἔάν μὴ ἀναγνωσθῆ διὰ ταύτης εἰσελθεῖν εἰσελεύσεται καὶ ἔξελεύσεται καὶ νομῆν εἰρήσει. 10. ὁ κλέπτης οὐκ ἔρχεται εἰ μὴ ἵνα κλέψῃ καὶ θῶσῃ καὶ ἀπολέσῃ; ἐγὼ ἦλθον ἵνα ζωὴν ἔχωμαι καὶ περισσοὺν ἔχωμαι.

τῆς πύλης (Ref. v. viii. 21), a passage which recalls Jn. 3<sup>8</sup> as well as 10<sup>9</sup>.<sup>1</sup>

Probably the proclamation "I am the Door" should be taken in connexion with the Synoptic saying about the Narrow Door (Mt. 7<sup>13</sup>, Lk. 13<sup>24</sup>). Jn., however, is careful not to suggest that the Door is narrow, while he implies that there is only one Door. The comparison with the Synoptists suggests that the αὐλή or fold of the spiritual Israel represents the kingdom of God.

δι' ἐμοῦ ἔάν τις εἰσέλθῃ, σωθήσεται κτλ. δι' ἐμοῦ comes first for emphasis. The form ἔάν τις expresses the catholicity of the implied appeal (cf. 7<sup>17</sup>); any one may enter by this Door. And the sheep which enters the fold thus shall, first of all, be safe (σωθήσεται; see on 3<sup>17</sup>). As Jesus had said already, none can snatch His sheep from the Shepherd's hand (v. 28).

καὶ εἰσελεύσεται καὶ ἔξελεύσεται. The "going out and coming in" suggests being at home (Deut. 28<sup>6</sup>, Ps. 121<sup>9</sup>), the daily routine of the sheltered fold (cf. Acts 1<sup>12</sup>). Num. 27<sup>17</sup>, which speaks of the shepherd leading the sheep out and bringing them in again, is hardly apposite, for at this point the thought is of the sheep rather than of the shepherd. We must take the words in connexion with καὶ νομῆν εἰρήσει. The sheep which has entered the fold by the door is then safe, and he shall find pasture for his needs. Cf. 1 Chron. 4<sup>10</sup> where the same phrase εἰρήσειν νομῆν is found. The shepherd leads the sheep to pasture (v. 3 above; and cf. Ps. 23<sup>1</sup> 74<sup>1</sup> 95<sup>1</sup> 100<sup>2</sup>, Ezek. 34<sup>14</sup>); but here the thought is of the happiness of the sheep rather than of the duty of the shepherd.

ἐγὼ ἦλθον κτλ., "I have come (on the contrary) that they may have life." Cf. v. 28 and 14<sup>6</sup>. The Fourth Gospel was written that believers might thus "have life" in the Name of Jesus (20<sup>31</sup>).

καὶ περισσοὺν ἔχωμαι, "and may have it to the full." This is the perissoteia of Christ's grace (Rom. 5<sup>20</sup>). So Xenophon (Anab. VII. vi. 31), περισσοὺν ἔχωμαι, "to have a surplus."

11. Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός. ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς τὴν ψυχὴν

Jesus the Good Shepherd (vv. 11-30)

11. We have had the allegory of the Shepherd and the Sheep (vv. 1-5); then the explanation of what is meant by the Door (vv. 7-10); now we come to the great proclamation of Jesus as the Good Shepherd, as contrasted with the hireling.

Philo (de Agric. §§ 6, 9, 10) draws out a similar contrast between the ἀγαθὸς ποιμὴν, who does not allow his sheep to scatter, and the mere herd (καταγοργήφω), who permits the flock to do as it likes. But the similarity does not go beyond what may naturally be observed between the words of two writers who are expounding the same image; there is no literary connexion to be traced between Jn. 10 and Philo.

On ἔγω εἰμι, and the special appropriateness of this phraseology in passages such as this, something has already been said in the Introduction (p. cxviii). Dods quotes, however, a striking parallel from Xenophon (Mém. ii. vii. 14), where ἔγω εἰμι is used only to mark a contrast, the sheep-dog being represented as saying to the sheep, ἔγω γὰρ εἰμι ὁ καὶ ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ σκύλου, ὥστε μήτις ὑπ' ἀνθρώπων ἐλάττωσθαι, μήτις ὑπὸ λύκου ἀρπάξασθαι. If this had been found in Philo, it would probably have been claimed by somebody as the source from which Jn. derived the language of these verses. But literary parallels do not always imply literary obligation.

ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός, "the Good Shepherd," Pastor bonus. We have already noticed that Philo calls his good shepherd ἀγαθός; and it is not possible to draw any clear distinction in such passages as the present between the two adjectives. No doubt, goodness and beauty were closely associated in Greek minds; and, if we please, we can find the thought of the beauty of holiness suggested by the application of καλός to the Good Shepherd (cf. καλὰ ἔργα in v. 32). But ὁ καλὸς οὖτος in 2<sup>18</sup> is simply good wine, the adjective carrying no allusion either to moral or æsthetic beauty. In Tob. 7<sup>7</sup> and 2 Macc. 15<sup>18</sup> an "honest and good man" is καλὸς καὶ ἀγαθός, a frequent Greek combination. And when καλός is combined, as here, with the description of a man pursuing a particular business, it simply conveys the idea that he discharges his office or fulfils his calling well, just as we would speak of "a good doctor." Thus we have καλοὶ οἰκονόμοι, "good stewards" (1 Pet. 4<sup>10</sup>); ὁ τοῦ μισθοῦ καλὸς ἀνταποδοστὴς, "the good paymaster of the reward," i.e. he who will make no default (Barnabas, xix. 11); and "good priests," καλοὶ καὶ οἱ ἱερεῖς (Ignatius, Philad. 9), αὐτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων 12. ὁ μισθωτὸς καὶ οὐκ ἔν

in comparison with the High Priest, who is κρείσσων. Barnabas in another place (vii. 1) speaks of "the good Lord," ὁ καλὸς κύριος. Here, then, ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλός is simply the Good Shepherd, One who tends His flock perfectly, without any failure of foresight or tenderness, of courage or unselfishness.<sup>1</sup> τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν κτλ. He lays down His life for the sheep. All good shepherds are ready to risk their lives in defence of their flock (1 Sam. 17<sup>35</sup>, Isa. 51<sup>1</sup>); He who is uniquely the Good Shepherd lays down His life.

For τίθησιν, κ<sup>2</sup>D substitute the more usual δίδωσιν, but τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν is a characteristic Johannine expression for the "laying down" of His life by Jesus, occurring again vv. 15, 17, 13<sup>37, 38</sup>, 1 Jn. 3<sup>16</sup>, and (of a disciple acting as Jesus did) 15<sup>13</sup>. It stands in contrast with the Synoptic δίδωσι τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ (Mk. 10<sup>45</sup>, Mt. 20<sup>28</sup>).

The expression τὴν ψυχὴν τίθησιν, "to lay down one's life," ponere animam, is not found in the Greek Bible outside Jn. (cf. 15<sup>13</sup>, 1 Jn. 3<sup>16</sup>). Nor is it a classical phrase, but from Hippocrates, ψυχὴν κατέθετο, "he died," is quoted by Dods, following Kypke. We have, indeed, in Judg. 12<sup>3</sup> (cf. 1 Sam. 19<sup>3</sup> 28<sup>1</sup>), ἵθνη τὴν ψυχὴν μου ἐν χειρὶ μου, "I took my life in my hand," i.e. I risked my life; but in Jn. τὴν ψυχὴν τίθησιν means rather "to divest oneself of life," as at Jn. 13<sup>3</sup> τίθησι τὰ ἱμάτια means "He divests Himself of His garments."

ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων, "on behalf of the sheep." The Synoptists in similar contexts have ἀντὶ (Mt. 20<sup>28</sup>, Mk. 10<sup>45</sup>), but ἀντὶ occurs only once in Jn. (1<sup>19</sup>), and there it does not mean "instead of." In this passage the Death of Jesus is said to be "on behalf of the sheep"; it is not explicitly declared that it was on behalf of all men, "to take away the sin of the world," as at 1<sup>29</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>2</sup>. But there is no inconsistency with the catholicity of these great pronouncements; and, lest the allegory might be too narrowly interpreted, mention is made in v. 16 of "other sheep" who must learn to follow the Shepherd.

12. ὁ μισθωτὸς καὶ οὐκ ἔν ποιμὴν. The rec. with A1 has δέ after, ἠΔΔΘ has it before, μισθωτός: om. BLW. Syr. cur. has "the hireling, the false one," but this explanatory gloss is not in Syr. sin.

Blass (Gram. 255) suggests that οὐκ is a Hebraism, "since in the case of a participle with the article, the LXX render ἕβ by οὐ" (cf. στήνη ἢ οὐ τίς σίνουσα, Isa. 54<sup>7</sup>). But although in ποιμήν, οὐδὲ οὐκ ἔστιν τὰ πρόβατα ἴδια, θεωρεῖ τὸν λύκον ἀρχόμενον

v. 1 we have δ μὴ εἰσερχόμενος, "any one not coming through the door," at v. 12 οὐκ is preferable to μὴ before ὄν, because the hiring is certainly not the shepherd.

δ μισθωτός. The term occurs again in the N.T. only at Mk. 1<sup>26</sup>, where it is used of the "hired servants" in Zebedee's boat. It occurs often in the LXX, and is not necessarily a term of reproach. In Job 7<sup>7</sup> it is used, as here, of a servant who thinks primarily of his wages. The μισθωτός may be an honest man; but the care of a herdsman who comes for wages to look after a flock of sheep can never be equal to that of their own shepherd, who knows each one and is ready to give his life for theirs. In vv. 1-5 the shepherd was contrasted with the thief, nothing being said about the excellence of the shepherd's service, the thought being only of his right to enter the fold. Here, in vv. 11-15, we have the contrast exhibited between a good shepherd and a hired man whose only interest in his flock comes from his wages. In vv. 12, 13, the conduct which may be expected from the μισθωτός in the hour of danger is described in terms contrasting strongly with the conduct of the really good shepherd. We must not confuse the "hiring" with the "thief" of v. 1, any more than with the "wolf" of v. 12. He is only blameworthy because his service is functory, as compared with ὁ ποιμήν ὁ καλός, who is the perfect shepherd.

The centre of the picture is the figure of "the Good Shepherd," that is, of Jesus Himself. His example of self-sacrifice and watchfulness has always been held up to the "pastors" of His Church (vv. 1-16 form the Gospel for the Ordering of Priests); but to these lesser pastors there is no direct reference in this passage, while the figure of the "hired man" supplies a warning to them all. Cf. 1 Pet. 5<sup>4</sup>, where those who tend the flock of God are warned that they must not do their work "for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind."

οὐδὲ οὐκ ἔστιν τὰ πρόβατα ἴδια, "whose own the sheep are not." There is no thought here of the owner of the sheep; that does not come into the allegory. But every true shepherd counts the sheep entrusted to his care as his own in a peculiar sense; this the μισθωτός does not feel.

θεωρεῖ τὸν λύκον ἀρχόμενον, "notices the wolf coming." For θεωρεῖν as signifying intelligent perception, see on 2<sup>20</sup>, and cf. 9<sup>7</sup>.

The wolf is the great danger to sheep in a country like Palestine (cf. Mt. 10<sup>29</sup>); and that "grievous wolves would enter in, not sparing the flock" (Acts 20<sup>29</sup>), was a warning to καὶ ἀφῆρτον τὰ πρόβατα καὶ φεύγει, —καὶ ὁ λύκος ἀρνάζει αὐτὰ καὶ σκορπίζει.—13. ὅτι μισθωτός ἐστιν καὶ οὐ μέλει αὐτῷ περὶ τῶν προβάτων. 14. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμήν ὁ καλός, καὶ γινώσκω τὰ ἐμά καὶ γινώσκουσι με τὰ ἐμά, 15. καθὼς γινώσκαι με ὁ Πατὴρ ἀγάθῳ the Church at Ephesus of which its leaders could not mistake the meaning. The μισθωτός is likely to leave the sheep and run away when the wolf appears. Cf. "ut non derelinquas nos, sicut pastor gregem suum in manibus luporum malignorum" (2 Esd. 5<sup>18</sup>). See Zech. 12<sup>7</sup>.

ὁ λύκος ἀρνάζει αὐτὰ, "the wolf snatches them," as no enemy could snatch His sheep from the care of Jesus (v. 29). That is because He is "the Good Shepherd."

καὶ σκορπίζει. The rec. adds τὰ πρόβατα, but this explanatory addition is not necessary, and is not found in  $\alpha$ BDW. A consequence of the carelessness of the man in charge of the sheep is described similarly in Jer. 10<sup>21</sup> καὶ ἀσκορπισθήσονται (cf. Jer. 23<sup>1</sup>). And in the vision of Ezek. 34<sup>5</sup>, when the shepherds neglected their duty "the sheep became meat to all the beasts of the field, and were scattered."

For σκορπισθῆναι, ἀσκορπισθῆναι, as applied to the "scattering" of the spiritual flock, cf. 11<sup>26</sup> 16<sup>28</sup>. One of the marks of the unworthy shepherd of Zech. 12<sup>7</sup> is τὸ ἀσκορπισμῶν οὐ μὴ ἔγρησθ. Cf. also Zech. 13<sup>7</sup>, "smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered."

The rec. repeats after σκορπίζει, ὁ δὲ μισθωτός φεύγει, but this unnecessary gloss is omitted by  $\alpha$ BDL $\delta$ . W om. this, and also the following ὅτι μισθωτός ἐστιν.

13. οὐ μέλει αὐτῷ περὶ τ. π. We have the same construction, descriptive of God's providence, at 1 Pet. 5<sup>7</sup> αὐτῷ μέλει περὶ ἡμῶν. Cf. Tob. 10<sup>8</sup>, οὐ μέλει μοι.

14. ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ποιμήν ὁ καλός, repeated after the Johannine manner. Cf. v. 9 for the repetition of "I am the Door"; and see on 3<sup>14</sup>.

καὶ γινώσκω τὰ ἐμά. This has been said already, v. 27, ἀγάθῳ γινώσκω αὐτὰ. It is one of the marks of a good shepherd; cf. v. 3, where it is noted as a habit of the shepherd to have individual names for his sheep. "The Lord knoweth them who are His" is a sentence of judgment (Num. 16<sup>2</sup>); but it may also be taken as a benediction (2 Tim. 2<sup>19</sup>). Cf. Nah. 1<sup>7</sup>.

The rec. proceeds καὶ γινώσκουσι ὑπὸ τῶν ἐμῶν (see on 14<sup>21</sup>), following  $\alpha$ FA $\theta$ , but  $\alpha$ BDLW read καὶ γινώσκουσι με τὰ ἐμά. This, too, has been said or implied before; cf. vv. 27, 3, 4. The sheep know their shepherd's voice.

15. καθὼς γιν. . . ἀγάθῳ γινώσκω . . . We have seen on 6th that the constr. καθὼς . . . ἐγὼ may be taken in two different ways. In the present passage we may either (1) place a full stop after ἐγὼ, and then we have a new sentence, sc. "As the Father knoweth me, so I know the Father," the constr. being the same as that at 15th 20th; or (2) we may treat καθὼς γινώσκεις . . . τὸν πατέρα as explanatory of the preceding words, sc. "I know mine, and mine know me, even as the Father knoweth me, and I know the Father," the constr. then being similar to that at 6th 17th. The A.V. follows (1), the R.V. adopts (2); and both are legitimate renderings of the Greek, and consistent with Johannine usage. The difficulty of (1) is that the words "As the Father knoweth me, so I know the Father," would seem to be irrelevant to the context, unless we are to connect them with what is said in v. 17, and understand by v. 15, "As the Father knoweth me, so I know the Father, and, because I know Him and His will, I lay down my life for the sheep."<sup>1</sup> But this is to interpolate a thought which is not expressly stated. On the other hand, it may be objected to the rendering (2), that it suggests that the knowledge of Christ by His true disciples is comparable in degree and in kind to the knowledge that He has of the Father. No other statement in the Fourth Gospel or elsewhere claims for His disciples so intimate a knowledge of Christ as this would seem to do (the promise of 14th 20th is for the future, not the present). But we have seen (on 6th) that καθὼς . . . καὶ does not, in fact, imply a perfect or complete parallelism with what has gone before. All that is said here, if rendering (2) be adopted, as we believe it must be, is that the mutual knowledge by Christ's sheep of their Good Shepherd, and His knowledge of them, may be compared with the mutual knowledge of the Son and the Father; it is not the perfection or intimacy of the knowledge that is in view, it is its reciprocal character. Cf. 1 Cor. 11th; and see further on 17th.

Adopting rendering (2), the sequence of thought in vv. 14, 15, is plain: "I am the Good Shepherd, as is shown first by my knowledge of my sheep and theirs of me, and secondly by my readiness to lay down my life on their behalf." These are the two principal marks of the Good Shepherd which have been noted in the preceding verses.

The mutual knowledge of the Father and the Son which is brought in here parenthetically is explicitly stated in the great declaration Mt. 11th, Lk. 10th, and is implied at 17th and at many other points in the Gospel. That Jesus knew God in a unique manner and in pre-eminent degree was His constant claim (see on 7th; and cf. also 8th 17th).

καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν μου τίθημι κτλ. This is repeated, like a refrain, from v. 11, in the Johannine manner. See note on 3rd for such repetitions.

For τίθημι, NthDW have δίδωμι. See the similar variant in v. 11, and the note there.

16. ἄλλα πρόβατα ἔχω κτλ. These "other sheep" were the Gentiles, who "were not of this fold," i.e. not of the Jewish Church.<sup>1</sup> They were not, indeed, in any fold as yet, being "scattered abroad" (11th 46th). Jesus claims them as already His: "Other sheep I have," for such is the Divine purpose, which, being certain of fulfilment, may be spoken of as already fulfilled. κείνη δὲ μὲ ἀγαγεῖν, "them also I must lead," δὲ expressing that inevitableness which belongs to what is fore-ordained by God (see on 3rd). Not only had it been promised of Messiah that He was to be a "Light to the Gentiles" (Isa. 42nd 49th), but there was the explicit promise, "The Lord God which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, Yet will I gather others to Him, beside His own that are gathered" (Isa. 56th).

All this is intelligible from the standpoint of a Christian living at the end of the first century, when it had long been conceded that the gospel was for the Gentile as well as for the Jew. But it is not so easy to be sure how far Jesus taught this explicitly. Had His teaching been clear on so important a point, it is difficult to believe that the apostles could have misunderstood it. Yet Acts and the Pauline Epistles show that acute controversy arose in the apostolic circle about the position of the Gentiles. All were ready to admit that, as Jewish proselytes, they might pass into the Christian Church; but could they be admitted to Christian baptism without passing through the portal of Judaism? For this Paul contended successfully, but his struggle was severe. Had he been able to quote specific words of Christ determining the matter, his task would have been easier; but this, seemingly, he was unable to do. Did Jesus, then, teach plainly that Gentile and Jew were equally heirs of the Gospel promises?

In Mk. (excluding the Appendix), the mission of Jesus to those who professed the Jewish religion is the exclusive topic of the narrative, and there is no saying of Jesus recorded which would suggest that He had a mission also to the Gentiles. Indeed, when He crossed the border into the country "of Tyre and Sidon," He did not wish His presence to be known (Mk. 7<sup>46</sup>); and when the Syrophenician woman asked Him to cure her daughter He is reported to have said to her, "Let the children first be filled," adding that children's bread should not be given to "dogs." This may have been a proverbial saying (which would mitigate its seeming harshness); but at any rate Mk. gives no hint that Jesus regarded non-Jews as having any claim on His ministry. In Mt. (15<sup>24</sup>) Jesus actually says to the woman, "I was not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel"; as He had said to the apostles in an earlier passage (10<sup>6-8</sup>), "Go not into any way of the Gentiles, and enter not into any city of the Samaritans; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

But these are only seemingly instances of Jewish particularism. They do not explicitly convey more than that Jesus regarded His mission as directed in the first instance to the Jews; and, in fact, there are many indications that both Mt. and Lk. believed the Gentiles to be included within the redeeming purpose of Christ. The prophecies about Messiah being a light to the Gentiles are quoted (Mt. 4<sup>16</sup> 13<sup>31</sup>; cf. Lk. 2<sup>32</sup>). The Roman centurion was commended for his faith (Mt. 8<sup>10</sup>); so was the Samaritan leper (Lk. 17<sup>18</sup>); and the example of the Good Samaritan is held up for imitation (Lk. 10<sup>37</sup>). The saying, "Many shall come from the east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob," is in Mt. (8<sup>11</sup>), and, in a different context, also in Lk. (13<sup>29</sup>). The command to preach to all nations is in the Marcan Appendix (Mk. 16<sup>15</sup>) as well as in Mt. 28<sup>19</sup>; and, even if it be supposed that we have not in the latter passage the ipsisima verba of Christ, there can be no doubt that it represents one aspect of His teaching (cf. Mt. 24<sup>14</sup>, Lk. 24<sup>47</sup>).

In Jn.'s narrative the Gentiles come without argument or apology within the scope of the Gospel. Jesus stays two days with the Samaritan villagers, to teach them (4<sup>40</sup>); He does not admit that descent from Abraham is a sufficient ground for spiritual self-satisfaction (8<sup>39</sup>); He is approached by a party of Greeks (12<sup>20</sup>); He declares that He is the Light of the world (8<sup>12</sup>), which implies that the Gentiles as well as the Jews are the objects of His enlightening grace. And in the present passage (10<sup>16</sup>) Jesus, in like manner, declares that He has "other sheep" besides the Jews, while it is not to be overlooked that He puts them in the second place: "Them also I must lead." They are not His first charge: that was to shepherd "the lost sheep of the house of Israel." He "came to His own" (1<sup>11</sup>) in the first instance.

Jn., then, is in agreement with Mt. and Lk. in his representation of the teaching of Jesus about the Gentiles; and this teaching is accurately represented in the saying of Paul that the gospel was "to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Rom. 1<sup>9</sup>). Mk. is the only evangelist who says nothing about the inclusion of the Gentiles. The significance of what Jesus had said about this was perhaps not appreciated by Mk., any more than it was by those with whom Paul had his great controversy. See further on 11<sup>24</sup> 12<sup>21</sup>.

καὶ τῆς φωτὸς μου ἀκούσωσιν. So He says again, v. 27 (cf. 18<sup>27</sup>). So Paul said of the Gentiles, when the Jews at Rome had declined to accept his message: τοῖς ἔθνεσιν ἀνεπέταλὸν τοῦτο τὸ σωτήριον τοῦ θεοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ καὶ ἀκούοντα, "they will hear it" (Acts 28<sup>28</sup>). Note that ἀκούειν here takes the gen., as it does when it connotes hearing with understanding and obedience. See on 3<sup>7</sup>.

μία ποίμνη, εἰς ποιμήν, "one flock, one shepherd": the alliteration cannot be reproduced in another language.

A rendering of the Latin Vulgate in this verse has led to so much controversy, that the textual facts must be briefly stated. All Greek MSS. have ἐκ τῆς ἀλλῆς ταύτης . . . μία ποίμνη, εἰς ποιμήν. The O.L. vss.<sup>1</sup> correctly preserve the distinction between ἀλλῆ and ποίμνη, by rendering them respectively ovile (fold) and grex (flock). But Jerome's Vulgate has ovile in both places. This might be taken for a mere slip, were it not that in his Comm. on Ezekiel (46) he distinctly implies that the Greek word ἀλλῆ is repeated, saying that he is dissatisfied with the old rendering ovile for ἀλλῆ and suggesting atrium. Wordsworth and White (in loc.) regard this as establishing Jerome's reliance here on some Greek authority which had ἀλλῆ in the last clause instead of ποίμνη. Into this question we need not enter, further than to note that no such Greek authority is now extant. However Jerome's eccentric rendering unam ovile et unus pastor arose, the weight of authority is overwhelmingly against it, although it has caused misunderstanding and perplexity for many centuries.

Jesus did not say there would be one fold (ἀλλῆ): He said one flock, which is different. In one flock there may be many folds, all useful and each with advantages of its own, but the Flock is One, for there is only One Shepherd. The unity of the Hebrew people is indicated similarly in Ezekiel by the assurance that one shepherd will be set over them, as ruling over an undivided kingdom, Judah and Israel having come together again: "I will set up one shepherd over them, even my servant David: he shall feed them" (Ezek. 34<sup>23</sup>; cf. 37<sup>35</sup>). The phrase "one shepherd" is also found in Eccles. 12<sup>11</sup>, where it refers to God as the one source of wisdom.

ποιῶν, εἰς ποιμήν. 17. διὰ τούτου με ὁ Πατήρ ἀγαπᾷ ὅτι ἐγὼ τίθημι τὴν ψυχὴν μου, ἵνα πάλιν λάβω αὐτήν. 18. οὐδεὶς ἤρην αὐτὴν ἀπ'

Jn., in the next chapter, expresses the thought that the Death of Jesus had for its purpose the gathering into one of the scattered children of God: ἵνα τὰ τέκνα τοῦ θεοῦ τὰ ἀσκορπημένα συναγαγῶ εἰς ἐν (12<sup>20</sup>). In 10<sup>16</sup> Jesus is to "lead" (ἀγαγῶ) the Gentile members of His flock: in 11<sup>24</sup> He is to bring them together (συναγαγῶ).

17. διὰ τούτου . . . ἔτι. See on 5<sup>18</sup> for this favourite Johannine construction, διὰ τούτου referring to what follows. The meaning here is that God's love for Jesus is drawn out by His voluntary sacrifice of His life in order that He may resume it after the Passion for the benefit of man. The same idea is found in Paul: "Wherefore God also highly exalted Him" (Phil. 2<sup>9</sup>). See also Heb. 2<sup>9</sup>; and cf. Isa. 53<sup>12</sup>

με ὁ πατήρ. So MBDL<sup>9</sup>; the rec. has ὁ πατήρ με.

με ὁ πατήρ ἀγαπᾷ. Jn. generally uses ἀγαπᾷ of the mutual love of the Father and the Son (see on 3<sup>16</sup>), but at 5<sup>30</sup> we find ὁ πατήρ φιλεῖ τὸν υἱόν. See also on 3<sup>36</sup> 21<sup>17</sup>, as to the alleged distinction in usage between ἀγαπᾷ and φιλεῖν, a distinction which is not observed in the Fourth Gospel.

ἔτι ἐγὼ τίθημι τὴν ψυχὴν μου, sc. as a good shepherd does for his sheep (see on v. 11 for the phrase). The self-sacrificing love of Jesus for man draws out the love of the Father to Him. Love evokes love.

ἵνα πάλιν λάβω αὐτήν. ἵνα must be given its full telic force. It was in order that He might resume His Life, glorified through suffering, that Jesus submitted Himself to death. Death was the inevitable prelude to the power of His Resurrection Life. It was only after He had been "lifted up" on the cross that He could draw all men to Himself (12<sup>32</sup>). The Spirit could not come until after the Passion (7<sup>39</sup>, where see note). The purpose of the Passion was not only to exhibit His unselfish love; it was in order that He might resume His life, now enriched with quickening power as never before.

be read, it is the voluntariness of the Death of Jesus which is emphasised; cf. 18<sup>5</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>52</sup>.

ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τίθημι αὐτήν ἀπ' ἑαυτοῦ. This clause is omitted by D, probably because of its apparent verbal inconsistency with 5<sup>19</sup> (cf. 5<sup>30</sup> 7<sup>38</sup> 8<sup>29</sup>) οὐ δύναται ὁ υἱὸς ποιεῖν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ οὐδέν. But there is no real inconsistency. ἀπ' ἑαυτοῦ here does not mean without authority from the Father, for that authority is asserted in the next sentence. It only implies spontaneity, voluntariness, in the use of the authority which Jesus has received from the Father, and in the obeying of the Father's commandment. See on 5<sup>19</sup>.

ἔξουσίαν ἔχω θῆναι αὐτήν. For ἔξουσία, "authority" as distinct from "power," in Jn., see on 1<sup>12</sup>. The authority which Jesus claimed from the Father was, first, the authority to lay down His life spontaneously (which no one has unless he is assured that his death will directly serve the Divine purposes); and, secondly, the authority to resume it again. That He had been given this latter ἔξουσία is in accordance with the consistent teaching of the N.T. writers that it is God the Father who was the Agent of the Resurrection of Jesus. Jesus is not represented as raising Himself from the dead. See on 2<sup>18</sup>.

ταύτην τὴν ἐντολὴν κτλ. This was the Father's commandment, viz. that He should die and rise again. See further on 12<sup>49</sup> for the Father's ἐντολή addressed to Christ. This Johannine expression is recalled in Hermas (Sim. v. vi. 3), ὅπου αὐτοῖς τὸν νόμον ἐν Διαβὸς παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ.

He says "my Father" here and v. 25, 29, 37. His relation to God was unique; see on 2<sup>18</sup>.

80. ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ὅσμει. As has been shown (Introd., p. xxv), this great utterance seems to have been made in explanation of v. 18, upon which it immediately follows in our arrangement of the text. None the less, it would not be out of place if it followed on v. 29, in the traditional order.

It has been customary, following the habit of the patristic commentators, to interpret these significant words in the light of the controversies of the fourth century. Bengel, e.g. (following Augustine), says: "Per sumus refutator Sabellius, per sumus Arius"; the words thus being taken to prove identity of essence between the Father and the Son, while the difference of persons is indicated by the plural ἑαυτέρ. But it is an anachronism to transfer the controversies of the fourth century to the theological statements of the first. We have a parallel

31. Ἐβάστασαν πάλιν λίθους οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι ἵνα λιθάσωσιν αὐτόν.
 32. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Πολλὰ ἔργα εἰδείξα ὑμῶν κατὰ ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς· διὰ τοῖων αὐτῶν ἔργων ἐμὲ λιθάετε; 33. ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῶν

το ἔν ἄρμεν in 1 Cor. 3<sup>6</sup>, where Paul says ὁ φύτεύων καὶ ὁ ποτίζων ἓν εἰσιν, meaning that both the "planter" and the "waterer" of the seed are in the same category, as compared with God who gives the increase. A unity of fellowship, of will, and of purpose between the Father and the Son is a frequent theme in the Fourth Gospel (cf. 5<sup>18, 19</sup>, 14<sup>6, 20</sup> and 17<sup>11, 23</sup>), and it is tersely and powerfully expressed here; but to press the words so as to make them indicate identity of οὐσία, is to introduce thoughts which were not present to the theologians of the first century.

Ignatius expresses the same thought as that conveyed in this verse, when he writes ὁ κύριος ἔγενε τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτῶν ἰσότητες, ἡμῶνους ἂν (Magn. 7). Cf. 8<sup>28</sup> above.

The Jews accuse Jesus of blasphemy: He defends His claim to be Son of God (vv. 31-33)

31. The Jewish opponents of Jesus, with a true instinct, perceived that He was claiming to be more than human.

Ἐβάστασαν πάλιν (cf. 8<sup>28</sup>) λίθους οἱ Ἰουδ. κατ. For βαυράζων, see on 12<sup>8</sup> below. Here it means "to lift up and carry off," and expresses more than αἶψαν in the similar context in 8<sup>28</sup>. They fetched stones from a distance, that they might stone Him. The verb λιθάζω does not occur in the Synoptists, but cf. 11<sup>8</sup>.

32. ἀπεκρ. αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰη. He did not withdraw Himself immediately, as at 8<sup>28</sup>, but proceeded to answer the thoughts which urged them to kill Him. Cf. 5<sup>17</sup> and Mk. 11<sup>14</sup> for ἀπεκρίνωσθαι used of an answer to acts, rather than to words.

πολλὰ ἔργα κατὰ, "many noble works," κατὰ expressing goodness as well as beauty (see on v. 11; and cf. 1 Tim. 6<sup>10</sup>); His works of healing were not only good works (as we use the phrase), but were works significant of the beauty of holiness. See on 2<sup>28</sup> for "signs" which He showed at Jerusalem on an earlier visit. These ἔργα were ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς. This He had repeatedly urged (5<sup>18, 26</sup> 6<sup>5</sup> 10<sup>25</sup>).

The rec. has αὐν after πατρὸς, but om. κ*BDΘ. For εἰδείξα, Θ has εἰδεδείξα.

διὰ τοῖων αὐτῶν ἔργων ἐμὲ λιθάετε; He knew, indeed, that it was not merely because He had cured the impotent and the blind that they sought to kill Him, but because of the claims which He consistently made as to the source of His power and αἱ Ἰουδαῖοι Περὶ καλοῦ ἔργου οὐ λιθάζομεν σε ἀλλὰ περὶ βλασφημίας, καὶ οὗτις οὐ ἀνθρώπος ἂν ποιεῖς σταντῶν Θεόν. 34. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Οὐκ ἔστιν γεγραμμένον ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ὑμῶν ὅτι Ἐγὼ εἶμαι αὐθORITY. He desired to bring this out, by putting to them such a question, "For what kind of work among these do you stone me?" τοῖων directs their attention to the quality and character of His works.

32. ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῶ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι. The rec. adds λέγοντες, but this is rightly omitted by KABLWΘ. ἀπεκρίθη followed by the pres. part. λέγων is very rare in Jn. (see on 1<sup>20</sup>), who prefers to use two co-ordinate verbs, ἀπεκρ. καὶ εἶπεν (see on 1<sup>20</sup>).

The Jewish opponents of Jesus give Him the answer that He anticipated. They had set about stoning Him, because death by stoning was the appointed penalty for blasphemy (Lev. 24<sup>16</sup>; cf. 1 Kings 21<sup>10, 19</sup>), and His language was, in their ears, blasphemous, "making Himself God," as they said. Cf. 5<sup>18</sup>, and 19<sup>7</sup> below, where the charge against Him was more accurately formulated, ταῦτον οὐκ ἔποίησεν.

περὶ βλασφημίας, "because of blasphemy"; cf. Acts 26<sup>7</sup> περὶ ἧς ἀπίθοις ἐγκαλοῦμαι, where περὶ is used in the same way. The word βλασφημία occurs in Jn. only in this passage.

34. For the formula of citation ἔστιν γεγραμμένον, see on 2<sup>17</sup>.

ἐν τῷ νόμῳ ὑμῶν. So κ*ABL lat. and some syr.; but om. ὑμῶν κ*DΘ and Syr. sin. For the phrase "your law" on the lips of Jesus, see on 8<sup>17</sup>.

The argument is thoroughly Jewish: "In your Scriptures, judges are addressed as בְּנֵי־אֱלֹהִים by the Divine voice, being commissioned by God for their work and thus being His delegates and representatives; where, then, is the blasphemy in my description of myself as οὐὸς τοῦ θεοῦ, being (as I am) the Ambassador of God and sent by Him into the world?" In Ps. 82, which represents God as the Judge of judges, He is represented as reminding unjust judges that it is by His appointment they hold their office, which is therefore divine: "I have said (sc. when you were made judges), Ye are gods." Cf. Ex. 21<sup>6</sup> 22<sup>28</sup> for בְּנֵי־אֱלֹהִים used of judges in the same way. The argument is one which would never have occurred to a Greek Christian, and its presence here reveals behind the narrative a genuine reminiscence of one who remembered how Jesus argued with the Rabbis on their own principles.

The natural retort (obvious to a modern mind) would be that the argument is insecure, because it seems to pass from "gods" in the lower sense to "God" in the highest sense of all. But (1) ad hominem the argument is complete. On Jewish principles of exegesis it was quite sound. Jesus never called Himself "son of Yahweh"; such a phrase would be impossible to a Jew. But "sons of Elohim" occurs often in the O.T. (Gen. 6<sup>2</sup>, Job 1<sup>4</sup>, Ps. 29<sup>1</sup> 89<sup>8</sup>, etc.). That Jesus should call Himself υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ could not be blasphemous, having regard to O.T. precedents, however unwarranted His opponents might think the claim to be. And (2) there is a deeper sense in which the argument as presented in Jn. conveys truth. The strict Hebrew doctrine of God left no place for the Incarnation. God and man were set over against each other, as wholly separate and distinct. But even in the Jewish Scriptures there are hints and foreshadowings of potential divinity in man (cf. Ps. 82<sup>6</sup>, Zech. 7<sup>23</sup>); and it is to this feature of Hebrew theology that attention is drawn in v. 34. The doctrine of the Incarnation has its roots, not in bare Deism, but in that view of God which regards Him as entering into human life and consecrating human activities to His own purposes.

36. εἰ ἐκείνους εἶπεν θεοὺς, "if then the Law (i. e. the Scripture) called them gods," πρὸς οὓς ὁ λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο, "to whom the message of God came," sc. at the moment of their appointment to be high office, which was a Divine call. So it was said of Jeremiah ὅτι ἐγενήθη λόγος τοῦ Θεοῦ πρὸς αὐτόν (Jer. 1<sup>2</sup>), and of John the Baptist ἐγένετο ῥῆμα Θεοῦ ἐπὶ Ἰωάννην (Lk. 3<sup>2</sup>); and it is implied here that the same words are applicable to the judge who is invested with authority to execute justice in God's name. The call of circumstance may often be truly a "word of God" to the man to whom it comes.

καὶ οὐ δύναται λυθῆναι ἡ γραφή. For λύω used of "breaking" a law, see on 5<sup>18</sup>. Here we should render "the Scripture cannot be set at naught." The opposite of setting the Scripture at naught or "destroying" it is the "fulfilling" of it. See Mt. 5<sup>17</sup>. The meaning of this parenthesis is that the words of Ps. 82<sup>6</sup> are full of permanent significance and must not be ignored. See Intro., p. clii.

ἡ γραφή, as always in Jn., signifies the actual passage of the O.T. which is cited or indicated, and not the whole body of the Hebrew Scriptures. See on 2<sup>17</sup>.

καὶ ἐπέστυλεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἡμεῖς λέγομεν ὅτι Βλασφημῆται, ὅτι εἶπον, Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐμί; 37. εἰ οὐ ποῦ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ Πατρὸς μου, μὴ πιστεύετε μοι; 38. εἰ δὲ οὐ ποῦ, πᾶν ἔμοι μὴ πιστεύετε, τοῖς ἔργοις πιστεύετε, ἕνα γῶστε καὶ γινώσκατε ὅτι ἐν ἐμοὶ ὁ Πατὴρ κἀγὼ ἐν τῷ

36. ἔν ὃ πατὴρ ἠγάσεν. ἀγάσεν is a Biblical word, connoting primarily the idea of setting apart for a holy purpose. Thus it is used of Yahweh hallowing the Sabbath (Ex. 20<sup>11</sup>), and of the consecration of an altar (Lev. 16<sup>9</sup>). It is applied to men who are set apart for important work or high office, e. g. to Jeremiah as prophet (Jer. 1<sup>2</sup>), to the priests (2 Chron. 26<sup>16</sup>), to Moses (Ecclus. 4<sup>5</sup>), to the fathers of Israel (2 Macc. 1<sup>10</sup>). In the N.T. of ἁγιασμένοι are the Christian believers (Acts 20<sup>32</sup> 26<sup>18</sup>, 1 Cor. 13<sup>1</sup>, Heb. 2<sup>11</sup> 10<sup>10</sup>, 2 Tim. 2<sup>11</sup>), a form of expression which we have in Jn. 17<sup>19</sup>, where Jesus prays that the apostles may be ἁγιασμένοι ἐν ἀλήθειᾳ. In that passage (where see note) He declares ἐγὼ ἀγάσας ἑμαυτὸν, but here the Agent of His consecration is the Father. In virtue of this hallowing, Jesus is ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ (6<sup>36</sup>, where see note). That He was set apart for His mission by the Father, who sent Him into the world, is the constant doctrine of the Fourth Gospel.

καὶ ἐπέστυλεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον. Cf. 17<sup>18</sup>; and see on 3<sup>17</sup>. ἡμεῖς λέγομεν εἰς κτλ. "Do you say . . ."; ἡμεῖς being emphatic.

ὅτι εἶπον, οὐὶς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐμί. This He had repeatedly said, by implication, but not explicitly (cf. especially v. 30; and see 5<sup>18</sup> 19<sup>7</sup>). It was involved in the claim that He made when He spoke of God as "my Father": see on 2<sup>18</sup>.

37. εἰ οὐ ποῦ τὰ ἔργα τοῦ πατρὸς μου, μὴ πιστεύετε μοι. He returns to the argument which He has put forward all through. They had seen His works of healing; He had declared consistently that they were really the ἔργα of God Himself, whose Ambassador He was (v. 25); if they did not recognise these as works of God and accept their witness, He did not expect them to believe His words (μὴ πιστεύετε μοι: for πιστεύετε followed by a dative, see on 8<sup>31</sup>). Cf. 5<sup>38</sup>.

38. εἰ δὲ οὐ ποῦ κτλ. But, on the other hand, if they recognised the divine character of these ἔργα of Jesus, they should accept their witness as to His authority. This would not produce the highest kind of faith, but it would be a beginning. See 5<sup>38</sup>. The witness of the works will convince them of His trustworthiness, and so they will come to believe what He says. This, in turn, will lead on to belief "in Him" (see on 1<sup>13</sup>), to faith in the majesty of His Person.

ἕνα γῶστε καὶ γινώσκατε, "that you may perceive, and so reach the fixed conviction of knowledge," ὅτι ἐν ἐμοὶ ὁ πατὴρ

Πατρί. 39. Ἐξήρουν οὖν αὐτὸν πάλιν εἰσαεῖν· καὶ ἐξήλθεν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῶν.

40. Καὶ ἀπῆλθεν πάλιν πέραν τοῦ Ἰορδάνου εἰς τὸν τόπον οὗτον αὐτὸν ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, "that the Father is in me, and I in the Father" (cf. 17<sup>21</sup>). This faith would appreciate the saying at which they had stumbled, ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ἑαυτοῖς (v. 30).

γινώσκετε. So BLW<sup>6</sup>, but MATA substitute πιστεύετε. But there is nothing pleonastic in γινῶτε followed by γινώσκετε, the pres. subjunctive referring to a continuous appreciation and understanding, the aorist to the initial apprehension of the truth. Cf. ἵνα γινώσκουσεν (17<sup>25</sup>) and ἵνα γινώσκῃ (17<sup>25b</sup>).

The argument is repeated 14<sup>21</sup>, πιστεύετε μοι (i.e. believe my word) ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ἐμοῖ· εἰ δὲ μὴ (but, if you will not, then accept the lower form of witness), δὲ αὐτὰ ἔργα αὐτὰ πιστεύετε. The reciprocal communion of the Father and the Son—"I in Him, and He in me"—is expressed again in the same mystical words at 17<sup>21</sup>; cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>24</sup>, 4<sup>15</sup>.

30. Ἐξήρουν αὐν. So KALWA, but οὖν may have come in from 7<sup>30</sup> or may be an itacism; om. B<sup>0</sup>.

The project of stoning Him (v. 31) was abandoned, perhaps because v. 38 did not seem to express His equality with the Father so uncompromisingly as v. 30, but more probably because αἱ Ἰουδαῖοι (v. 33) found that, as before, the crowd were not in entire agreement with their policy of violence.

πάλιν. His Jewish opponents had sought His arrest more than once before (cf. 7<sup>1</sup>, 8<sup>20</sup>, 44 8<sup>20</sup>). κ* D omit πάλιν.

For πάλιν, see on 7<sup>30</sup>.

καὶ ἐξήλθεν ἐκ τῆς χειρὸς αὐτῶν. There is no suggestion of His escape being miraculous, any more than at 8<sup>20</sup> (q.v.).

For the redundant ἐξήλθεν ἐκ, see on 4<sup>20</sup>.

Jesus retires beyond the Jordan, and many believe on Him there (vv. 40-42)

40. It had become apparent that the Jews were not to be persuaded of the claims of Jesus, to whom their hostility was increasing. So he retired beyond the Jordan to the scene of His earliest ministry, where He had called His first disciples; and there He found what must have been a welcome response to His teaching.

καὶ ἀπῆλθεν πάλιν κτλ. πάλιν is omitted by Syr. sin. and by ε; but it is a favourite word with Jn. when he wishes to indicate that one is going back to a place that has been visited

before (see on 4<sup>20</sup>). The use of πάλιν does not suggest that the former visit was a recent one, as Lange and others have supposed. Jesus returned to Bethany (or Bethabara) beyond Jordan (see on 1<sup>16</sup> for different views as to the exact place), which was in the district called Perea; and it is probable that this visit is to be identified with that mentioned Mk. 10<sup>1</sup>, Mt. 19<sup>1</sup>.

For the constr. οὗτον ἦν Ἰω. βαπτίζων, see on 1<sup>20</sup>. Jn. is careful to note that he means the place where John was baptizing first, not "Ænon near Salim," where we find him exercising his ministry at 3<sup>22</sup>.

For τὸ πρῶτον, κD<sup>0</sup> give τὸ πρότερον; but the constr. τὸ πρῶτον appears again 12<sup>16</sup> 19<sup>20</sup>.

καὶ ἔμεινε ἐκεῖ. Jesus seems to have remained in Perea, until He went to Bethany for the raising of Lazarus (17<sup>1</sup>), i.e. perhaps about three months.

41. That the people flocked to hear His teaching in Perea is confirmed by the Marcan tradition (Mk. 10<sup>1</sup>, Mt. 19<sup>1</sup>). They remembered what John the Baptist had said about Him, and remembered too that his witness had been found trustworthy. This was the reason why they came now in such numbers to see and hear Jesus.

Of John the Baptist, too, they remembered that he did no "sign," such as might be expected of a prophet; but nevertheless, although it was not confirmed by signs (see on 2<sup>23</sup>), his witness was true. For the witness of the Baptist, cf. 1<sup>7</sup>, 3<sup>28-34</sup> 3<sup>27-30</sup> 3<sup>32</sup>. It made a profound impression.

κD omit ὅτι ἀλεγον, apparently not realising that ὅτι here is recitantis. The words which follow are set down as the actual words which the people used.

42. πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτὸν, a favourite phrase of Jn. See on 4<sup>20</sup>.

XI. 1. Ἦν δὲ τὰς ἀδελφῶν, Λάζαρος ἀπὸ Βηθανίας, ἐκ τῆς κώμης Μαρίας καὶ Μάρθας τῆς ἀδελφῆς αὐτοῦ. 2. Ἦν δὲ Μαρία ἡ ἀλείψασα τὸν Κύριον μύρον καὶ ἐκμάσασα τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ τὰς θριξίν αὐτῆς,

The sickness of Lazarus, and the discussion of it by Jesus and His disciples (XI. 1-16)

XI. 1. Ἦν δὲ τὰς ἀδελφῶν. For the constr. of Ἦν with a participle, cf. 3<sup>38</sup> 13<sup>35</sup>, and see note on 13<sup>35</sup>.

The name Lazarus, Ἰησοῦ, is a shortened form of Eleazar, Ἰησοῦ, and is found again in the N.T. only in the parable of Lk. 16. Bethany, which is about 2 miles from Jerusalem, is now called El 'Aariyeh, from the tradition of the miracle narrated here.

Lazarus is described as ἀπὸ Βηθανίας, ἐκ τῆς κώμης Μαρίας (κτδ have τῆς Μαρίας) καὶ Μάρθας. So Philip is described as ἀπὸ Βηθανιάδ, ἐκ τῆς πόλεως Ἀνδρεοῦ καὶ Πέτρου (14<sup>4</sup>, where see note). It has been suggested that we ought to distinguish "Bethany" from "the village of Mary and Martha," and place the latter (see Lk. 10<sup>39</sup>) in Galilee. But Lk. does not always arrange the incidents he narrates in such strict order that we can be sure either of the locality or the time at which a given incident is to be placed. It can hardly be doubted (cf. 12<sup>2</sup>) that Lazarus, Mary, and Martha lived at Bethany together. The attempt to distinguish between ἀπὸ and ἐκ, so as to regard ἀπὸ Βηθανίας as indicating domicile, while ἐκ τῆς κώμης κτλ. would indicate place of origin (see Abbott, Diat. 2289 f.), is not only without corroborative evidence as to such a use of the two prepositions, but would make the opening sentence of this chapter very clumsy. See on 14<sup>4</sup>.

Mary is mentioned before Martha, while elsewhere (Jn. 11<sup>18</sup>, Lk. 10<sup>39</sup>) Martha, as the mistress of their house, is named before Mary. At the time the Fourth Gospel was written, Mary was the more prominent of the two in Christian tradition, as is recorded in Mk. (14<sup>7</sup>): "Whosoever the gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, that also which this woman hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her."

2. This verse seems to be an explanatory gloss added by an editor. There are two non-Johannine touches of style. The phrase τὸν Κύριον (see on 4<sup>1</sup>) appears instead of Jn.'s usual τὸν Ἰησοῦν. And, secondly, the characteristically Johannine Ἦν ἀδελφῶν (v. 1) is altered to the more classical ἡδελφῶν.

The story by which Mary is identified is that of her anointing Jesus, and wiping His feet with her hair, which Jn. tells in the next chapter. But this story is also told of the sinful woman of Lk. 7<sup>36</sup>. Christian readers of the next generation would not be helped by an explanatory note which might equally be applied to two distinct women; and the conclusion is inevitable that Jn. (or his editor) regarded Mary of Bethany as the same person who is described by Lk. as ἀμαρτωλός.<sup>1</sup> The easiest way to identify her for the reader is to recall the singular gesture by which she was best known, and which she had enacted not once only, but twice. She was the best-known member of her family, and the note recalls that it was her brother, Lazarus, who was sick.

It is worth observing, in view of the discrepancy between Mk. 14<sup>8</sup> and Jn. 12<sup>3</sup>, as to whether it was the head or the feet of Jesus that Mary anointed, that this note evades the difficulty by saying simply "anointed the Lord." ἀλείψων, μύρον, ἐκμάσων, θριξίν, are words common to this passage with both Lk. 7<sup>36</sup> and Jn. 12<sup>3</sup>; and the reference is probably to both incidents. ἐκμάσων is only found again in N.T. at 12<sup>3</sup>, and there, as in Lk. 7, Jn. 12, of wiping feet.

Μαριάμ, rather than Μαρία, seems to be the best-attested spelling of Mary's name throughout Jn., although here MADLWΘ have Μαρία, B 33 alone supporting Μαριάμ.<sup>2</sup> This provides another reason for suspecting v. 2 to be non-Johannine. Cf., however, v. 20, 12<sup>3</sup>; and see 19<sup>35</sup>.

3. ἀνίσταιναι οὐκ αἱ ἀδελφαὶ πρὸς αὐτόν. "So the sisters sent to Him," i.e. to Jesus; D δ c s support πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν. κόρη. It is thus that the sisters address Jesus throughout (v. 21, 27, 32, 34, 39), although Martha speaks to Mary of Jesus as ὁ ἀδελφάκαλος (v. 28), and the disciples address Him as Rabbi (v. 8). See the note on 12<sup>3</sup>; and cf. 4<sup>1</sup> 12<sup>12</sup>. ἴδε: a favourite word with Jn. (see on 1<sup>39</sup>).

ὃν φίλει ἀπέθνηκεν. "he whom thou lovest is sick." They feel it unnecessary to send any explicit invitation to Jesus to come and heal their brother: "Sufficit ut noueris. Non enim amas et deseris" (Augustine).

ὃν φίλει. So v. 36 ἴδε, πρὸς ἰησοῦν αὐτόν (cf. 20<sup>7</sup>). But at v. 5 we have ἡμέτερος ὁ Ἰησοῦς . . . τὸν Λάζαρον. There is no real distinction in meaning between the two verbs. Cf. 3<sup>35</sup> 5<sup>39</sup>, and note on 21<sup>7</sup>. See Introd., p. xxxvii n.

4. αὐτῆ ἡ ἀπέθνηκε οὐκ ἴσταν πρὸς θάνατον. This was the

comment of Jesus when the tidings of Lazarus' illness reached Him. It was not a direct reply to the sisters' message, and we do not know if it was reported to them (v. 40).

The constr. πρὸς θάνατον is unusual, occurring again in the N.T. only at 1 Jn. 5<sup>16</sup> ἀμαρτία πρὸς θάνατον, and in the LXX at 4 Macc. 14<sup>17</sup>, while εἰς θάνατον is common (cf. 2 Kings 20<sup>1</sup>, where it is said of Hezekiah that he was sick εἰς θάνατον). If a distinction is to be drawn between the two constructions, perhaps "this sickness is not πρὸς θάνατον" is more reassuring than "this sickness is not εἰς θάνατον." The latter would mean that the sickness would not have death as its final issue; the former ought to mean that the sick person is not in danger at all, that his sickness is not "dangerous," as we would put it. Consequently the meaning that the disciples inevitably took from the words of Jesus was that Lazarus was not dead at the time of speaking, and further that Jesus was convinced he would recover. No doubt, the evangelist means his readers to understand that this was not the real meaning of Jesus' words (see v. 11). But it is strange that he should translate them by using πρὸς instead of εἰς; for, in fact, Lazarus' sickness was πρὸς θάνατον, although it might plausibly be argued that it was not εἰς θάνατον, as death was not the final issue.

Jesus adds that this illness had come upon Lazarus ὑπὲρ τῆς δόξης τοῦ Θεοῦ, "on behalf of God's glory," i.e. in order that the glory and power of God might be revealed. The attempt to give ὑπὲρ a semi-sacrificial sense here, as if the sickness were a voluntary offering by Lazarus, is fanciful. ὑπὲρ is used exactly as in 1<sup>30</sup> 10<sup>11</sup>, "on behalf of." The issue of the sickness and death of Lazarus was the revelation of the glory of God, as exhibited in his miraculous resurrection. The miracle was more than a "wonder"; it was a "sign" of ἡ δόξα τοῦ Θεοῦ. And so Martha was reminded, when it was over, that she had been told that she would see this glory (v. 40).

The glory of God was exhibited through the person and works of Jesus; this sickness, with its issue, had for its purpose ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, that He might be honoured by this revelation of His Father (cf. 8<sup>44</sup> ἵνα τὸ πατέρ μου ὁδοξώσῃ με). We have seen (on 7<sup>39</sup>) that the supreme "glorification" of Jesus is identified by Jn. with the Passion and its sequel, and it has been thought by some that this too is the reference in the present passage. If so, ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ would mean here that the final cause of Lazarus' sickness was that it might lead up to the Passion by making public the power of Jesus and thereby bringing the hostility of his enemies to a crisis (Westcott). But this is over subtle. The true parallel to 11<sup>40</sup> is 8<sup>44</sup>. This revelation of "the glory of God" was that the Son might be honoured or "glorified" by so signal a mark of His Father's favour as the power to raise a dead man would exhibit. As in the O.T., "the glory of God" is the visible manifestation of His presence. See also on 9<sup>10</sup> 10<sup>14</sup>; and cf. 17<sup>1</sup>.

For the title "the Son of God," see on 1<sup>36</sup> and 5<sup>25</sup>. Only here and at 5<sup>25</sup> 10<sup>36</sup> is Jesus said to have used this title as descriptive of Himself.

6. Moffatt transposes this verse, placing it after the parenthetical v. 5; and this is the most natural position for it, as it then explains in proper sequence why it was that the sisters sent to Jesus the news that Lazarus was ill. Jesus was their friend, and they hoped that He would come and heal their sick brother. In the traditional position of v. 5, it seems to suggest as the reason why Jesus did not immediately leave Perea and start for the sick man's house, that because He loved the household at Bethany, He stayed for two days longer where He was. That is, no doubt, a possible explanation of His action or delay, sc. that because He loved them, He wished to exhibit in their case the greatness of His power and the reach of His compassion. But, if that were so, He was content to leave the sisters in the agony of grief for three or four days, in order that the "glory of God" might be more signally vindicated in the end.

There is no textual authority for Moffatt's transposition of the text, and I have left v. 5 in its traditional position. It is possible, however, that v. 5 is an explanatory gloss added by an editor which has got into the wrong place (see 4<sup>4</sup> for a like case of displacement). Two small points suggest that v. 5 is not from the pen of the author of vv. 1, 3. In v. 1 we have Mary and her sister Martha, while in v. 5 we have the more usual order, Martha and her sister,<sup>1</sup> a sudden change (but cf. v. 19). Again, the verb twice used in this chapter for the affection which Jesus had for Lazarus is φιλῶν (vv. 3, 36), while in v. 5 it is ἀγαπᾶν. We must not, indeed, sharply distinguish these verbs (see on 21<sup>17</sup>); but we should expect the same verb to be used in v. 3 and v. 5. It is possible that v. 5 is a non-Johannine gloss, which ought to be placed where Moffatt places it, after v. 2.

6. ὡς οὖν ἤκουεν ὅτι ἀθενοῖ, τότε μὲν ἔμεινεν ἐν ᾧ ἦν τότε δύο ἡμέρας; 7. ἔπειτα μετὰ τοῦτο λέγει τοῖς μαθηταῖς Ἄγγιμι εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν. 8. λέγουσιν αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταὶ Ῥαββί, οὐκ ἐξήστου σε λιθάρας οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, καὶ πάλιν ἐπάγει ἐκεῖ; 9. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς

6. ὡς οὖν ἤκουεν κτλ. οὖν is resumptive, and looks back to v. 4. "And so, when He heard, etc." It was because of His confidence that the sickness was not πρὸς θάνατον, and that the issue of it would be for the glory of God, that He did not hasten to the bedside of His friend. For ὡς οὖν, see on 4<sup>o</sup>.
ὅτι is recitantis: what the messenger from Bethany had said was δοθέν.

τότε μὲν ἔμεινεν κτλ. He remained where He was for two days. Jn. consistently represents Jesus as never being in haste. He always knew when the time to move had come (cf. 2<sup>a</sup> 7<sup>a</sup> 9).

Jn.'s tendency to indicate the time between one event and another has been already mentioned (see Introd., p. cii). He notes here that Jesus remained in His Perzian retreat for two days (cf. 4<sup>o</sup>) after the condition of Lazarus had been reported. From Bethany or Bethabara beyond Jordan (see on 1<sup>o</sup>), whatever its exact situation, it would be a long and rough day's walk to Bethany near Jerusalem, and the journey may well have occupied part of a second day. When Jesus reached the tomb, Lazarus had been dead more than three days (v. 39). Jn. may intend to convey that the patient was dead at the time that the message reached Jesus; but, on the other hand, Martha's words in v. 21 suggest that she thought that if Jesus had started at once, He would have arrived while Lazarus was yet alive.

εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν πάλιν, "back to Judæa," whence they had come to avoid the danger caused by the hostility of the Jews (10<sup>o</sup>, 40).

8. Ῥαββί. So the disciples called Him. See on 1<sup>o</sup> for the use of this title in Jn.

καὶ πάλιν ἐπάγει ἐκεῖ; "and are you going back there?"

Ὅχι δόδεκα ὥραι εἰσιν τῆς ἡμέρας; εἰς τις περὶπατῆ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, οὐ προσκίπτετε, ὅτι τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου τούτου βλάσκει: 10. ἐν δὲ τις περὶπατῆ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ, προσκίπτετε, ὅτι τὸ φῶς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν αὐτῷ.

For the Johannine use of ἐπάγειν, see on 7<sup>o</sup>. Probably their apprehension of danger was on their own account, as well as on that of their Master.

9. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς. See on 1<sup>o</sup> for the omission of the article before Ἰησοῦς in this phrase.

οὐκὶ δόδεκα ὥραι εἰσιν τῆς ἡμέρας? "Are there not twelve hours in the day?" That is, Jesus tells them that their anxiety is premature. The hour of danger had not yet come. Jesus never acted before the appropriate time (see on v. 6).

This saying is the counterpart of 9<sup>o</sup>. There Jesus had said that work must be done during the day, and that it could not be postponed until night without failure, and that this law applied to Him as well as to mankind at large. He implied that but a short time remained to Him. But in this passage the thought is different. The hour of His Passion was near, but it had not yet arrived. There was no need for undue haste. The "twelve hours" of His day were not yet exhausted.

εἰς τις περὶπατῆ ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ κτλ. We have already had the contrast between walking in the light and walking in darkness (see note on 8<sup>o</sup> for its significance). Here this solemn aphorism is put in connexion with what goes before. The disciples were apprehensive. But Jesus assured them that the night had not yet come. So long as men walk in the light of day they are safe, but it is the night that is the time of hazard.

Here, however, a mystical meaning lurks behind the literal meaning of the words employed. It is literally true that a man walking in the daytime does not stumble, because he sees τὸ φῶς τοῦ κόσμου τούτου, that is, the sun (see for the expression δὲ κόσμος οὗτος on 9<sup>o</sup>). But Jesus had already spoken of Himself as the Light of the World (see on 8<sup>o</sup>), and the suggestion is the same as in the former passage, sc. that he who walks by the light that Jesus gives does not walk in darkness.

The answer of Jesus to the disciples, then, in these verses implies first that there is no danger yet, for the day—His day—is not yet over; and suggests also that danger need not be dreaded by those who follow Him on His appointed way.

10. ἐν δὲ τις περὶπατῆ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ κτλ. In this second clause it is the mystical and not the literal sense which is most clearly expressed. For we should expect v. 10 to run, "If any one walk in the night, he stumbles because he has no light," or, as it is expressed at 12<sup>16</sup> (a parallel passage), "He that walketh in the darkness knoweth not whither he goeth" (cf. J. 1n. 2<sup>14</sup>). But instead we have ὅτι τὸ φῶς οὐκ ἔστιν ἐν αὐτῷ (not ἐν αὐτῷ, which D reads in an attempt to simplify the passage). This departs from the literal application of the illustration of a guiding light, and directs the thought of the reader to the idea of spiritual enlightenment. Cf. 8<sup>12</sup> and Mt. 6<sup>22</sup>. With the picture of one stumbling in the darkness, cf. Jer. 13<sup>16</sup>.

11. ταῦτα εἶπεν, καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο λέγει αὐτοῖς Λάζαρος ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν κεκοιμηγὰς· ἀλλὰ πορεύομαι ἕνα ζήναιον αὐτῶν. 12. εἶπαν οὖν οἱ

11. ταῦτα εἶπεν, i.e. vv. 9, 10, which but for this explicit statement might be treated as a comment of the evangelist (see on 3<sup>16</sup>) rather than as words spoken by Jesus on this occasion.

καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο. Some interval between vv. 8-10 and v. 11 is implied; see on v. 7 above.

Λάζαρος ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν. Lazarus was the friend of the disciples, as well as of the Master; and it is implied that if Jesus ventured into Judea to visit him, they also ought to be ready to do so. Lazarus was within the circle of those whom Jesus called His "friends" (see 15<sup>14</sup>, Lk. 12<sup>2</sup>; and cf. v. 3 above). κεκοιμηγὰς, "has fallen asleep." The natural interpretation of this verb would be that put upon it by the disciples, sc. that the sick man had fallen into a refreshing slumber. In ordinary Greek, as throughout the LXX, κοιμάσθαι is generally used in this, its primary, meaning. But in poetry it is sometimes used of the sleep of death, e.g. in Homer, Il. xi. 241; in Job 3<sup>12</sup> 14<sup>12</sup> 21<sup>12</sup>, 20. Ezek. 32<sup>18</sup>, 20, 27, as well as in the oft-repeated phrase, "he slept with his fathers." Cf. also 2 Macc. 12<sup>26</sup>. In the N.T. this euphemistic use is found 13 times, as against 3 occurrences of the verb in the sense of ordinary sleep (Mt. 28<sup>13</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>46</sup>, Acts 12<sup>2</sup>). Although this use was not original to Christianity, or even to Judaism, κοιμάσθαι (and κοιμηθήσαν; see Moulton-Milligan, v. v.) came to be more frequently applied to the sleep of death after the Christian era than before.

The verb does not occur again in Jn.; but its interpretation by the disciples here as indicating physical sleep was no stupid misunderstanding but natural, and almost inevitable, having regard to the circumstances.

ἀλλὰ πορεύομαι ἕνα ζήναιον αὐτῶν, "but I am going to wake him up." ζήναιον is a Hellenistic word, not occurring again in the N.T. We find it in the LXX (1 Kings 3<sup>16</sup>), and may especially note Job 14<sup>12</sup>, where, as here, it is associated with κοιμηθῆναι αὐτῷ Κύριε, εἰ κεκοιμηγὰς, σωθήσεται. 13. εἰρήνη δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς περὶ τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ· ἑκεῖνοι δὲ ἔδοξαν ὅτι περὶ τῆς κοιμήσεως τοῦ ὕπνου λέγει. 14. τότε οὖν εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς παρηγοίᾳ Λάζαρος ἀπέθανεν. 15. καὶ χεῖρα δι' ἑμαῖς, ἕνα πιστεύσῃτε, ὅτι οὐκ ἦμην ἑκεῖ· ἀλλὰ ἔρχομαι πρὸς αὐτὸν. 16. εἶπεν οὖν Θωμᾶς κοιμάσθαι, used of the sleep of death: ἀνήματος δὲ κοιμηθῆναι . . . οὐκ ἐξηναντήσθησθαί ἐξ ὕπνου αἰῶνος.

13. εἶπεν οὖν εἰ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ. So BC*<sup>9</sup> against the rec. οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ: RDW have αὐτῷ οἱ μαθηταί.

κέραι. For this mode of address, see on 1<sup>36</sup> and 13<sup>12</sup>.

εἰ κεκοιμηγὰς, σωθήσεται, "if he has fallen asleep, he will recover." They understood Jesus to mean that the sick man had fallen into a natural sleep—not the sleep of death. This was a favourable symptom, and suggested that Lazarus would get well. It puzzled them to think that Jesus would wish to wake him from health-giving sleep. No doubt, they were glad of another argument by which they might dissuade their Master from facing the dangers of Judea. The journey would be to no good purpose.

σωθήσεται, "he will get well." For this use of σώζειν, see on 3<sup>17</sup>.

13. εἰρήνη δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς κτλ., "But Jesus had been speaking about his death." This is one of those parenthetical comments which are so frequent in the Fourth Gospel (see Introd., p. xxxiv), the writer calling attention to a misunderstanding by the disciples of the words of Jesus. They thought that Jesus was using the word κοιμάσθαι of natural sleep, whereas he was really using it of death.

ἑκεῖνοι δὲ ἔδοξαν κτλ., "but they thought, etc." ἑκεῖνος being employed to mark distinctly the subject of the verb. It is often used by Jn. to make his point, just as an English writer may resort to italics for the sake of clearness (see on 1<sup>9</sup>).

κοιμήσῃτε does not occur again in the N.T. It is used euphemistically at Ecclus. 45<sup>18</sup> 48<sup>18</sup> of the sleep of death, but not elsewhere in the LXX in any sense.

14. τότε οὖν κτλ., "At this point, Jesus said plainly, Lazarus died"; He no longer spoke enigmatically to the disciples. For παρηγοίᾳ, see on 7<sup>4</sup>.

15. καὶ χεῖρα δι' ἑμαῖς, ἕνα πιστεύσῃτε, ὅτι οὐκ ἦμην ἑκεῖ, "And I rejoice for your sakes that I was not there, so that you may believe." The implication is that the recovery of Lazarus from death would be a more remarkable "sign" than his recovery from a sick-bed would have been. The disciples were already "believers," or they would not have been "disciples"; but faith is always growing, if it be alive, and ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος τοῖς συναθηταῖς ἄγωμεν καὶ ἡμεῖς ἕνα ἀποθάνομεν μετ' αὐτοῦ.

the Twelve knew that their was susceptible of increase (cf. Lk. 17<sup>9</sup>). Although His friend has died and the sisters are in grief, Jesus rejoices because of His confidence not only that Lazarus will be called back to life, but because this sign of power will increase the faith of His disciples, and promote the glory of God (v. 4).

Abbott (Diat. 2099) translates, "I am glad on account of you, that ye may believe, because I was not there," which is, indeed, a possible rendering, but unnecessarily subtle.

ἵνα πιστεύσῃτε is, as it were, in parenthesis, explaining why Jesus was glad that He was not present when Lazarus was still alive. For πιστεύειν used absolutely, as here, the object of belief being left unexpressed, see on 1<sup>7</sup>.

Bengel notes that no one is said to have died in the presence of Jesus, and suggests that perhaps death was impossible where He was: "Cum decore divino pulchre congruit, quod praesente uitae duce nemo unquam legitur mortuus." But we cannot infer from the narrative that Jn. means to hint at this.

χαίρω is not elsewhere placed in the lips of Jesus, but He speaks of His joy (ἡ χαρὰ ἣ ἐπέμειν) at 15<sup>11</sup> 17<sup>13</sup>; and at 4<sup>36</sup> we have ἵνα ὁ στείρων ὑμῶν χαίρῃ καὶ ὁ θερμῶν, where He refers to Himself as the Sower. In all these passages, it will be noticed that His rejoicing is connected with the fulfilment of His mission. So also at Lk. 10<sup>23</sup> it is said of Him ἐγαλλιάσατο τῷ Πενήκοντι τῷ Ἁγίῳ, because of the acceptance of His message by the Seventy, and of their success. And the rejoicing of the shepherd, when the lost sheep is found (Mt. 18<sup>13</sup>, Lk. 15<sup>7</sup>), is, in like manner, drawn out by the happy issue of his labours.

ἀλλὰ ἄγωμεν πρὸς ἄσθῆν, "but, anyway, let us go to him," as He had said before ἄγωμεν εἰς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν (v. 7, where see note on ἄγωμεν). The repetition of this invitation, even though Lazarus was now dead and a visit to his bedside for the purpose of healing him was now impossible, seems to have convinced the hesitating disciples that Jesus had some great purpose in view when He proposed to return to a place where He and they would be in danger. At all events, no further objection is raised, and the longer outburst of Thomas, "Let us also go, that we may die with Him," is acted on by all.

transliteration. Three times in Jn. (cf. 20<sup>24</sup> 21<sup>6</sup>) to this name the note is added ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος, an appellation which is not found in the Synoptists. This suggests (see on 4<sup>36</sup>) that the apostle was called "Didymus" in Greek circles; if Jn. only meant to interpret Thomas, he would probably have written ὁ ἱερογλύφουτος Δίδυμος (as at 1<sup>19</sup>).<sup>3</sup>

The personal name of the apostle is given as Judas in the Acta Thoma and elsewhere; and the attribution of this name to him led afterwards to the attempted identification of Thomas with "Judas of James" and "Judas the Lord's brother."

The character of Thomas comes out as clearly in the Fourth Gospel as does that of Nicodemus (see on 3<sup>1</sup>). The notices of him here, at 14<sup>5</sup> and 20<sup>24</sup>, are remarkably consistent, one with the other, and reveal a man whose temper of mind we can thoroughly understand. Thomas always looks at the dark side of things, and is a pessimist by disposition, while entirely loyal to his convictions and ready to act on them at all cost. He is a man of independent mind who says what he thinks, and does not wait for the promptings of others. Here Thomas foresaw only too clearly that Jesus was going to His death, and he realised that to enter Judæa as His disciple was to risk the same fate. But Jesus was his Master, and he would not draw back when he found that Jesus was resolved to go back to Judæa. εἴτεσ ὄνθ θανάτῳ κτλ., "Thomas thererapton said, Let us also go (for ἄγωμεν, see on v. 7) that we may die with Him."

This challenge was addressed to his "fellow-disciples," συναθηταῖς does not occur again in the N.T., but as used here it suggests the Twelve, of whom Thomas was one, rather than any other circle of μαθηταῖς (see on 2<sup>2</sup>). It is not implied that all of the Twelve were present during the retreat to Perea or at Bethany when Lazarus was recovered from the tomb; but συναθηταῖς suggests that the disciples who were with Jesus on this occasion were of the inner circle.

It is probable that Peter was not among them. He is not mentioned once in Part II. of the Gospel, and there is no indication in Mk. (which is thought to depend on Peter's information) that Peter knew anything about this Jerusalem ministry. Probably the Galilean disciples were often at their homes when Jesus was in Judæa or in Perea. If Peter had been present, we might have expected that he would take the lead <sup>4</sup>

17. Ἐλθὼν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῶν τίνασaras ἤδη ἡμέρας ἔχοντα ἐν τῷ μνημαί. 18. ἦν δὲ Βηθανία ἐγγυὲ τῶν Ἱεροσολύμων ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαέντε. 19. πολλοὶ δὲ ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων in assuring Jesus that His disciples would not abandon Him, just as he was foremost when the danger was even nearer (13th). From the Synoptists we should not have gathered that Thomas was one of the leaders of the apostolic company; but the notices of him in Jn. (see above; and also 21st, where he is named immediately after Peter) indicate that he was prominent among them, so that the statement that he acted as spokesman for the rest on this occasion is not surprising.

(vv. 17-27)

17. Ἐλθὼν οὖν κτλ., "Jesus, then, having come, etc." οὖν is resumptive, not causal.

εἶπεν αὐτῶν τίνασaras ἤδη ἡμέρας ἔχοντα κτλ. He found Lazarus had been already four days in the tomb. For the constr. ἡμέρας ἔχον, see on 5th. ἤδη is om. by A<sup>o</sup>D, and its position varies in other MSS., but the weight of authority is in favour of its retention.

For the "four days," see on v. 6 above; and cf. v. 39. The burial would have taken place as soon as possible after death (cf. Acts 5th).

Augustine (in loc.) finds allegory in the "four days": one day of death for original sin, one for violation of natural law, one for breaking the law of Moses, and one for transgressing the Gospel. This is no more, and no less, fantastic than the efforts of modern expositors to find allegory in Jn.'s narrative.

18. Moffatt places vv. 18, 19, between v. 30 and v. 31, where they would fit very well. But there is no insuperable difficulty in their traditional position, and I do not venture to alter it.

ἦν δὲ Βηθανία κτλ. Jn. alone of the evangelists uses ἦν in this way (cf. 18th 19th, and perhaps 6th); Meyer suggested that it is employed by him thus instead of the present ἐστὶ because he is writing after the devastation of Jerusalem and its suburbs. But if (as we hold) his narrative reproduces the reminiscences of the aged apostle John, looking back on many years, ἦν is more natural than ἐστὶ, without assuming any allusion to the fall of Jerusalem. See on 5th.

ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων δεκαέντε, "about fifteen furlongs." Bethany ἀληθέυσαν πρὸς τὴν Μάρθαν καὶ Μαριάμ, ἵνα παραμυθῆσονται is a little less than 2 miles from the city. The constr. of ἀπὸ with the genitive to indicate distance is not necessarily a Latinism, as, e.g., a millibus passuum duobus (Caesar, Bell. Gall. ii. 7). It occurs again at 23rd; cf. Rev. 14th, and see Hermas, Vis. iv. 1, οὕτω γὰρ ἦν ἀπ' ἐμοῦ ὡς ἀπὸ σταδίων.

19. πολλοὶ δὲ. So κBCDLWΘ, as against the rec. καὶ πολλοὶ (ATA).

ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, i.e. of the citizens of Jerusalem. οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι often represents in Jn. the Jews who were hostile to Jesus (see on 1st 5th); but here that suggestion is not present.

Jerusalem being so near (v. 18), it was natural that many friends from the city should come to condole with Martha and Mary on the death of their brother. Lightfoot gives (Hor. Hebr., in loc.) curious details about the ceremonial which was customary at these mournful gatherings. The first three days after death were kept with severity, the next four days with less strictness, the period of observance lasting for thirty days altogether. Cf. for the "seven days of mourning for the dead" (Ecclus. 22nd), 1 Sam. 31st, Job 2nd, Judith 16th; and for the visits of neighbours to console, a Esd. 10th.

παραμυθίσαι, "to comfort," is found in the Greek Bible only here, v. 31, 1 Thess. 2nd 5th, and 2 Macc. 15th.

πρὸς τὴν Μάρθαν καὶ Μαριάμ is the best-attested reading (κBC<sup>o</sup>L), but the article should be prefixed to both or to neither of the names. D has πρὸς Μάρθαν καὶ Μαριάμ. Syr. sin. seems, on the other hand, to presuppose the article in both places, and reads "went forth to Bethany that they might comfort Martha and Mary," omitting "concerning their brother." See on v. 24 for Jn.'s consistent use of ἡ Μάρθα, ἡ Μαριάμ.

The rec. text, with AC<sup>o</sup>ΓΔΘ, has ἀληθέυσαν πρὸς τὰς γυναῖκας τῆς οἰκίας τῆς Μάρθας καὶ Μαρίας, which ought to mean "came to the women of the household of Martha and Mary"; but it can hardly be genuine. Perhaps τὰς γυναῖκας came in from [αἰ]γίαις γυναῖκας in the next line. After ἀελοφῶς ACTA add αὐτῶν, but om. κBDLWΘ.

20. The congruity of the characters of Martha and Mary, as suggested by what we read of them in Lk. 10th, with what Jn. tells in this chapter about their demeanour is remarkable.<sup>1</sup> Martha is the busy housewife who, as the mistress of the house, is the first to be told of the approach of Jesus (v. 20). She goes to meet Him, and expresses at once her own conviction and that of Mary (vv. 21, 32), that if He had been present, Lazarus would not have died. She is puzzled by the enigmatical words of hope which Jesus addresses to her (v. 23), and supposes that He is giving the usual orthodox consolation (v. 24). She does not understand what He then says (vv. 25, 26); but her faith in Him as the Messiah is strong, and of this she assures Him (v. 27), although she does not expect that He can do anything now to restore her brother. Then she goes to tell her sister that Jesus has arrived and is asking for her.

Before Martha told her, Mary had not heard of the arrival of Jesus (v. 29): she was seated inside the house (v. 20) as a mourner, and it had been to her that the condolences of the friends who had come from Jerusalem were specially addressed (v. 45). But as soon as she learnt that Jesus had come, she got up hastily and left the house without acquainting the mourners of her purpose in going out (v. 29). Her friends thought that she was going to wait at the tomb (v. 30). When she met Jesus, she fell at His feet (unlike her more staid sister), greeting him with the same assurance that Martha had given (v. 32), but weeping unrestrainedly (v. 33). Her cries of grief seem to have affected the human heart of Jesus as the grave sorrow of Martha did not do (v. 33). But, as they proceed to the tomb, Martha is with them, and, practical woman as she is, demurs to its being opened (v. 39). Throughout, her figure is in sharp contrast with that of her more emotional sister. See further, Introd., p. cxxxv.

ἡ οὖν Μάρθα ὡς ἤκουσεν ὅτι ἔρχεται. She is the first to be told, as the mistress of the house. ὅτι is recitantis: what was said to her was ἡχοῦστος ἔρχεται.

The rec. has δ ἴπρ., but om. δ #ABCDW. See on 1<sup>20</sup>. ἀπέστρεψεν αὐτῆ, "I met Him," but without any display of emotion such as Mary exhibited. She met Jesus before He entered the village (see v. 30).

ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ ἐκαθίστο. "she was seated in the house"; see on 4<sup>8</sup> for ἐκαθίστο. It was customary for mourners to be seated when receiving the condolences of their friends; see Job 2<sup>11</sup>, 13, and cf. Ezek. 8<sup>24</sup>. Sitting down was also a common posture for mourners among the Romans. It was adopted, e.g., by Cato after Pharsalia, and Varro after Cannæ (Plutarch, Cato, 57).

Μαρία is attested by most authorities, but @ 33 give Μαριάμ (see also 1<sup>20</sup>), in accordance with the general usage of Jn. (see on v. 2).

21. εἶπεν οὖν (οὖν being resumptive) ἡ Μάρθα πρὸς Ἰησοῦν.

κύριε. See on v. 3. εἰ ἦς ἔδε κτλ., "if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." Mary greets Jesus with the same words (v. 32). No doubt, Martha and Mary had said this to each other many times during the last four days. The greeting may imply a reproach, suggesting that if Jesus had started immediately after He heard of Lazarus' illness, He would have kept him from death (see on v. 6). On the other hand, the sisters do not say "if thou hadst come here," but "if thou hadst been here," which may imply only wistful regret.

22. The rec. inserts ἀλλὰ before καὶ ἔφη: om. #*BC<sup>2</sup>. Jn. often uses καὶ adversatively (see on 1<sup>19</sup>), and ἀλλὰ is not needed here.<sup>1</sup> "Even now (although my brother is dead) I know that whatsoever thou shalt ask of God, God will give it thee." This is a deeper confidence than that which recognises the efficacy of the prayers of any good man (see 5<sup>41</sup>). Martha wistfully expresses faith in Jesus not only as her friend, but as the Son of God (v. 27). She understands, though dimly, that He stands in a special relation to God; and the repetition of δ θεός at the end of the sentence is emphatic. Perhaps His remark in v. 4 had been reported to her.

ὅσα ἐν αἰρήσῃ τὸν Θεόν. Martha used, however, a verb to describe the prayers of Jesus which (according to Jn.) Jesus never used of them. αἰρῶν is often used in the Gospels of men's prayers to God, and Jesus uses it thus at Jn. 14<sup>19</sup> 15<sup>16</sup> 16<sup>26</sup>, but the word that He uses of His own prayers is ἐρωτῶν. In Jn. (and in Jn. only) ἐρωτῶν is used of prayer to God; and in the Gospel it is not generally used of the prayers of men, but of the prayers of Jesus (14<sup>16</sup> 15<sup>16</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> 18. 20). Too much, however, must not be made of this usage, for the distinction between αἰρῶν and ἐρωτῶν had almost disappeared in later Greek (cf. Acts 3<sup>2, 9</sup>), and at 1 Jn. 5<sup>16</sup> ἐρωτῶν is used of the prayer of Christians. See further on 16<sup>23</sup>. It is remarkable that the words προσεύχεσθαι, παρακαλεῖν, and δεῖσθαι, which are all used elsewhere of prayer, do not occur in Jn.

But Martha, although she uses a word about the prayers of Jesus which He never applies to them, is right in substance;

24. λέγει αὐτῇ ἡ Μάρθα Οὐκ εἶμι ἀναστήσεται ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. 25. εἶπεν αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ and her confession is a true, if imperfect, statement of what Jesus says Himself at v. 41.

23. ἀναστήσεται ὁ ἀδελφός σου. This must often have been said both to Martha and Mary during the past four days; it was (and is) a commonplace of consolation in bereavement offered by friends. By the first century, belief in the resurrection, at any rate of good men, was widely spread among the Jews (see on 5th). The doctrine is plainly expressed in the Psalms of Solomon (about 80 B.C.): οἱ δὲ φοβούμενοι κήρην ἀναστήσονται εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνου (iii. 16). And Jesus commends this assurance to Martha as a truth which should assuage her grief. A doctrine which is trite may, nevertheless, be both true and important.

24. Martha's reply is not sceptical or querulous. She does not deny the tremendous doctrine of resurrection at the Last Day. She replies, wistfully enough, that she knows it and accepts it. But, like many another mourner, she fails to derive much immediate consolation from it. The Last Day seems very far off. Meanwhile, where is her brother? And what are the conditions of this Resurrection? What is the Resurrection?

The answer of Jesus is unexpected indeed. "I am the Resurrection": the soul that has touched me has touched life; and the life of God is eternal. That is the whole answer. And Martha, not fully understanding it, recognises that He who spoke to her, spoke with an awful prescience, as befitted Him in whom she saw the Messiah.

λέγει αὐτῇ ἡ Μάρθα. The article, which is omitted by  $\text{M}^{\text{A}}\text{C}^{\text{D}}\text{T}\text{W}$ , must be retained with  $\text{B}^{\text{C}}\text{D}^{\text{L}}\text{G}$ . Throughout the chapter (except at vv. 1, 39, which are not true exceptions), Jn. writes ἡ Μάρθα. See on vv. 2, 20.

For the doctrine of the Last Things in Jn., see Introd., p. clviii; and for the phrase ἡ ἐσχάτη ἡμέρα, which is peculiar to Jn., see on 6th. For the word ἀνάστασις, used of a resurrection from death, see on 5th.

25. ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωὴ. For the form of this solemn pronouncement, ἐγὼ εἰμι . . ., and for the claim to an equality with God which is involved in such a way of speaking, see Introd., p. cxix.

For the Divine prerogative of Jesus as a "quickener" of the dead, see 5th and the note there. It is asserted again in the proclamation, four times repeated, ἀναστήσω αὐτὸν [ὅ] τῃ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ (see note on 6th). Here, what is said goes beyond even that great assurance.

All the great similitudes by which Jesus describes Himself in the Fourth Gospel are introduced by the opening phrase ἐγὼ εἰμι, which marks the style of Deity (see Introd., p. cxviii). But ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις differs from the other pronouncements in this respect, that it is not a similitude. When Jesus is represented as saying that He is the Bread of Life, or the Light of the World, or the Door, or the Way, or the True Vine, or the Good Shepherd, every one understands that these are only figures of speech, used to illustrate and explain that He strengthens and guides mankind. Here, however, in reply to Martha's allusion to the Resurrection at the Last Day, Jesus uses no explanatory figure of speech. "I am the Resurrection" is not a similitude; it is the reference to Himself of what Martha had said about the final resurrection. The sentence is comparable to ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ μισθότης περὶ ἑμαυτοῦ (8th), rather than to any of the so-called similitudes; but it is more difficult to interpret. For how can a person represent an event in the future? Yet this is what is asserted. ἡ ἀνάστασις in v. 25 must refer back to ἡ ἀνάστασις in v. 24. Jesus does not say ἐγὼ εἰμι ἀνάστασις (without the article), or identify Himself with the act or process of "rising again"; but He diverts the thought of Martha, as it were, from the Resurrection at the Last Day, which she feels is very far distant, to the Resurrection of which He is potentially the Source as well as the Agent.

"I will raise him up at the Last Day." That is a frequent theme of the Fourth Gospel (see on 6th). But, if Jesus had said no more on the subject, it would have postponed the possibility of resurrection to the new and heavenly life until the day of the Final Assize. And it is equally, and more particularly, a doctrine of the Fourth Gospel, that as men are judged now, so the entrance on the ζωὴ αἰώνου is a present possibility (see Introd., p. clx). Jesus is the Door to the Kingdom, i. e. to the enjoyment of "eternal life"; and it is through Him that man enters into its possession here and now.

Thus, in vv. 24, 25, the old Jewish and the new Christian eschatology are explicitly confronted with each other. Jn. never represents Jesus as denying the Jewish doctrine of a Last Judgment; but he perpetually represents Him as insisting upon the judgment of the present hour, not pronounced by a fiat of external authority, but determined by the man's own self and his relation to God in Christ (see on 3rd).

So ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀνάστασις is meant to convey to Martha, not indeed a rebuke for her belief in the General Resurrection at last, but an assurance that the "rising again" of believers

in Him is not to be postponed until then. If a man believe in Him, although his body dies yet his true self shall live (v. 25). Or, as it may be put in other words, no believer in Jesus shall ever die, so far as his spirit is concerned (v. 26). The consolation which Jesus offers to those mourning the death of a Christian believer is not that their friend will rise again at some distant day when the dead shall be raised by a catastrophic act of God (however true that may be), but that the Christian believer never dies, his true life is never extinguished. "Your friend is alive now; for in me he touched the life of God which is eternal; in me he had already risen, before his body perished." This is the Johannine doctrine of life (see Introd., p. cxi); it is also the doctrine of Paul (cf. Col. 3<sup>1</sup>).

Neither Jn. nor Paul discuss or contemplate the future life of those who are not "in Christ." The assurance of life, here and hereafter, in the Fourth Gospel, is for all "believers"; and in this passage no others are in view.

καὶ ὃ ζῶν. This second clause in the great pronouncement of Jesus is omitted by Syr. sin., and also by Cyprian (de Mortal. 21), who quotes these verses in the form: "Ego sum Resurrectio. Qui credit in me, licet moriatur, uiuet; et omnis qui uiuit et credit in me non morietur in aeternum." Cyprian appears to have missed the distinction between the two clauses 25<sup>b</sup> and 26, and he may have omitted et uita, not perceiving that the words are essential, if what follows is to be understood. But this does not explain the omission in Syr. sin. All other authorities have the words καὶ ὃ ζῶν, which are indispensable for the argument.

Jesus is not only the Resurrection, and thus the pledge and the source of the believer's revival after death; but He is the Life, for this revival is unending. In the two sentences which follow, the twofold presentation of Jesus as the Resurrection and as the Life is expanded and explained. He is the Resurrection, and therefore the believer in Him, though he die, yet shall live again. He is the Life, and therefore the believer in Him, who has been "raised from the dead" and is spiritually alive, shall never die. See further on v. 26.

ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὴν κτλ., "he who believes in me" (see on 1<sup>a</sup> for the constr. πιστεύων εἰς, and cf. 9th) "even if he die (sc. physically), yet shall he live" (sc. spiritually, in the spiritual body, as Paul has it). So it has been said already (3rd).

καὶ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὴν οὐ μὴ ἀνοθήνη εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα πιστεύεις τοῦτο;

Westcott compares Philo's saying that "the wise man who appears to have died in respect of this corruptible life, lives in respect of the incorruptible life" (quod det. pot. 15). But the distinctive feature of the Johannine teaching is that the privilege of the immortal, spiritual life is for him who "believes in Christ," and so has touched the life of God.

26. καὶ πᾶς ὁ ζῶν κτλ. The verse is susceptible of two meanings. (1) If πᾶς ὁ ζῶν is understood as meaning "every living man," sc. living in this earthly life (cf. ἄνθρωπος πνεῦρος ζῶντος, Tob. 13<sup>d</sup>), then v. 26 is but the repetition in other words of what has already been said in v. 25, "no living man who believes in me shall ever die." Such repetition is quite in the Johannine style (see 3<sup>d</sup>), and it gives a good sense here. (2) But inasmuch as ζῶντες in v. 25 refers to spiritual life, the life of the believer after the death of the body, it is preferable to take ζῶν in v. 26 as having the same reference, and to treat v. 26 as continuing the topic of v. 25, but not repeating it. "Every one who is living (sc. in the heavenly life) and a believer in me shall never die." Verse 25 gives only the promise of life after physical death; v. 26 gives the assurance that that future life being immortal. For this use of ζῶν as indicating one who is living, not on earth, but in the spiritual world, cf. the saying of Jesus to the Sadducees, that God is not the God of the dead, but of the living (ζῶντων, Mk. 12th and parallels).

For this use of εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, "shall never die," cf. 4th, and esp. 8th.

It should be observed that vv. 25, 26, do not suggest to Martha that Lazarus will live again on earth. They are general pronouncements applying to every believer in Jesus, and the emphasis is laid on the words ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὴν. It is this essential condition of life in its deepest sense that is proclaimed to Martha. She is asked if she believes it, and she says "Yes"; but her answer does not indicate that she understood what was involved.

27. Martha's reply is a confession of Jesus as the Messiah. It hardly goes farther; although, in terms, it embraces all that Jn. hopes his readers will reach, sc. that full faith which leads to life (20th). She hastens to summon Mary, who may be expected to understand the mysterious sayings of Jesus better than she (cf. Lk. 10th).

καί. Cf. 21st, 16 and Mk. 7th. She acquiesces in the truth of what Jesus had said, because she believed Him to be the Christ.

κρίτε. See on v. 3.

27. λέγει αὐτῇ Ναί, Κύριε ἐγὼ πεπίστευκα ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος.

28. Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπούσα ἀπήλθεν καὶ ἐφώνησεν Μαριάμ τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῆς Λάβρα εἰπούσα Ὁ Διδάσκαλος πόρρωτι καὶ φωνεῖ σε. 29. ἐκείνη δὲ ὡς ἤκουσεν, ἠγήθη ταχὺ καὶ ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν.

ἐγὼ πεπίστευκα. With the perfect tense cf. 6<sup>69</sup> and 1 Jn. 4<sup>14</sup>; ἐγὼ is emphatic. Certainly Martha accepts the word of Jesus as true, for she has believed for some time past in His Messiahship. ὅτι σὺ εἶ ὁ Χριστὸς. For the form of the confession σὺ εἶ, cf. 1<sup>40</sup> 6<sup>69</sup>, Mk. 8<sup>29</sup>, Mt. 16<sup>16</sup>.

ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ—a recognised title of Messiah. See on 1<sup>34</sup> for its usage and significance. Cf. the note on 6<sup>69</sup> for the confession of Jesus as the Christ by Peter; and see further on v. 40. Note that the exact terms, ὁ χριστός, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, appear together again at 20<sup>31</sup>, where Jn. defines the faith which he aims to inspire in his readers.

ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος. This is the way in which the coming Prophet was described in popular discourse (see 6<sup>14</sup>, Mt. 11<sup>7</sup>). Jesus used the expression of Himself more than once (5<sup>39</sup> 16<sup>13</sup> 18<sup>27</sup>).

Mary, being informed of Jesus' presence, hastens to speak to Him (vv. 28-32)

28. τοῦτο εἰπούσα. This is the true reading, with  $\aleph$ CLW, rather than ταῦτα of AD $\Gamma$ \Delta $\Theta$ . Martha said one thing only in response to Jesus' words of mystery; she did not make a speech.

She called (ἐφώνησεν) "Mary." Μαριάμ does not take the article here, suggesting that the actual name was called out by Martha.

λάβρα, "secretly," presumably because she wished Mary to see Jesus privately, without the crowd of mourning friends being present. However, this did not succeed, for they followed Mary out of the house (v. 31). λάβρα occurs elsewhere in N.T. at Mt. 2<sup>19</sup> 2<sup>7</sup>, Acts 16<sup>27</sup>. D reads σιωπῆ, which gives the same sense.

ὁ δίδωκαλος. So they called Jesus among themselves, although they addressed Him as κύριε. See on 1<sup>38</sup> 13<sup>13</sup>; and cf. 20<sup>15</sup>.

καὶ φωνεῖ σε. No mention has been made hitherto of the desire of Jesus to see Mary.

29. ἐκείνη δὲ. δὲ should be retained with  $\aleph$ C $\Gamma$ \Delta $\Theta$  LW, ἐκείνη designates the person who has just been mentioned (see on 1<sup>19</sup>).

ἠγήθη ταχὺ καὶ ἤρχετο πρὸς αὐτόν. With her natural impul-

30. αἴσω δὲ ἐπαύθη ὁ Ἰησοῦς εἰς τὴν κόμην, ἀλλ' ἦν ἔτι ἐν τῇ τάφῳ θεοῦ ὑπάρτησεν αὐτῇ ἡ Μαρία. 31. αἱ οὖν ταυθαῖαι αἱ σφες μετ' αὐτῆς ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ καὶ παραμυθούμενοι αὐτῇ, ἰδόντες τὴν Μαριάμ ὅτι ταχὺς ἀνέστη καὶ ἐβῆλθεν, ἠκολούθησαν αὐτῇ, δίδασκα ὅτι ἴσμεν εἰς τὸ μνημαῖον ἵνα ελαστήμεν. 32. ἡ οὖν Μαριάμ ὡς ἦλθεν πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦς, ἰδοῦσα αὐτὸν ἔκτεσεν αὐτοῦ πρὸς τοὺς πόδας, λέγουσα αὐτῷ Κύριε, εἰ ἦς δόξα, οὐκ ἄν μου ἐτίθαναι ὁ ἀδελφός.

siveness (see Introductory Note on 12<sup>1-9</sup>). Mary rose up quickly from the seat of mourning (see on v. 20), and went to meet Jesus, as she had been bidden to do. The rec. (with A $\Theta$ ) has ἐγέμεται . . . ἔρχεται, but the aorist and imperfect tenses are significant.

30. αἴσω δὲ κτλ. It is useless to make guesses as to why Jesus had not yet come into the village. He may have been resting at the spot where Martha met Him first.

ἐτι εἰς οἶκον by AD $\Gamma$ \Delta, but ins.  $\aleph$ CW.  $\Theta$  has ἐτι τῷ τόφῳ.

At this point Moffatt places vv. 18, 19. See on v. 18 above.

31. The friends who had come out from Jerusalem to mourn with the sisters (see v. 19), when they saw Mary rise up (see on v. 20) and leave the house suddenly without giving any explanation, supposed that she had gone to wait at the tomb, a common habit of mourners.

κλαίειν does not indicate silent weeping (cf. v. 35), but the unrestrained wailing of Orientals. It is used elsewhere, as here, of wailing for the dead; cf. Mk. 5<sup>38</sup> (of the wailing for Jairus' daughter), Lk. 7<sup>33</sup> (for the widow of Nain's son), Acts 9<sup>39</sup> (for Dorcas), Mt. 2<sup>18</sup> (Rachel wailing for her children). See on 16<sup>20</sup>.

βόησεντες. So  $\aleph$ C $\Gamma$ \Delta LW; the rec., with AC $\Gamma$ \Delta $\Theta$ , has λέγοντες.

32. When Mary met Jesus, she fell at His feet, impulsive and demonstrative creature as she was, and said, as Martha had said, "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died" (see on v. 21). She is described by Lk. (10<sup>39</sup>) as sitting at His feet for instruction, and later she anointed His feet (12<sup>3</sup>), probably for the second time (see Introductory Note on 12<sup>3-9</sup>), πρὸς τοὺς πόδας. So  $\aleph$ C $\Gamma$ \Delta LW, but AC $\Gamma$ \Delta $\Theta$  give εἰς τοὺς πόδας, πρὸς is the preposition used by Mk. (5<sup>38</sup> 7<sup>38</sup>) when telling of Jairus and the Syrophenician woman falling at the feet of Jesus. So, too, it is used in Rev. 1<sup>17</sup> and (in the ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ πνεύματι. Cf. v. 38 ἐμβριμήσας ἐν ἑαυτῷ, this being the only other occurrence of the verb in Jn. In its primary sense, ἐμβριμήσας is "to snort" like a horse (cf. Abesch. Septem c. Theb. 461); while in the LXX it means "to show indignation" (Dan. 11<sup>30</sup>), ἐμβριμήματα being used of the anger of Yahweh at Lam. 2<sup>6</sup>. A similar use of the cognate words occurs Ps. 71<sup>8</sup> (Aq.), Isa. 17<sup>18</sup> (Symm.), and Ezek. 21<sup>22</sup>. In Mk. 14<sup>6</sup> ἐνεβριμήσατο αὐτῇ carries the idea of indignation: "they roared against her," sc. in their indignation at the waste of the ointment. But in Mk. 14<sup>9</sup>, Mt. 9<sup>30</sup>, ἐμβριμησάμενος αὐτῷ and ἐνεβριμήσατο αὐτοῖς can hardly mean that Jesus was angry with the leper or the blind men whom He had cured: "strictly charged them" is the rendering of the R.V., but it is doubtful if this adequately represents ἐμβριμήσας, or if any Greek parallel can be cited for such a meaning.

All three occasions on which this rare word is applied to Jesus (Mk. 14<sup>6</sup>, Mt. 9<sup>30</sup>, Jn. 11<sup>30</sup>, 20<sup>13</sup>) were occasions, as we must suppose, of intense emotion. The cure of a leper, the restoring of sight to the blind, the preparation of Himself for so stupendous a task as the raising of Lazarus from the tomb, must have involved the output of spiritual energy in a degree which we cannot measure. The narrative of vv. 33-43 reveals, as no other passage in the N.T. does, that the working of "miracles" (however we try to explain them) was not achieved without spiritual effort or without the agitation of the human spirit of Jesus. "He shuddered" (ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτῷ): "He shed tears" (ἰδάκρυτον). And the verb ἐμβριμήσας may well express the physical effect of powerful emotion upon His voice. It represents the inarticulate sounds which escape men when they are physically overwhelmed by a great wave of emotion. And Jesus, the Perfect Man, experienced this as He experienced all else that is human and not sinful. As He charged the leper and the blind whom He had relieved to tell nothing of what had been done for them, He stumbled over the words, the loud and harsh tone of His voice indicating His agitation. "He roared at them" would not exactly convey the sense, for that would suggest violence of speech or of command. But it is nearer the primary meaning of ἐνεβριμήσατο than "strictly charged them." So in the present passage "He groaned in spirit" is probably the best rendering; but, if not explained, it might suggest the groaning of one in sorrow, and this ἐνεβριμήσατο cannot mean. But the groaning, like the tears and the shuddering, were the outward and bodily indications of a tremendous spiritual agitation and effort.<sup>1</sup> ἐμβριμήσας ἐν ἑαυτῷ, He arrived at the tomb, not "indignant" at anything nor "groaning" with loud outbursts of sorrow, but making those inarticulate sounds which are the expression of mental agitation and strain.

D has the variant ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι ὡς ἐνεβριμησάμενος, which d renders "conturbatus est spiritu sicut ira plenus." But, as has been said, anger is not primarily suggested by the verb ἐμβριμήσας, nor does the idea of Jesus being angry enter into the story of the Raising of Lazarus.<sup>2</sup> ἐνεβριμήσατο τῷ πνεύματι καὶ ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτῶν. Cf. 12<sup>27</sup> ἢ ψυχῇ μου τεταράχαι and 13<sup>27</sup> ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐταράχθη τῷ πνεύματι. Putting these passages side by side, it is not easy to make a distinction between the use of ψυχῇ and πνεύματι. In each case the "soul" of Jesus, as we would say, was troubled. So again Jn. tells of His death in the words παρόκεον τὸ πνεῦμα (19<sup>30</sup>); see note in loc.; but he makes Jesus speak of His death in 10<sup>17</sup> in the words ἐγὼ τίθημι τὴν ψυχὴν μου. We have not now to do with the psychological doctrine of Paul; we are only concerned with the Johannine use of the two words πνεῦμα and ψυχῇ; and while recognising that πνεῦμα suggests what is Divine (4<sup>14</sup>), and that ψυχῇ suggests the bodily life (12<sup>27</sup>) in Jn. as in other writers, it is not legitimate to differentiate them sharply in a verse like that before us. The Lucan parallelism (Lk. 14<sup>7</sup>):

shows that the words may be used synonymously; and the Johannine usage agrees with this. See on 12<sup>27</sup>.

Μήγουνον ἀδελφῆ, sc. (apparently) Martha and Mary, who prefer their reply with the κύριος of respect (see on v. 3).

36. ἔδαρμον ἐ Ἰησοῦ. κDΘ prefix καὶ το ἔδαρμον, but it is quite in the style of Jn. to begin the sentence without any conjunction. δαρμῖος does not occur again in the N.T. It means "to shed tears," but not to "weil." The word in Lk. 19<sup>f</sup>, where Jesus "wept" over Jerusalem, is ἑλαυνον: cf. Heb. 5<sup>f</sup>, of Gethsemane, μετὰ κρονῆς ἰσχυροῦ καὶ δαρμῖου.

It is not said in the Gospels that Jesus "laughed," while it is told here, and suggested elsewhere, that He "wept." But to draw the inference that He never laughed would be misleading. To be incapable of laughter would be to fall short of the perfection of manhood. This was perceived by the compilers of the apocryphal gospels: cf. Gospel of Thomas, A 8, ἔγλασε τὸ παιδίον μετὰ, and Pseudo-Matth. 31, "Jesus laeto vultu subridens."

The ethics of Jesus were not those of the Stoics, and Jn. brings out, perhaps more clearly than the Synoptists, that He did not aim at the Stoic ἀπάθεια. Juvenal finely says of human tears, "haec nostri pars optima sensus" (Sat. xv. 133).

38. The visitors from Jerusalem were impressed by the sight of Jesus weeping, and said to each other, "See, how He loved him," how great a friend of Lazarus He was! Cf. vv. 3, 5, for ἔφαθε.

37. Some of them, however (δδ), expressed surprise that He who had cured the blind man at Jerusalem (9<sup>b</sup> 7) could not have kept His friend from death. Like Martha (v. 21) and Mary (v. 32), they seem to think that if Jesus had been present, Lazarus would not have died, although they are not so sure of it. They are not contemplating any raising of Lazarus from the dead; such a thing does not occur to them. They refer merely to a healing miracle at Jerusalem, of which they had recently heard, and which they may have witnessed.

A reference here to the Galilean miracles of raising from the dead (Mk. 5<sup>mt</sup>, Lk. 7<sup>11c</sup>) could hardly have been resisted by a writer who was inventing the story of the raising of Lazarus. But these citizens of Jerusalem may not have heard of any Galilean miracles.

39. Αἰνεῖ δὲ Ἰησοῦς Ἄρατε τὸν λίθον. λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ ἀδελφὴ τοῦ τετελευτημέτου Μάρθα Κύριε, ᾗ ἡ δέξει· τεταραγίος γὰρ ἔστιν.

MSS. except Θ and 33 (which, however, preserves some good readings in this chapter; cf. v. 20) is contrary to the general usage of Jn. (see on 1<sup>29</sup>).

Again (πάλιν) the agitation of Jesus was noticeable (ἐπιβραμύμενος ἐν λαυγῶ, see on v. 33), as He was approaching the tomb of Lazarus. It was a cave, such as was often used as a burial place (cf. Gen. 23<sup>19</sup>, Isa. 22<sup>14</sup>, 2 Chron. 16<sup>14</sup>), the cavern being sometimes natural, sometimes artificial. The body was either let down through a horizontal opening, as is the European practice, or placed in a tomb cut in the face of the rock. In either case the opening was closed by a stone, which had to be a heavy one to keep wild animals out. Cf. 20<sup>1</sup>, Mk. 15<sup>46</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>60</sup>, Lk. 24<sup>2</sup>. If the cave were a subterranean one, then λίθος ἐπέκειτο ἐπ' αὐτῷ must be rendered "a stone lay upon it"; if it were cut in the face of the rock, then the stone lay against the opening.

The raising of Lazarus (vv. 39-44)

ἡ ἀδελφὴ τοῦ τετελευτημέτου, "the sister of the deceased." τελευτῖος occurs only here in Jn., and is infrequent in the N.T. (cf. Mk. 9<sup>10</sup>). The rec. substitutes the more usual τεθνήσκων.

Martha, although she had joined the party which was visiting the tomb, had no thought of the resuscitation of her brother, and, with her strong sense of decorum (Lk. 10<sup>40</sup>), was horrified to think of the exposure of the corpse, it being now the fourth day after death. She was sure that putrefaction had begun, which shows that the body had not been embalmed, but had only been bound with swaths (v. 44), spices being probably used, after the Jewish custom (cf. 19<sup>40</sup>). It is not alleged by Jn. that Martha was stating a fact when she said 34c, "he stinketh." That was merely what she thought must be the case.

δέξει is only used again in the Greek Bible at Ex. 8<sup>14</sup>, where it is used of the dead frogs.

τεταραγίος does not occur again in the Greek Bible (except by mistake for τήρατος in the A text of a Sam. 3<sup>9</sup>); but in Herod. ii. 89 τεταραγίος γενέσθαι is "to be four days dead,"

40. λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ Ἰησοῦς Οὐκ εἶπὸν σοι εἰ ἐν πίστει ὄψῃ τῆν as here. Lightfoot (Hor. Hebr. in loc.) cites a Jewish tradition to the effect that "for three days (after death) the spirit wanders about the sepulchre, expecting if it may return into the body. But when it sees that the form or aspect of the face is changed, then it hovers no more, but leaves the body to itself" (Beresh. Rabba, fol. 114. 3). The same tradition is found in The Rest of the Words of Baruch, § 9 (ed. Harris, p. 62).

For the three days of weeping, followed by four days of lamentation, see on v. 19; and cf. v. 17 for τεταραμένος.

40. Jesus rebukes Martha, although gently, for her lack of understanding: "Said I not to thee, that if thou believedst, thou shouldst see the glory of God?" Some commentators suppose the allusion to be to what Jesus had said about the sickness of Lazarus being for "the glory of God" (v. 4, where see note). But this was said to the disciples in Persea, not to Martha, and there is no hint that it was reported to her. Nor is there anything in v. 4 about belief being a condition precedent to the vision of the Divine glory. It is more probable that the reference is to Martha's previous conversation with Jesus (vv. 25-27), where she declared her belief in Him as the Christ. Such confessions of faith are elsewhere (see on 1st) answered by a benediction from Jesus, in which He promises to the faithful as a reward a vision of the Advent of the Son of Man in glory; and it may be that some such promise, although not recorded, was given by Jesus to Martha (see on 6th 10th).

ἐν πίστει ὄψῃ τῆν δόξαν τοῦ θεοῦ. Whatever this promised vision was to be, it was a spiritual vision that is meant, for ὄπτομαι is always used in Jn. of seeing spiritual or heavenly realities, as at 1st (where see note). Bearing this in mind, it is difficult to suppose that "thou shalt see the glory of God" means "thou shalt see Lazarus restored from the grave," nor is there any suggestion that Martha understood this to be the meaning. Paul's phrase that Christ was "raised from the dead, through the glory of the Father" (Rom. 6th), may, however, be thought to supply a parallel; and the "glory of God" which Martha was to "see" with the eye of faith would then be the Divine power which was put forth in the raising of Lazarus. Thus the larger promise of vision, which it may be supposed was given in response to Martha's confession of faith, was about to receive a special exemplification in the revival of her brother. Even this, however, is not free from difficulty; for it would suggest that the sight of the raising of Lazarus could have been perceived only by those who δίδων τοῦ Θεοῦ; 41. ἤκουσεν οὖν τὸν λίθον. ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἦεν τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς ἄνω καὶ εἶπεν Πάτερ, εὐχαριστῶ σοι ὅτι ἤκουσάς μου. 42. ἐγὼ δὲ ᾔδειν ἐν πάντοτε μου ἀκούειν· ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸν ὄχλον had faith (ἐν πίστει), whereas the whole tenor of the story is that all the bystanders, Jews and disciples alike, were witnesses of it. But perhaps what is meant is that only those who had faith could see the inner meaning of this "sign," and discern in it the exhibition of the Divine glory.

41. ἤκουσεν οὖν τὸν λίθον, as Jesus had bidden them (v. 39). The rec. text adds after λίθον the explanatory gloss οὗ ἦν ὁ τεθνηκυῖος κείμενος: om. BCB*J.D.

ἤγειρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς σου. This is a natural prelude to prayer or thanksgiving: cf. Ps. 121st ἤγειρε τοὺς ὀφθαλμούς μου εἰς τὸ ὄρος, and Lk. 18th. So, again, did Jesus "lift up His eyes" before His great high-priestly prayer (17th); and, as the Synoptists tell (Mk. 6th), before the blessing of the loaves, although Jn. omits this detail (see note on 6th). "To lift the eyes" is used more generally of any careful or deliberate gaze (see on 2nd 6th).

καὶ εἶπεν Πάτερ. It was thus that Jesus began His own prayers or thanksgivings, even as He taught men to begin with "Our Father." Other instances in Jn. are 12th 17th; and in the Synoptists, Mk. 14th, Lk. 22nd (cf. Mt. 26th), Lk. 10th (Mt. 12th), and Lk. 23rd. He does not say "Our Father," but "My Father" (see on 5th), or "Father," simply, as here; for His relation to the Eternal Godhead is different from that of men in general. Bengel's comment on the simple invocation Πάτερ (at 17th) is suggestive: "nomina dei non sunt cumulanda in oratione."

εὐχαριστῶ σοι. For εὐχαριστέω in Jn., see on 6th. ὅτι ἤκουσάς μου, "because Thou didst hear me," the aor. indicating some definite act of prayer, whether spoken or only mental, perhaps before v. 4. He gives thanks before the visible answer to His prayer, because He is in no doubt as to the issue. His prayers were always directed to the realisation of the Father's will (5th), and this cannot be frustrated (see on 12th).

For ἀκούειν with a gen. case as connoting sympathetic or appreciative hearing, see on 3rd.

42. ἐγὼ δὲ ᾔδειν κτλ., "But I knew that thou hearest me always." This is a phase of Jesus' consciousness of Himself as in unique relation with the Father, which appears all through the Fourth Gospel, and which is most explicitly stated in the words ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ὅσμει (10th).

We examine, first, the rec. reading ἀλλὰ διὰ τὸν ὄχλον τῶν

πιστωσῶντα ἔλεον, "but for the sake of the crowd standing round, I said it"; i.e. He said aloud ἐθαυμάσωσιν σου ὅτι ἤκουσάς μου, not merely because of thankfulness to His Father for an answer to His prayer (for of this He had been sure), but because He wished the bystanders to appreciate the true secret of His power. The prayer of Elijah, "Hear me, O Lord, that this people may know that thou art God" (1 Kings 18<sup>37</sup>), is not a true parallel, for Elijah had not the certainty of his prayer being answered as He wished, that Jesus had. See, however, 12<sup>20</sup>, where Jesus is represented as saying that the voice from heaven was not for His sake, but for the sake of the wondering crowd; and cf. 17<sup>12</sup>. ἵνα πιστώσωσιν ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας, "that they might believe (cf. 17<sup>8</sup>-<sup>9</sup>) that thou hast sent me." This, according to the rec. text, was the purpose with which Jesus had uttered aloud His thanking and His assurance that the Father always heard Him, z. that He might fix the attention of the bystanders upon His claim, that He was "sent" by the Father (see on 3<sup>17</sup>; and cf. 6<sup>57</sup>). For the reiterated claim, σὺ με ἀπέστειλας, cf. 17<sup>8</sup>-<sup>9</sup>, II. 22. 22. It is difficult to accept the rec. text as exactly representing the motive behind the words ἐθαυμάσωσιν σου ὅτι ἤκουσάς μου. Without the addition of v. 42, these words commend themselves to every reader as a sublime expression of thankfulness. But v. 42 represents them as having been uttered in order to impress the crowd. Perhaps we might take v. 42 as a comment or interpretative gloss of the evangelist rather than as a saying of Jesus.<sup>1</sup>

Probably, however, the rec. text is corrupt. In one uncial (Θ) there is a variant reading which we take to represent the original, viz.: εἰς τὸν ὄχλον τὸν παρεστῶτά μου, ἵνα πηλ.

First, παρεστῶτα is read not only by Θ and the allied cursives 28, but also by 235 and the ninth-century uncial A. Further, the Vulgate G has adstantem, nec circumstantem (which is the usual rendering of the rec. περιστῶντα). Again, περιστῶντα is never used by Jn. elsewhere, and in N.T. only at Acts 25<sup>7</sup> "to surround him" (used transitively), and at 2 Tim. 2<sup>18</sup>, Tit. 3<sup>1</sup> "to shun"; while Jn. has παρεστηκώς at 18<sup>24</sup> and παρεστῶτα at 19<sup>28</sup>. For περιστημι followed by a dative (as in παρεστῶτά μου), cf. Acts 1<sup>10</sup> 9<sup>20</sup> 27<sup>28</sup>. On all grounds, παρεστῶτά μου, "standing by me," is preferable to περιστῶντα, "standing round," which would be a unique instance in the N.T. of this intransitive sense.

Secondly, the reading of Θ, μοιποιῶ, might readily be corrupted into the rec. εἶπον; and the verb ποιῶ gives us a meaning as unexceptionable as ἔλεον is difficult. At 5<sup>38</sup> Jesus says τὸ ἔργον ἃ ποιῶ μαρτυρεῖ περὶ ἐμοῦ ὅτι ὁ πατήρ με ἀπέστειλεν (cf. also 10<sup>38</sup> 39). And so here, reading ποιῶ, we translate "because of the multitude standing by I do it, that they may believe that thou didst send me." There is thus no intimation that the thanksgiving of Jesus in v. 41 was uttered only to impress the bystanders. The words of v. 41 were the inmost expression of His personal life. Rather in v. 42 does He speak of the purpose with which He is about to perform the sign that will convince the onlookers of His Divine mission.

The only authority, as it seems, corroborating ποιῶ, the reading of Θ, is the Armenian version, which, for the widely attested "I said it," gives "I do it." This appears also in two Armenian MSS. of Ephraem's Commentary on Tatian's Diatessaron,<sup>1</sup> as well as in a homily on the Raising of Lazarus ascribed to Hippolytus, part of which is extant only in Armenian.<sup>2</sup> The text of Θ (whose home is in the neighbourhood of Armenia) has been thought to show special affinities to the Armenian version; and it is possible that "I do it" in Jn. 11<sup>49</sup> has been taken over by an Armenian (or Georgian)<sup>3</sup> scribe from the version with which he was most familiar, not only in Θ, but in Ephraem's Commentary and in the Hippolytus homily. If this be so, the reading ποιῶ has its roots in the Armenian version, the sources of which are imperfectly known.

It has been shown<sup>4</sup> that the Armenian version of the Gospels rests in part on the Old Syriac. In this instance, however, the Syriac gives no support to ποιῶ, the Armenian deserting the Syriac here as in other instances;<sup>5</sup> and it is probable that here some Greek authority is behind the Armenian vulgate.

The attestation of παρεστῶτά μου ποιῶ is undoubtedly weak, but the phrase could so readily be corrupted into περιστῶντα ἔλεον (which has the non-Johannine περιστῶντα as well as the disconcerting ἔλεον), that παρεστῶτά μου ποιῶ has been adopted in this edition as probably the original Greek.

43. και ταυτα ειπών φωνῆ μεγάλης ἐκραύγασεν Λάζαρε, δεῦρο ἔξω.

43. φωνῆ μεγάλη ἐκραύγασεν κτλ. As in the Synoptic accounts of the raising of Jairus' daughter (Mk. 5<sup>41</sup>) and of the widow of Nain's son (Lk. 7<sup>16</sup>), the dead person was recalled to life by an authoritative command from Jesus Himself. This is repeated with emphasis at 12<sup>17</sup>. It is His voice which, being heard by the dead as addressing them personally, is spoken of as the effective instrument of their resurrection (cf. 5<sup>28, 29</sup>).

The verb κραυγάζειν occurs only once in the LXX, and there, as here, is associated with "a loud voice"; ὁ λαὸς ἐκραύγασε φωνῆ μεγάλη (Esth. 3<sup>18</sup>) describes the joyful shouts of the people. The verb is found in the N.T. (in the best texts) only in Jn., who has it six times (cf. 12<sup>18</sup>, 18<sup>40</sup>, 19<sup>6</sup>, 12, 19), and at Mt. 12<sup>18</sup>, where the words of Isa. 42<sup>1</sup> are rendered "He shall not cry aloud" (οὐδὲ κραυγάζει).<sup>1</sup> It is only here that the verb is used of an utterance of Jesus.

Two of the Words from the Cross are said to have been uttered φωνῆ μεγάλῃ (Mk. 15<sup>34, 37</sup>); and in Rev. 1<sup>10</sup> the voice of the glorified Son of Man is described as φωνῆ μεγάλῃ, as is also (Mt. 24<sup>31</sup>) the voice of the Trumpet at the coming in glory of the Son of Man. Cf. Rev. 21<sup>3</sup>. Jn. represents the voice of Jesus when He summoned Lazarus from the grave as in like manner "a great voice."

Λάζαρε (note the personal call), δεῦρο ἔξω, huc foras, "Come out." δεῦρο occurs only here in Jn.

44. The rec. text, with κΑC*WΓΔΘ, prefixes καὶ ἐξήλθεν, but om. BC*E. The absence of a conjunction is quite in Jn.'s manner.

The dead body had been bound as to feet and hands with swathes (cf. 19<sup>39</sup>), and the face had been bound with a napkin (cf. 20<sup>7</sup>), after the Jewish custom. It is idle to speculate as to how the evangelist means us to understand the emergence from the tomb. The bandages would, seemingly, forbid the free use of the limbs; and they had to be loosened (λύσατε αὐτόν) as soon as Lazarus appeared.

The word κειρία appears elsewhere in the Greek Bible only at Prov. 7<sup>16</sup>, where it stands for part of the covering of a bed. Moulton-Milligan (s.v.) note its occurrence in the form κειρία in a medical papyrus. However, there is no doubt as to its meaning here, sc. "bandage" or "swathe."

44. ἐξήλθεν ὁ τεθνεὺς δεδεμένος τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰς χεῖρας κειρία, καὶ ἡ ὄφης αὐτοῦ σουδάριον περιεβέβη. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς λύσατε αὐτόν καὶ ἔφερε αὐτὸν ἕτοιμον.

45. Πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, οἱ ἐλθόντες πρὸς τὴν Μαριάμ BC*E. Lazarus had ἔφερε αὐτόν. ΜΑΡΙΑΜ οἰκ. αὐτόν. Θ has λύσατε αὐτόν.

For ὄφης, see on 7<sup>28</sup>: ἔφερε αὐτόν ὄφης is equivalent to "let him go home." This simple and kindly counsel is comparable with that of Mk. 5<sup>28</sup>; cf. also Lk. 9<sup>18</sup>.

It is noteworthy how few are the apocryphal legends about Lazarus. A priori, it might have been expected that pious fancy would have delighted in depicting his experiences in the unseen world, and his sayings when he was restored to earth. But there is little of the kind. Eriphanus says that among the traditions with which he was familiar, there was one which gave the age of Lazarus at thirty, and alleged that he lived for thirty years longer after his resuscitation (Her. lxxvi. 34). There is nothing impossible in that. The grim legend (cited by Trench, without giving his authority) that after Lazarus returned from the tomb, he was never known to smile, is probably a mediæval fancy. The Anaphora of Pilate (B 5) says that Lazarus was raised from the dead on a Sabbath day, an idea which is probably due to imperfect recollection of the healings in cc. 5 and 9. A Sahidic sermon in F. Robinson's Coptic Apocryphal Gospel, p. 170 f., represents the miracle as having been wrought by Jesus in order to convince Thomas, who expressed a desire to see a man raised from the grave; and that Jesus told him that His action in calling Lazarus forth was a figure of what would happen at the Resurrection on the Last Day.

The impression made on the bystanders (vv. 45, 46)

45. Many of the spectators became believers in Jesus because of the raising of Lazarus (cf. 12<sup>11</sup>), just as many had become believers after former healings (7<sup>22</sup>). Some of them reported the story to the Pharisees.

πολλοὶ οὖν ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, οἱ ἐλθόντες κτλ. must be rendered "many, therefore, of the Jews, sc. those who had come to Mary (vv. 19, 31), and had seen what He did, believed on Him." The "many" are defined as those who had come to visit Mary.

D for οἱ ἐλθόντες reads τῶν ἐλθόντων, altering the sense, which then would be that many of the Jews who had come to visit the sisters believed on Jesus in consequence of the καὶ θεωρούμενος ὁ ἰσχυροῦς, ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν 46. τοὺς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπέβησαν πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους καὶ εἶπαν αὐτοῖς ὁ ἰσχυροῦς Ἰησοῦς.

47. Συνήγαγον οὖν οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι συνέδριον, καὶ miracle, but not all of them. Some (v. 46) went off to report it to the Pharisees, the implication being that they were not among those who believed in Him, and that their action was prompted by hostility or malevolence. But ἀπέβητες is undoubtedly the true reading, and it conveys the meaning that the many Jews (the phrase is repeated from v. 19) who had come to omdole with the sisters were all convinced by the miracle of the claims of Jesus.

Syr. sin. has a reading unsupported by the uncials, sc. "Many Jews that came unto Jesus, because of Mary, from that hour believed in Jesus."

ἐπίστευον εἰς αὐτόν. For this phrase, see on 4th.

46. τοὺς δὲ ἐξ αὐτῶν κτλ. There is nothing to prove that this action of some of the citizens who had come to Bethany and had been convinced of the claims of Jesus by the raising of Lazarus was malevolent. ἔξ means no more here than "however."

ἀπέβησαν πρὸς τοὺς Φαρισαίους, "went off to the Pharisees," i.e. to the religious leaders who formed the most zealous and orthodox party in the Sanhedrim (see on 7th). An event of such religious significance as the miracle at Bethany seemed to be would naturally be brought before them, and those who reported it probably did so without meaning to injure Jesus. See on 5th for a similar case.

If the plural ἰ before ἰσχυροῦς is to be pressed, it means that not only the raising of Lazarus, but other actions of Jesus which they had observed or of which they had heard, were included in their report (cf. πολλὰ σημεῖα, v. 47).

(vv. 47-53)

47. οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, sc. the principal members of the Sanhedrim (see on 7th). From this time onwards, the chief priests take the lead in the arraignment of Jesus. These leaders summoned an informal council.

ἔλεγον ἑνὶ ψαύματι, ὅτι οὗτος ὁ ἀνθρώπος πολλὰ ποιεῖ σημεῖα; 48. Ἴδὲ ἀφώμενος αὐτὸν οὕτως, πάντες πιστεύουσιν εἰς αὐτόν, καὶ θεόουτος οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι καὶ ἀρῶσιν ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν τόπον καὶ τὸ ἔθνος.

συνήγαγον. . . συνέδριον, the Ferrar cursives adding the explanatory gloss κατὰ τὸν Ἰησοῦ. This is the only occurrence of the word συνέδριον in Jn.

καὶ ἔλεγον ἑνὶ ψαύματι; "They were saying (to each other), What are we doing?" sc. Why are we doing nothing? The parallel Acts 4th τί ποιήσωμεν; "What are we to do?" has a slightly different tinge of meaning. ψαύωμεν in the present tense cannot be rendered "What shall we do?"<sup>1</sup>

ὅτι, οὗτος ὁ ἀνθρώπος κτλ., "for this person is doing many signs"; the turn of phrase expressing contempt. For "many signs" in Jerusalem, cf. 2nd; but the reference here is to the report brought by those who had been present at the raising of Lazarus (v. 46).

48. The Jewish leaders were anxious lest the growing fame of Jesus should suggest to those who were being convinced of His claims, that He was the national Deliverer of their expectation (cf. 6th); and that thus a rebellion should break out, which would call down stern punishment from their Roman rulers. It was, indeed, the charge preferred against Him before Pilate that He claimed to be the "King of the Jews" (cf. 18th).

ἴδὲ ἀφώμενος αὐτόν οὕτως κτλ., "if we let Him go thus," i.e. without intervening and curbing His activities, "every one will believe in Him" (cf. v. 45).

καὶ θεόουτος οἱ Ῥωμαῖοι. This has a verbal resemblance to the LXX of Dan. 11th καὶ ἤξουσιν Ῥωμαῖοι, but there is no allusion here to that passage. "Romans" are not mentioned by the Synoptists (cf. 19th).

καὶ ἀρῶσιν ἡμῶν καὶ τὸν τόπον καὶ τὸ ἔθνος. The position of ἡμῶν is emphatic. "They will suppress our place and our nation." ὁ τόπος seems to mean the Holy Place, i.e. the Temple, with which the chief priests were specially concerned. Cf. 4th and Mt. 24th, Acts 6th, 24 21st. At 2 Macc. 5th the τόπος is the Temple, and the fortunes of the τόπος and the ἔθνος are associated, as they are here.

The apprehension attributed in this verse to the Jewish leaders, of the destruction of the Temple and the nation, might, no doubt, be regarded as a prophecy after the event, for Jerusalem had fallen twenty years or more before the Fourth Gospel was written. But, on the other hand, there is an antecedent probability that such anxieties must always have been present, during the first century, to the minds of the chief priests, who were well aware that any Messianic rebellion would be sternly repressed by their Roman masters.

49. εἰς δὲ τῆς ἐξ αὐτῶν Καϊάφας, ἀρχιερεὺς ἑνὸς ἑταυτοῦ ἐκείνου, εἶπεν αὐτοῖς ὧραὶς οὐκ οἴδατε οὐδὲν, 50. οὐδὲ λογίζεσθε ὅτι συμφέρον

49. εἰς δὲ τῆς ἐξ αὐτῶν. For ἐκ before a gen. pl. in sentences of this kind, see on 1st.

Καϊάφας, ἀρχιερεὺς ἑν. The office of high priest, under the ancient Hebrew laws, was for life; but in Roman times the high priest only held his position at the pleasure of the imperial authority. He might be high priest for one year only, or for a term of years, according as he pleased his Roman masters. Annas was high priest from 6 A.D. to 15 A.D., when he was deposed by the procurator Valerius Gratus. But he retained his influence throughout his life, and several of his sons held the office after him. In the year 18 A.D., Joseph Caiaphas (as Josephus calls him), the son-in-law of Annas, succeeded to this great position, which he held until 36 A.D., thus being high priest throughout the whole period of Pontius Pilate's procuratorship. His name is not mentioned by Mk., but he appears as the principal person at the trial of Jesus in Mt. 26th; see further on 18th.

The phrase ἀρχιερεὺς ἑνὸς ἑταυτοῦ ἐκείνου is applied to him thrice (v. 51, 18th) by Jn. This does not imply that Jn. supposed mistakenly that the high priest was appointed annually, like the Asiarchs. But the phrase is repeated with emphasis, "high priest in that fateful year" (for such a use of ἐκείνου, cf. 1st 20th), because Jn. thinks it so remarkable that the high priest, whose duty it was to enter the holy of holies and offer the atonement for that year, should unconsciously utter a prophecy of the efficacy of the Atonement which was presently to be offered on the Cross. This was the acceptable year of the Lord.<sup>1</sup> ὧραὶς οὐκ οἴδατε οὐδὲν κτλ. The council was an informal one, and Caiaphas was not presiding. But he speaks very sharply to the other members, for their irresolution. "You people" (ὧραὶς is contemptuous) "know nothing at all"; you do not understand that it is in your interests that the man should die. Why hesitate about it? This is the obvious policy. Caiaphas was evidently a strong man, who knew his own mind; and the sharpness of his speech provides an illustration of what Josephus says about Sadducee manners: "The behaviour of the Sadducees to one another is rather rude, and their intercourse with their equals is rough, as with strangers"

(Bell. Jud. ii. viii. 14). For the relation of the Sadducee or priestly party to the Pharisees, see on 7th.

50. οὐδὲ λογίζεσθε. So *κ*ABDLW, as against the rec. *δ*α-λογίζεσθε. Neither verb occurs again in Jn.; the simple verb being customary in Paul, and the compound in the Synoptists.

ὅτι συμφέρον ἑμῶν (cf. 16th for the constr.; and cf. 18th for ἵνα . . . ἀποθῆγῃ), "that it is expedient for you," perhaps spoken contemptuously.

BDLT, with some Latin and Coptic vs., have ἑμῶν. ἑμῶν is read by AAΘW, with Latin, Syriac (including Syr. sin. and Syr. cur.), and Coptic support (including O).

ἵνα εἰς ἀθρόωτος ἀποθῆγῃ ἑνὸς τοῦ λαοῦ κτλ.: a fine sentiment in its proper setting, and one which could be copiously illustrated from history. Caiaphas, from his point of view, was giving politic if cynical advice. Better that one man die than that the nation perish.

λαός is used by Jn. only in this saying of Caiaphas (repeated 18th); ἔθνος is used by him only in this passage and at 18th. ἔθνος has reference to the Jews as a political unit, organised for civic and social life; λαός is used when their relation to God, as His peculiar people, is in view. But it is as impossible to provide exact and exclusive definitions of these two Greek words as of the English words "nation" and "people." It is doubtful if in this verse any stress should be laid on the difference between ἔθνος and λαός. ἔθνος is used of the Jewish nation at Lk. 7th 23rd and elsewhere; while ἔθνος in the plural is always in sharp contrast to λαός.

51. This is one of those editorial comments of which Jn. gives his readers many (cf. Intro., p. xxxiv). The words of Caiaphas, he notes, were an unconscious prophecy, for it was true in a deeper sense than Caiaphas understood that the Death of Jesus would be expedient for the Jews, as well as for the wider circle of all God's children.

The Jews ascribed a measure of prophetic faculty to the high priest, when, after being duly vested, he "inquired of Yahweh" (Ex. 28th, Lev. 8th, Num. 27th). Josephus has left on record that he, as a priest, claimed to have power to read the future (B. J. iii. viii. 3). And Philo says that the true priest is always potentially a prophet (de const. principum, 8). The word *ε*πιπροφήτευσεν is applied to Zacharias the priest (Lk. 1st), just as it is here (its only occurrence in Jn.) to Caiaphas: "He, being high priest that year (see on v. 49), prophesied."

Caiaphas spoke not "of himself," but being, as it were, inspired by the Spirit of God, *ε*πιπροφήτευσεν. See on 19th.

ἀπολόγηται. 51. τούτο δὲ ἀπὸ τῶν αἰσίων, ἀλλὰ ἐργαζομένη ἐν τοῦ ἐναντιοῦ ἐκείνου ἐκπορεύουσα ὅτι ἤμαλλεν Ἰησοῦς ἀποθνήσκειν ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους, 52. καὶ οὐκ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὰ ὅτι ἤμαλλεν Ἰησοῦς ἀποθνήσκειν κτλ. For ἤμαλλεν (ABDLWΘ) κ has ἔμαλλεν. The def. art. before Ἰησοῦς is omitted by κABDLW (see on 1<sup>29</sup>).

Note that ἐκπορεύουσα (κBDLΘ) is the true form of the aorist, not προσέρχουσα, with the rec. text. The augment precedes the preposition, there being no simple verb φύγωμαι.

For ἤμαλλεν, used of the Death of Jesus, cf. 12<sup>28</sup> 18<sup>28</sup>. It conveys in these passages the sense of predestined inevitableness, which is always present to the mind of Jn. (see on 2<sup>4</sup> 3<sup>14</sup>; and cf. Introd., p. cii). See also for μάλλεν on 4<sup>47</sup> 6<sup>21</sup>.

ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους. See for ὑπὲρ on 1<sup>29</sup>; and cf. 6<sup>24</sup> 10<sup>11</sup>. Jn. alters the phrase of Caiaphas ὑπὲρ τοῦ λαοῦ (v. 50) to ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἔθνους, perhaps because he wishes to suggest that by their rejection of Jesus the Jews had forfeited their privilege as the λαός of God. But he is prone, when he repeats a phrase, to alter it slightly (see on 3<sup>19</sup>); and in any case, as we have seen, we cannot distinguish very sharply between ἔθνος and λαός.

62. The Death of Jesus was not only on behalf of Jews. This is the teaching of Jn. Cf. 3<sup>16</sup> 10<sup>10</sup> 12<sup>32</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>2</sup>, as a few of the passages which make this plain. It is natural that in a Gospel written amid Greek surroundings and primarily for Greek readers, the scope of the Christian message of salvation as extending beyond the borders of Judaism should be explained with special emphasis.

Its larger purpose was "to gather into one the scattered children of God," ἵνα καὶ τὰ τέκνα τοῦ θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα συναγάγῃ εἰς ἓν. The phrase looks onward to the future, when those who are potentially God's children shall have become τέκνα θεοῦ, begotten of God, through faith in Jesus (see on 1<sup>12</sup>, 12 for τέκνα θεοῦ in Jn.); and it looks onward also to the more distant future, when all these children of God shall be gathered into one. It should be observed again at this point (see on 1<sup>16</sup>) that the ideas of the universal Fatherhood of God, and of the whole human family as His children, are not explicit in Jn. All who will "believe" may become His children; but this faith is presupposed.

τὰ διεσκορπισμένα. These potential children of God are "scattered," as Jn. writes. They are, to his mind, in every part of the world. The verb διασκορπίζω does not occur again in Jn., but is frequently used in the LXX of the scattering of Israel among the nations, which is a thought foreign to the τέκνα τοῦ θεοῦ τὰ διεσκορπισμένα συναγάγῃ εἰς ἓν. 53. ἀπ' ἐκείνης ὁν τῆς ἡμέρας ἐβουλεύσαντο ἵνα ἀποκτείνωσι αὐτόν.

54. Ὁ σὺν Ἰησοῦς σθένει παρηγορεῖ περὶστέται ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις, ἀλλὰ ἀπέβλεπεν εἰς τὴν χώραν ἐγγὺς τῆς ἁρήμου, εἰς Ἐφραϊμ context here; for the "children of God who are scattered abroad" are not all of Israel. Jn. has σκορπίζω at 10<sup>13</sup>; but there the allusion is to the wolf scattering the flock, of which there is no suggestion in the present passage.

There seems to be a reminiscence of this verse in the Didache (ix. 4), where mention is made of the Eucharistic loaf: ὡσαύτῃ ἦν τούτο τὸ κλάσμα διεσκορπισμένον ἐναντίον τῶν ὀφθῶν καὶ συναχθῆν ἐγένετο ἐν, ὅσα συναχθῆναι σου ἡ ἐκκλησία ἀπὸ τῶν περὶ τῶν τῆς γῆς εἰς τὴν σὴν βασιλείαν. See on 6<sup>12</sup>.

συναγάγῃ εἰς ἓν. Cf. 10<sup>16</sup>, δὲ με ἀγάγειν κτλ., where see note. For the nature of this unity, see on 17<sup>21</sup>; and cf. Eph. 2<sup>14</sup>.

53. ἀπ' ἐκείνης ὁν τῆς ἡμέρας κτλ. "From that day, therefore (sc. because they were impressed by the advice of Caiaphas), their plan was to kill Him." The hostility of the ecclesiastical authorities had been gradually intensified; it began with the cures on Sabbath days, and the claim of Jesus to Divine authority (3<sup>18</sup> 7<sup>28</sup> 9<sup>22</sup>); but after the raising of Lazarus, and Caiaphas' warning, they came to the decision (ἐβουλεύσαντο ἵνα) that He must die (cf. 12<sup>10</sup> for a similar phrase).

For ἡμέρας, L reads ὥρας: there is a similar variant at 10<sup>27</sup>, where see note. Jn. is prone to note the time at which things happened: see Introd., p. cii.

Jesus withdraws to the north-east of Jerusalem (vv. 54-57)

54. ὁ σὺν (because of the machinations of His enemies) Ἰησοῦς σθένει παρηγορεῖ (see for this word on 7<sup>7</sup>) περὶστέται (see on 7<sup>7</sup>) ἐν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις (the hostile Jews); see on 1<sup>18</sup> 5<sup>20</sup>.

He withdrew "to the country near the desert," i.e. the hill country to the north-east of Jerusalem, which was thinly populated. The town or village of Ephraim is not mentioned elsewhere in the N.T. "But it is mentioned by Josephus (Bell. Jud. iv. ix. 9), in connexion with the mountain district (ἡ ὄρειος) north of Jerusalem, as a small fort (πολιχίον). . . . Josephus couples it with Bethel, and it is a coincidence that where it occurs in 2 Chron. 13<sup>23</sup> (τῆν Ἐφραϊμ) Bethel is named with it. The two places were probably not far apart."<sup>1</sup> It is generally identified with El-Tayibeh, 4 miles north-east of λεγόμενον βέθηλ, ἡκεῖ ἦσαν μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν. 55. ἦν δὲ ἔγγυς τὸ πᾶσαι τῶν Ἰουδαίων, καὶ ἐπέβησαν πολλοὶ εἰς Ἱερουσόλυμα ἐκ τῆς χώρας πρὸ τοῦ πᾶσαι, ἵνα ἀγιάσωσι ἑαυτοῦς. 56. ἔβησαν οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἔλεγον μετ' ἀλλήλων ἐν τῇ ἑραφί ἰσχυροῦται Ἦ δοκεῖ ἡμῖν;

Bethel, on the road from Samaria to Jericho, from which it is distant about 15 miles.

Cod. Bezae after χώραν inserts σαμφοριμ (Sappurim). Harris<sup>1</sup> ingeniously suggests that Σαμφοριμ "is a mere corruption from the Syriac words answering to what's come is Ephraim," which were inserted as a gloss, σαμ standing for the Hebrew שפ. Sepphoris in Galilee has been supposed by some to be indicated by Σαμφοριμ, but this place is too far away to suit the conditions of the narrative.

ἐκ τῆς χώρας. Many went up "from the country parts," ἢ χώρα not referring here to the Ephraim district (v. 54).

ἵνα ἀγιάσωσι ἑαυτοῦς. Ceremonial purity was requisite if a man was to keep the Passover duly (cf. Num. 9<sup>10</sup>, 2 Chron. 30<sup>15</sup> 30<sup>16</sup>); and the necessary ritual of purification might last a whole week, or a much shorter time if the pilgrim had not been gravely polluted (see Lightfoot, Hor. Hebr. in loc.). Accordingly many pilgrims had to arrive in Jerusalem some days before the Passover, πρὸ τοῦ πᾶσαι. See 13<sup>30</sup> for the emphasis that was laid on ritual purity; and cf. Acts 21<sup>16</sup>. ἀγιάζω is not found in the Synoptists, and is used by Jn. again only at 1 Jn. 3<sup>3</sup> (of spiritual purification).

56. Just as at an earlier Passover (7<sup>11</sup>), the pilgrims were curious to see and hear Jesus: ἔβησαν οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν. And the knots of people in the Temple precincts, where they naturally gathered, as well as because it was here that Jesus had been accustomed to teach, were full of eager speculation. "What do you think?" "Surely He isn't coming to the Feast?" This, they thought, was unlikely, because of the order for His arrest which had been made by the authorities.

ὅτι οὐ μὴ Διδοῖ εἰς τὴν ἰσχυρίν; 57. δεδώκεσαν δὲ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι ἐπιτάλας ἵνα ἕνα τις γράφ' αὐτῶν ἴσταν μνησίη, ὅπως πιάσωσιν αὐτόν.

puts the two questions into one, "Do ye suppose that perchance He cometh not to the Feast?" The A.V. takes the Greek similarly: "What think ye, that He will not come to the Feast?" But the better reading, and the better rendering of the Greek, give two short ejaculatory questions instead of one (see Abbott, Diat. 2184).

57. δεδώκεσαν δὲ. The rec. text, with D, adds καί, the effect of which is to disconnect v. 57 from v. 56. But καί must be omitted with κABLWΔΘ. It spoils the sense, which clearly is that the people thought it improbable that Jesus would come up to Jerusalem, for the Sanhedrim had given orders (δεδώκεσαν δὲ) for His arrest.

For οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ Φαρισαῖοι, cf. v. 47; and see on 7<sup>30</sup>. ἐπιτάλας (κΒW) seems to be preferable to ἐπιτάλας of the rec. text (ADLPAΘ); they gave "directions," that if any one knew where Jesus was, he should give information (μνησίη, only here in Jn., but cf. Acts 23<sup>30</sup>), in order that they might arrest Him.

ὅπως πιάσωσιν αὐτόν. This is the only place where Jn. has ὅπως, it being used here (as Blass suggests, Gram., p. 211) for variety, as ὅτι has occurred immediately before.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE ON THE ANOINTING AT BETHANY (c. 12<sup>1-9</sup>)

There are three evangelical traditions of the anointing of Jesus at an entertainment in a private house: that of Mk. 14<sup>8-9</sup> (followed by Mt. 26<sup>6-7</sup>), that of Jn. 12<sup>1-8</sup>, and that of Lk. 7<sup>36-40</sup>. From the second century to our own time the comparison of these narratives has been attempted by critical readers, and various answers have been given to the questions which arise. Were there three anointings or only two? Or did one incident furnish the material for all three stories?

Few modern expositors hesitate to identify the incident described in Mk. 14 with that of Jn. 12. The place is the same, viz. the κόμης or village of Bethany near Jerusalem; and in both traditions the scene is laid in the week before the Crucifixion, Jn. putting it on the Sabbath before the Passover, while Mk. suggests (although he does not say it explicitly) that it is to be dated two days only before that feast (cf. Mk. 14<sup>1-2</sup>). Mk. does not name the woman who anointed Jesus, but Jn. says that it was Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus. In Mk. the host is "Simon the Leper,"<sup>1</sup> but Jn. says that Martha waited on the company, which might mean that she was the mistress of the house; Lazarus, in any case, is included among those at table. In the Marcan story the woman anoints the head of Jesus (a frequent mark of honour to a distinguished guest; cf. Lk. 7<sup>36</sup>), no mention being made of His feet, or of the use of her hair as a towel. Jn., however, says nothing either of anointing the head of Jesus or of washing His feet; but he relates that Mary anointed His feet, and then wiped them with her hair. This is, prima facie, a strange statement. Anointing the feet of a guest might follow the washing of them, but why should the ointment be wiped off? And it is improbable that a suitable towel (see 13<sup>5</sup>) would not be at Mary's disposal in a house where the acting hostess was her sister. That she should have used her hair for the purpose of wiping the feet of Jesus on this occasion, either after washing or anointing them, is an extraordinary circumstance, to which we shall return presently.

It is not doubtful, however, despite the superficial differences between the Marcan and Johannine stories, that they refer to the same incident, and that Jn. is conscious of the fact and familiar with the earlier narrative. Like Mk., Jn. mentions the criticism made about the waste of the precious ointment (a criticism which he ascribes to Judas); and like Mk., he recalls the Lord's rebuke, "The poor ye have always with you, but me ye have not always." Again, Mk.'s προόλαβεν μερίσαι το σῆμα μου εἰς τὸν ἀναψαλασμένον is reflected in Jn.'s ἵνα εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἀναψαλασμοῦ μου τηρήσῃ αὐτό. And Jn.'s ἄρθρον πιστικῆς πωλοντιμῆς is a reproduction of Mk.'s ἄρθρον πιστικῆς πωλοντελοῦς. We may say with confidence that the Marcan and Johannine narratives are versions of the same story, Jn. having corrected Mk. where he thought it necessary to do so.<sup>2</sup>

The narrative of Lk. 7<sup>36c</sup> is markedly different from both Jn. and Mk. The place where the incident happened is not named, but the context suggests that it was somewhere in Galilee, and that it occurred during the period of John the Baptist's imprisonment. But Lk. does not always observe strict chronological sequence, and the story may have been inserted at this point in connexion with the accusation that Jesus was "a friend of publicans and sinners" (v. 34). The host, on this occasion, was a Pharisee named Simon, and the woman who is the central figure was "a sinner" (ἁμαρτωλός).

The story tells of her coming into the house—uninvited, as was possible in a country where meals were often semi-public—and standing behind Jesus, as He reclined at table. As she wept, her tears dropped on His feet, and she wiped them off with her long flowing hair. Then she kissed them, and anointed them with ointment which she had brought with her, probably with the hope of being allowed to anoint His head. This would have been an ordinary act of courtesy, but anointing of the feet is not mentioned again (except Jn. 12<sup>3</sup>) in Scripture, and was evidently unusual.<sup>3</sup> Simon the Pharisee was shocked that a guest who had been entertained as a possible prophet should submit to the ministrations of a sinful woman; but Jesus rebuked him with the parable of the Two Debtors, and the story ends with the benediction given to her who had been forgiven much and who had therefore loved much.

The moral of this narrative is wholly unlike anything in the narratives of Mk. 14 and Jn. 12; nor does there seem to be any connexion with the narrative of Mk. 14. The name of the host, indeed, both in Lk. and Mk. was Simon, but Simon the Pharisee is not necessarily to be identified with Simon the Leper, for Simon was the commonest of Jewish names. Nor can we suppose that a leading Pharisee would have entertained Jesus at his house during the week before His Passion, when He was already the subject of orthodox suspicion. The unnamed woman may be the same in both narratives, nevertheless, although Mk. does not note that she was or had been a sinner; but that Mk. and Lk. deal with quite different incidents is plain.

The resemblances, however, of the Lucan story to that in Jn. 12 are striking. In both, it is the feet (not the head, as in Mk.) which are anointed, and the language used is similar in both cases. Thus Lk. 7<sup>36c</sup> has τοὺς δάκρυον ἤρατο βρέχειν τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ καὶ ταῖς θριξίν τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτῆς ἐξέμασσε . . . καὶ ἤλειψεν τῇ μύρῳ, while Jn. 12<sup>3</sup> has ἤλειψεν τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ καὶ ἐξέμασεν ταῖς θριξίν αὐτῆς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ.

It will be observed that there is no formal washing of Jesus' feet in either story, and that the falling of the woman's tears upon them, which is so touching a feature of Lk.'s account, has no place in Jn. But the linguistic similarities between the two verses just cited show conclusively that Jn. intended to tell a story similar to that told by Lk.; while, on the other hand, his version is as puzzling as Lk.'s is lucid. Why should Mary of Bethany appear with dishevelled hair, and use this instead of a towel? Why should she anoint the feet of Jesus at all? The woman of Lk. 7 did so from penitent humility, but does this apply to Mary of Bethany? And why should Mary wipe off the unguent once it was applied? The ἀμαρτωλός only wiped off her falling tears.

We shall approach these difficulties presently, but at this point we seem called to recognise the fact that Jn. is writing in terms of the Lucan story. He is not necessarily describing the same incident as Lk., but he is describing an incident so similar in some exceptional features, that we must believe him to be writing of the same woman that Lk. has depicted. This involves the conclusion that Jn. regarded Mary of Bethany as the sinful woman of whom Lk. tells. Lk. does not make this identification. He mentions Mary afterwards as being at the house of Martha her sister, the situation of which is not indicated (10<sup>39</sup>), and records how Mary was praised by Jesus as having "chosen the good part," in comparison with the housewifely activities of her sister. This is not inconsistent with the conclusion that Mary had formerly been of loose behaviour, but it does not suggest it directly.

The relations between the various evangelical narratives of the anointing of Jesus have been discussed at length, both in ancient and modern times, and we cannot stay here to examine the opinions of individual Fathers or critics.<sup>1</sup> Clement of Alexandria (Procl. ii. 62) identifies the anointings of Lk. 7 and of Jn. 12, Mk. 14; so does Tertullian (de pudic. xi.). Origen is not consistent with himself, at one time speaking of three (Comm. in Mt. 77) or two anointings (Hom. in Cant. 1<sup>38</sup>), at another time of only one (Fragm. in Joann. 11<sup>3</sup>, ed. Brooke, ii. 287). Ephraim Syrus (Hom. i. "On our Lord") has a lengthy commentary on the sinful woman, whom he explicitly distinguishes from Mary of Bethany. Tatian treats the story of Lk. 7 in like manner as distinct from the story of Jn. 12, Mk. 14. But, since the time of Gregory the Great, the Roman Church has been accustomed to identify Mary of Bethany, Mary Magdalene, and the ἀμαρτωλός of Lk. 7. The Breviary office for the Feast of St. Mary Magdalen (July 22) draws out this identification, and treats the story of Mary as that of one who, once a great sinner, became a great saint.

This identification has been accepted in the present commentary. Of Mary Magdalene, i.e. Mary of Magdala (a village some 3 miles from Capernaum, now called Mejdel), Lk. tells that "seven devils had gone out of her" (Lk. 8<sup>2</sup>), a statement that is made immediately after the story of the ἀμαρτωλός. She is named along with other women who had been "healed of evil spirits and infirmities"; and Lk.'s statement about her is repeated in the Marcan Appendix: "He appeared first to Mary Magdalene, from whom He had cast out seven devils" (Mk. 16<sup>9</sup>). This description would not necessarily point to special vice, for it might only refer to madness; but it remains, for all that, a very apt description of a woman who had been rescued as the ἀμαρτωλός was, and would be a convenient euphemism. Further, the identification of Mary Magdalene with Mary of Bethany enables us to interpret the otherwise difficult words of Jn. 12<sup>3</sup>, "Suffer her to keep it against the day of my burying" (cf. Mk. 14<sup>8</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>13</sup>). No evangelist speaks expressly of Mary of Bethany as going to the tomb to anoint the Lord's body on the day of the Resurrection; but all four name Mary Magdalene as taking part. The equation of Mary Magdalene to Mary of Bethany explains quite simply the Lord's words about the latter at the Supper at Bethany (Jn. 12<sup>7</sup>, where see note)—words which are otherwise left without fulfilment.

We hold, then, that a comparison of Jn. 12 with Lk. 7 makes it necessary to identify the woman that was a sinner with Mary Magdalene and also with Mary of Bethany, or at any rate to recognise that Jn. identified them.

There is another significant bit of evidence for the latter conclusion. At Jn. 12<sup>3</sup> is a parenthetical explanation (whether by Jn. or by a later editor need not now be discussed; see note in loc.), that Mary of Bethany is ἡ ἀλεξάνδρα τὴν κόρινθον μίτρον καὶ ἐμαρξασα τὸν πόδας αὐτοῦ ταῖς θριξίν αὐτῆς. Now this would not identify Mary of Bethany for the reader, if another woman had also "anointed the Lord with ointment and wiped His feet with her hair." If we distinguish the woman of Lk. 7 from the woman of Jn. 12, this singular gesture may be attributed to two women, and thus the note of 12<sup>3</sup> would be useless for its purpose of identification. It is plain that the Fourth Gospel regards the ἀμαρτωλός of Lk. 7 as the sister of Lazarus and Martha.

It is to be observed, however, that while Jn. uses the same words of Mary's action that Lk. does of the action of the ἀμαρτωλός, he does not necessarily imply that the narratives of Jn. 12<sup>3</sup> and Lk. 7<sup>39</sup> refer to the same incident. Mary may have, in the days of His public ministry, anointed the feet of Jesus in penitence (Lk. 7<sup>39</sup>); and then, having repented and returned to her family, when Jesus came to her home the day before His entry to Jerusalem, have repeated an act so full of memories for her (Jn. 12<sup>3</sup>). No emphasis is laid in Lk. on the costliness of the ἀλάβαστρον μίτρον; the woman had brought with her an ordinary supply of unguent. But in Jn. and Mk.

XII. 1. Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς πρὸ ἑξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα ἦλθεν εἰς

the special quality of the ointment is a principal feature of the story. It was "very precious," so exceptionally costly that the use of it called forth criticism. If Mary desired to repeat the act which had in the first instance called forth the benediction of Jesus, it would be quite natural that she should provide herself with unguent of specially fine quality. And the circumstance that she used her hair for a towel would also be explained by her purpose of reproducing the former scene. It could not be exactly reproduced; there were no tears of penitence on the second occasion. But, just on that account, a true narrative of what happened would be at once like and unlike the story of Lk. 7; and this is what we find in Jn. 12. Thus, while we do not identify the incident recorded in Lk. 7 with that recorded in Jn. 12 and Mk. 14, we may regard Lk. 7 as telling of the first occasion on which Mary anointed Jesus, the second being that narrated in Jn. 12<sup>1</sup> and (with less exactness) in Mk. 14. Mk. missing the point that it was the feet (not the head) of Jesus that were anointed at the house in Bethany shortly before His Passion.

The Supper at Bethany (XII. 1-8)

XII. 1. Ὁ οὖν Ἰησοῦς. οὖν is not causal; it does not carry us back to 1:29, where it is said that the priests were planning to arrest Him. His motive in going to Bethany was not to seek a place of safety, but it was on His way to Jerusalem, whither He was proceeding for the feast. οὖν is only copulative, "and so" (see on 1:29). He knew, indeed, of the enmity of the priestly party; but that did not move Him from His purpose. Indeed, Jn. lays special emphasis on the continual consciousness on the part of Jesus of what was impending (cf. 1:29).

According to the Synoptists (Mk. 11:11, Mt. 21:27, Lk. 21:27), He lodged at Bethany during the nights that remained before the end.

πρὸ ἑξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ πάσχα, a transposition of πρὸ, the phrase meaning "six days before the Passover." Meyer cites Amos 1:1 πρὸ ἑξ ἡμερῶν τοῦ σπασμοῦ for the same construction. Jn. is prone to record dates (see Intro., p. cii); and he notes that the day of the arrival of Jesus at Bethany was the Sabbath before the Passover, i. e., in our reckoning, the Saturday preceding

Βηθανίας, ὅπου ἦν Ἀδάραος, ἃν ἤγαγεν ἐκ νεκρῶν Ἰησοῦς. 2. ἑποίησεν σὺν αὐτῷ δεῖπνον ἐκεῖ, καὶ ἡ Μάρθα ἀπεκρίθη, ὅτι Ἀδάραος εἶς

Palm Sunday. He may have arrived just as the Sabbath was beginning, i. e., on the Friday evening; or He may have only come from a short distance, and so have refrained from exceeding the limit of a Sabbath day's journey.

From Mk. 14:1, Mt. 26:1, we might infer that the supper at Bethany was held later in the week, "six days before the Passover," but neither statement is quite definite as to the date. What Jn. tells here is more probably accurate. ὅπου ἦν Ἀδάραος. On this account, Bethany was a place of special danger. It was no place to come for one who feared the vindictiveness of the priests which had been excited by the raising of Lazarus.

For the constr. ὅπου ἦν, see on 1:28. ὁ τεθνήσκων is added after Ἀδάραος by ADΓΔΘ, with support from the vss., including the Coptic Q, but om. MBLW.

ἃν ἤγαγεν ἐκ νεκρῶν Ἰησοῦς. The rec. text omits Ἰησοῦς, which indeed is unnecessary to the sentence, but M<sup>2</sup>BW insert it. Perhaps all the words after Ἀδάραος, sc. [ὁ τεθνήσκων] ἃν ἤγαγεν ἐκ νεκρῶν Ἰησοῦς, are a gloss that has crept in from v. 9, where ἃν ἤγαγεν ἐκ νεκρῶν is quite in place and apposite; here it is superfluous. Cf. v. 17.

Syr. sin. gives here: "came Jesus to the village Beth Ania unto Lazar, him that was dead and lived. And he made for Him a supper there, and Lazar was one of the guests that sat down to meat with Him, but Martha was occupied in serving."

2. ἑποίησεν σὺν αὐτῷ δεῖπνον ἐκεῖ. The subject of ἑποίησεν is undefined. Probably we should understand that the villagers of Bethany prepared a supper for Jesus, having still in vivid recollection the fame of His recent miracle. Mk. says that the entertainment was in "the house of Simon the Leper," and this may be an accurate report, although of Simon we know nothing (see p. 410). From the way in which the presence of Lazarus as one of the company is mentioned by Jn., it would seem probable that at any rate the supper was not in his house. On the other hand, ἑποίησεν σὺν αὐτῷ δεῖπνον might mean that it was the well-known household of Bethany, Martha and Mary and Lazarus, who gave the feast, and the Sinai Syriac (quoted on v. 3) understands the text thus. Lazarus would in any case be a figure to attract attention and curiosity, which may account for the words ὅτι Ἀδάραος εἶς ἦν ἐκ τῶν ἀνακεκλήτων σὺν αὐτῷ. That Martha was serving (ἀπεκρίθη) would be more natural if she were in her own house, ἦν ἐν τῷ ἀνακειμένῳ σὺν αὐτῷ 3. ἡ οὖν Μαριάμ λαβοῦσα λίτραν μύρου μάρου πιστικῆς πολυτίμου ἤλασεν τοὺς πόδας τοῦ Ἰησοῦ καί as at Lk. 10<sup>30</sup>, where it is said of her περιεσῆτο περί πολλῆν διακονίαν.

The rec. text omits ἐκ before τῶν ἀνακειμ., with ADWTA@; but ἐκ is inserted by NBL, and this is consonant with Jn.'s style (see on 1<sup>10</sup>).

For ἀνακειμένον σὺν αὐτῷ (NABDL@), the rec. (W) reads σπουδακιμένον αὐτῷ. The better-attested reading is interesting because of the preposition σὺν, which is used again by Jn. only at 18<sup>1</sup> 21<sup>1</sup> (it does not occur in Rev.). Abbott (Diat. 2799, ii.) remarks that Jn. agrees with Demosthenes and Epictetus in hardly ever using σὺν, the reason being that σὺν belongs to literary, as distinct from spoken, Greek. Thus Lk. (Gospel and Acts) employs σὺν more frequently than all the other N.T. writers put together.

8. ἡ οὖν Μαριάμ. This is the reading of B 33, and is probably right, despite the authority of NADLW@ for Μαρία. See on 1<sup>10</sup>.

λαβοῦσα λίτραν μύρου. λίτρα (libra) occurs again in N.T. only at 19<sup>36</sup>. Mk. says of the woman (whom he does not name) ἔχουσα ἀλάβαστρον μύρου, "having an alabaster cruse or flask of ointment," and then goes on to tell that she broke the flask and poured the contents on the head of Jesus. To anoint the head of a guest (cf. Ps. 23<sup>5</sup>) was an act of Eastern courtesy and respect, but Jn. treats the incident differently, and tells that Mary anointed Jesus' feet. The Lat. fuldensis tries to combine the two, and its text here gives "habens alabastrum . . . et fracto effudit super caput ihesu recumbentis et unxit pedes." Syr. sin. has a similar conflated text.

This marked difference between the narratives of Mk. and Jn., which clearly refer to the same incident, is considered above (p. 410).

μάρου πιστικῆς πολυτίμου. This is almost identical with Mk.'s μύρου πιστικῆς πολυτελοῦς. A special point is made in both narratives (not in the earlier story, Lk. 7<sup>39</sup>) of the costliness of the ointment provided (cf. "the chief ointments" of Amos 6<sup>6</sup>). The adj. πιστικός (only here and at Mk. 14<sup>8</sup> in the Greek Bible) is of uncertain meaning. It may be derived from πίστις, and it is applied, as Abbott (Diat. 1736d) has pointed out, to a "faithful" wife. Thus it might mean here genuine, as indicating the quality of the spikenard. The vg., however, at Mk. 14<sup>8</sup> (but not here), renders it spicati, and Wetstein called attention to the word σπικῆαιον, which means a

luxurious unguent. It is possible that, as Abbott suggests, some form of σπικῆαιον originally stood in the Gospel texts, and that it was altered to πιστικός by an attempt at allegorical interpretation. Sweete quotes Jerome as playing on the word thus: "ideo uos uocatis spicati." Another, less likely, derivation of πιστικός is from πῖσιον, so that it would mean "potable," as some perfumes were; but this would be quite out of place in the present context. Yet another explanation is quoted by Dods (in loc.) from the Classical Review (July 1890), sc. that we should read not πιστικός, but πιστωτός, the latter word referring to the Pistacia terebinthicus, which grows in Palestine "and yields a turpentine in such considerable quantities as to be very costly." Whatever the precise derivation of the word may be, the combination μάρου πιστικῆς (νάρου, like πιστωτός, occurring again in the N.T. only at Mk. 14<sup>8</sup>) is so unusual, that we must suppose Jn. to have followed here either the actual text of Mk., or a familiar tradition embodying these words.

With this costly unguent, Jn. tells that Mary anointed the feet of Jesus. He insists upon the word feet, repeating τοὺς πόδας twice, that there may be no misunderstanding, and to show that he is deliberately correcting Mk.'s account. He adds, in words that reproduce Lk.'s story of the sinful woman (Lk. 7<sup>39</sup>), that Mary wiped the Lord's feet with her hair (καὶ ἐξίμαζεν ταῖς θρυβὶν αὐτῆς τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ). Attention has already (p. 411) been directed to the fact that a perfumed anointing of feet (as distinct from the washing of them, of which there is no mention here) is a custom not mentioned in Scripture elsewhere than here and Lk. 7<sup>38</sup>. It is further to be observed that for a woman to have her hair unbound was counted immodest by the Jews, and that Mary should unloose her hair at an entertainment where men were present requires some special explanation. A towel would be readily accessible (cf. 13<sup>5</sup>) whether this supper was in the house of Martha and Mary, or not; and it would be more seemly and convenient to use it. But for what purpose were the Lord's feet wiped after the unguent had been applied? In the story of Lk. 7<sup>38</sup> the woman wiped His feet with her unbound hair, because her tears had fallen on them by inadvertence, but she did not wipe off the ointment. These considerations seem to prove that when Jn. reproduces as nearly as possible the words of the earlier narrative (Lk. 7<sup>38</sup>) he does so, not by any inadvertence or mistaken recollection, but because the act of Mary recorded here did actually reproduce her former gesture, then dictated by a sudden impulse of penitence, now inspired by adoring homage of her Master. The moment of her "conversion," to use the modern word, was the moment to which she looked back as the most memorable in her life; and when she learnt that Jesus was to honour a supper in Bethany by His presence, she decided that she would once again anoint His feet, and present herself in the guise of a penitent and grateful disciple, the significance of whose strange gesture would be well understood by all her friends, as well as by Jesus.

This, at least, is what Jn. seems to indicate. If he did not regard Mary as identical with the unnamed sinner of the earlier incident, he has told the story of the anointing at Bethany in a way which is unintelligible.

§ δὲ εἰς αἰνίσθησιν ἐκ τῆς ὀσμῆς τοῦ μύρου. For this use of ἐκ as indicating "with," cf. Rev. 8th, Mt. 23rd.

This detail is peculiar to Jn., and suggests that the narrative is due to the recollection of some one who was present on the occasion. It seems to have been known to Ignatius, who interprets the savour of the ointment pervading the whole house as typifying the fragrance of incorruptibility diffused throughout the Church from the Person of Christ (Epist. 17). Cf. also Clem. Alex. Paed. ii. 8 (P 205) for a similar spiritualising of the incident.

Wetstein quotes from Midr. Kohelath, vii. 1: "A good unguent spreads from the bedroom to the dining-hall; so does a good name from one end of the world to the other." The latter clause recalls Mk. 14th, "Wherever the gospel is preached in the whole world, what she hath done shall be told for a memorial of her," a saying which Jn. does not record. It is possible, but improbable, that the circumstance told by Jn., that the house was filled with the odour of the ointment, gave rise, by an allegorical interpretation, to the saying of Mk. 14th. But the idea that Jn. means it to be taken allegorically is devoid of evidence and may be confidently rejected.

4. The description of Judas is almost identical with that given in 6th (where see note).

We must read δ (NBW) for the rec. οὐκ.

Apparently we should omit ἐκ before τῶν μαθητῶν (with BLW 33 249), although it is inserted, in accordance with Jn.'s general habit (see on 1st), by NA<sup>26</sup>. ἐκ is also omitted in similar sentences at 18th 19th.

NBLW, fam. 1, and most vss. read here Ἰούδας ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης (cf. 14th for ὁ Ἰσκ.); but A1A<sup>26</sup> have Ἰούδας

μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ, δὲ μὲλλον αὐτὸν παραδόντα, 5. Διὰ τί τοῦτο τὸ μύρον οὐκ ἐπέβη τραπεζοῦν θησαυρῶν καὶ ἐβόη πτωχοῖς; 6. εἶπεν δὲ τοῦτο οὐκ ὅτι περὶ τῶν πτωχῶν ἠμελεν αὐτῷ, ἀλλ' ὅτι κλέων ἦν

Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτης, introducing the name of his father (as at 6th 13th).

The rec. text, following AD<sup>9</sup>, places the sentence ἐκ [ἐκ] τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ before Ἰούδας; but NBLW place it after Ἰσκαριώτης.

For δ μὲλλον, D has δὲ ἡμῶν (perhaps a reminiscence of 6th). μὲλλον may convey the idea that Judas was predestined to betray Jesus (see on 3rd and 6th).

According to the Synoptists (Mk. 14th, Mt. 26th), the uneasy feeling that the ointment was wasted was shared by several of the onlookers, but Jn. specifically mentions Judas as the one who remonstrated. Perhaps he first suggested to the others the extravagance of what had been done by Mary in purchasing exceptionally rare and costly ointment.

6. This verse reproduces Mk. 14th ἄξιονα γὰρ τοῦτο τὸ μύρον προβῆναι ἐπὶ αὐτοῦ θησαυρῶν τραπεζοῦν καὶ δοθῆναι τοῖς πτωχοῖς. 300 denarii would be about ten guineas, a large sum. To suppose, as Schmiedel does (E.B. 1797), that 300 is a symbolical number indicating "the symmetrical body of humanity," is fantastic. The Gospel of St. Mark, at any rate, does not deal in allegories of this cryptic kind.

Jn. here follows Mk.,<sup>2</sup> just as he does at 6th when he recalls 200 denarii as the estimated cost of bread for the multitude.

6. εἶπεν δὲ τοῦτο κτλ. This is the evangelist's comment (cf. 7th; and see Introd., p. xxxiv). It has been thought by some that he is unfair to Judas, and that he is so possessed with the conviction of the baseness of his treachery, that he imputes the lowest of motives to him (see on 6th 18th). The criticism that the money spent on the costly ointment might have been better spent is very natural on the lips of the disciple who, as keeper of the common purse, was responsible for the moneys spent by the Twelve, amounting in all, we may be sure, to no large sum. But Jn. roundly says that he was a thief. Judas was not above a bribe, for he took the thirty pieces of silver; but he was not therefore dishonest, although the value which he attached to money may have made ill-gotten gains a strong temptation. "Temptation commonly comes through that for which we are naturally fitted" (Westcott), i.e. in this case the handling of money. And it may have been found out, after the secession of Judas, that, as Jn. says, he had been guilty of small peculations, for which he had full opportunity. However that may be, the bitterness of the words about Judas in this verse is easily explained if they go back to one who was a former comrade in the inner circle of the Twelve, who had had no suspicions even at the end (see on 13<sup>30, 39</sup>), and whose indignation, when disillusioned, was all the more severe.

τὸ γλασσοκόμον: cf. 13<sup>30</sup>. A γλασσοκομίον originally meant a case to hold the reeds or zongues (γλασσου) of musical instruments, and hence any kind of box, e.g. it is used for a coffin (by Aquila, Gen. 50<sup>26</sup>). The word became accepted by Aramaic speakers, and appears as קופרין in the Talmud. It stands for a coffer into which money is cast, at 2 Chron. 24<sup>8, 10</sup> ἐνβαλλὼν εἰς τὸ γλασσοκόμον, and this is the sense in which the word is used here. The γλασσοκόμον or money-box of the disciples was kept by Judas (it was not necessarily carried about with him habitually; τὸ γλασσοκόμον ἔχων is the phrase), and into it well-wishers (cf. Lk. 8<sup>3</sup>) were wont to throw (βάλλειν) small coins to provide for the needs of Jesus and His followers. In this it was like the begging-bowl of an Eastern holy man. To translate it "purse" is misleading; and the Latin vss. rightly render it by loculi, i.e. a box or coffer with several compartments. See Field, in loc., on γλασσοκόμον and Βαστάζειν.

For ἔχων (κΒDLWΘ) the rec. has εἶχεν καὶ (ΑΓΔ). τὰ βαλλόμενα, i.e. the moneys cast into the box by well-wishers and friends; cf. 2 Chron. 24<sup>10</sup> quoted above.

ἰβίσταζεν. The verb βαστάζειν is used (10<sup>20</sup> 16<sup>28</sup> 19<sup>27</sup>) of carrying or bearing something heavy; but here and at 20<sup>18</sup> it is equivalent to the vulgar English "to lift," i.e. to carry off furtively or unscrupulously, and so "to steal." Field gives a convincing illustration of this usage from Diog. Laert. iv. 59 μάλιστα οὗ ταῦτα τὰ θεραπεύοντα . . . ὅσα ἰβούλευτο ἰβίσταζεν, "When therefore the servants found this out, they used to steal whatever they pleased." Deissmann (Bible Studies, Eng. Tr., p. 257) cites some further instances from the papyri of this use of βαστάζειν.<sup>1</sup>

Hence we must translate, "he was a thief, and having the money-box used to steal what was cast into it." To render ἰβίσταζεν here as if it only meant that Judas, as the treasurer, used to "carry about" what was put into it, would give a tame and superfluous ending to the sentence.

7. With vv. 7, 8, cf. Mk. 14<sup>6-7</sup>.

ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ἄφες αὐτήν, ἵνα εἰς τὴν ἡμέραν τοῦ ἐπιταφιασμοῦ μου τηρήσῃ αὐτήν. 8. τοὺς πτωχοὺς γὰρ πάντοτε ἔχετε μεθ' ἑαυτῶν, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ οὐδέποτε ἔχετε.

We must render "let her alone, in order that she may keep it (i.e. the remainder of the spikenard) against the day of my burying." In Mk.'s narrative (here being corrected silently by Jn.<sup>2</sup>) the flask of ointment was broken and its entire contents poured upon the head of Jesus; but Jn. says nothing of the flask being broken, and it is not to be supposed that all the ointment was used for His feet. ἐπιταφιασμός (cf. 19<sup>40</sup>) is "preparation for burial," and might or might not include the anointing of the whole body. The words of Jesus tell of His impending death and burial to any of the company who had sufficient insight; the rest of the spikenard will soon be needed, and will not be wasted.

We have above (p. 412) identified Mary of Bethany with Mary Magdalene; and thus she who began His ἐπιταφιασμός by anointing the Lord's feet in Bethany, was among the women who finished the anointing of His body eight days later (cf. 20<sup>1</sup>, Mk. 16<sup>7</sup>).

8. This verse is identical with Mt. 26<sup>11</sup>, and both Jn. and Mt. reproduce exactly the words of Mk. 14<sup>7</sup>, both of them omitting Mk.'s καὶ ὅταν θάληται, δένανθε αὐτοὺς εἰς ταῖς φθῆρας. But that Jn. is using Mk. rather than Mt. all through the story is not doubtful.<sup>3</sup>

D and Syr. sin. omit the whole verse here for some unknown reason, perhaps because ἀλλ' ἐγὼ οὐδέποτε ἔχετε was (mistakenly) deemed to be at variance with Mt. 28<sup>20</sup>. But cf. 17<sup>11</sup> οὐδέτι εἰμι ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ.

With πτωχοὺς πάντοτε ἔχετε μεθ' ἑαυτῶν, cf. Deut. 15<sup>11</sup>.

The people's curiosity about Lazarus, and the hostility of the priests (vv. 9-11)

Θ. ὁ ὄχλος πολὺς is read by κΒ*Λ, and at v. 12 by ΒΛΘ, but in both places many authorities omit θ. If we omit θ and read ὄχλος πολὺς, "a great multitude," then no difficulty presents itself. We had ὄχλος πολὺς before at 6<sup>7</sup>, and πολὺς ὄχλος at 6<sup>9</sup>: cf. Mk. 5<sup>21, 28</sup> 6<sup>26</sup> 9<sup>14</sup>, Acts 6<sup>7</sup>, Rev. 7<sup>9</sup>.

9. Ἐγνων εὖν ὄχλος πολλὸς ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ὅτι ἐκεῖ ἔστιν, καὶ ἦλθεν οὐδὲ διὰ τὸν Ἰησοῦν μόνον, ἀλλ' ἵνα καὶ τὸν Ἀδάμαρον ἴδωσιν ὃν ἤγειραν ἐκ νεκρῶν. 10. Ἰβουλεύσαντο δὲ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς ἵνα καὶ τὸν

12th, and it means there the mob, the mass of the people, or, as the E.V. has it, "the common people heard Him gladly"; and of this use of ὄχλος Field (in Mk. 12th) gives some classical instances. This, too, would suit the context well in the present passage, for crowds are generally composed of "the common people" and include "riff-raff." But, as Abbot points out (Diat. 1739-1740), the variant of Jn. gives here and at v. 12, καὶ ὁ πολλὸς ὄχλος (as at Mk. 12th), but ὁ ὄχλος πολλός, which is bad Greek. Westcott suggests that ὄχλος πολλός here must be treated as "a compound noun," but why Jn. should adopt such a usage is not explained.

Having regard to the grammatical difficulty presented by ὁ ὄχλος πολλός, and to the fact that both Latin and Syriac versions give "a great crowd" as the rendering, the balance of evidence seems to be against ὁ, and we therefore read ὄχλος πολλός both here and at v. 12.

ἔγνων οὖν. The rumour of the supper at Bethany spread quickly, and the people generally were much excited by the expectation of seeing not only Jesus, but Lazarus whom He raised from the dead (for ὃν ἤγειραν ἐκ νεκρῶν, cf. vv. 1, 17).

ὄχλος πολλός ἐκ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, "a great crowd of the Jews," sc. of the people of Judaea, who were generally hostile to Jesus. But "the Jews" does not specially indicate here, as at 5th 6th, etc., the party of opposition to Him; it includes those who favoured (v. 11) as well as those who did not favour His claims (see on 1st). A "great crowd" of them came to Bethany, apparently on the evening of the Sabbath, to see the man who had come back from the dead, as well as to see Jesus who raised him. To see one returned from the dead would indeed be a great experience (cf. I. k. 16th).

10. Ἰβουλεύσαντο δὲ οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς κτλ. The Sanhedrim (see on 7th) had given directions that the movements of Jesus should be reported to them (11th); and having heard of the excitement caused by the presence of Lazarus as well as of Jesus at Bethany, they made up their minds that both Lazarus and Jesus should die: ἵνα καὶ τὸν Ἀδάμαρον ἀποκτείνωσιν, "that they would kill Lazarus also." The priests, being of the Sadducean party, who rejected the idea of resurrection, were naturally disconcerted by the report that Lazarus had been raised from the dead; and they were unscrupulous as to the means which they employed to put an end to what they regarded as mischievous talk.

12. Τῇ ἑσπέρῳν ὄχλος πολλός ἐκ ἑλθὼν εἰς τὴν ἑσπέρην, ἀκούσαντες ὅτι ἔρχεται Ἰησοῦς εἰς Ἱερουσόλυμα, 13. ἔλαβον τὰ βῆλα τῶν

11. The priests were specially urgent about the putting away of Lazarus, because, on his account (β' αὐτόν), many of the Jews (cf. 11th) "began to go away" (ὑπήγγον), perhaps to Bethany, which was the centre of attraction, "and began to believe in Jesus" (ἐπίστουν εἰς τὸν Ἰησοῦν; cf. note on 1st). The force of the imperfect tenses must be observed. The verb ὑπέγωμ, "to withdraw," is a favourite word with Jn. (see on 7th), and ὑπήγγον here may mean simply "they began to withdraw," i.e. from their allegiance to the chief priests, as at 6th, where Jesus asks His disciples, "Would you also go away?"

The triumphal entry to Jerusalem (vv. 12-19)

12. The Synoptic accounts of the entry to Jerusalem are found at Mk. 11th-10, Mt. 21st-9, Lk. 19th-28. As has been pointed out above (on v. 1), Mk. (followed by Mt.) places the supper at Bethany later in the week of the Passion, but Jn., putting it on Saturday, Nisan 9, halts Jesus and the disciples at Bethany for that night, the entry taking place on Sunday, Nisan 10. Christian tradition has followed Jn. in putting the triumphal entry on Palm Sunday.

τῇ ἑσπέρῳν, sc. on the Sunday. Jn. is fond of these notes of time (see Introd., p. cii).

ὄχλος πολλός (see on v. 9) κτλ., "a great crowd that had come up to the feast," sc. those that came from the country parts to the metropolis, including doubtless many Galileans (see 4th).

ἀκούσαντες, "having heard," sc. from those who had come by way of Bethany. ὅτι ἰσχυρίζονται. The words they heard were: ἔρχεται Ἰησοῦς εἰς Ἱερουσόλυμα. B<sup>0</sup> prefix δὲ to Ἰησοῦς, while WADLW omits; it is usually B that omits the def. art. (see on 1st).

The entry of Jesus would naturally provoke curiosity and enthusiasm, coming (as Jn. represents it to have done) not long after the raising of Lazarus (11th-9th). The most conspicuous discrepancy between Mk. and Jn. is at this point, Mk. not mentioning Lazarus at all, but describing none the less the triumphal entry, while the enthusiasm with which Jesus was received is expressly connected by Jn. with the miracle at Bethany (see Introd., p. cxxxiii).

18. ἔλαβον τὰ βῆλα τῶν φοινίκων. βῆλον, a "palm branch," φουίσων και ἐξήλθον εἰς ἐπάντησιν αὐτῆς, και ἐκραύαζον

Ἦσαννά

εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι Κυρίου, και ὁ Βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ.

occurs again in the Greek Bible only at 1 Mac. 13<sup>31</sup>, in the account of Simon's triumphal entry into Jerusalem, μετὰ εὐφροσύνης και βασιῶν ἐπ' αὐτῆς (cf. 2 Mac. 10<sup>7</sup>). To carry palms was a mark of triumphant homage to a victor or a king (cf. Rev. 7<sup>9</sup>). Either βασίς or φουίσιες, separately, would mean "palms," so that Jn.'s τὰ βάλα τῶν φουίσιων is superfluously precise (see Abbott, Diat. 2047), "the palm branches of the palm trees," perhaps trees which grew on the slopes of Olivet. The Synoptists do not mention the bearing of palms: Mk. has σπιβάδων, i.e. "litter" of leaves, etc., which were strewn in the road; Mt. says ἔκοτον κλάδους ἀπὸ τῶν δένδρων και ἐσπρίανον ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ. There seem to have been two crowds, one accompanying Jesus, the other going out from the city to meet Him (ἐξήλθον εἰς ἐπάντησιν αὐτῆς); see Swete on Mk. 11<sup>8</sup>, and cf. v. 13 below.

The words from the Psalter with which (according to the Synoptists as well as Jn.) the acclaiming crowds greeted Jesus as He rode into the city, were the words with which in the original use of the Psalm the priests blessed the procession entering the Temple. "Hosanna: Blessed in the Name of Yahweh is he that cometh" (Ps. 118<sup>26, 28</sup>). The sense is missed if ἐν ὀνόματι κυρίου is connected with ὁ ἐρχόμενος. The Hebrew priests were chosen "to bless in the name of Yahweh" (Deut. 21<sup>7</sup>); and so also it is written of David εὐλόγησεν τὸν λαὸν ἐν ὀνόματι κυρίου (2 Sam. 6<sup>20</sup>). Cf. also 1 Kings 22<sup>14</sup>, 2 Kings 2<sup>24</sup>; and see note on 10<sup>22</sup>.

The quotation of Ps. 118<sup>26, 28</sup> by the crowds who hailed Jesus on His entry to Jerusalem was something more than a mere blessing of welcome, as of One who had done wonderful things (cf. Ps. 129<sup>7</sup>). It recognised in Him ὁ ἐρχόμενος, "the Coming One," even as Martha had said to Him ὄν εἰ . . . ὁ εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐρχόμενος (11<sup>27</sup>; cf. Mt. 11<sup>3</sup>).

The cry of Hosanna (in Aramaic ἠὲββῶ), rendered ὀσανν ἡ in the LXX (cf. Ps. 118<sup>26</sup>) was the refrain sung by the people in the processional recitation of Ps. 118 at the Feast of Tabernacles. When v. 25 was reached, the palm branches which were carried by the worshippers were waved; and hence these sprigs of palm with myrtle and willow (sisab was the technical name) came themselves to be called hosannas.

14. εὐρὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἄνθρωπον ἐκάθισεν ἐπ' αὐτὸ, καθὼς ἴσταν γεγραμμένον

The practice, however, of bearing palm sprigs and crying Hosanna was not confined to the Feast of Tabernacles, although it originated in the Temple services at that festival; and we have already cited from 1 Mac. 13<sup>31</sup> an instance of palm branches being borne on the occasion of a popular welcome to a hero at another time of the year. There is thus no historical improbability in Jn.'s statement that palms and hosannas were accompaniments of the entry of Jesus to the city.<sup>1</sup>

και ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ. Mk. has instead of this εὐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος βασιλεὺς τοῦ πατρὸς ἡμῶν Δαυὶδ, which conveys the same idea, sc. that the crowds were acclaiming Jesus as the Messianic king. Lk. has ὁ ἐρχόμενος ὁ βασιλεὺς, but Mt. puts it differently, reporting the cry as Ὁσαννὰ τῷ υἱῷ Δαυὶδ (a different use of hosanna, perhaps derived from some liturgical refrain). Jn. has already (1<sup>48</sup>) attributed the confession ὅτι βασιλεὺς εἶ τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ to Nathanael. It was this public acclamation of Jesus as King of Israel or King of the Jews which was the foundation of the charge made against Him before Pilate (18<sup>7</sup>). He had refused earlier in His ministry to allow the eager people to "make Him king" (6<sup>14</sup>); but now He did not disclaim the title (cf. Lk. 19<sup>16-19</sup>). Pseudo-Peter represents the inscription on the cross as being in the form ὀσανν ἴσταν ὁ βασιλεὺς τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ (see on 19<sup>19</sup>).

14. εὐρὼν δὲ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἄνθρωπον κτλ. This is not verbally consistent with the Synoptists, who tell that it was the disciples who had found the ass, sc. in accordance with the directions given them by Jesus (Mk. 11<sup>3-4</sup>). Chrysostom is at unnecessary pains to reconcile the various statements; see v. 16 below.

καθὼς ἴσταν γεγραμμένον. See on 2<sup>17</sup> for this formula of citation.

15. The quotation is from Zech. 9<sup>9</sup>, in an abbreviated form. The LXX has πῶλον νέον, whereas Jn. has πῶλον ὄνου, a more literal rendering of the Hebrew; for the opening words, "Exult greatly," he gives μὴ φοβῶ. Mk. and Lk., while

15. Μὴ φοβοί, θυγάτηρ Σιών Ἰσοῦ ὁ βασιλεὺς σου ἔρχεται, καθήμενος ἐπὶ πῶλον ὄνου.

narrating the entry into Jerusalem, do not quote the prophecy. Mt. (21<sup>8</sup>) gives it in the form Ἐπιστατὴ τῆς θυγατρὸς Σιών, Ἰσοῦ, ὁ βασιλεὺς σου ἔρχεται σοι κραβὸς καὶ δεξιβεβηκὸς ἐπὶ ὄνον καὶ ἐπὶ πῶλον υἱὸν ἑνοσίου. Jn. notes (v. 16) that the application of this prophecy of Zechariah to the entry of Jesus was not thought of until a later time; but Mt. introduces his account with the formula ἵνα πληρωθῇ τὸ ρηθὲν διὰ τοῦ προφήτου λέγοντος . . . (see Intro., p. cliv).

The full quotation, as given by Mt., is misleading. The story, as told by the other evangelists, is simply that an ass's colt was found and that Jesus rode on it. But Mt., misunderstanding the Hebrew repetition in Zech. 9<sup>9</sup>, and upon a colt, the foal of a she-ass,"

where only one animal is indicated, tells us that two animals were fetched,<sup>1</sup> and garments put on them that they might be ridden. Jn., on the contrary, gives only that part of the prophecy which is relevant, sc. "sitting on an ass's colt."

It is not to be thought that there is any suggestion of humility in riding upon an ass. On the contrary, the ass and the mule were the animals used in peace by great persons for their progresses, as the horse was used in war. The sons of the judges rode upon asses (Judg. 10<sup>4</sup> 12<sup>14</sup>); so did Ahithophel (2 Sam. 17<sup>20</sup>); so did Mephibosheth, Saul's son, when he went to Jerusalem to meet David (2 Sam. 19<sup>26</sup>); cf. Judg. 5<sup>16</sup>. Indeed Zech. 9<sup>9</sup> shows plainly that the prophecy was specially of One coming in peace.

The LXX translators did not understand this. They have πῶλον only in Judg. 10<sup>4</sup> 12<sup>14</sup>, probably because they thought of an ass as a beast of burden exclusively; thus in Zech. 9<sup>9</sup> they have not noticed that ἵππῃ is the regular word for she-ass (Gen. 32<sup>16</sup>), which may be either used for riding or for carrying loads.

The king, then, in the vision of Zechariah, rode upon an ass to signify that he came in peace, not to destroy but to save; and the entry of Jesus to Jerusalem on an ass was understood by the populace, in like manner, as the entry of the Prince of Peace.

16. A similar reminiscence of the evangelist is set down at 2<sup>20</sup>, where see note. The saying of Jesus about restoration, after the Cleansing of the Temple, was not understood by the disciples until after His Resurrection. So, too, they did not perceive the significance in connexion with prophecy of His entry into Jerusalem, riding upon an ass, until He was "glorified," and they began to reflect upon the events of His ministry.

16. Ταῦτα οὐκ ἔγνωσαν αὐτοὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ τὸ πρῶτον, ἀλλ' ἔτι δεξιόσθη Ἰσοῦ, τότε ἠμνησθήσαν ὅτι ταῦτα ἦν ἐκ' ἐπιγ' γεγραμμένα καὶ ταῦτα ἠκούσαν αὐτῶ. 17. Ἐμαρτύρει οὖν ὁ ἄγγελος ὅτι μετ' αὐτοῦ ἔτε τὸν Δάδαρον ἐφόρουν ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου καὶ ἤγειραν αὐτὸν

For δεξιόσθη, see on 7<sup>20</sup> 12<sup>28</sup>. Cf. also 13<sup>31</sup>. *κ*BLWΘ omit δ' after the first ταῦτα, which the rec. inserts. αὐτοῦ οἱ μαθηταὶ (κΒΘ) is the true order of words.

The rec. (with DWΘ) inserts δ' before Ἰσοῦς, which is omitted in κABL. This omission of the article is not in accordance with Jn.'s general usage (see on 1<sup>20</sup>), and it is possible that the whole verse is an explanatory gloss added by an editor other than the evangelist himself. The threefold repetition of ταῦτα is somewhat clumsy, and can hardly be intentional. Again, the phrase ἐκ' ἐπιγ' γεγραμμένα is unlike Jn. (cf. Rev. 10<sup>11</sup> 22<sup>16</sup>): it must mean that the Scriptures quoted were, as it were, "based on Him." D substitutes περὶ αὐτοῦ for ἐκ' αὐτοῦ, recognising the difficulty. And, finally, the last clause of the verse, which says that the disciples afterwards remembered "that they had done these things to Him," invites the question, "What things?" Evidently, the answer is that the reference is to the search for the ass, in accordance with the instructions of Jesus, of which the Synoptists tell. But, as we have seen, Jn. tells nothing of this incident. He says only (v. 14) that "Jesus having found the ass, sat thereon," but he does not mention the co-operation of the disciples in this, or that they took any part in the entry to the city. It seems likely that the comment preserved in the last clause of this verse is due to some one who was thinking of the Synoptic narrative.

17. The interpretation of this verse depends mainly upon whether ὄν (rec. with κABWTAΘ) or ὄν (DL) is adopted as the true reading before τὸν Δάδαρον. If ὄν be approved (with Tischendorf), we translate, "So the crowd that was with Him was testifying that He called Lazarus from the tomb, and raised him from the dead," ὄν introducing the actual words used by the crowd when acclaiming the entry of Jesus. Cf. Lk. 19<sup>37</sup>: "the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works which they had seen." According to this rendering, the shouts of the crowd made special reference to the raising of ἐκ νεκρῶν. 18. διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἐτήρησαν αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, ὅτι ἤκουσαν τοῦτο αὐτοῦ περὶ αἰωνίου τῶ σημεῖου. 19. οἱ δὲ οὖν Φαρισαῖοι εἶπεν πρὸς ἑαυτοῖς θεωρεῖτε ὅτι οὐκ ἀφέλιπτε οὐδὲν ἵδε ἡ κόσμος ὅτι οὖν αὐτοῦ ἀπέλλθεν.

Lazarus. This is entirely consistent with the view which Jn. gives his readers of the extraordinary effect which that miracle had on the public mind (vv. 9, 18). But, attractive as this rendering is, it must be preferred to ἐτι on the MS. evidence; and we translate: "So the crowd that was with Him when He called Lazarus from the tomb, and raised him from the dead," i.e. the onlookers at the scene described 11<sup>38-44</sup>, "bore their testimony." The true authors of the ovation were the people who had been spectators of the miracle, who no doubt inspired all their acquaintances with their wondering enthusiasm. They "bore their witness." See for the idea of μαρτυρία in Jn., the note on 1<sup>7</sup>; and cf. Intro., p. xc.

18. διὰ τοῦτο (see on 5<sup>18</sup> for this opening) καὶ ἐτήρησαν αὐτῷ ὁ ὄχλος, "for this reason the crowd also met Him," sc. the multitude mentioned v. 13, as distinct from the crowd accompanying Him from Bethany, where they had seen the raising of Lazarus. There were two streams of people: one escorting Jesus, the other meeting Him (see on v. 13), "because they heard (ἤκουσαν is preferable to the rec. ἤκουσε) that He had done this sign."

For the σημεῖα of Jesus, see on 2<sup>11</sup>.

19. οἱ δὲ οὖν Φαρισαῖοι. The Pharisees formed the party who were most deeply opposed to the teaching of Jesus (see on 1<sup>24</sup>), and who initiated the movement for His arrest, which was ultimately carried out by the authority of the ἄρχιερεῖς (v. 10), who were the most influential members of the Sanhedrim (see on 7<sup>49</sup>). They were in despair at the reception given to Jesus at His entry into the city, and said to each other, "Do you notice (θεωρεῖτε is probably indicative, rather than imperative) that you don't do any good?" θεωρεῖτε is used here of mental perception and understanding of the situation (see on 2<sup>24</sup>).

With οὐκ ἀφέλιπτε οὐδὲν; cf. 6<sup>6</sup> ἢ σὰρξ οὐκ ἀφέλιπ οὐδὲν.

ὁ κόσμος. DL add ὅλος to bring out the sense, "the whole world," everybody, tout le monde. Wetstein quotes a Rabbinical story of a priest of whom it was said, in like manner, "all the world was going after him." For κόσμος in Jn., see on 1<sup>9</sup>.

ὅτι οὖν αὐτοῦ ἀπέλλθεν. The aor. ἀπέλλθεν is here equivalent to "has gone," or, as the Sinai Syriac renders, "is going." The movement which the Pharisees regretted was in progress.

For the use of ὅτι οὖν, cf. 2 Sam. 15<sup>12</sup> ἐγενήθη ἡ καρδία ἀνδρῶν Ἰσραὴλ ὅτι οὖν Ἀβισσαλαίμ.

20. The episode of the Greek inquirers is introduced immediately after the complaint made by the Pharisees, "the world is gone after Him." Among those who were excited and moved by the reports about Jesus and Lazarus were some Greek pilgrims; it was not only Jews and Galileans who were attracted by what they had heard of the wonderful things that had happened at Bethany, but Greeks as well. And Jn., alone among the evangelists, notes that some of them told Philip of their desire to see Jesus, and that Jesus was informed of it. This incident is naturally recalled in a Gospel written primarily for Greek readers. It is, however, not explicitly said that the request of the Greeks for an interview with Jesus was granted, or that they were present while the sayings of vv. 23-28 were being pronounced.

But, although there is no positive statement to this effect in the text, it has been generally held since the days of Tatian that v. 20 begins a new section of the Gospel, and that vv. 20-22 are to be read in connexion with what follows. On this supposition, it is natural to seek in the words of Jesus here some message which may be taken as specially appropriate to Greeks. It has been suggested, e.g. by Lange, that the tremendous paradox of v. 25, "he that loveth his life loseth it, and he that hateth his life shall keep it," has a peculiar applicability, if regarded as the judgment of Christ on Greek ideals of life. For the Greek, the ideal of manhood was to reach the fulness of personal life; a man should develop his own personality; the larger and richer his life, the more nearly he approached his highest. There is something of this in Christianity as well as in Greek paganism, for Christianity holds up the Perfect Man as exemplar. But the Christian ideal involves sacrifice, and this was foreign to the philosophy of Greece. Jn. παρ mean us to understand v. 25 as implying the condemnation by Jesus of Greek ideals of life. Again, v. 32, "I will draw all men to myself," is a universal promise, including not only Jews but Gentiles like the Greek inquirers. And some have found in the exhortation, "Believe in the light, that ye may become sons of light" (v. 36), an allusion to the prophecy, "The glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. . . Nations

Yet it must be owned that if vv. 23-28 are to be interpreted as addressed in particular to the Greeks whom Jesus now saw for the first time, the use of the Jewish title "Son of Man" (see Introd., p. cxxiii) is puzzling (v. 23); and it is even more difficult to suppose that Jesus revealed to these strangers the anguish of His soul in words like those of v. 27. It is possible that vv. 20-22 should be treated as linked closely with v. 19, but as having no special relation with vv. 23 ff., a new paragraph beginning at v. 23 (where see note).

ἦσαν δὲ Ἕλληνας τινες (this is the reading of  $\kappa\beta\delta\lambda\omega$ , as against τινες Ἕλληνες of the rec. text) ἐκ τῶν ἀναβαίνοντων (for ἀναβαίνων of "going up" to Jerusalem, cf. 2<sup>2</sup>) ἰσα προσκυνήσουσι (see on 4<sup>20</sup> for the absolute constr. of προσκυνεῖν) ἐν τῇ ἑορτῇ. Among (ἐκ) those who went up to the feast were many strangers (cf. 1 Kings 8<sup>4</sup>). These men were not Ἕλληνησταί, i.e. Greek-speaking Jews (see on 7<sup>26</sup>), but Ἕλληνες, Greeks who had become proselytes of the gate, and accordingly attended the Jewish festivals (see Acts 17<sup>4</sup> for "devout Greeks" at Thessalonica; and cf. Acts 8<sup>27</sup> for the Ethiopian eunuch who came up to Jerusalem to worship). To such proselytes the Court of the Gentiles in the Temple precincts was appropriated. It was from this court (see on 2<sup>14</sup>) that the moneychangers and the cattle were expelled by Jesus on the occasion when He cleansed the Temple; and if this episode is rightly placed by the Synoptists in the last week of Jesus' ministry (but see on 2<sup>14</sup>), the Greek inquirers may have been moved to seek speech with Him by the impression which His strong action had made on them, as well as by the reports of the raising of Lazarus.

21. οὗτοι οὖν προσήλθοσαν Φίλιππῳ τῷ ἀπὸ Βηθσαϊδῆ τῆς Γαλιλαίας. For the notices of Philip in Jn., see on 1<sup>44</sup>, 4<sup>1</sup>. He had a Greek name, and this may have encouraged the Greek proselytes to speak to him. They may have come from the Greek cities of Decapolis.

Objection has been taken to the phrase "Bethsaida of Galilee," i.e. Bethsaida Julius, for no other Bethsaida is known (see on 6<sup>1</sup>), on the ground that the next appearance of this descriptive title is in Claudius Ptolemy (c. 140 A.D.), and that such language suggests a second-century writer. But there is abundance of evidence that the north-eastern side of the lake, where Bethsaida is situated, was reckoned as in the province of Galilee by the year A.D. 80.<sup>1</sup>

τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἴδωσι. 22. ἐρχεται ὁ Φίλιππος καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἀνδρέῳ· ἐρχεται Ἀνδρέας καὶ Φίλιππος καὶ λέγουσιν τῷ Ἰησοῦ.

The Greeks address Philip with respect, as κύριε, "Sir." He was not a Rabbi or teacher, but κύριος was an appropriate mode of address from those who saw in Philip the disciple and friend of One on whom they looked with reverential admiration (see on 1<sup>26</sup>).

Θέλομεν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἴδωσι. There is no suggestion that they understood or imagined that Jesus was the Christ. They say τὸν Ἰησοῦν (using His personal name; cf. 18<sup>6</sup>), not τὸν Χριστόν. And they mean by "seeing" Him, having a private conversation; any one could see Him in the Temple courts, but they wished for something more intimate.

The request may well have embarrassed Philip. The Twelve had been forbidden to preach to Gentiles (Mt. 10<sup>6</sup> 7); and although the Jews at Jerusalem had wondered whether one of the mysterious sayings of Jesus could mean that He proposed "to teach the Greeks" (7<sup>26</sup>), it is a question how far Jesus had explained to the apostles the full scope of His mission. This has been considered above (see on 10<sup>36</sup>); but we must mark here that although in the Fourth Gospel the Gentiles are more explicitly than in the Synoptists brought within the range of Jesus' mission, it is in that Gospel that we can most clearly trace a hesitation on the part of one of the Twelve to admit that Jesus has a message for Greeks as well as for Jews. As has been said above (on v. 20), we are not told whether Jesus gave an interview to these inquirers or whether He refused it.

22. ἐρχεται ὁ Φίλιππος καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἀνδρέῳ. For the close association between Philip and Andrew, and for the vivid characterisation of each which is apparent in Jn., see on 6<sup>1</sup>. Philip is cautious, perhaps a little dull; Andrew is the practical man to whom others appeal in a difficulty. Andrew is one of the inner circle of the Twelve (Mk. 13<sup>9</sup>), and perhaps might venture to proffer an unusual request to Jesus, where Philip would hesitate.

For the second ἐρχεται the rec. text has καὶ πάλε, omitting καὶ before λέγουσι. But the best-attested reading is ἐρχεται Ἀνδρέας καὶ Φίλιππος καὶ λέγουσιν τῷ Ἰησοῦ. The singular ἐρχεται followed by the plur. λέγουσιν is quite a classical usage in a sentence like this.

23. 'Ο δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπακρίνεται αὐτοῖς λέγων Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ἵνα

Jesus announces His impending Passion (v. 23); here is the supreme exemplification of the Law of Life through Death (vv. 24-26)

23. ἀπακρίνεται. So NBLW, as against ἀπακρίνεται (see on 5<sup>17</sup>) of the rec. text, with ADΓΔ. © Jans. 13 have ἀπακρίθη. The pres. tense does not occur in the Synoptists, and in Jn. only twice again, 13<sup>36, 37</sup>.

ἀπακρίνεται αὐτοῖς, sc. He answers Andrew and Philip. The Greeks may have heard what He said, but there is no hint of it in what follows.

For the unusual constr. ἀπακρίνεται λέγω, see on 1<sup>26</sup>; and cf. 1<sup>30</sup>.

Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα. The time of the Passion had come. Cf. 13<sup>1</sup> ἦλθεν αὐτοῦ ἡ ὥρα and 17<sup>1</sup> ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα. The phrase occurs in the Synoptists only in the account of the words of Jesus at Gethsemane immediately before the Betrayal, ἦλθεν ἡ ὥρα, Mk. 14<sup>41</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>42</sup> (cf. ὁ καιρὸς μου ἔγγιστος, Mt. 26<sup>18</sup>, which was said at an earlier stage, before the preparation of the Last Supper).

The Fourth Gospel is written throughout, as Jesus Himself spoke, sub specie eternitatis. He is represented as knowing from the beginning the time and manner and sequel of the end of His public ministry in the flesh. Twice in this Gospel He is made to say "my time (καιρὸς) is not yet come" (7<sup>6, 9</sup>); and twice Jn. comments "His hour (ὥρα) was not yet come" (7<sup>30, 32</sup>; see on 2<sup>4</sup>).

It will be noticed that, with the possible exception of this passage (12<sup>23</sup>), the phrase "the hour has come" is always (13<sup>1</sup> 17<sup>1</sup>, Mk. 14<sup>41</sup>) applied to the hour immediately before the Betrayal. It is not used loosely, as if it only meant "the time is near," and in every case the verb ἐλήλυθεν (ἦλθεν) comes first, the phrase ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα being strikingly and austere impressive and final. Its presence suggests that what is about to be narrated relates to the last scenes, and we shall see (on v. 27) that there are some indications that in what follows Jn. is giving us his version of the prayers of Jesus at Gethsemane.

Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, "the hour is come that the Son of Man should be glorified." For δοξασθῇ, "glorified," sc. in His Death, see on 7<sup>30</sup>; and cf. 12<sup>18</sup> 13<sup>31</sup>. This is quite a different use of δοξάζεσθαι from that at 11<sup>4</sup>, where ἵνα δοξασθῇ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ means "that the Son of God might be glorified" by the manifestation of the Father's power in the recovery of Lazarus. Here, with the δοξασθῇ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. 24. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῶν, ἂν μὴ ὁ κόσμος τοῦ σίτου πεσῶν εἰς τὴν γῆν ἀποθάνῃ, αὐτὸς μόνος μένει· ἂν δὲ ἀποθάνῃ, πολλὸν καρπὸν φέρει. 25. ὁ φιλῶν τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ Passion in view, Jesus does not speak of Himself as "Son of God," but as "Son of Man"; cf. 3<sup>14</sup> 6<sup>18</sup> 8<sup>28</sup>, and see Introd., p. cxxxii.

The glorification of Jesus as Son of Man would be in His Passion, as He now Himself declares. This is the paradox of the Cross. But it is a paradox only to those who have not considered its threefold illustration in nature and in human life: (1) the seed must die that it may be fruitful, v. 24; (2) the true life of man is achieved only through sacrifice, v. 25; (3) the life of service, of ministry, is the life of honour, of the true glory, v. 26.

Ἐλήλυθεν ἡ ὥρα ἵνα δοξασθῇ κτλ. ἵνα seems prima facie to be used as equivalent to "when"; and Burney finds an explanation of this in his suggestion that ἵνα is often a translation or mistranslation of the Aramaic ἵν, which may bear this meaning. But if we compare 13<sup>1</sup> 16<sup>2, 23</sup>, we see that in each case where ἵνα is used as here, it always follows "the hour has come" or "the hour cometh." When God's predestined hour has come, the purpose which He has in view must follow. It has come in order that this purpose may be fulfilled. The use of ἵνα in such passages is an illustration of that view of the sequence of events, which is constantly present to the mind of Jn., and which he does not hesitate to ascribe to Jesus Himself (see on 2<sup>4</sup>).

24. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν κτλ. See on 1<sup>21</sup> for this formula introducing a saying of special solemnity. Here it is prefixed to the first illustration of the paradox that Life comes through Death, viz. the law that the grain of wheat (ὁ κόσμος, any grain) must die before it can bear fruit. To this law Paul appeals in his statement of the resurrection of man (1 Cor. 15<sup>36</sup>). It has, perhaps, a special applicability here, in reference to what precedes; for Christ, who is about to be glorified in Death, claimed to be, Himself, the Bread of Life.

Hippolytus (Ref. vi. 16) quotes from the Aprophasis of Simon Magus (a work written about A.D. 100) a passage that Schmiedel<sup>1</sup> thinks is behind this verse. Simon says that a tree abiding alone and bearing no fruit is destroyed (ἂν δὲ μόνῃ δένδρον μόνον, καρπὸν μὴ ποιοῦν, <μὴ> ἔξικασσάμενον ἀφαιρέται), but he goes on to cite Mt. 3<sup>10</sup>. There is a verbal similarity with Jn., but the thought is quite different.

25. We now come to the second illustration of the great

ἀπολλύει αὐτήν, καὶ ὁ μισθὸν τῆν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον φυλάξει αὐτήν. 26. ἴδὲν ἡμοὶ τις διακοῆς, ἡμοὶ ἄκοparadox of the Cross: "He that loveth his life (ψυχὴ) loseth it (ἀπολλύει, with κβλw, is to be preferred to the rec. ἀπολλύει), and he that hateth his life in this world (ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τούτῳ, cf. 8<sup>29</sup>) shall keep it unto life eternal (for ζωὴ αἰώνιος, see on 4<sup>19</sup>)."

ψυχὴ is the conscious organ of feeling and desire, not so near the Divine as πνεῦμα, sometimes (as here) to be distinguished from πνεῦμα, but often used as its equivalent, just as in English we do not always sharply differentiate "soul" from "spirit" (see on 11<sup>20</sup>).

This great saying may have been repeated by Jesus more than once, representing as it does the central lesson of His teaching and His life. In the Marcan tradition it is placed after the Confession of Peter (Mk. 8<sup>36</sup>, Mt. 16<sup>26</sup>, Lk. 9<sup>24</sup>), when Jesus began to tell the Twelve that His Mission would issue in death. It is found also in other settings in the Mt.-Lk. tradition (Mt. 10<sup>39</sup>, Lk. 17<sup>33</sup>), where it comes from the source Q. In its most literal meaning it was applicable to the choice between martyrdom and apostasy, which Christians of the first century (as well as later) were sometimes called to make. But selfishness is always the death of the true life of man.

The strong expression "hateth his life" (ὁ μισθὸν τῆν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ) is softened down in the Synoptic parallels, but it is found in another context, Lk. 14<sup>26</sup>.

26. In this verse is the third illustration of the paradox of v. 23, that the Passion of Jesus is His glorification. The life of ministry is a life of honour.

ἴδὲν ἡμοὶ τις διακοῆς κτλ. The doctrine of διακονία, i. e. of the dignity of ministry, occupies a large place in all the Gospels. It is, naturally, an instinct of discipleship to minister to a master; and the ministry of women disciples to Jesus (Mk. 1<sup>31</sup> 15<sup>41</sup>, Lk. 10<sup>46</sup>, Jn. 12<sup>2</sup>) needs no special comment. A servant is not thankworthy because he thus ministers (Lk. 17<sup>9</sup>). But the repeated teaching of Jesus goes much beyond this. He taught that the path to pre-eminence in His Kingdom is the path of service, of ministry (Mk. 10<sup>43</sup>), and that true greatness cannot be otherwise attained (Mk. 9<sup>35</sup>). Actually, the test by which His professed disciples shall be judged at the Last Judgment is the test of ministry; have they ministered to man, and therefore to Christ? (Mt. 23<sup>37</sup>). This is the essentia of discipleship, for ministry was the essential characteristic of the life of Christ, who came not διακονηθῆναι ἀλλὰ

διακονῆσαι (Mk. 10<sup>43</sup>); and the issue of His ministry was death, δοῦναι τῆν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ λύτρον ἀντὶ πολλῶν.

In the present passage, He suggests that this, too, may be the portion of His faithful disciples. He has laid down the universal law of sacrifice, "he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it to life eternal" (v. 23). And He warns those to whom He has just foretold His death (v. 23), that His discipleship means following Him, and this may mean a following in the way of death.

ἴδὲν ἡμοὶ τις διακοῆς. This is the true order of words (κβλw), although the rec. has διακοῆς τις. ἡμοὶ here is emphatic. It is the service of Christ that involves a perilous following.

ἡμοὶ ἀκολουθεῖτω, "me let him follow." See on 21<sup>19</sup>.

καὶ ὅπου εἰμι ἐγώ κτλ., "and where I am, there shall my minister be," in spiritual companionship, both here and (as is promised later) hereafter (14<sup>18</sup> 17<sup>34</sup>). εἰμι is the essentia present, not necessarily conveying the idea of the visible presence of Christ (cf. 8<sup>29</sup>). He does not say ἐγώ εἰμι—that would suggest different thoughts (see Introd., p. cxx)—but εἰμι ἐγώ. On the other hand, He had said to the Jews ὅπου εἰμι ἐγώ, ἡμεῖς οὐ δύνασθε ἀλθεῖν (7<sup>24</sup>, where see note).

The rec. inserts καὶ after ἵσταται, but om. κβλw.

ἴδὲν τις ἡμοὶ διακοῆς. Here τις is the emphatic word; the promise that follows is for all true disciples.

τιμήσεται αὐτὸς ὁ πατήρ, "him shall the Father honour"; but the honour may be the kind of honour with which Christ was honoured (v. 23). For τιμᾶν, see on 5<sup>22</sup>.

Jesus' agony of spirit (v. 27); a Voice from heaven (vv. 28-30); the world's condemnation (v. 31); the universal appeal of the Cross (v. 32)

27. Jn. does not give any account of the Agony in Gethsemane (see on 18<sup>1</sup>); but the prayer recorded here corresponds very closely to the prayer in the garden recorded by the Synoptists (Mk. 14<sup>34-36</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>41</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>42</sup>), and it may be that he intends vv. 27-29 to be his version of that tremendous spiritual crisis (see on v. 23). Thus ἡ ψυχὴ μου νεφέραται corresponds with Mk. 14<sup>34</sup> περιπαύεται ὅστις ἡ ψυχὴ μου ἔως θανάτου; σῶσάν με ἐκ τῆς ὥρας ταύτης corresponds to Mk. 14<sup>35</sup> προσήχητο ἵνα ἐκ θανάτου ὅτι παρελθὴ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ ἡ ὥρα; and the repeated πᾶτερ . . . πᾶτερ may reflect εἴββα ὁ πατήρ of Mk. 14<sup>36</sup> (cf.

27. Νῦν ἡ ψυχὴ μου τετάρακται, καὶ τί εἶπω; Πάτερ, σῶσόν με Lk. 22<sup>49</sup>). Indeed, no passage in Jn. illustrates so powerfully as this the words of Mk. 14<sup>36</sup> τὸ μὲν πνεῦμα πρόθυμον, ἡ δὲ σὰρξ ἀσθενής. And, finally, in Lk.'s narrative the sequel of the Agony is ἀφῆθη δὲ αὐτῷ ἄγγελος ἀπ' οὐρανοῦ ἐνδύχων αὐτόν (Lk. 22<sup>43</sup>). Is this another version of Jn. 12<sup>30</sup> ἄλλως ἔλεγον, ἄγγελος αὐτῷ ἐλάλησεν?

It is noteworthy that while Mk., followed by Mt., asserts that John the son of Zebedee was present with Peter and James when the Agony of spirit began (Mk. 14<sup>33</sup>), Lk. does not mention the names of any disciples as specially witnesses of the scene in the garden. The tradition of Mk. is different from the tradition of Lk.; and it would seem that the tradition of Jn. as to the Agony is different from both of his predecessors. Such a crisis of spiritual decision may, indeed, have recurred, Jn. mentioning the earlier occasion, while the Synoptists tell only of the later. But even this does not give a complete solution of the questions raised by the divergences of the evangelists in regard to the Agony; for Jn. at 18<sup>31</sup> puts the saying, "The cup which the Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" (cf. Mk. 14<sup>36</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>42</sup>), into the mouth of Jesus at Gethsemane (although after His arrest) and not in connexion with the narrative of c. 12.

Nor, again, is it a sufficient explanation to say that Jn. does not narrate the Agony in the garden because he wishes to bring out the Divine self-surrender exhibited in the last scenes; for Jn. all through his Gospel lays special stress on the human emotions which Jesus felt. Jn. knew of the Agony in the garden, but we cannot tell why he chooses to reproduce some of the words then spoken by Jesus at the point in the narrative which we have now reached, rather than in what is (apparently) the proper place, viz. c. 18.

ἡ ψυχὴ μου τετάρακται. Cf. 13<sup>27</sup> and 11<sup>20</sup>, where see the note. As is there shown, we cannot in such phrases distinguish ψυχὴ from πνεῦμα. His "soul" was troubled. See the note on 4<sup>9</sup> for the emphasis laid by Jn. on the complete humanity of Jesus; and cf. Ps. 42<sup>7</sup> πρὸς ἑλιάντων ἡ ψυχὴ μου ἐταράχθη (cf. also Ps. 64). This troubling of spirit was truly human (Iieb. 5<sup>7</sup>).

καὶ τί εἶπω; "and what shall I say?" εἶπω, the deliberative subjunctive (see Abbott, Diat. 2512), being used to express a genuine, if momentary, indecision.

πάτερ, σῶσόν με ἐκ τῆς ὥρας ταύτης. This is the natural, human prayer of One face to face with a cruel death.

ἐκ τῆς ὥρας ταύτης. Ἀλλὰ διὰ τοῦτο ἤλθον ἐκ τῆν ὥραν ταύτην. 28. Πάτερ, δόξασόν σου τὸ ὄνομα. ἤλθεν οὖν φωνὴ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ πάτερ. So Jesus was accustomed to begin His prayers; see on 11<sup>41</sup>. For the acc. imper. σῶσον, see on 2<sup>6</sup>.

ἐκ τῆς ὥρας ταύτης: the hour had come (v. 23), and He wished to be saved from its horrors. No distinction can be drawn between ἐκ and ἀπὸ in a constr. like this (see on 14<sup>6</sup> 6<sup>39</sup>), ἀλλὰ διὰ τοῦτο ἐκλ., "and yet for this very purpose," 22. that His ministry should be consummated in the Passion, "did I come to this hour?"; cf. 18<sup>31</sup>. He cannot now draw back from the accomplishment of what He had come to do, in fulfilment of the mission He had received. "Concurreret horror mortis et ardor obedientiae" (Bengel).

28. πάτερ, δόξασόν σου τὸ ὄνομα, "Father (see on preceding verse), make Thy Name glorious," sc. in the fulfilment of the mission of Redemption, which was the Passion of Christ. As "save me from this hour" is the prayer of the σάρξ, so this is the prayer of the πνεῦμα, willing to suffer all, if thereby the Name of God may be glorified. For "the Name" of God, as expressing His character revealed in and by the Son, see on 1<sup>31</sup> 5<sup>38</sup> 17<sup>14</sup>. The "glory" of His Name is His glory as exhibited in the world (cf. Isa. 63<sup>14</sup> 66<sup>6</sup>); and that the Father was "glorified" in the Death of Jesus is said again at 13<sup>31</sup>, where see note.

In Ps. 79<sup>6</sup> we have βοήθησον ἡμῖν, ὁ θεὸς ὁ σωτὴρ ἡμῶν, ἔσθε τῆς δόξης τοῦ ἀνάπατος σου, but the Psalmist's prayer was that the people might be delivered, and that in this deliverance the glory of the Name might be exhibited. Here the prayer is not for deliverance; it is a prayer of submission to what was impending, because through the Passion God's Name would be glorified. This is the most complete and perfect example of the prayer enjoined upon every disciple, ἀγιαστῆρα τὸ ὄνομα σου (Mt. 6<sup>9</sup>). In the Lord's Prayer this comes first, before any petition; it is the condition to be accepted before the petition "deliver us from evil" can be offered. But in the case of Jesus it involved the surrender of all thought of such deliverance. "Glorify Thy Name" carries with it the "Thy will be done" of resignation.

There is a variant reading (L. 1, 13, 33), δόξασόν σου τὸν νῦν, which may (as Abbott suggests, Diat. 2769) have arisen by the misreading of a scribe, τονομα being written τονομα, and then τονω at the end of a line being read as τονω, "the Son." But it is more likely that δόξασόν σου τὸν νῦν has been imported here from 17<sup>14</sup>; and the fact that D adds ἐν τῇ δοξῆν ἢ εἶπον παρὰ σοὶ ἕνεκα τοῦ τὸν ἄκουσον γίνεσθαι from 17<sup>a</sup> makes this probable. In any case, "glorify Thy Son" has a wholly different meaning (see note on 17<sup>a</sup>) from "glorify Thy Name," which is undoubtedly the true reading in the present passage.

It must be observed that πάτερ, δόξασον σου τὸ ὄνομα is not a prayer that God's Name may be glorified by Jesus or by the world (for which idea, cf. Ps. 86<sup>13</sup>, Isa. 42<sup>10</sup>, Mal. 1<sup>11</sup>), but that God may Himself make it glorious. This is to be, indeed, through the voluntary Death of Jesus; but the ministry of Jesus is treated throughout the Gospel as fulfilled in the Name of the Father, His words and works being, as it were, words and works of the Father (see on 5<sup>a</sup> 10<sup>30</sup> 17<sup>11</sup>).

ἤλθεν αὖν φωνὴ ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, "there came then," ε.ε. in answer to the prayer, "a voice from heaven." This expression first appears Dan. 4<sup>31</sup>, where a voice from heaven warns Nebuchadnezzar. The phrase became common in later Judaism. In the O.T. there are many indications of the belief that God may speak to men with audible and articulate voice (e.g. 1 Sam. 3<sup>10</sup>, 1 Kings 19<sup>12</sup>, Job 4<sup>16</sup>). The Rabbin, however, hesitated to use so anthropomorphic a form of speech as "God said," and they preferred to speak of a "voice from heaven." For examples, see Enoch lxxv. 4, Jubilees xvii. 15, 2 Esd. 6<sup>12-17</sup>, and the first-century Apocalypse of Baruch xxii. 1, which has "The heavens were opened, and . . . a voice was heard from on high, and it said, Baruch, why art thou troubled?" Cf. also a remarkable parallel to the passage before us in Test. of XII. Patr. (Levi, xviii. 6): "The heavens shall be opened, and from the temple of glory shall come upon him sanctification, with the Father's voice as from Abraham to Isaac, and the glory of the Most High shall be uttered over him."

In Rabbinical literature the heavenly voice is often mentioned under the name of bath-gól, בַּת רוּחַ, i.e. "the daughter of a voice." The days of the prophets being over, the bath-gól was regarded as the only medium of Divine revelation, and was generally counted as miraculous.<sup>1</sup> Two points only can be noted here: (1) the revelations of the bath-gól were often expressed in Scripture phrases,<sup>2</sup> and (2) there are instances of the bath-gól taking the form of an echo of words spoken on earth.<sup>3</sup>

figuration (Mk. 9<sup>7</sup>) of Jesus, and the present verse. In both the Synoptic passages, sc. of the Baptism and Transfiguration, the bath-gól or heavenly Voice speaks in almost the same words. It combines Ps. 2<sup>7</sup> and Isa. 42<sup>1</sup>: "Thou art My Son . . . My chosen in whom My soul delighteth"; that is, it was expressed in Scripture phrases. Jn. does not tell of the Transfiguration, and he says nothing about the voice from heaven at the Baptism (cf. 1<sup>22-29</sup>). But he mentions here a bath-gól of which, on the other hand, the Synoptists say nothing. Even if we are right in regarding vv. 28-30 as the Johannine version of the agonised prayer at Gethsemane, there is nothing in any of the Synoptic accounts of Gethsemane which corresponds with this comforting voice, although Lk. (22<sup>42</sup>) tells of angelic ministrations.

That is, according to the Gospel narratives, heavenly voices were heard by Jesus at three great moments of crisis and consecration in His ministry: after His Baptism, at His Transfiguration, and just before His Passion. In no case is it said that others understood or interpreted these "voices"; and if we put this into our modern ways of speech, we should say that their messages were subjective in the sense that they conveyed a meaning to none but Him to whom they were addressed, while objective in the sense that He was not deluded or deceived, for they were truly messages from God.

In v. 28 the Voice is an answer to the prayer δόξασον τὸ ὄνομα, and according to Jn. it said to Jesus καὶ δόξασα καὶ ἑώραν δόξασω, i.e. "I did glorify My Name, and will glorify it again." This is not a quotation from the O.T., as the bath-gól often was, although there are O.T. passages verbally like it. The pregnant saying of 1 Sam. 2<sup>30</sup> τοὺς δοξάζοντάς με δόξασω, and the promise of Divine deliverance in Ps. 91<sup>12</sup>, which ends ἐχθούμαι καὶ δόξασω αὐτόν, both speak of God "glorifying" His pious servants; but the thought here is of God glorifying His own Name, which is quite different. The bath-gól, if it may be so called, in this passage is of the nature of an echo, the word "glorify" in the prayer being twice repeated in answer. It is just possible, as Abbott suggests (Diat. 782 f.), that we should illustrate this by the one or two instances of an echoing bath-gól that appear in the Talmud. But, whether this be so or not, it is plain that Jn. means us to understand that a sound was heard after Jesus had prayed, which conveyed an assurance to Him that His prayer was answered, while at the same time it impressed the bystanders with the sense that, at all events, something unusual was taking place.

ἰδοῦσθε, as, e.g., at the raising of Lazarus, where the spectators saw τὴν δόξαν τοῦ θεοῦ (17<sup>10</sup>). All the εἶρη of Jesus during His earthly ministry were ad maiorem Dei gloriam.

Και ἐβόησα καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω. 29. ὁ οὖν ὄχλος ὁ ἐστὼς καὶ ἀκούσας ἔλεγον βροντῆν γεγονότα· ἄλλος ἔλεγον ἄγγελος αὐτῷ λαλέησκον. 30. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ ἢ φωνὴ αὐτῆ πάλιν δοξάσω, sc. in the approaching Passion of Jesus, when ὁ θεὸς ἐδοξιάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ (13<sup>21</sup>). Nor need the promise πάλιν δοξάσω be thus restricted, for in every fresh triumph of the Christian spirit may be seen its fulfilment.

Aphrahat (Ser. Dem. xxi. 17) attributes the words "I have glorified and will glorify" to Jesus Himself—a curious slip of memory, unless it is a deliberate attempt to evade the difficulty of the passage.

29. ὁ οὖν ὄχλος ὁ ἐστὼς (ADW@ have ἐστῆρας; cf. 3<sup>m</sup>) καὶ ἀκούσας κτλ., "the crowd (that is, most of the bystanders) that stood by and heard said that it had thundered." That thunder is the Voice of God is a commonplace in the O.T. (cf. Ex. 9<sup>m</sup>, 2 Sam. 22<sup>14</sup>, Ps. 29<sup>3</sup>, Job 37<sup>7</sup>, Jer. 10<sup>13</sup>); and when the crowd said that it had thundered, they meant that the thunder was a Divine response to what Jesus had said, although they did not catch any articulate words. This is the only place in the N.T. where mention is made of a thunderclap.

Ἄλλος ἔλεγον, ἄγγελος αὐτῷ λαλέησκον, "others," that is, a few of the crowd, discerned that Jesus had received a definite message of comfort, and that something more than a clap of thunder had been heard. But none of the bystanders heard any articulate words; and this Jn. is careful to make clear. In this particular, the narrative is like that of the Voice from heaven at the conversion of Paul, where his companions heard a sound (ἀκούοντες τῆς φωνῆς, Acts 9<sup>7</sup>) but did not distinguish the words (τῆν φωνῆν οὐκ ᾔκουσαν τοῦ λαλοῦντός μοι, Acts 22<sup>7</sup>; see note above on 3<sup>o</sup>).

Wetstein illustrates the passage by the prayer of Anchises, which has some verbal similarities (Virg. Aen. i. 692):

"Da deinde augurium, pater, atque haec omnia firma Vix ea factus erat, semior, subitoque fragore Intonuit laetum."

30. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν. See on 1<sup>m</sup>, 30. ὁ δὲ ἐγὼ ἢ φωνὴ αὐτῆ (this is the order of κΑΒDLW@) γέγονεν ἀλλὰ δὲ ἡμῶς, "this voice has not happened for my sake but for yours." (For γέγονεν D has ᾤθον, and @ has ἐβόηθεν.)

This statement presents difficulties similar to those which the traditional text offers at 11<sup>42</sup>; for it represents the Voice from heaven as without any significance for Jesus Himself, and as γέγονεν ἀλλὰ δὲ ἡμῶς. 31. νῦν κρίσις ἐστὶν τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· νῦν ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἐκβληθήσεται ἔξω· 32. κἀγὼ ἐάν intended only to impress the crowd. No doubt, it might be said that the sound, whatever it was, suggested to the crowd that they would do well to mark what was happening, for it seemed to be a heavenly signal in answer to the prayer of Jesus. It was the signal for the judgment of the world (v. 31), now beginning. But we cannot attach any meaning to the words καὶ ἐβόησα καὶ πάλιν δοξάσω (v. 28), which the crowd were not able to catch (v. 29), if they had no significance for Jesus. It was to Him that the heavenly Voice seemed to come, and in coming to give assurance to His spirit, that His impending Death was to the greater glory of God. It is not impossible that v. 30 has been added by the evangelist, in order to emphasise the voluntariness of Christ's surrender of Himself, as a superhuman Person who needed no support for His soul even in this dark hour. But v. 31, for all that, follows v. 30 in a true sequence: "The Voice was on your account. For now is the world of men like you being judged."

31. νῦν. The Passion is conceived of as already begun (see on v. 23 and 13<sup>21</sup>). It is a judging (κρίσις), a testing of men (see 3<sup>17</sup> 8<sup>18</sup> 9<sup>m</sup>).

For τοῦ κόσμου τούτου, see on 8<sup>23</sup>, and v. 25 above.

The phrase ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου appears again 14<sup>30</sup> 16<sup>11</sup>, but nowhere else in the N.T. (cf., however, ὁ θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου 2 Cor. 4<sup>4</sup> and Eph. 2<sup>6</sup> 6<sup>12</sup>). The title "the ruler of this world" is applied to Beliar in the earlier part of the Ascension of Isaiah (l. 3, ii. 4, x. 29), which is probably contemporary with the Fourth Gospel; and Ignatius has ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου several times, e.g. Εφῶ. xvii. xix. According to Lightfoot (Hor. Heb. in loc.) ὁ ἄρχων ἦν was a well-known Jewish title for Satan<sup>1</sup> (or for Samael, the Angel of Death), and it may be that the Johannine ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου goes back to this.

"The prince of this world has been already judged" (16<sup>11</sup>); but here is in view the issue of the judgment, when he shall be finally cast out (ἐκβληθήσεται ἔξω) of the world over which he claims dominion (cf. 1 Jn. 4<sup>4</sup>). For ἐκβάλλειν ἐκ, see on 6<sup>7</sup>.

32. ἐάν ὁπωσδήποτε ἐκ τῆς γῆς, sc. on the Cross. See the note on 3<sup>14</sup>; and cf. 8<sup>20</sup>. ἐκ τῆς γῆς is "from the earth" and not "out of the earth" as R.V. marg. has it, and as Westcott interprets because he finds the Ascension indicated here by ὁπωσδήποτε.

πάντας ἀλείψω πρὸς ἑμαυτὸν. For the verb ἀλείψω, see on 6<sup>4</sup>. For ἑμαυτὸν in Jn., see on 5<sup>30</sup>. It has often been suggested (the criticism goes back to Celsus; see Origen, c. Cels. ii. 13) that the predictions of His Passion which the evangelists place in the mouth of Jesus are valetudinis sui evēnia, and that in particular these predictions, as recorded by Jn., are so precise that they cannot be regarded as historical. It is not, indeed, impossible that in some instances the evangelists, and especially Jn. and Mt., ascribed language to Jesus which was coloured by their knowledge of the sequel of His ministry. But that He foresaw the end is certain. He knew, and apparently was conscious from a very early stage in His ministry, what its issue would be. And wonderful as a prophecy like δὲ ἰσχυρῶς τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου (v. 34) seems to be, and is, it is not more wonderful than that we should find in a document of the first century the prophecy ἐγὼ ἰσχυρῶς ἐκ τῆς γῆς πάντας ἀλείψω πρὸς ἑμαυτὸν, "I will draw all men to myself" (cf. 10<sup>39</sup>). The continuous fulfilment of this prophecy throughout many centuries and among all races of men is a fact of history. It is not any easier to believe that the prophecy is an invention of the evangelist, than that he recorded it because he had heard that his Master uttered it. Whether we have in Jn. 12<sup>33</sup> a genuine saying of Christ or a saying which Jn. thought would be appropriate to Him, it is a saying of remarkable prescience. The Word of the Cross (1 Cor. 1<sup>29</sup>) has always been a word of power; and the Appeal of the Cross has been the most effective that the world has known. It draws "all men," πάντας, to the Crucified.

There is a variant reading πάντα (*D) which, if genuine, would embrace the whole creation within the circle of the attraction of Christ. But πάντας is better authenticated.

σημαίνων ποιῶ θανάτῳ κτλ. Cf. 22<sup>19</sup>. ἡμελλεν. So ABDW.  $\eta$  has ἡμελλεν. Perhaps ἡμελλεν ἀποθνήσκειν, as also at 12<sup>31</sup> 18<sup>36</sup>, carries the idea of the inevitableness of the Death of Jesus, as foreordained by God. See on 6<sup>71</sup>.

34. Ἀπεκρίθη οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ δούλος ἡμεῖς ἡκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, καὶ πῶς λέγεις σὺ ὅτι δὲ ἰσχυρῶς τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; τίς ἵσταν οὖτος ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου;

The people ask who the "Son of Man" is (v. 34), and Jesus warns: them to use the light while they can (vv. 35, 36)

34. ἀπεκρ. οὖν αὐτῷ κτλ.  $\eta$ BLW support  $\omega\delta$ , which  $\Theta$  and the rec. text omit.

ἡμεῖς ἡκούσαμεν ἐκ τοῦ νόμου ὅτι ὁ Χριστὸς μένει εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. "The Law" (see on 10<sup>36</sup>) often includes more than the Pentateuch, and the reference is somewhat vague. Ezek. 37<sup>36</sup> has "David my servant shall be their prince for ever"; Ps. 89<sup>6</sup> 110<sup>4</sup> are apposite, as also Isa. 9<sup>1</sup>. Cf. Orac. Sibyll. iii. 767, and Psalms of Solomon, xvii. 4.

πῶς λέγεις σὺ ὅτι δὲ ἰσχυρῶς τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; τίς ἵσταν οὖτος ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου; We have seen (Introd., p. cxxiii) that Jesus habitually spoke of Himself in the third person as "the Son of Man," and Jn. implies here that Jesus had used this way of speech when He said that He would be "lifted up," i.e. crucified. But His present hearers did not understand what He meant; they were not accustomed to His habits of speech, and the title "the Son of Man" was unfamiliar to them (cf. 9<sup>35</sup>). "Who is this 'Son of Man'?" they asked. The form of the question is exactly the same as τίς ἵσταν οὖτος ὁ λόγος ἔν εἶπεν; (7<sup>36</sup>). There is no emphasis on οὖτος in either passage. We must not translate "Who is this Son of Man," as if there were another "Son of Man," of whom they had often heard; for Jn. does not express emphasis by such a use of οὖτος, and "the Son of Man" was not a recognised title of the Christ.<sup>1</sup>

On the other hand, if we could suppose that in popular speech the Christ was sometimes called "the Son of Man," the meaning of the passage would be somewhat different. It would represent the crowd as puzzled that any one should seem to tell them that the Christ was to suffer a dishonourable death. "The Son of Man must be crucified, you say . . . Who can this Son of Man be? . . . He cannot be the Christ or the Son of Man of Daniel's vision (Dan. 7<sup>13</sup>), whose dominion is to be everlasting." Cf. Knock, lxii. 14, "With that Son of Man will they eat and lie down and rise up for ever." But if this was what the objectors meant, we should have expected them to say, "the Son of Man abides for ever," rather than "the Christ abides for ever," as more apposite to the objection which they are putting forward. We prefer the view that the

There is a passage in Justin (Tryph. 32) which recalls their argument on any interpretation. Justin has quoted Dan. 7, and Trypho the Jew objects, "These scriptures indeed compel us to expect that Great and Glorious One who as a son of man receives the eternal kingdom from the Ancient of Days; but this your so-called Christ became dishonoured and inglorious so that he fell under the last curse in the law of God (Deut. 21<sup>30</sup>), for he was crucified." The Jews, with whom Trypho was in accord, did not expect a Suffering Messiah.

35. "Who is this Son of Man?" Jesus does not answer the question, or explain Himself further. But He repeats the austere warning which He gave before (5<sup>a</sup> and 7<sup>b</sup>), where see note), that He would not be much longer (5<sup>a</sup> and 7<sup>b</sup>), where see note); it would only be μικρὸν χρόνον, "for a little while." Even this He expresses in mystic words which not all could have understood in their fulness; or, at least, the evangelist represents Him as speaking only indirectly of Himself and His approaching departure, when He said ἐτι μικρὸν χρόνον τὸ φῶς ἐν ὑμῖν ἔσται. He had claimed to be the Light of the World (8<sup>13</sup>), but not many had believed that the Light was really among them, or had grasped what was meant.

ἐν ὑμῖν is the true reading (κΒDWO and the Latin vs.) rather than the rec. μεθ' ὑμῶν (A). Cf. for ἐν as equivalent to "among," Acts 4<sup>12</sup>; and note ἀκούσαντων ἐν ὑμῖν (1<sup>13</sup>).

He goes on with an exhortation: "Walk while ye have the light" (8<sup>12</sup>) (ὡς τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, not εἰς of the rec. text, is the best attested reading). ἵνα περιπατεῖτε as used of conduct, cf. 8<sup>12</sup>; and see especially 9<sup>11</sup>, 10<sup>10</sup>.

ἵνα μὴ σκοτία ὑμᾶς καταλάβῃ, "lest darkness overtake you," and so get the better of you. See on 1<sup>8</sup>, the only other place where καταλαμβάνειν is found in Jn. (but cf. [8<sup>1</sup>] and note on 5<sup>b</sup>); and cf. 1 Thess. 5<sup>4</sup>, where the "day" is said to "overtake" one engaged in dark pursuits.

44. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἔκραξεν καὶ εἶπεν Ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ οὐ πιστεύει εἰς ἐμὲ ἀλλὰ εἰς τὸν πέμψαντά με, 45. καὶ ὁ θεωρῶν ἐμὲ θεωρεῖ τὸν πιστεύειν εἰς τὸ φῶς. For the Johannine phrase πιστεύειν εἰς . . . see on 1<sup>12</sup>; τὸ φῶς indicates here the Person who is the Light (1<sup>9</sup>). To trust the Light, and walk in confidence that it will not mislead, is necessary for those who would become "sons of light."

36. ὡς τὸ φῶς ἔχετε, &c. while Jesus was among them; but the exhortation has a wider application, and is for all time.

υἱοὶ φωτός. The Oriental "looked upon any very intimate relationship—whether of connexion, origin, or dependence—as a relation of sonship, even in the spiritual sphere";<sup>1</sup> but there is nothing necessarily Hebraic in such a phrase as υἱὸς φωτός, which is not alien to the genius of the Greek language (cf. 17<sup>13</sup>). It is equivalent to "an enlightened man," and first appears in a saying of Jesus recorded in Lk. 16<sup>8</sup>, that the υἱοὶ τοῦ αἰῶνος τούτου are sometimes more prudent than the υἱοὶ τοῦ φωτός. The contrast between those who are in darkness and those who are υἱοὶ φωτός, as Paul called his converts, appears in 1 Thess. 5<sup>5</sup>; and there is a similar exhortation in Eph. 5<sup>8</sup> ὡς τέκνα φωτός περιπατεῖτε. φωτισμός became soon the regular word for the grace of baptism (cf. Heb. 6<sup>4</sup>, 10<sup>32</sup>); but there is no trace of this usage in Jn.

Jesus reiterates His august claims (vv. 44-50)

44-50. We place these verses after v. 36<sup>a</sup> (see Introd., p. xxv). There is now a sequence of thought, the ideas of light and truth in v. 36<sup>a</sup> being the subjects of vv. 44-46.

The section vv. 44-50 can represent only a summary of the teaching of Jesus on the occasion. See below on vv. 36<sup>a</sup>-43. His final warning recalls the lament over Jerusalem's unbelief and its rejection of His claims preserved in Mt. 23<sup>37-39</sup>, Lk. 13<sup>34-35</sup>.

44. Ἰησοῦς δὲ ἔκραξεν καὶ εἶπεν. The def. art. is omitted here before Ἰησοῦς, contrary to the general usage of Jn. (see on 1<sup>20</sup>). But he often omits it in the phrase ἀπεκρίθη ἰη. καὶ εἶπεν (see on 1<sup>20</sup>), which is like the phrase here. For ἔκραξεν, see on 7<sup>26</sup>.

ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ κτλ., "he that believeth on me, believeth not on me (only), but on Him that sent me." The affirmative sentence, followed by a negative clause to bring out the sense, is thoroughly Johannine. See on 1<sup>20</sup>; and cf. 3<sup>13</sup>.

πέφαντά με. 46. ἐγὼ φῶς εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐλάλησα, ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ ἂν τῆ σκοτίης μὴ μέλη. 47. καὶ ἐάν τις μου ἀκούσῃ

For πιστεύων εἰς . . . , a characteristically Johannine constr., see on 1st; and for the idea of the Father "sending" the Son, which is so frequent in Jn., see on 3rd. Cf. v. 49.

That he who believes on (or accepts) the Son accepts the Father, is a saying found in the Synoptists: δὲ ἐὰν δεχόμενος λόγον τοῦ ἀποστόλου τῶν ἐξουσιῶν (Mt. 10<sup>40</sup>; cf. Lk. 9<sup>48</sup>). Jn. here substitutes his favourite word πιστεύων for δεχόμενος, and also uses πέφανται for ἀποστόλου (see on 3rd); but in 13th (where see note) he has λαμβάνειν instead of πιστεύειν in a second citation of this saying of Jesus.

Cf. 5th πιστεύων τῷ πέφαντί με, and (for the general sense of the verse) 8th, 48. In 14th the argument is turned round: "Ye believe in God; believe also in me."

46. ὁ θεωρῶν ἐμὲ κτλ. θεωρεῖν is used here (as at 6th 14th) of spiritual vision. Not all those who saw Jesus with bodily eyes "saw the Father." For θεωρεῖν, see on 2nd; and cf. the saying ὁ ἑώρακός ἐμὲ ἑώρακεν τὸν πατέρα (14th, where see note). So at v. 41 Jn. identifies the δόξα of Christ with the δόξα of God. Cf. 8th.

τὸν πέφαντά με. Fam. 13 read ἀποστειλάτω (see on 3rd for πέφανται and ἀποστειλάτω).

46. ἐγὼ φῶς εἰς τὸν κόσμον ἐλάλησα. Cf. 3rd τὸ φῶς ἐλάλησεν εἰς τὸν κόσμον, and 9th ὅταν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ᾶ, φῶς εἰμι τοῦ κόσμου. That Christ is the Light of the world is a principal topic with Jn.; cf. also 1st, 5, 9 8th.

ἵνα πᾶς (B om. πᾶς per incuriam) ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ κτλ., "in order that every one that believeth in me may not remain in darkness" (going back to v. 35), sc. in the darkness which is the normal state of man before the revelation of Christ (cf. 1 Jn. 2nd, 11). The form of the sentence is that of 3rd ἵνα πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων εἰς αὐτὸν μὴ ἀπόληται, and the meaning is the same, although a different metaphor is employed. Christus Illuminator is Christus Salvator.

47. ἐάν τις μου ἀκούσῃ τῶν ῥημάτων, sc. with appreciation and understanding of what they signify: if it were only the mere physical hearing that was meant, ἀκούων would take the acc., and we should have τὰ ῥήματα. See on 3rd. It is only the man who is neglectful of Christ's words, while understanding them all the time, that is here contemplated.

μὴ φυλάξῃ. So WABDLW, but rec. has πιστεύσῃ. D<sup>o</sup> omitt μὴ before φυλάξῃ, the motive apparently being to place vv. 47 and 48 in sharp contrast. But v. 48 is, in fact, a reaffirmation of v. 47; the distinction suggested by Westcott, τῶν ῥημάτων καὶ μὴ φυλάξῃ, ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω αὐτὸν· οὐ γὰρ ᾔθλων ἴνα κρίνω τὸν κόσμον, ἀλλ' ἵνα σώσω τὸν κόσμον. 48. ὁ ἀθετεῖ ἐμὲ καὶ μὴ λαμβάνειν τὰ ῥήματα μου ἔχει τὸν κρίνοντα αὐτὸν· ὁ λόγος δὲ ἐλάλησα, ἵνα οὐ κρίνω αὐτὸν ἐν τῇ ἐσχάτῃ ἡμέρᾳ. 49. ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶ that v. 47 contemplates the listener who does not put into practice what he has heard, while v. 48 contemplates the man who defiantly does not listen at all, is over subtle.

φυλάσσειν is used in Mk. 10th of "keeping" the Ten Commandments; cf. Lk. 11th. In the Sermon on the Mount, the man "who hears these words and does them not" (Mt. 7th) is compared to one who builds on the sand. Of him Jesus says here ἐγὼ οὐ κρίνω αὐτὸν (see note on 8th); He came not to judge the world, but to save the world (see on 3rd). There is a sense in which "judgment" is inevitably the issue of His Advent (cf. 9th), but it was not the main purpose of that Advent. See on 13th.

The clause, "I came not to judge the world, but to save the world," recalls an addition to the text at Lk. 9th. In that passage Jesus rebuked James and John, the true text, according to WABCL, being στραφεῖς δι' ἐπερίμωμον αὐτοῖν. But a "Western and Syrian" addition (to use the nomenclature of Westcott-Hort) gives: "and said, Ye know not what spirit ye are of, for the Son of man came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them." If this Western text represents a true tradition (whether it be Lucan or not) of words addressed by Jesus to John the son of Zebedee, it is significant that similar words should be ascribed to Jesus in the "Gospel according to St. John." If, however, the words ὁ γὰρ πᾶς τοῦ ἀθρώπου οὐκ ἤθελεν ψυχῆς ἀθρώπων ἀπολέσαι, ἀλλὰ σώσαι may be taken as Lucan, then we have here another point of contact between Lk. and Jn., where Jn. is seemingly correcting Lk. (see Introd., p. xcix). Cf. 20th for a similar instance.

48. ἀθετεῖν is not found again in Jn.; but cf. Lk. 10th. For the phrase λαμβάνειν τὰ ῥήματα μου, cf. 17th; and see Mt. 13th.

He who receives not the word of Christ "has one who judges him," sc. the "word" itself, which shall rise up in judgment against him at the Last Day (cf. Deut. 18th). The λόγος is the "saying," or the sum of the ῥήματα, the words spoken. With this passage cf. Mt. 10th, Lk. 12th; and see Introd., p. clix.

For the Johannine use of ἀθετεῖν, see on 1st; and for the phrase "the Last Day," peculiar to Jn., see on 6th.

49. The reason why His word is final and absolute, is that it is not His own merely, but that it is the word of God who ἡμαντο οὐκ ἐλάλησα, ἀλλ' ὁ ψέμας μοι Πατὴρ ἀπὸς μοι ἐπιτάλην δέδωκεν τί εἶπω καὶ τί λαλήσω. 50. καὶ οὐδὲ ὅτι ἡ ἐπιτάλη αὐτοῦ ζῶν αἰώνιος ἔστω. Ἄ σὺν ἐγὼ λαλῶ, καθὼς ἐλάλησέν μοι ὁ Πατὴρ, οὕτως λαλῶ.

sent Him, and thus provides the ultimate test by which men are judged.

ἐγὼ δὲ ἡμαντο οὐκ ἐλάλησα. He had said this before (7<sup>17</sup>). We cannot distinguish ἀπ' ἡμαντοῦ from ἐξ ἡμαντοῦ; see on 1<sup>44</sup>. As He had said that He could do nothing of Himself (5<sup>30</sup>), so now He declares of His words that they, too, are words of the Father. For His "mission" from the Father, see on 3<sup>17</sup> and the references given there.

ἀπὸς μοι ἐπιτάλην δέδωκεν, "Himself hath given me commandment . . ." the pft. tense expressing continuing action (cf. 14<sup>31</sup>). The rec. δέδωκε has only secondary uncial support. See 17<sup>8</sup> τὰ ῥήματα ἃ δέδωκα μοι δέδωκα αὐτοῖς; and cf. 10<sup>18</sup> 14<sup>23</sup> 15<sup>10</sup> for the ἐπιτάλη of the Father to Christ. Of the Prophet to come (Deut. 18<sup>18</sup>), Yahweh had said, "I will put my words in His mouth, and He shall speak unto them all that I shall command Him." Indeed, the formula of all the prophets was, "Thus saith Yahweh."

τί εἶπω καὶ τί λαλήσω. Perhaps both the substance and the form of His words are suggested by the two verbs; but it seems simpler to treat them as identical in meaning here (see λαλῶ, v. 50), the repetition being in the style of dignity.

Justin (Tyrwh. 56) recalls this Johannine doctrine of the relation of the Son to the Father: "He never did anything except what God willed Him to do or to speak" (βουλομένης καὶ πράξουσιν καὶ ἀμειλίχως).

50. καὶ οὐδὲ ὅτι κτλ. Cf. 5<sup>38</sup> 8<sup>36</sup>, this form of solemn assurance being used in each case by Jesus, when speaking of His knowledge of the "witness" or "commandment" of God, or of God Himself.

ἡ ἐπιτάλη αὐτοῦ ζῶν αἰώνιος ἔστω. See for ζῶν αἰώνιος on 3<sup>18</sup>; and cf. 6<sup>38</sup>, where Peter confesses to Jesus ῥήματα ζῶντος αἰώνιου ἔχεις. It is instructive to recall the Synoptic story that the answer to the young man who asked τί ποιήσω ἵνα ζῶν αἰώνιος κληρονομήσω; was to refer him to the Ten Commandments (Mk. 10<sup>17</sup>). It is not only for Jn., but for the Synoptists too, that the Divine Commandment, when fully realised, is Eternal Life, although in the Synoptists the idea of eternal life as already present is only latent and is not made explicit.

καθὼς ἐλάλησέν μοι ὁ πατήρ, οὕτως λαλῶ. This is the effect of the absolute value of the words of Jesus; cf. 8<sup>38</sup> and 14<sup>31</sup>.

86<sup>b</sup>. It is explained above (on v. 44) that the section vv. 44-50 has been transposed, so as to place v. 44 immediately after v. 36<sup>a</sup>. Thus the connexion of ideas is unbroken, and we now come to v. 36<sup>b</sup>.

"These things spake Jesus, and He departed and hid Himself from them." This is the conclusion of Part II. of the Gospel,<sup>1</sup> the climax of the Jerusalem ministry, the rejection of Jesus by the Jews. He had hidden Himself before (8<sup>30</sup>), when the Jews sought to stone Him; but He went into seclusion now because He had given His last warning. The time for teaching was over.

In Mk. (13<sup>36</sup>, 36<sup>b</sup>) the final word to the Jews is, "Watch, . . . lest the Master coming suddenly find you sleeping." But the final word in Jn. is more sombre, and is suggestive in its phrases of the judgment that afterwards came on the Jews: "Walk while ye have the Light, lest darkness overtake you. . . . While ye have the Light, believe in the Light" (vv. 35, 36). He had reiterated His august claims (vv. 44-50), and then He withdrew. Jn. does not say where He withdrew, but according to Lk. 21<sup>29</sup> it seems to have been in Bethany that He passed the last nights.

37. Verses 37-43 contain an explanatory commentary by the evangelist upon the Rejection of Jesus by the Jews, its causes and its extent.<sup>2</sup> τοσαῦτα, "so many" (cf. 6<sup>21</sup>), not "so great." For the term σημεῖα, see on 2<sup>11</sup>, 33. Many had believed in consequence of the "signs" that had been wrought; cf. 2<sup>23</sup> 4<sup>46</sup>, 7<sup>35</sup> 11<sup>47</sup>, 45, it being clear that Jn. knew of many "signs" other than those which he describes (cf. 20<sup>30</sup>). But the nation as a whole did not accept Him (cf. 1<sup>11</sup> 3<sup>11</sup>, 22 5<sup>38</sup> 15<sup>24</sup>), although some in high station were among those that believed, while they were afraid to confess it (v. 42). For the constr. ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν, see on 1<sup>11</sup>.

88. Jn. does not hesitate to say that the unbelief of the Jews was "in order that" the prophecies of Isaiah should be fulfilled. ἵνα πληρωθῆ must be given its full telic force; see Introd., p. cliv. Paul (Rom. 10<sup>15</sup>) quotes Isa. 53<sup>1</sup> to illustrate this unbelief and as a prophecy of it, but he does not say ἵνα ἔληθ. as Jn. does (cf. 1<sup>28</sup> 10<sup>42</sup>).

δὲ εἶπεν Κέραι, τίς ἐπίστευεν τῇ ἀκοῇ ἡμῶν; καὶ ὁ βραχίον Κυρίου οὐκ ἀνεκαλύφθη; 39. διὰ τοῦτο οὐκ ᾔσταντο πιστεῖν, ὅτι πάλιν εἶπεν Ἡσαίας 40. Τετύφλωκεν αὐτῶν τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς καὶ ἐκώρυσεν αὐτῶν τὴν καρδίαν, ἵνα μὴ ἴδωσι τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς καὶ νοήσωσι τῇ

The quotation is from Isa. 53<sup>1-2</sup>, introduced by the opening word ὅρα, which is also added in the LXX. Here, probably, Jn. is influenced by the LXX version.

There was a twofold fulfilment: (1) the people did not believe the words of Jesus, and (2) they did not recognise the "arm of the Lord" in His signs. In the O.T. the "arm of God" is often figurative of His power (Deut. 3<sup>14</sup>, cf. Lk. 1<sup>41</sup>), especially in Deutero-Isaiah (40<sup>31</sup> 51<sup>8</sup> 52<sup>10</sup> 63<sup>5</sup>). One of the theses of Cyprian's Testimonium (ii. 4) is "Quod Christus idem manus et brachium Dei," and he quotes Isa. 53<sup>1-2</sup> as here; but it would be to go beyond the evidence to conclude that this idea is in the thought of Jn.

39. διὰ τοῦτο, i.e. because of the prophetic words of Isaiah which follow: they had to be fulfilled, for they were the expression of Divine foreknowledge.<sup>1</sup> διὰ τοῦτο refers to what follows, not to what precedes; see note on 3<sup>14</sup>, and cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>1</sup>.

ὅτι πάλιν εἶπεν, "because again Isaiah said, etc."

40. This second quotation, from Isa. 6<sup>10</sup>, differs markedly from the LXX. (1) The LXX has altered the Hebrew, which ascribes the hardening of Israel's heart to God's agency, and throws the sentence into a passive form: σκληρῶθη γὰρ ἡ καρδία τοῦ λαοῦ τούτου κτλ. Jn., however, reproduces the sense (although not the exact phrases) of the Hebrew "He hath hardened their heart."<sup>2</sup> (2) The LXX has μήποτε ἴδωσι τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς. Now Jn. (and it is one of the notable features of his style) never uses μήποτε. Instead, he has ἵνα μὴ here and elsewhere (see on 3<sup>20</sup>), which may represent the Aramaic ḥāṭā. Indeed ḥāṭā is actually reproduced in the Pesh. rendering of Isa. 6<sup>10</sup>. Burney infers<sup>3</sup> that Jn. is here translating direct from the Aramaic.

The passage Isa. 6<sup>10</sup> is quoted also by Mt. (13<sup>15</sup>), who takes it verbally from the LXX. He places it in the mouth of Jesus Himself; it is not in Mt., as in Jn., an illustrative passage quoted by the evangelist. It is quoted also in Acts 28<sup>26</sup> from the LXX, where Paul is represented as applying its words to the Jews at Rome. Probably Isa. 6<sup>10</sup> was regarded by Christians from the beginning as predictive of the Rejection of Jesus by the Jews (cf. Mk. 4<sup>11</sup>, Lk. 8<sup>10</sup>).

The prophets often speak of people who "have eyes and

see not, and ears and hear not" (Jer. 5<sup>11</sup>, Ezek. 12<sup>4</sup>; cf. Isa. 42<sup>19</sup>), and the same thing may be observed in every age and country. The child's story of "Eyes and no Eyes"<sup>4</sup> has a universal application. But Isa. 6<sup>10</sup> speaks of a penal blindness, an insensibility which was, as it were, a Divine punishment for sin. So at Isa. 44<sup>18</sup> we have, "He hath shut their eyes, that they cannot see; and their hearts, that they cannot understand." And in Deut. 29<sup>4</sup> the comment of Moses when the Israelites did not recognise the meaning of the "signs" in Egypt is, "The Lord hath not given you an heart to know and eyes to see and ears to hear unto this day." Paul makes this doctrine his own: "God gave them eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear" (Rom. 11<sup>8</sup>). That sin causes a blindness of the soul, a moral insensibility to spiritual truths, is a law of the natural, that is of the Divine, order.

Jesus rebukes the multitude (Mk. 8<sup>18</sup>) who did not rightly interpret the miracle of the loaves, by saying, "Having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not?" In explaining the Parable of the Sower to His disciples, while He did not explain it to the multitudes, He gave the reason. "Unto them that are without all things are done in parables, that seeing they may see and not perceive, and hearing they may hear and not understand, lest haply they should turn again and it should be forgiven them" (Mk. 4<sup>11-12</sup>, Lk. 8<sup>10</sup>). Mt. 13<sup>13</sup> gives the same saying, and represents Jesus as quoting Isa. 6<sup>10</sup>,<sup>5</sup> in full from the LXX, which does not ascribe the moral blindness of the people to the agency of God.

Jn., however, never shrinks from a direct statement of events as predestined; if things happened, it was because God intended them to happen. He does not attempt here to soften down the tremendous judgment of Isa. 6<sup>10</sup>.<sup>6</sup>

The verb ἐκώρυσεν has been generally translated "hardened." But this is a misleading rendering.<sup>7</sup> κώρυσος is numbness, rather than hardness; and the prophet's ἐκώρυσεν αὐτῶν τὴν καρδίαν is strictly parallel to the first half of the verse, τετύφλωκεν αὐτῶν τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς. We should translate:

"He hath blinded their eyes, and darkened their hearts,"

for κώρυσος τῆς καρδίας is precisely "blindness of heart."

στραφῶσιν is read by RBD<sup>7</sup>, and is therefore to be preferred

ὅτι εἶδεν τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐλάλησεν περὶ αὐτοῦ. 42. ὅμοι μόνου καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχόντων πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ διὰ to the rec. ἐπιστροφῶσιν. LWΘ have ἐπιστρέψουσιν. Field points out that στραφῶσιν is to be taken in a middle sense, "turn themselves"; cf. a similar usage at 20<sup>14, 15</sup>.

41. The true reading is ὅτι (NABLΘ), not ὅτι of the rec. text or ὅταν with W. It was not when Isaiah saw his vision of Yahweh and the seraphim that he announced the blindness of men's eyes (Isa. 6<sup>1-2, 10</sup>), but it was because the vision was so dazzling that he realised how far men were from being equal to it.

The vision was not with the eye of sense; it was spiritually that Isaiah "saw the Lord," a statement that the Targum characteristically softens by saying he saw the glory of the Lord. But Jn. goes farther. He declares that in this vision Isaiah saw the glory of Christ, and spake of Him (εἶδεν τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐλάλησεν περὶ αὐτοῦ, αὐτοῦ necessarily referring to the same person in both limbs of the sentence). This illustrates the freedom, so to speak, with which Jn. treats the O.T. In the vision of Isa. 6, the prophet contemplates the awful glory of the invisible God; but the evangelist, in affirming that he spoke of the glory of Christ, identifies Christ with the Yahweh of Israel. It was a later Christian thought that the Logos was the agent of the O.T. theophanies, and it may be that Jn. means to suggest this. In any case, he seems to be aware of the Targum which says that Isaiah saw the glory of Yahweh (see on 1<sup>15</sup>).

καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχ. κτλ., "even of the rulers," who were most difficult to convince, "many believed on Him" (for the constr. see on 1<sup>15</sup>), e.g. men like Nicodemus (3<sup>1</sup>) and Joseph of Arimathea. See note on 8<sup>20</sup> for the phrase πολλοὶ ἐπίστευσαν εἰς αὐτόν. The Pharisees had put it to the common folk, many of whom were attracted by Jesus (vv. 11, 37), as a test question, "Hath any of the rulers believed on Him?" (7<sup>40</sup>). This had now actually come to pass, but fear of the fanaticism of the Pharisees (cf. v. 19) prevented their belief from showing itself in open confession of the claims of Jesus. It has been suggested that the young ruler who made the Great Refusal<sup>1</sup> may have been among these secret disciples.

οὐχ ἠμολόγησεν, "they were not confessing Him." For ἠμολόγησεν used of "confessing" Christ, see 1<sup>28</sup> 9<sup>35</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>22</sup> 4<sup>1, 2, 15</sup>, Rom. 10<sup>9</sup>.

ἵνα μὴ . . . For this favourite constr. of Jn., see on 3<sup>10</sup>.

For ἀποσυνηγάγοι, see on 9<sup>22</sup>. To be forbidden to enter a synagogue, even for a short period, would be a serious matter for a member of the Sanhedrim. To be shut off from the common worship of one's friends and colleagues is a grave penalty, especially for an ecclesiastical personage.

43. ἤγάπησαν γὰρ τὴν δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων κτλ., "for they loved the honour that men bestow rather than the honour that God bestows" (see 5<sup>44</sup> and the note there). The genitives ἀνθρώπων . . . Θεοῦ are both genitives of origin, the thought being similar to that in 5<sup>44</sup>, where the same contrast is drawn. δόξα is used in the sense of "honour" (see on 1<sup>14</sup>); it would be quite unfitting to speak of any one loving the glory of God, in the sense in which δόξα has been used above at v. 41.

The form of the sentence is like 3<sup>18</sup> ἠγάπησαν οἱ ἄνθρωποι μᾶλλον τὸ σκότος ἢ τὸ φῶς, except that here Jn. has ἤπερ for ἢ. ἤπερ occurs only here in the N.T. (cf. 2 Macc. 14<sup>42</sup>), and is perhaps more emphatic than ἢ, μᾶλλον ἤπερ signifying "much more than." 1LW I, 33, 69 have ἵνα, but ABDΓΔΘ give ἤπερ, which was altered to ἵνα as the more ordinary word.

This comment, in which Jn. attributes low motives to those of whom he writes, may be compared with what he says about Judas (12<sup>6</sup>). A grave and austere judgment on the discipleship that prefers to be in secret (see on v. 42) is the last comment of the evangelist on the rejection of Jesus by the Jews, as described in Part II.

PART III.—THE PASSION AND RESURRECTION (XIII.—XX.)

HITHERTO the exoteric or public teaching of Jesus has been expounded: in Part I. as addressed to would-be disciples, and in Part II. to Jews, for the most part incredulous. In Part III. we have only the esoteric and private teaching reserved by Jesus for His chosen friends and future ambassadors.

XIII. 1. Πρὸ δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἤλθεν αὐτοῦ ἡ ὥρα ἵνα μεταβῇ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, ἀγαπήσας τοὺς ἰδίους τοὺς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, εἰς τέλος ἠγάπησεν αὐτούς.

Part III. begins with a carefully constructed editorial introduction (13<sup>1</sup>). It is noteworthy that, while vv. 1-3 are full of Johannine phrases, a greater use is made of subordinate and dependent clauses than is customary with Jn., who prefers parataxis in narration.

The Feet-washing of the Last Supper (vv. 1-11)

XIII. 1. πρὸ δὲ τῆς ἑορτῆς τοῦ πάσχα. δὲ is resumptive, the Passover being that mentioned 12<sup>4</sup>. What is now to be narrated took place on the eve of the Passover, i.e. on the evening of Nisan 13.

ἤλθε. Attention is specially called in this narrative (vv. 3, 11, 18) to the perfect insight and foresight which Jesus exhibited as to the time and circumstances of the Passion; cf. 18<sup>4</sup>, 19<sup>20</sup>. He knew that "His hour had come" (cf. 12<sup>20</sup>); see on 2<sup>4</sup> for this feature of the Fourth Gospel, that it represents the predestined end as foreseen from the beginning.

For ἤλθεν (πABLWΘ) the rec. has ἐληλυθέν. Ἰ has παρήν. For ἵνα in the sense of "when," see on 12<sup>20</sup>.

ἵνα μεταβῇ κτλ. Harris has suggested that this is Passover language; and in one of Bede's Homilies we find "Pascha transitus interpretatur."<sup>1</sup> But μεταβαίνω is never used elsewhere in the Greek Bible with this suggestion. Its use here of a departure from this life to the unseen world is, indeed, also without Biblical parallels; but cf. 5<sup>34</sup>, 1 Jn. 3<sup>14</sup>.

ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου. See for this phrase the note on 8<sup>20</sup>. For κόσμος generally, see on 1<sup>9</sup>.

πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα. Christ's departure or ascension is spoken of again as a "going to the Father," 14<sup>12</sup>, 20 16<sup>16</sup>, 28, τοὺς ἰδίους. "His own intimate friends and disciples," not, as at 1<sup>11</sup>, "His own people, the Jews." Cf. Mk. 4<sup>34</sup>. τοὺς ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. They were "in the world," as He said 17<sup>11</sup>, although in another sense they are distinguished from "the world," out of which they had been given to Him (17<sup>9</sup>). These men He had loved.

εἰς τέλος ἠγάπησεν αὐτούς. To translate these words "He loved them unto the end," although linguistically defensible, reduces the sentence to a platitude. This verse introduces an incident to which Jn. gives a good deal of space, and which he regards as of high consequence. "Jesus, knowing that His hour was come that He should depart out of this world unto the Father. . . ." The reader expects that this solemn prelude is to be followed by a statement that Jesus did or said something of special significance. The statement is εἰς τέλος ἠγάπησεν αὐτούς, and it seems to mean, "He exhibited His love for them to the uttermost," i.e. in a remarkable manner.

2. καὶ δαίτῳ γενομένου, τοῦ διαβόλου ἦν βεβλημένος εἰς τὴν καρδίαν ἵνα παραδοῖ αὐτὸν Ἰούδας Ἰσκαριώτης, 3. εἶδος ὅτι

First, as to ἠγάπησεν. If "He continued to love them" were the meaning, we should expect the impf. rather than the aor. tense. The aor. indicates a definite act, rather than a continuing emotion; so ἠγάπησεν in 3<sup>14</sup> is used of the love of God as exhibited in the gift of His Son. Abbott (Diat. 1744) quotes a similar Pauline use in Rom. 8<sup>26</sup>, Gal. 2<sup>20</sup>, Eph. 5<sup>2</sup>, and also Ignatius, Magn. 6. Thus ἠγάπησεν may mean here "He showed His love," sc. by His action, unprecedented for a master, in washing the feet of His disciples. And so the words καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς of v. 34 bear a definite reference to ἠγάπησεν in v. 1 and to the feet-washing which followed.

Secondly, εἰς τέλος is often used as equivalent to "wholly" or "utterly," as at Josh. 3<sup>10</sup>, 1 Chron. 28<sup>9</sup>, 2 Macc. 8<sup>20</sup>, 1 Thess. 2<sup>16</sup>. Abbott (Diat. 2322c) cites Hermas, Vis. iii. x. 5, where Διὰ εἰς τέλος means "joyful exceedingly," or "joyful to the uttermost." It can equally well mean "to the end," e.g. Mt. 10<sup>28</sup>, where it is said that "he that endures εἰς τέλος shall be saved"; but this rendering does not suit the context here.

Accordingly, we translate v. 2, "Jesus, knowing that His hour was come that He should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved His own which were in the world, exhibited His love for them to the uttermost," i.e. gave that remarkable manifestation of His love for His disciples which is told in the narrative of the feet-washing that follows.

2. For γενομένου (π*BLW) the rec. text, with π*ADΓΔΘ, has γενομένη, which wrongly suggests that the supper was ended.

δειπνοῦ γενομένου, "while a supper was going on," "during supper," there being no def. art. and no suggestion that this was the supper of the Passover feast, as the Synoptists state.

τοῦ διαβόλου ἦν βεβλημένος κτλ., "the devil having already put it into the heart of Judas, etc.," So the Synoptists (Mk. 14<sup>10</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>14</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>3</sup>) represent the matter, Judas having made his bargain with the chief priests on a previous day of the same week; Lk. alone (Jn. does here) ascribing

πάντα ἔδωκεν αὐτῷ ὁ Πατήρ ἐν τὰς χεῖρας, καὶ ὅτι ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθεν his treachery to the instigation of the devil, ἐξῆλθεν Σατανᾶς εἰς Ἰούδαν. This is repeated by Jn. at v. 27, when Judas decided on the final and fatal step. Cf. Acts 5<sup>1</sup>.

The rec. text, with AD12A, has a smoother order of words, εἰς τὴν καρδίαν Ἰουδᾶ Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτου, ἵνα αὐτὸν παραδοῖ, which does not differ in meaning from the better supported εἰς τὴν καρδίαν Ἰσα παραδοῖ αὐτὸν Ἰούδας Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτης (so κΒL).

For παραδοῖμαι, see on 6<sup>4</sup>. For Ἰσκαριώτης, see on 6<sup>1</sup>. It is applied here to Judas, as there to his father Simon.

3. After εἶπας, AΘ add ὁ Ἰησοῦς for the sake of clearness; om. κΒDLW. For ἔδωκεν (κΒLW) the rec. has δέδωκεν with AD12A.

εἶπας, as in v. 1; but here it signifies that Jesus set Himself to the humble office of washing His disciples' feet, with full consciousness of the majesty of His Person, and even because of it. He knew that the Father had given all things into His hands, and that therefore He could evade the Passion which was impending, if He wished. Cf. 3<sup>36</sup> ὁ πατήρ ἀγαπᾷ τὸν υἱὸν καὶ πάντα ἔδωκεν ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ. We cannot distinguish ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ in that passage from αὐτῷ εἰς τὰς χεῖρας in this. So at Dan. 1<sup>2</sup> the LXX has παρέδωκεν . . . εἰς χεῖρας αὐτοῦ, where Theodotion has ἔδωκεν ἐν χειρὶ αὐτοῦ. ἐν and εἰς are not always to be distinguished.

Jn. says of Jesus that He knew ἐν ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθεν. So Nicodemus was ready to admit, ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐγένετο οὐδὲν σκευασμένον (3<sup>7</sup>); and on the night before the Passion the apostles made the same confession, ἀπὸ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθεν (16<sup>30</sup>). Jn. never makes Jesus speak thus of Himself. He does not say ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐξῆλθεν, but always uses either παρὸς or ἐκ in such contexts. Yet, again, the distinction of prepositions cannot be pressed (see on 14. 44 16<sup>30</sup>).

καὶ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὁπάγει, "and is going to God," the historic present which vividly reproduces the situation. For ὁπάγει, see on 7<sup>33</sup> 16<sup>7</sup>. 16.

There seems to be a reminiscence of this teaching (see also 16<sup>30</sup>) in Ignatius, Μαγν. 7, Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν ἀπὸ ἑνὸς πατρὸς προελθόντα καὶ εἰς ἕνα ὄντα καὶ χωριστά. See on 1<sup>18</sup>.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE ON THE LAST SUPPER

Before we examine Jn.'s narrative of the Last Supper, we set down what we conceive to have been the actual order of events. Although the Synoptists treat the Last Supper as the Paschal Feast, which Jn. pointedly does not do, there can be no doubt that Jn. 13 is intended to describe the same supper as that of Mk. 14, Mt. 26, Lk. 22. We cannot harmonise the various narratives precisely, but they have much in common. We place the incidents in order as follows:

1. The supper begins.
2. The disciples dispute about precedence (Lk. 22<sup>36</sup>; not in Mk., Mt., Jn.).
3. Jesus washes the feet of the disciples, by His example rebuking their self-seeking, and bidding them remember that their Master was content to act as their slave (Jn. 13<sup>4-10</sup>; cf. Jn. 13<sup>15, 16</sup> and Lk. 22<sup>26, 27</sup>).
4. Jesus announces that a traitor is in their midst (Jn. 13<sup>10, 11, 18, 21</sup>, Mk. 14<sup>18</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>21</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>21</sup>).
5. The disciples begin to ask which of them was thus designated (Jn. 13<sup>22</sup>, Mk. 14<sup>19</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>19</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>22</sup>).
6. Jesus tells John the beloved disciple that the traitor is the one to whom He will give the sop from the dish (Jn. 13<sup>25, 26</sup>; cf. Mk. 14<sup>20</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>22</sup>; not in Lk.).
7. Jesus gives the sop to Judas (Jn. 13<sup>29</sup>), and thus or otherwise conveys to Judas that He knows of his intentions (Mt. 26<sup>25</sup>). This is not in Mk. or Lk., neither of whom at this point names Judas as the traitor.
8. Judas goes out at once (Jn. 13<sup>30</sup>; not in Mk., Mt., Lk.).
9. The Eucharist is instituted (Mk. 14<sup>22c</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>26c</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>19c</sup>; not in Jn., but cf. Jn. 6<sup>11-13</sup>).
11. Jesus warns Peter that he will deny Him (Jn. 13<sup>36-38</sup>, Mk. 14<sup>28c</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>30c</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>32c</sup>).

On examination of this table, it will be noticed, first that Jn. and Mk. (whom Mt. follows) never disagree as to the order of the various incidents; the important differences being that Jn. describes the Feet-washing, which Mk. does not mention, and that he omits the Institution of the Eucharist. Jn. also tells that it was to the beloved disciple that Jesus conveyed the hint which might have enabled the company to have identified the traitor (see on 13<sup>30</sup>); and he alone mentions expressly that Judas left the room.

The order, however, in which Lk. mentions the several incidents is different. His order is 1, 10, 9, 4, 5, 2, 11, omitting 3, 6, 7, 8; the most remarkable feature in his narrative being that he puts the announcement that a traitor was present after the Institution of the Eucharist, thus implying that Judas received the Bread and the Cup along with the rest. The position, also, which he gives to the mysterious saying numbered 10 above, differs from that assigned to it by Mk. and Mt. Lk., in short, follows a different tradition from that of Mk. and Mt. in his narrative of the Eucharist. The longer recension of the words of Institution as given by him (see Introd., p. clxxii) seems to have been derived from Paul; but that cannot be said of the Western version, which may be the original. From whatever source Lk. has derived his narrative of the Last Supper, it has marks of confusion. We are justified, then, in preferring to his order of incidents here that which is given in the two Gospels Mk. and Jn., which probably rest respectively on the reminiscences of Peter and of John the son of Zebedee, both of whom were present at the Supper.

At what point in the narrative of Jn. are we to suppose that the Institution of the Eucharist took place? The foregoing comparison with Mk. suggests that we should put it after Judas had left (v. 30), and before the prediction of the Passion as near (v. 37, 32). That Jn. knew of the Institution of the Eucharist is certain; and we have found reason for holding that the words of Institution are reproduced in  $\phi^{21}$ , where see note. We hold that there has been a dislocation of the text after 13<sup>30</sup>, and that the original order was c. 15, c. 16, c. 13<sup>31-32</sup>, c. 14, c. 17.<sup>8</sup> It may be that a paragraph has been lost after 13<sup>30</sup>, and it is tempting to conjecture that this paragraph told of the first Eucharist.<sup>9</sup> But, if this were not so (and there is no external evidence for it), we must fall back on the conclusion that Jn. has designedly omitted to tell of the Institution of the Eucharist (although he betrays his knowledge of it in c. 6), while his reasons for this omission cannot now be discovered. See on v. 31.

XIII. 4. ἔγειραι ἐκ τοῦ δείπνου, "He rises from the supper," that is, from the couch on which He had been reclining. This shows that the Feet-washing which follows was not before supper, and so is not to be regarded as the cleansing

ἡμῶν, καὶ λαβὼν λόβιον δέξωσεν ἑαυτὸν 5. εἶτα βάλαι ὕδωρ εἰς of the feet which was preparatory to a meal. Where sandals are worn, the feet get dusty and tired, and it was a courtesy of hospitality to arrange that water was available for washing them (Lk. 7<sup>44</sup>; cf. Gen. 18<sup>8</sup> 19<sup>2</sup> 24<sup>41</sup> 43<sup>4</sup>, Judg. 19<sup>11</sup>, 1 Sam. 25<sup>41</sup>, 1 Tim. 5<sup>19</sup>). But in this case, the supper had not only begun, but was probably ending. In the talk that followed, the disciples began to dispute about their precedence (Lk. 22<sup>34</sup>), perhaps in reference to the order in which they were placed at the meal; and Jesus, rising from His place, proceeds to give them an object-lesson. "Whether is greater, he that sitteth at meat, or he that serveth? Is not he that sitteth at meat? But I am in the midst of you as he that serveth" (Lk. 22<sup>27</sup>). So, stripping off His outer robe or tallith (ἡμῶν) and appearing in His tunic only, He girded Himself with a towel, as a slave would do, that He might pour water upon their feet. Wetstein recalls the story of Caligula, who was wont to insult members of the Senate by making them wait at table succinctos linteo (Suetonius, Cal. 26). This story indicates how great an act of condescension the Feet-washing by Christ must have seemed to His disciples to be.

With δέξωσεν, cf. 21<sup>7</sup>: Lk. 12<sup>37</sup> 17<sup>8</sup> illustrate the "girding" himself for his work which was appropriate to a slave. The towel (linteum) was fastened to the shoulder, so as to leave both hands free.

8. The word ὑδῶν does not occur again in Greek literature.<sup>1</sup> Biblical or secular, except in quotations of this passage. It must mean some washing utensil, but "basin" may easily convey a wrong impression. Orientals do not wash, as we do, in a basin which visibly retains the water that has been used; that they would regard as an unclean practice. The Eastern habit is to pour water from an ewer over hands or feet (cf. 2 Kings 3<sup>1</sup>), where Elisha performs this duty for his master Elijah, the water being caught below in a basin with a strainer, and then passing through the strainer out of sight. The assistance of a servant is necessary, as both the ewer and the basin have to be held. At the Last Supper, the disciples were reclining on the usual divans or couches, their feet being stretched out behind (see Lk. 7<sup>38</sup>, where the sinful woman was "standing behind" at the feet of Jesus, when she let her tears fall upon them). Jesus first poured (βάλαι, cf. Mt. 5<sup>7</sup>) water into the ὑδῶν, which was ready in the room for such a purpose (τὸν ὑδῶν, "the ewer"), and then He poured the τὸν νεκρῶτα, καὶ ἤρξατο νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας τῶν μαθητῶν καὶ ἐκμάσασεν αὐτὸν λέγων ὅτι ἦν διεζωσμένος. 6. ἔρχεται οὖν πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον λέγει αὐτῷ Κύριε, σύ μου νίπτειν τοὺς πόδας; 7. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ὁ ἄγιε τοῦ σὺ οὐκ οἶδας ἄριε, γινώσκω water over the disciples' feet, drying them with the towel with which He had girded Himself. He did all that was the duty of a slave for his master who was having his feet washed.<sup>1</sup>

καὶ ἤρξατο κτλ. The verb ἀρχάσθαι does not occur again in Jn. (but cf. [8th]). He began to wash the disciples' feet,<sup>2</sup> but it is not said in what order, nor is this now possible to determine. Some have thought that the order was that in which they sat at table, and that Judas came first (see on v. 23 below). Or it may have been Peter, for οὖν in the phrase ἔρχεται οὖν πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον (v. 6) is not causative (see on 1st). οὖν is a favourite conjunction with Jn., and vv. 5, 6 may be rendered in accordance with his usage, "He began to wash the disciples' feet. . . and so He comes to Simon Peter." We do not know.

After μαθητῶν, D, for clearness, adds αὐτῶν. αἱ μαθηταὶ here are the Twelve, the inner circle (cf. v. 1), not the general body of the disciples (see on 2<sup>d</sup>).

ἐκμάσασεν is always used in Lk. and Jn. for "wiping" the feet after washing (Lk. 7th, 44, Jn. 11th 12th).

ὅτι ἦν διεζωσμένος. ὅτι is, by attraction, for ἔ.

6. After Σίμωνα Πέτρον, the rec. adds καὶ, with καὶ ΠΑΥΛΟΣ; but the conjunction is omitted by BDL, and this suits the abrupt style of the narrative. After λέγει αὐτῷ, in like manner, εἰπὼς is added by rec. text, with καὶ ΑΔΛΩΤΩΣ, to make the sense clear; om. κthB.

ὅτι μετὰ ταῦτα. 8. λέγει αὐτῷ Πέτρος Οὐ μὴ νίψῃς μου τοὺς πόδας εἰς τὸν αἶμα. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς αὐτῷ Ἐάν μὴ νίψῃ σε, οὐκ ἔχει μέρος μετ' ἐμοῦ. 9. λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος Κύριε, μὴ τοὺς πόδας

9th), but thou shalt know presently." μετὰ ταῦτα (see Introd., p. cviii) is equivalent to "afterwards," and is quite vague as to the length of time that is to elapse.

For the distinction between αἶμα and γινώσκου, see on 1st, cf. v. 12.

The Feet-washing is explained vv. 12 f. as being a lesson in humility. The disciples had been disputing about precedence (see on v. 4 above), and Jesus reminds them, as He had done before, of the dignity of service and ministry. See on 12th, where the high place which διακονία occupies in the teaching of Christ is discussed. Here He illustrates, by His action (cf. Lk. 22nd), this essential feature of His mission, and He bids His disciples to follow His example (v. 16). As to the possibility of a deeper symbolism, see on v. 10 below.

8. οὐ μὴ νίψῃς μου τοὺς πόδας, "Thou shalt assuredly never (εἰς τὸν αἶμα; see on 4th) wash my feet," μου being emphatic because of its position in the sentence (acc. to BCL; but the rec. text, with καὶ Ε, puts it after πόδας).

The answer of Jesus, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me," is very severe. "To have part with another," or to be his partner, is to share in his work, and ultimately in his reward. Thus the unfaithful slave is condemned to have his part (τὸ μέρος αὐτοῦ) with the hypocrites (Mt. 24th; cf. Ps. 50th). The Levites had no part in the inheritance of Israel, their work being different from that of the other tribes (Deut. 10th 12th); Simon Magus had no part in the apostolic endowments of the Spirit, being actuated by ideals wholly different from those of the apostles (Acts 8th); a Christian has no part with an unbelieving heathen (2 Cor. 6th). So to decline the call of ministry, to which every disciple is called, is to have no part with Christ, to be no partner of His, for His work was pre-eminently a work of ministry (see on 12th). Peter's refusal to allow his Master to minister to him was really to reject that principle of the dignity of ministry and service which was behind the work of Jesus.

It was not said affirmatively that he whom Jesus washed was thereby recognised as His partner; for the feet of Judas were washed by Him, and He knew Judas for a traitor.

9. For Σίμων Πέτρος, B has Πέτρος Σίμων, by inadvertence; D omits Σίμων.

Peter does not yet understand what is meant by the strange act of his Master. He now thinks that the "washing"

μου μόνον ἄλλα καὶ τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν. 10. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ὁ λελουμένος οὐκ ἔχει χρεῖαν εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας νίψασθαι, of which Jesus has spoken is for bodily cleansing, or (perhaps) is a symbol of spiritual cleansing; and he cries with his accustomed impulsiveness, "Lord (κ<sup>ε</sup> om. κύριε), not my feet only, but also my hands and my head," thus missing the point of the action of Jesus. It was not a symbol of cleansing, but an illustration of the dignity of service, even menial service; and therefore the washing was of the feet, rather than of the hands or the head.

10. B om. δ before Ἰησ., ins. κΑCΔWΘ. For the rec. order οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχει, κABC*W have οὐκ ἔχει χρεῖαν.

κ omits the words εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας, possibly, as Abbott (Diast. 2659e) suggests, by homoioteleuton. κ sometimes writes ε as ι, and Abbott thinks the archetype may have been

ΨΑCΘΑΙ

However that may be, BC*L retain εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας, AC* having ἢ τοὺς πόδας, while E* has τοὺς πόδας only; D expands and gives οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχει τὴν κεφαλὴν νίψασθαι εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας μόνον.

If the words εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας are omitted (κ, with Origen and some O.L. authorities), the answer of Jesus is clear, "He that has been bathed needs not to wash," thus indicating that His words and actions have had nothing to do with cleansing, as Peter supposed; and the pedilavium was an illustration only of the dignity of ministry. But the variants show that τοὺς πόδας was probably in the original text, and that the omission of the words is due either to homoioteleuton or to the difficulty of reconciling εἰ μὴ τοὺς πόδας with the words ἄλλ' ἔστιν καθαρὸς ἄλλος which follow.

καθαρός is often used of external cleanliness, as at Mt. 23<sup>a</sup> 27<sup>b</sup>, and cf. Heb. 10<sup>a</sup> λελουμένοι τὸ σῶμα ἕδειν καθαρῶς, where καθαρός refers to the purity of the water to be used in baptism; but in the only other place where it occurs in Jn. (15<sup>a</sup>) the word is used of spiritual purity. To this other meaning of καθαρός Jesus reverts here; then to the words "ye are clean" He adds, "but not all," Judas being the exception. As far as bodily cleanliness was concerned, no doubt Judas was on a par with the rest; but not in a spiritual sense.

ἄλλ' οὐχὶ πάντες. This, according to Jn., is the first hint given by Jesus that one of the Twelve would be a traitor; although Jn. has stated (6<sup>46</sup>) that He had known this ἐξ ἀρχῆς, and repeats the statement here (v. 11).

In this verse a new idea emerges, sc. that of spiritual purity, being suggested by the double meaning of καθαρός; and we have to inquire if (as some have thought) Jn. sees a deeper symbolism in the feet-washing than the lessons of humility and of the dignity of service. In v. 8 we had, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." This, apart from its context, would naturally refer to the spiritual cleansing which is needful before the disciple can be Christ's partner, and perhaps (see on v. 9) Peter understood it thus. But in the narrative this is not the interpretation of His action furnished by Jesus Himself (vv. 13-16); although it has been thought that Jn. tells the story in terms which imply it.

Yet (1) if the cleansing be the spiritual purification which is the issue of Christ's atonement, then we have an idea introduced which is foreign to the context and which does not appear again in c. 13. It is worth adding that the conception of Christ washing away sin in His blood is not explicit anywhere in the N.T. (in Rev. 1<sup>a</sup> the true reading is λούωντι, not λούονται, and Rev. 7<sup>14</sup> refers to man's part in redemption, "they washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb.")

(2) More plausible is the interpretation which finds in the pedilavium the symbol of baptism. This goes back to Tertullian (de bapt. xii.), but Tertullian is inclined to find a foreshadowing of baptism in any N.T. phrase which alludes to water. The washing of Christian disciples in the water of baptism is, however, a familiar image in the N.T.; cf. 1 Cor. 6<sup>11</sup>, Eph. 5<sup>6</sup>, Tit. 3<sup>a</sup>, and Heb. 10<sup>a</sup> λελουμένοι τὸ σῶμα ὕδατι καθαρῶ. Holtzmann suggested<sup>1</sup> that Jn. in this passage is giving an account of the institution of Baptism as a Christian rite, and that he gives it here instead of narrating, as the Synoptists do, the institution of the Eucharist, because he wishes to call attention to the high dignity of baptism. "In doing so, he at the same time very plainly offers the suggestion that washing the feet should be allowed to take the place of complete immersion." The last sentence is not only an anachronism, for baptism by affusion rather than by immersion is, so far as we know, a concession much later than the latest date that can be assigned to the Fourth Gospel;<sup>1</sup> but no baptismal rite has ever been known which substituted the pouring water on the feet for pouring it on the head or the body. The pedilavium, indeed, is prescribed in some early Gallican "Ordines Baptismi" and also in the baptismal offices of the Celtic Church. But it was no part of the actual baptism; it was a supplementary ceremony, intended to illustrate for the new Christian what manner of life his should be—humble and ministerial, as was his Master's.

If there be any allusion to baptism here, it must lurk in the word λελουμένοις, "bathed," and this is specially contrasted with the "washing" (ῥίπτειν) of the feet. The esoteric meaning of v. 10 would then be that, as baptism cannot be repeated, the baptized person needs but to have regard to the removal of the occasional defilements of sin with which he is troubled. Even this seems over subtle.

The simplest explanation is that provided in vv. 13-16; the sudden turn of the argument in v. 11 being due to the ambiguity of the word καθαρός, which suggests the introduction of the saving clause "but not all."

11. The saying "but not all" was not understood by the disciples, who did not suspect Judas. After the Passion, it would have needed no explanation; but Jn., in explaining what it meant, is reproducing the situation as it presented itself to an eye-witness.

ᾄδει γὰρ τὸν παραδιδόντα αὐτόν, "for He knew the man that was delivering Him up," the pres. part. indicating that the movement of treachery had already begun (see on v. 2). Jn. is always careful to bring out the insight of Jesus in regard to men's characters and motives (see on 2nd). This explanatory comment is characteristic of his manner of writing (see on 2nd).

12. ὅτε . . . αὐτῶν, "When then He had washed their feet," αὐτῶν indicating that He ministered to them all.

καὶ ἔλαβεν τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ, "and had taken His garments," i. e. had resumed the fallish which He had taken off (v. 4).

καὶ ἀνέστειν πάλιν, "and had reclined (or, as we should say, sat down) again." He resumed His place at the table, which He had left when ἐγείρεται ἐκ τοῦ δεῖπνου (v. 4).

εἶπεν αὐτοῖς Γινώσκετε τί πεποίηκα ὑμῖν; γινώσκετε may be either imperative (as at Josh. 23rd, Dan. 3rd, Jn. 15th) or interrogative, as it has usually been understood. Abbott (Dial. 2243) prefers to take γινώσκετε as imperative here, the Lord bidding the disciples to recognise, and mark the meaning of, His ministry to them. The words go back to γινώσκω μετὰ ταῦτα of v. 7, in any case. They introduce the interpretation of the strange action of Jesus in washing the disciples' feet.

For γινώσκετε, see on 1st.

13. ἤρκει φωνεῖν με κτλ., "You address me as Teacher and Lord." φωνεῖν (see on 1st) is the word regularly used by Jn. for calling a person by his name or title.

For the titles Rabbī (διδάσκαλος) and Mari (κύριε), by which the disciples were accustomed to address Jesus, see on 1st above. ὁ διδάσκαλος, ὁ κύριος, are called by the grammarians titular nominatives.

καὶ καλῶς λέγετε, εἰμὶ γὰρ, "and you say well, for so I am." Cf. with εἰμὶ γὰρ the καὶ ἴσμεν of 1 Jn. 3rd. Christ affirms His own dignity, even while stooping to what the disciples counted a menial office. He will not permit them to be in any doubt about this.

14. εἰ οὖν ἐγὼ κτλ., "If then, I, your Lord and Teacher, have washed your feet, a fortiori, you ought to wash the feet of one another." By this example were the dignity and the duty of mutual διακονία recommended (see on 12th) to Christian disciples.

The precept was not taken by the Church to be the initiation of a sacramental rite; the pedilavium was never counted as a sacrament, although the custom grew up by the fourth century, in certain parts of the Western Church, of washing the feet of the poor on the Thursday before Easter. In England, the sovereign, or in his stead the Lord High Almoner, used to do this with ceremony until 1731; and in Rome the Pope still presides at the pedilavium. The pious widows described in 1 Tim. 5<sup>10</sup> "washed the saints' feet," but only as an incident of their hospitable ministrations.

15. ἀποθεγμα is not found again in Jn., and is applied nowhere else in the N.T. to the example of Christ. It is used of the noble example of Eleazar's death at 3 Macc. 6<sup>28</sup>. Cf. Heb. 4<sup>11</sup> 8<sup>9</sup> 9<sup>28</sup>, Jas. 5<sup>10</sup>, 2 Pet. 2<sup>2</sup>.

ἵνα καθὼς ἐγὼ κτλ., "that as I have done to you, so you should do": a practical illustration having been provided of the meaning of the precept. "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart" (Mt. 11<sup>29</sup>). For the constr. καθὼς . . . καί, cf. vv. 33, 34.

16. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν κτλ., as usual, introduces an aphorism of special significance. See on 1<sup>24</sup>.

οὐκ ἔστιν δοῦλος μείζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ. Lk. 6<sup>40</sup> has οὐκ ἐστὶν μαθητὴς ὑπὲρ τοῦ διδάσκου; and Mt. 10<sup>24</sup> combines the Johannine and Lucan forms of the saying. It is, of course, beyond question that the servant is not greater than his master (cf. Lk. 22<sup>27</sup>); but it is stated here to reinforce the lesson of the true dignity of service, which Jesus has been teaching by His example. If He may stoop to minister, without losing dignity, a fortiori may His disciples do so. The saying is repeated 15<sup>25</sup>, where a different lesson is drawn from it.

οὐδὲ ἀπόστολος κτλ., "nor is he that is sent greater than Him that sent him." ἀπόστολος is not found again in Jn., and is here used in its etymological sense of a "messenger," as at 1 Kings 14<sup>6</sup>, 2 Cor. 8<sup>23</sup>, Phil. 2<sup>25</sup>. The Synoptists tell that Jesus gave the title ἀπόστολος to the Twelve (Lk. 6<sup>13</sup>), and they occasionally apply it to them. But Jn. always uses the older descriptions "the Twelve," or "the Disciples." It is possible that Jn. discovers a special allusion to the Twelve in the words "he that is sent is not greater than Him that sent ταῦτα οἴδατε, μακάριοι ἐστε ἂν ποίητε αὐτά. 18. οὐ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω· ἐγὼ οἶδα τὸν ἑξελεβόμενον· ἀλλ' ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ· Ὁ τράγων μου τὸν ἔρωτα ἔπιηεν ἐκ' ἐμῆ ἕρας κτήρας αὐτοῦ. 19. εἰ him," and that the word ἀπόστολος is specially significant here of their mission; but this is not certain. See on 2<sup>4</sup>.

17. εἰ ταῦτα οἴδατε κτλ., "If ye know these things," sc. if you thoroughly understand and appreciate what I have been saying to you (for the force of οἴδατε, see on 1<sup>20</sup>). Judas had not reached to this point.

μακάριοι ἐστε κτλ., "blessed are ye, if ye do them." The dignity of διακονία is an easy lesson to understand, but is hard to put into practice (cf. Lk. 11<sup>28</sup>). Yet it is he who does this, who humbles himself like a child, who is great in the kingdom of heaven (Mt. 18<sup>4</sup>). μακάριος is used only once again by Jn., at 20<sup>28</sup>, where he quotes other words of Jesus, μακάριος εἰ μὴ ἴδόντες καὶ πιστεύσαντες. This latter saying is the Benediction of Faith; that in 13<sup>17</sup> is the Benediction of Ministry. Both are blessed, not only εὐλογητός that is, lauded by men, but μακάριος, as God is μακάριος (1 Tim. 1<sup>11</sup> 6<sup>13</sup>).

18. οὐ περὶ πάντων ὑμῶν λέγω. So He ἠὲν said before (v. 10). The treachery of Judas (who had no share in the benediction of v. 17) did not come upon Jesus unawares (see on 6<sup>64</sup>).

τὸν (NBCL) is to be preferred to the rec. οὗ (ADWΘ) before ἐξελεβόμενον: "I know the kind of man whom I chose," sc. when selecting the Twelve out of a larger company of disciples. See 6<sup>70</sup>, where the same word ἐξελεβόμενον is used; and cf. 15<sup>16</sup>, 19.

ἀλλ' ἵνα ἡ γραφὴ πληρωθῇ κτλ., may be a note added by the evangelist after his manner,<sup>1</sup> but possibly he intends to place the phrase and the quotation in the mouth of Jesus Himself (cf. 17<sup>13</sup>). If this be so, the sentence is elliptical, and we must understand the meaning to be: "I know whom I chose, but none the less this treachery will come, that the Scripture might be fulfilled" (cf. 9<sup>8</sup> 15<sup>26</sup> for a like ellipse). The treachery of Judas was foreordained in the eternal counsels of God; he was destined to deliver up Jesus to the Jews (see 6<sup>71</sup> 12<sup>4</sup>).

The quotation is from the Hebrew (not the LXX) of Ps. 41<sup>9</sup>: "he that eateth my bread lifted up his heel against me." To eat bread at the table of a superior was to offer a pledge of loyalty (2 Sam. 9<sup>7</sup>, 14, 1 Kings 18<sup>11</sup>, 2 Kings 25<sup>20</sup>); and to betray one with whom bread had been eaten, one's "messmate," was a gross breach of the traditions of hospitality.

"To lift up the heel" against any one is to offer him brutal violence. The Synoptists do not quote this Psalm in connexion with the treachery of Judas; but Jn. is especially prone to find fulfilment of prophecy in the incidents of the Passion.<sup>1</sup>

The LXX of this passage is: δ ἰσθῆν ἀποτιν μου ἐμεγάλων ἐν' ἐμὲ περιουμῶν. It is noteworthy that Jn. does not say δ ἰσθῆν, but δ τρώγων, a less usual word which he employs four times (6th, 9th, 10th, 11th) for the "feeding" on Christ in the Eucharist (see note on 6th). Here he almost goes out of his way to use it of the "eating" at the Last Supper.

For μου after τρώγων, καθωτάθ give μετ' ἐμοῦ, but μου is nearer the Hebrew and is better supported (BCL). The Coptic Q has the conflated rendering, "eats my bread with me."

19. ἀπ' ἀρτι λέγω ὑμῖν κτλ., "From now I tell you," etc. For ἀπ' ἀρτι, cf. 14th, Rev. 14th, Mt. 23rd 26th, 34th; the phrase does not occur elsewhere in the N.T.

The startling announcement that one of the Twelve would betray Him was not made explicitly by Jesus before, but it is now distinctly stated, so that when the Betrayal took place they might not be scandalised and perplexed (cf. 16th).

ἵνα πιστεύσητε ὅταν γένηται κτλ., "in order that ye may believe, when it comes to pass, that I am He." ἐγὼ εἰμι in this sentence is used absolutely, no predicate being expressed or suggested by the context. It is an instance (see Introd., p. cxx.; and cf. 8th) of the employment of the phrase as the equivalent of  $\text{אֲנִי־הוּא}$ , I (am) He, which is the prophetic self-designation of Yahweh in the O.T. And the whole passage λέγω ὑμῖν πρὸ τοῦ γενέσθαι, ἵνα πιστεύσητε ὅταν γένηται ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι, recalls prophetic words which speak of the foretelling of the future as the prerogative of Yahweh. "Before it came to pass I showed it to thee" (Isa. 48th) may be compared with Isa. 41st, where the implied answer to the question, "Who hath declared it from the beginning that we may know?" is evidently "None but God." Cf. also Ezek. 24th, . . . ὅταν ἔλθῃ ταῦτα, καὶ ἐπιγνώσασθε ὁδοὶ ἐγὼ εἰμι.

Jesus assumes to Himself this prerogative 3 times in Jn.: here, where He announces that He will be betrayed by one of His disciples; in 16th, where, having forewarned His disciples of future persecution, he says ταῦτα λέλάληκα ὑμῖν ἵνα ὅταν ἔλθῃ ἡ ὥρα αὐτῶν μαρτυρήσῃτε αὐτῶν, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, and again in 14th, where, having spoken of the Coming of the Paraclete, He adds τὸν ἀρρακα ὑμῖν πρὸ γενέσθαι, ἵνα ὅταν γένηται πιστεύσητε. A similar phrase occurs in Mt. 24th, where He has been speaking of the false Christs that would appear: ἴδοτε προσέρχεται ὑμῖν. See on 21st.

πιστεύσητε (as at 14th) is read by καθωτάθ; πιστεύητε (cf. 17th), by BC. Cf. Abbott, Diast. 2526 f.

Origen (in loc.) takes ἐγὼ εἰμι as meaning "I am He, of whom it was written, He that eateth my bread, etc." (v. 18); but this would be a strange ellipse, although the meaning would be suitable to the context.

20. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν κτλ. See on 18th.

Jesus has reminded the apostles that their dignity is not greater than His (v. 16); but lest they should make any mistake, He now reminds them that their dignity is, none the less, very great. The man who receives those whom He has sent, receives Him; and he who receives Jesus receives God who sent Him. The latter part of this aphorism has been stated already in other words (12th, where see note). It is a Synoptic saying, and its form here is very like Mk. 9th and Mt. 10th ὃ δέχομαι ὑμᾶς ἐμὲ δέχεται, καὶ ὃ ἐμὲ δέχομαι δέχεται τὸν ἀποστείλαντά με (cf. Lk. 9th). Jn. substituted for δέχεται the verb λαμβάνει (cf. 1st), and for ἀποστέλλει the verb πέμψω (see on 3rd), after his manner.<sup>1</sup> It is a general principle that the reverence paid to an ambassador is reckoned as reverence to his sovereign; and so it was claimed by the Great Ambassador, both in respect of His own relation to the Father, and of the relation of His apostles to Himself.

Jesus foretells His betrayal, the others not recognizing that Judas is designated by being handed a sop: Judas leaves the room (vv. 21-31)

ἐπαράχθη τῇ πνεύματι. See note on 11th, and cf. 12th, τὰ ῥήματα being used in both cases of the troubled spirit of Jesus (in 14th, 20th) it is said of the disciples). Jn., who lays such stress on the consciousness which Jesus had of His oneness with God (cf. 5th), is no less emphatic about His true humanity (see on 14th). The emotion with which He announced explicitly to His chosen companions that a traitor was among them is very human.

καὶ ἐμαρτύρησεν, the verb being used here of an explicit and definite pronouncement of Jesus, as at 4th 18th. For the idea of "witness" in Jn., see Introd., p. xc; and for the μαρτυρία of Jesus, cf. 3rd 22, 27, 31, 34, 35.

ἀπὸν ἄμην κτλ. See on 1st. ὅτι is recitantis, εἰς ἐξ ὑμῶν. For this constr., see on 1st. παραδώσει με, "shall deliver me up." See on 6th for the exact meaning of παραδίδόναι. All the evangelists (cf. Mk. 14th, followed by Mt. 26th, Lk. 22nd) agree that this startling announcement was made for the first time at the Last Supper; even then, Jesus gave no clue as to who the traitor was (see on vv. 10, 26). Indeed, if He had done so, Judas could hardly have escaped with his life.

The bewilderment (cf. Lk. 24th, Gal. 4th, for ἀπορεία) and distress of the apostles at this announcement are noted by the Synoptists as well as by Jn.; possibly the dissension as to precedence which seems to have taken place that evening (see on v. 16) may have accentuated the perplexity which they felt. Judas did not suggest by his demeanour that he was the guilty one, for they noticed nothing of the sort.

We have argued in the Introduction (p. xxv f.) that this disciple was John the son of Zebedee. The question has been raised, indeed, whether we may not suppose others, outside the circle of the Twelve, to have been present at the Last Supper, of whom "the beloved disciple" may have been one. But the language of Mk. 14th, "He cometh with the Twelve," is explicit; so too Lk. 22nd, "He sat down, and the apostles with Him." There is no hint anywhere of the presence of any except the twelve chosen companions of the Lord (cf. v. 18), of whom therefore the beloved disciple must be one. Sanday's suggestion<sup>1</sup> that the beloved disciple may have been present as a young and favoured follower, a "supernumerary apostle," lacks evidence. It is highly unlikely that Jesus would have bestowed special marks of His love and favour on one whom He did not include within the circle of the Twelve, and of whom, besides, the Synoptists know absolutely nothing.<sup>1</sup>

The posture at table of guests at a feast seems to have been that of reclining sideways on couches or divans, the left arm on a cushion which was on the table, the right hand being thus free for taking food; the feet were stretched out behind. The host or principal person was in the centre, and the place of honour was above him, that is, to his left; the next highest place being below him, or to his right.<sup>2</sup> Thus the person on the right of the host would be so placed that his head would be close to the host's breast, and that it would be easy therefore to say a word to him confidentially. The host would occupy a similar position in relation to the chief guest on his left, and would readily be able to address him privately.

It is plain that, at the Supper, the beloved disciple (i.e., as we take it, John the son of Zebedee) lay on the right of Jesus, ἀνακείμενος ἐν τῇ κἀτῳ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. There is no certain indication as to the disciple on His left (which was the place of honour). Some have thought it was Peter, but, if that were so, he would have addressed his question (v. 24) to Jesus directly, without the intervention of John. And the fact that he made signs to John would suggest that he was not very near him at table. It is more probable that the chief place (on the left of Jesus) was occupied by Judas, for Jesus was able to speak to him privately without the conversation being overheard (see v. 27 and cf. Mt. 26th). That Judas was the treasurer of the little company (see on 12th) may point to his enjoyment of some kind of precedence; and if this were so, he would naturally occupy the chief place at table, next to Jesus. See also on 6th.

That John the son of Zebedee was given a place of honour at the supper is reminiscent of the request of Mk. 10th that he and his brother should be given the two highest seats in the Messianic kingdom; and it is possible that it was their custom to occupy the places of honour at the common meals of the Lord and His disciples. This would suggest that James was on the left of Jesus, as John was on His right, at the Last Supper; but more probably on this occasion Judas was next his Master.

24. νεῖς οὖν τοῦτε Σίμων Πέτρος. "Simon Peter," taking the initiative as usual, beckons to him, sc. to John. The text in the latter part of the verse is not quite certain.

(1) BCL and the Latin vs., followed by most modern editors, after Πέτρος read καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ εἰπέ τίς ὄνομα νεῖς οὖ λέγει. But the verb νεῖς, "to make signs," is not usually accompanied by an intimation that the person making signs also proph.<sup>1</sup> Again, εἰπέ is difficult to translate. The R.V. renders "tell us"; but why should Peter have expected John to answer out of his own knowledge? They were all puzzled, and John knew no more than the others. Abbott (Diat. 1359) takes εἰπέ as meaning "say," sc. to Jesus, that is, "ask Him." But why, then, do we not find ἐρώτησον? (a c / q add interrog.).

(2) The other reading, νεῖς οὖν τοῦτε Σίμων Πέτρος πρῶτος τίς ἐν εἶς, has in its favour that νεῖς is followed by an infinitive, as it is in the only other place where it occurs in the N.T. (Acts 24<sup>30</sup>), and that it does not represent Peter as making signs and speaking as well. It is supported by ADWΓΔΘ and the Syriac vss. (including the Sinai Syriac).<sup>2</sup> πρῶτος is a Johannine word, occurring at 4<sup>38</sup>. The only objection to this reading is that the optative mood (εἶς) is very rare in the N.T., as it was going out of use at this period, and that it never occurs again in Jn.

In any case, according to the Fourth Gospel, John is prompted by Peter to ask Jesus whom He had in mind. Mk., followed by Mt., represents all the disciples as asking "Is it I?" Lk. says that they questioned each other. Perhaps all these things happened, but it may at least be claimed that Jn.'s narrative is peculiarly vivid.

ἀπακρινόμενος οὗτος ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος τοῦ Ἰη.<sup>3</sup> "he (i.e. John) leaning back just as he was (cf. 4<sup>8</sup> for οὗτος) on the breast of Jesus," i.e. leaning back, keeping the same attitude that has been described in v. 23. For the frequent use of ἐκείνος by Jn., see on 1<sup>2</sup>.

οὗτος is omitted by the rec., with <sup>κ</sup>ADWΘ; but BCLΔ have it, and it gives an intimate touch to the narrative here. λέγει αὐτῷ, "speak to Him," viz. in a whisper so that the others could not hear, which his position on the right of Jesus would enable him to do.

τίς ἐστίν; "Who is it?" But Jesus does not give the name of the traitor in reply. He answers in a way that even John does not seem to have been able to interpret (see on vv. 27, 28).

ψωμίον, "a morsel," is not found in the N.T. outside this passage, but is a common word, and is the usual word for "bread" in modern Greek (cf. Judg. 19<sup>6</sup>). The best reading (BCL cop.) is ἐπὶ βράχῳ τὸ ψωμίον καὶ ἔδωκε αὐτῷ, the constr. βράχος καὶ ἔδωκε being thoroughly Johannine; but the rec. text has ἐπὶ βράχῳ τὸ ψωμίον ἐπιδύσσει, following <sup>κ</sup>AD. For βράχος in the second clause of the verse, the rec. has ἐμβράχος (AΓΔΘ). After the second ψωμίον the rec. omits λαμβάνει καὶ (with <sup>κ</sup>ADWΓΔΘ), but the words are found in <sup>κ</sup>BCL and must be retained, as adding a new and vivid detail. For ἰσκαριώτου (the true reading here; see on 6<sup>7</sup>), which is found in <sup>κ</sup>BCΘ, the rec. has ἰσκαριώτης (AWTΔ).

In Mk. (followed by Mt.), the same reply in substance is given to the disciples' eager inquiry as to which of them would be the traitor (ὁ ἐμβαπτίζομενος μετ' ἐμοῦ εἰς τὸ πρῶτον, Mk. 14<sup>20</sup>); Lk. does not mention it. Jn. relates that Jesus gave to the beloved disciple a more precise clue, by saying that the traitor would be he to whom Jesus would Himself give the "sup," having first dipped it. This is, no doubt, a correct detail. But it does not appear that John identified the traitor even when this clue was provided (v. 28).

It was a token of intimacy, to allow a guest to dip his bread in the common dish or triblion: thus Boaz says to Ruth βράχος τὸν ψωμίον σου τῷ ὄρει (Ruth 2<sup>14</sup>). And it is still a favour of Eastern hospitality for the host to dip a choice morsel in the central dish and hand it to a guest. This is what Jesus did for Judas, who was probably reclining at table next to

καὶ ἔδωκεν Ἰούδῃ Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτου. 27. καὶ μετὰ τὸ ψυμίον τότε εἰσῆλθεν εἰς αὐτὸν ὁ Σατανᾶ· λέγει οὖν αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅ

Him (see on v. 23); but it was so usual a courtesy that it escaped the notice of the others, and did not seem even to John to have any special significance, despite what he had been told. If John understood, we must suppose him to have kept silent, and to have refrained from telling the others, which is highly improbable.

ἔβαψεν οὖν τὸ ψυμίον κτλ., "having dipped the sop, He takes and gives it to Judas." According to Mt. 26<sup>26</sup>, Judas asked, "Is it I?" to which the answer "Thou hast said" was given. This could have happened without attracting the attention of any one, as Judas was reclining next to Jesus. In any case, whether by word or act, Judas was made aware that Jesus knew what was in his heart. There was still time for him to abandon his purpose. But the quiet word and the courteous gesture of giving him the sop did but harden him. This was the last appeal to his better nature, and there was no response.

27. μετὰ τὸ ψυμίον, sc. after the whole incident of the giving of the sop, a classical use of μετὰ with a substantive following.

εἰσῆλθεν εἰς αὐτὸν κτλ., "Satan entered into that one," ἑαυτοῦ being used as indicating the alien mind of Judas, and not merely for emphasis (see on 1st). Lk. (22<sup>3</sup>) has the same phrase εἰσῆλθεν ὁ Σατανᾶς εἰς Ἰούδαν, but he uses it of him at an earlier stage. See v. 2; and cf. 6<sup>70</sup>. It was a natural way of explaining a course of treachery, so abhorrent to the evangelists, by whom the direct agency of Satan was firmly believed in. εἰσέρχεται is the verb used by the Synoptists to describe the "entering in" of evil spirits (cf. Mk. 5<sup>18</sup>; Lk. 8<sup>29</sup> 12<sup>18</sup>). The evangelist can no otherwise explain to himself the devilish treachery that followed.

 ποίησον εἰς ἐμέ κτλ., "What thou doest, do more quickly" (see on 2nd).

τόχωρ (or τόχιστος) is the comparative, occurring again in the N.T. only at Jn. 20<sup>4</sup>, Heb. 13<sup>18, 22</sup>; cf. Wisd. 13<sup>3</sup>. Possibly Judas had not intended to consummate his treachery so soon, and was waiting until the Passover was past. But, whether this be so or not, the stern word "Do it more quickly" is human, indeed, in its context. "How am I straitened until it be finished!" is an earlier saying which Lk. (12<sup>50</sup>) ascribes to ποῖαί ποιῶσαν τόχωρ. 28. τοῦτο δὲ οὐδέ τις ἔγνω τῶν ἀνακειμένων πρὸς τὸ εἶπεν αὐτῷ 29. τινὲς γὰρ εἰδότες, ἐπει τὸ γλαυσκόμενον εἶχεν Ἰούδας, ὅτι λέγει αὐτῷ Ἰησοῦς Ἀγόρασον ἕν χρεῖαν ἔχοντες εἰς τὴν ἑορτήν, ἣ τοῖς πτωχοῖς ἕνα τι δῶ. 30. λαβὼν οὖν τὸ ψυμίον ἔειπεν εἰσῆλθόν εἰς ἐμέ τὸ νῦν.

Jesus. The looking forward to the inevitable Passion was torture; that there should be no longer delay was the natural wish of His heart. Attention has been called above (1<sup>14</sup>) to the emphasis laid by Jn. on the true humanity of Jesus, as indicated by the human emotions of which Jn. tells.

28. τοῦτο δὲ οὐδέ τις κτλ. None of the disciples understood what was the reference of this injunction "Do it more quickly," which had been said aloud so that all could hear it. This explicit statement must include the beloved disciple as well as the rest (see on v. 26).<sup>1</sup>

For the constr. οὐδέ τις τῶν ἀνακειμένων, οὐδέ τις not being followed by εἰς, cf. 21<sup>19</sup>, and see on 1<sup>10</sup> 2<sup>18</sup>; and for the position of οὐδέ τις in the sentence, see on 1<sup>14</sup>.

29. τινὲς γὰρ κτλ. Jn. is apt thus to introduce with γὰρ his own comments on the incidents or sayings which he records; see on 3<sup>14</sup>.

The disciples did not know what the order "Do it more quickly" meant, and they held different views about it. Judas, being the treasurer (for τὸ γλαυσκόμενον, see on 12<sup>6</sup>), was naturally also the purveyor and the almoner of the little company. Some thought that he was bidden to hasten the purchase of what was needed for the Passover feast. This indicates again that the Passover was still to come, and that the Last Supper, for Jn., was not the Paschal meal (see on v. 1); for, had it been Passover night, nothing could have been bought. Another explanation was that Judas was told to give some alms to the poor, as he was accustomed to do (12<sup>6</sup>), perhaps in order that aid might be given to a poor household to provide the Paschal lamb for the sorrow.

In v. 29, δ is omitted before Ἰούδας and Ἰησοῦς by MB. See vv. 26, 27, and note on 1<sup>10</sup>.

30. λαβὼν οὖν τὸ ψυμίον κτλ., "So, having taken the sop, that one went out immediately." Jn. lays stress on the acceptance of the sop by Judas, the suggestion being that Judas had recognised the significance of the offer of it by Jesus, and understanding now that Jesus knew his purpose he proceeds

31. Ὅτε οὖν ἐξήλθεν, λέγει Ἰησοῦς XV. 1. Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἀμπελος to execute it at once, whatever he may have intended before as to the day or hour of the betrayal.

ἐξήλθεν οὐθὺς. This is the right order (MBCDLW), as against εὐθὺς ἐξήλθεν of A<sup>0</sup> and the rec. text; so also at 19<sup>34</sup>. The emphasis is on οὐθὺς; Judas hurried away at once.

There is a variant εὐθὺς (AΓΔΘ), but οὐθὺς is read here by MBCDLW. Abbott (Diat. 1911 f.) seems to draw a distinction in use between these forms, but his argument is over subtle. For εὐθὺς, see on 3<sup>a</sup>; and cf. 1<sup>2</sup>.

ἦν δὲ νύξ. This may be only a note of time, such as Jn. is apt to give (see on 1<sup>2</sup>); but it is remarkably impressive here, and the dramatic horror of the moment is brought before the reader. Judas went out into the darkness. The symbolic meaning of this can hardly have been absent from the mind of the evangelist. Cf. Lk. 22<sup>53</sup>, Rev. 21<sup>25</sup> 22<sup>3</sup>.

The departure of Judas from the room is not mentioned by the Synoptists, although it is assumed.

81<sup>a</sup>. ὅτε οὖν ἐξήλθεν. The rec. omits οὖν, with A, but ins. MBCDLW<sup>0</sup>. Some commentators, e.g. Bengel, omitting it, connect the preceding words ἦν δὲ νύξ with ὅτε ἐξήλθεν, and this repetition of ἐξήλθεν would be quite in the style of Jn. But the MS. evidence is conclusive for οὖν, and this disposes of such an arrangement of the words. The sentence ends dramatically with the monosyllable νύξ.

Here there seems to have been a dislocation of the original text,<sup>1</sup> and in this commentary we take the text in the order cc. 13<sup>32a</sup> 15 16 13<sup>32b-33</sup> 14 17. This is also the time (see Introductory Note to v. 4) at which we must suppose the Eucharist to have been instituted. Whether Jn.'s account of this has been lost, or whether he did not describe the institution at all, is not certain; but in any case it is at this point in the narrative that we suppose it to have taken place.

XIII 81<sup>a</sup>, XV. 1. ὅτε οὖν ἐξήλθεν, λέγει Ἰησοῦς Ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ ἀμπελος ὁ ἀληθινός. οὖν is emphatic. Such a discourse as this of the True Vine which follows was only for the faithful.

It has been suggested<sup>2</sup> that cc. 14-17 are more easily understood if we suppose them to represent discourses of Jesus which belong to His post-resurrection life on earth, rather than discourses spoken on the eve of His Passion. That their teachings are specially apposite, when read in public worship between Easter and Pentecost, has been recognised by Christendom for many centuries, the Greek, Syrian, and Latin Churches (as well as the Anglican) making use of selections from these chapters as the Gospels for some of the Sundays after Easter. It is not impossible that Jn. has preserved in cc. 14-17 some of the Lord's post-resurrection counsels with other words spoken after the Last Supper. Thus 16<sup>31</sup> present an interesting resemblance to words ascribed to Jesus after His Resurrection in an addition to Mk. 16<sup>74</sup>, preserved in the Freer MS. (see on 16<sup>31</sup> below). But it can hardly be doubted that cc. 14-17 belong to the eve of the Passion, or that 16<sup>31</sup> must precede 13<sup>30</sup>.

The Vine and the branches (vv. 1-8)

XV. 1. The comparison of Jesus to a Tree, and of His disciples to the branches which derive their life from the life of the Tree, is similar in some respects to an illustration used by Paul to explain the relation of the individual Israelite to his forefathers, Abraham and the rest. "If the root is holy, so are the branches" (Rom. 11<sup>16</sup>). Israel is compared to an olive tree, the roots being the patriarchs and the branches their descendants. But the illustration of Jesus conveys a deeper lesson, as we shall see.

The question presents itself: Why is the vine selected as the tree best fitted to bring out the lesson which it was the purpose of Jesus to teach? A vine has none of the dignity of the olive, with its fine trunk and spreading branches. Vines, indeed, in the East generally trail on the ground, although they are sometimes supported on stakes (cf. Ezek. 17<sup>6c</sup>), or entwine themselves round a greater tree (as in the parable in Hermas, Sim. li.). The olive was regarded in an older parable as fit to be the king of trees (Judg. 9<sup>9</sup>). It is the most important of the fruit trees of Palestine, and was a familiar object in Jerusalem, as the name "the Mount of Olives" indicates. Vines were also plentiful, especially in Judea (cf. Gen. 49<sup>12</sup>), but for strength and statelyness they are much inferior to the olive, as to many other trees.

The reason generally assigned by exegetes for the employment here of the figure of a vine is that it is frequently used in the O.T. as a type of Israel. But it is always thus used of degenerate Israel. "What is the vine tree more than any other tree?" Ezekiel asks (15<sup>9</sup>), and he declares that as vine branches are only fit for burning, the vine of Jerusalem must be devoured by fire. So again (Ezek. 19<sup>10</sup>), Israel was once a fruitful vine, but she was plucked up and destroyed. The choicest vine was planted in the vineyard of Yahweh, but it only brought forth wild grapes (Isa. 5<sup>3</sup>). Israel was planted as a noble vine, but it became degenerate (Jer. 2<sup>20</sup>). Israel is a luxuriant vine, but judgment comes on her (Hos. 10<sup>7</sup>). The vine from Egypt of God's planting spread far and wide, but the fences of its vineyard were broken, and it was ravaged by wild beasts (Es. 80<sup>1-18</sup>). God had chosen "of all the trees . . . one vine," as He had chosen one people, but it came to dishonour (2 Esd. 5<sup>30</sup>). Always in the O.T., where Israel is compared to a vine, the comparison introduces a lament over her degeneracy, or a prophecy of her speedy destruction. See also Rev. 14<sup>19</sup>, where the vintage of the earth is cast into the winepress of the wrath of God. None the less, the vine was the national emblem, and on the coins of the Maccabees Israel is represented by a vine. And it has been thought that when Jesus said "I am the True Vine," the comparison in view was that between the degenerate vine of Israel and the Ideal Vine represented by Himself. That is to say, the True Vine is now brought before the disciples as the new ideal of the spiritual Israel.

This, however, involves a comparison of the Church of Christ with the True Vine (cf. Justin, Tryph. 110), rather than an identification of Christ Himself with it. No doubt, by describing His disciples as the branches, Jesus connected them as well as Himself with the mystic vine of His similitude; but the emphasis in the sentence ἐγώ εἰμι ἡ ἀμπελος ἢ ἀληθινὴ ἢ ἐν ἐγώ, as in all the other great similitudes of the Fourth Gospel. ἐγώ εἰμι marks the style of Deity, which cannot be shared (see Intro., p. cxviii). The main thought is not of the Vine as the Church, but of the Vine as representing Him who is the source of the Church's life. We take the view that the Vine of the allegory was directly suggested here by the wine of the first Eucharist, which had just been celebrated.<sup>1</sup>

ἡ ἀμπελος ἢ ἀληθινὴ. Burkitt<sup>2</sup> points out that an early Syriac rendering of this similitude was "I am the Vineyard of Truth," i.e. the True Vineyard. This does not appear in Syr. sin. or the Peshitta, but it may have been in the Diatessaron. The confusion between Vineyard and Vine may be due to ἀμπελος having been taken as equivalent to ἀμπελών, a usage which Moulton-Milligan (i.v.) illustrate from the papyri. ἀμπελος occurs again in the N.T. only in Jas. 3<sup>18</sup>, Rev. 14<sup>18, 19</sup>, and Mk. 14<sup>18</sup> (and parls.), where Jesus said that He would not drink again of τὸ γένημα τῆς ἀμπελῶνος until He drank it new in the kingdom of God.

ἐν ἐμοὶ μὴ φέρον καρπῶν. Note that a κλῆμα or branch may be truly in Christ, and yet may not bear fruit. μὴ expresses a hypothetical possibility. This severe warning, coming so soon after the beginning of the allegory, was probably an allusion to the failure and doom of Judas, who had gone forth to his treachery just before, in the arrangement of chapters here adopted.

αἶρει αὐτό. "He takes it away." So, too, the κλάδοι of the olive which represented Israel in Paul's illustration, were of the true stock, but some of them were broken off by God (Rom. 11<sup>14, 17</sup>). The action of the Great Husbandman in this is like that of every earthly γεωργός: inutilisque falce ramos amputavit (Horace, Epod. ii. 13). Cf. Mt. 23<sup>31</sup>, Lk. 3<sup>7</sup>.

καὶ πᾶν τὸ καρπῶν φέρον, καθαίρει αὐτό. The play on the words αἶρειν, καθαίρειν (suavis rhythmus, as Bengel says), cannot be reproduced in English.

καθαίρειν, to cleanse, occurs in the N.T. again only at Heb. 10<sup>2</sup> (of religious cleansing), and is rare in the LXX. It is used here in the sense of "to cleanse by pruning," as it is in Philo (de somn. ii. 9, cited by Cremer): "As superfluous shoots grow on plants, which are a great injury to the genuine shoots (τῶν γενεῶν), and which the husbandmen (γεωργοῦντες) cleanse and prune (καθαίρουσι καὶ ἀποτρίμνουσι), knowing what is necessary; so likewise the false and arrogant life grows up beside the true and humble life, of which to this day no husbandman (γεωργός) has been found to cut off by the roots the superfluous and injurious growth." In this passage καθαίρειν, "to cleanse," can hardly be distinguished from ἀποτρίμνειν, "to prune."<sup>3</sup>

In the verse before us, however, the Great Husbandman does "cleanse" the fruitful branches by pruning off useless shoots, so that they may bear fruit more abundantly. It is not as if the branches were foul; on the contrary, they are already clean by virtue of their share in the life of the Vine (v. 3).

ἵνα καρπὸν πλείονα φέρετ. 3. ἦδη ὑμεῖς καθαροὶ ἔστε διὰ τὸν λόγον ὃν λαλάμεκα ὑμῖν. 4. μένεται ἐν ἐμοί, καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν. καθὼς τὸ κλήμα οὐ δύναται καρπὸν φέρειν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ ἐὰν μὴ μένη ἐν τῇ

But pruning may be good for them, none the less. Such pruning, according to Justin (Tryph. 110), illustrates God's painful discipline for His true servants. The vine is a tree which specially needs attention, and it is essential to its fruitfulness that the already fruitful branches should be pruned regularly. Perhaps this is a warning anticipatory of the more explicit warning of vv. 20, 21.

ἵνα καρπὸν πλείονα φέρετ. Cf. Mt. 13<sup>13</sup>. The order καρπὸν πλείονα is that of NBL latt.

3. ἦδη ὑμεῖς καθαροὶ ἔστε. So Jesus had said before (13<sup>10</sup>), the primary reference then being to bodily cleanness, although with an allusion to spiritual purity as well (see note in loc.). Here, the thought is carried on from v. 2, which spoke of the cleansing of the branches by the Great Husbandman (καθαίρειν). The disciples were not useless branches, presently to be cut off; they were in the way of bearing fruit, and already they had been "cleansed" διὰ τὸν λόγον ὃν λαλάμεκα ὑμῖν, "by the word which I have spoken to you."

We have seen (on 6<sup>9</sup>) that διὰ followed by an acc. is to be distinguished from διὰ with a gen. The text here is not διὰ τοῦ λόγου, which would suggest that the Word of Jesus is the instrument of cleansing; but διὰ τὸν λόγον signifies rather that it is because of the Word abiding in them (v. 7) that they are kept pure. The λόγος which had thus, in some measure, been assimilated by them (cf. 5<sup>38</sup>, 8<sup>50</sup>) was the whole message that Jesus had delivered during His training of the Twelve. In so far as this continued to "abide" in them (v. 7), in that degree were they "clean." As it abides in them, so do they abide in the True Vine (1 Jn. 2<sup>6</sup>).

The cleansing τὸ ἄριστον ἐν ῥήματι of Eph. 5<sup>26</sup> does not constitute a true parallel to the thought here.

4. μένεται ἐν ἐμοί, καὶ ἐν ὑμῖν. This is an imperative sentence (for the aor. imper. see on 2<sup>6</sup>). No doubt, the practical precept which was the issue of all the teaching of Jesus was just this; but we must not join the words to the preceding διὰ τὸν λόγον ὃν λαλάμεκα ὑμῖν, as if the precept itself were the λόγος. The words ἐν ἐμοί μένει, καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ had been used before (6<sup>56</sup>), but the promise of that passage has not heretofore been turned into an explicit precept (cf. 14<sup>20</sup>). For λόγος as signifying not a single sentence, but the whole purport of the Divine revelation given by Christ, see on 5<sup>38</sup>.

καθὼς τὸ κλήμα κτλ. Even the fruitful branch does not ἀμειλίχῃ, οὐτως οὐδὲ ὑμεῖς ἐὰν μὴ ἐν ἐμοί μένητε. 5. ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀμπελος, ὑμεῖς τὰ κλήματα. ὁ μόνον ἐν ἐμοί καὶ ἐν αὐτῷ, οὕτως φέρει καρπὸν πολλόν, ὅτι χωρὶς ἐμοῦ οὐ δύνασθε ποιεῖν οὐδέν. 6. ἐὰν μὴ τις μένη ἐν ἐμοί, ἐβλήθη ἔξω ὡς τὸ κλήμα καὶ ἐξηράνθη, καὶ bear fruit of itself (cf. for ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, 5<sup>19</sup> 7<sup>18</sup> 11<sup>23</sup> 13<sup>67</sup>), but only in so far as it assimilates and is nourished by the sap of the vine. So the disciple of Jesus cannot bear fruit, unless he abide (ἐὰν μὴ μένη) in the Vine. Here is the difference between the natural and the spiritual order. The vine shoot has not the power of choosing whether it will "abide" in the vine, or cut itself loose. But in the spiritual sphere this "abiding" is not maintained without the constant and conscious endeavour of the disciple's own will. Hence the urgency of the precept μένεται ἐν ἐμοί.

5. ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ἀμπελος κτλ., "I am the Vine, ye are the branches," the main theme being repeated with slight verbal alteration, as frequently in Jn. Cf. the repetitions of "I am the Bread of Life" (6<sup>48</sup> 41. 58. 59), "I am the Door" (10<sup>9</sup>), "I am the Good Shepherd" (10<sup>11</sup> 13); and see on 3<sup>13</sup>.

οὕτως φέρει καρπὸν πολλόν. This was the purpose for which the disciples were chosen (v. 16). For the emphatic οὕτως, "be it that . . ." cf. 4<sup>47</sup>.

ὅτι χωρὶς ἐμοῦ οὐ δύνασθε ποιεῖν οὐδέν. The branch is wholly dependent on the tree, by whose sap it is quickened and made fruitful.

6. ἐὰν μὴ τις μένη κτλ. μένη is the true reading (N<sup>8</sup>ABD) as against the rec. μεινῆ. ἐὰν μὴ with the pres. subj. is rare in the N.T., but we have it three times in vv. 4, 6.

ἐβλήθη ἔξω. The branch that does not bear grapes is cast out (apparently, out of the vineyard). The arists ἐβλήθη, ἐξηράνθη, seem to look forward to the future Judgment of mankind, and treat it as already past, so certain and inevitable is it. Abbott (Diat. 2445) compares Isa. 40<sup>7</sup>. ἐξηράνθη ὁ χόρτος καὶ τὸ ἔνθος ἐξέστανε, τὸ δὲ ῥήμα τοῦ θεοῦ ἦν ὡς μῖνος, where the arists are used in the same way. But a Greek aristor may be used without reference to any special moment of time.

ἐξηράνθη (it does not occur again in Jn.) is the word used, Mk. 4<sup>1</sup>, of the withering of the seed that had no root, as here of the vine shoot that is no longer "in" the vine.

καὶ συνάγουσιν αὐτὰ. See MDLΔ Jam. 13; the rec. has αὐτὰ with ABF<sup>9</sup>. "They" (sc. the servants of the Lord of the Vineyard, the subject being understood, but not expressed) "collect" the useless branches.

συναγοσων αὐτῶν καὶ εἰς τὸ πῦρ βάλλουσιν, καὶ καίεται. 7. ἔαν μείνητε ἐν ἔμοι καὶ τὰ ῥήματά μου ἐν ὑμῖν μείνη, ὃ ἔαν θύλητε αἰρήσασθε, καὶ γνησῶμαι ὑμῖν. 8. ἐν τούτῳ εὐδοξάσθη ὁ Πατήρ μου, ἵνα καρπὸν πολὺν φέρητε καὶ γνησῶσθε ἔμοι μαθηταί.

καὶ εἰς τὸ πῦρ βάλλουσιν κτλ., "and fling them into the fire." Cf. Ezek. 15, where the prophet says of the vine branch, "it is cast into the fire for fuel." The vivid picture of the labourers burning at the harvest all that is worthless, appears also in Mt. 13<sup>30</sup> as an illustration of the Last Judgment.

7. The figure of the tree and its branches is left aside for the moment; and the consequence of abiding in Christ is declared to be not only the capacity for "bearing fruit," but the acquisition of the power of efficacious prayer. This is the secret of the saints.

ἔαν μείνητε ἐν ἔμοι (cf. v. 4 and 8<sup>31</sup>) καὶ τὰ ῥήματά μου (sc. the "sayings" which make up the λόγος of v. 3) ἐν ὑμῖν μείνη κτλ. The man of whom this is true is a master of prayer, and his petitions will be answered. In the Synoptists faith is the prerequisite for efficacious prayer: πάντα ὅσα προσεύχησθε καὶ αἰτεῖσθε, πιστεύετε ὅτι ἐλάβετε καὶ ἵσταί ὑμῖν (Mk. 11<sup>24</sup>); "if you had faith you would say to this tree, Be uprooted and planted in the sea, and it would obey you" (Lk. 17<sup>6</sup>; cf. Mt. 17<sup>20</sup>). πάντα ὅσα ἐν τῷ πιστεύοντι (Mk. 9<sup>29</sup>) is true of the life of prayer. But in Jn. faith in Christ is more than belief in His message, or sinful attraction to His Person; it is a continual abiding "in Him." See further on v. 16 below; and cf. 6<sup>38</sup>.

ὃ ἔαν θύλητε αἰρήσασθε. For ὃ ἔαν (ADL<sup>0</sup>), B has ὃ ἄν, and κ has ὅσα ἔάν. ABDL support the imperative αἰρήσασθε, while N<sup>0</sup> have αἰρήσασθε.

ὃ ἔαν θύλητε κτλ., "whatever you will, etc.," petitions prompted by the indwelling words of Jesus cannot fail to be in harmony with the Divine WILL. A petitioner who "abides in Christ" asks habitually "in His Name"; i.e. he asks as Christ would ask, and so his satisfaction is sure. See 14<sup>13</sup> and the note there; cf. also v. 16 below, and 16<sup>30</sup>.

γνησῶμαι ὑμῖν, "it shall come to pass for you," not as a boon granted arbitrarily, but as the inevitable sequence of the prayer.

8. ἐν τούτῳ, sc. in the fact that His followers abide in Christ (v. 7), the reference being retrospective: "in this is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." The γεωργία (v. 1) is always glorified if the trees of its planting are fruitful; and so in Isa. 61<sup>8</sup> the purpose of the mission of Yahweh's servant was "that they might be called trees of righteousness,

9. Καθὼς ἠγάπησέν με ὁ Πατήρ, καθὼς ἠγάπησέν με ἵνα

the planting of the Lord, that He might be glorified." The perfection of human character is the glory of God: all good works are ad maiorem Dei gloriam (cf. Mt. 5<sup>19</sup>). So Jesus spoke of His signs as exhibiting the glory of God (11<sup>40</sup>).

The acr. εὐδοξάσθη is used proleptically. The issue is so sure that it is spoken of as already a fact. See, for a similar usage, v. 6 and 12<sup>31</sup> 13<sup>1</sup>. 21.

For the phrase ὁ πατήρ μου, see on 2<sup>16</sup>. γνησῶμαι. So κΑ: γνησῶμαι is read by BDL<sup>0</sup>. If γνησῶμαι is read, the rendering is "that ye bear much fruit and become my disciples." But γνησῶμαι is better: "that ye bear much fruit: so shall you become my disciples," or literally "disciples to me," ἔμοι (cf. 13<sup>30</sup>) expressing the relationship more affectionately than μου (which is read by D<sup>8</sup>). Cf. 8<sup>4</sup>, "if ye abide in my word, ye are truly my disciples."

It is to have gone a long way in the Christian course to be able to appropriate the promise of v. 7; but the final cause of such progress is that "fruit" may appear, not in service only but in the development of character, to the glory of God. And the highest aspiration of all is to become "a disciple." True discipleship is hardly begun until the earthly life is near its end and the fruit hangs thick and ripe upon the branches of the Vine."<sup>1</sup> Cf. the saying of Ignatius, when on his way to martyrdom, τὸν ἀρχαῖος μαθητὴς εἶναι (Rom. 5).

The love of Jesus for His disciples (vv. 9-11)

9. καθὼς ἠγάπησέν με ὁ πατήρ (cf. 5<sup>30</sup> 17<sup>26</sup>), καθὼς ἠγάπησέν με ἵνα (13<sup>30</sup>), "As the Father loved me, so also I loved you." The words are spoken in retrospect of His association with the apostles, now that the hour of parting has come; but they convey an assurance of the depth and intimacy of His love to all future disciples.

For the constr. καθὼς . . . καθὼς in Jn., see on 6<sup>38</sup> 10<sup>18</sup>; and cf. also 17<sup>26</sup>. For the verb ἀγαπᾶν, see on 21<sup>12</sup>.

μείνατε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ ἐμῇ, "abide in my love," i.e. "continue in the shelter of my love for you." See on 5<sup>48</sup> for the Johannine use of the phrase ἡ ἀγάπη τοῦ Χριστοῦ. Judas had fallen away from the reach of this love of Christ, and so may any disciple. Hence the need of the precept μείνατε, "continue." (Cf. Jude<sup>21</sup> ταῦτος ἐν ἀγάπῃ θεοῦ τηρήσεται.) This "is perhaps the nearest approach to an authoritative command to obey a moral or spiritual precept" that occurs ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ ἐμῇ. 10. ἐὰν τὸς ἐπιτολάς μου τηρήσῃτε, μενεῖτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ μου, καθὼς ἐγὼ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου τὸς ἐπιτολάς τηρήσῃκα ἐν Ἰη. (Abbott, Diat. 2438). For the aor. imperative μείνατε, see on 2<sup>d</sup>.

10. The precept is "abide in my love," and the way to obey it is to keep His commandments: ἐὰν τὸς ἐπιτολάς μου τηρήσῃτε, μενεῖτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ μου. The ἀγάπη is the love of Jesus for His disciples, not their love for Him, as it is in 14<sup>15</sup>. It is over subtle to attempt a distinction between ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ ἐμῇ of v. 9 and ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ μου of v. 10. Both phrases mean the same thing, sc. the love of Jesus for His own. Ἰη. is specially fond of ἐμὸς, which occurs 37 times in the Gospel, and always in words of Jesus.<sup>1</sup> καθὼς ἐγὼ (κῆD have καθὼς ἐκγόῳ τοῦ πατρὸς μου (B. om. 100) τὸς ἐπιτολάς τηρήσῃκα. This is the high example set before the Christian disciple. Jesus had claimed (8<sup>20</sup>) ἐγὼ τὰ ἄρρητὰ ἀπέφ' οὗ τοῦ παύσασθε, and now, looking back, He can say τηρήσῃκα (cf. 17<sup>6</sup>). No man could say with such complete assurance, "I have kept the commandments of my Father"; while it is possible at the end to say, with Paul, τὴν πίστιν τηρήσῃκα (2 Tim. 4<sup>7</sup>).

καὶ μένω αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ. This is the eternal issue of the ministry of Christ, the resumption of His place in the bosom of Deity, who is Love (cf. 17<sup>26</sup>).

Westcott<sup>3</sup> finds here an advance on the teaching of 14<sup>15, 21</sup>; and if this could surely be traced, the traditional order of chapters (c. 14 preceding c. 15) would be in some degree corroborated. But his reasoning is precarious. The idea of the ἐπιτολάι given by Jesus is only found in cc. 13, 14, 15; and the relevant passages are quite consistent with the order of chapters adopted here, viz.:

13<sup>10</sup> "If ye keep my commandments, ye will abide in my love." As we have seen, this is the fundamental idea in the Allegory of the Vine.

15<sup>12</sup> Next, Jesus bids them love one another.

13<sup>34</sup> This commandment is repeated and described as "new." See Introd., p. cxi.

14<sup>15</sup> He tells His disciples that if they love Him, they must keep His commandments.

14<sup>21</sup> And, finally, He gives them the great promise, that if they thus show their love for Him, the Father will love them, and He Himself will love them and will manifest Himself to them. There is no "advance" on this teaching in c. 15, nor could there be.

καὶ μένω αὐτοῦ ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ. 11. Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῖν ἵνα ἢ χαρὰ ἢ ἐμὴ ἐν ὑμῖν ἢ καὶ ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν πληρωθῇ.

12. Αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἐπιτολή ἢ ἐμὴ, ἵνα ἀγαπήτε ἀλλήλους καθὼς

The truth is, that we must not expect a continuous logical sequence in the discourses of the Fourth Gospel. The sacred words are set down as they are remembered by the aged disciple of Jesus,<sup>1</sup> but there is no attempt to present them in the manner which would be suitable to a theological treatise.

In each case ταῦτα refers to what has been said in the preceding sentences; and in three cases the purpose of the teaching is indicated, sc. that the disciples might have joy (15<sup>11</sup>), that they might have peace (16<sup>20</sup>), and that they might be warned of future persecution (16<sup>4</sup>. 5).

To come back on a phrase in this way is thoroughly characteristic of the style of Ἰη.: cf. note on 3<sup>14</sup>.

ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἢ ἐμὴ κτλ. Paul afterwards expressed the hope that his joy might be the joy of his disciples (3 Cor. 2<sup>9</sup>; cf. Phil. 2<sup>9</sup>); but ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἢ ἐμὴ ἐν ὑμῖν ἢ has a more mystical significance here. Jesus had spoken ταῦτα, i.e. ἐὰν τὸς ἐπιτολάς μου τηρήσῃτε, μενεῖτε ἐν τῇ ἀγάπῃ τῇ ἐμῇ, and He now says that the purpose of His speaking these words was ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ἢ ἐμὴ ἐν ὑμῖν ἢ. For the joy of Christ must be shared by those who abide in His love. So shall their "joy be fulfilled" (cf. 16<sup>24</sup>, and especially 17<sup>13</sup>). This is a favourite expression of Ἰη.; cf. 1 Ἰη. 1<sup>4</sup> and 2 Ἰη. 18, as also 1 Ἰη. 3<sup>9</sup>, where it is put into the mouth of John the Baptist.

The New Commandment to love the brethren (vv. 12-17)

12. αὕτη ἐστὶν ἡ ἐπιτολή ἢ ἐμὴ κτλ. Jesus had spoken of "commandments" to the disciples whom He was so soon to leave, and had promised that if they kept His commandments they would "abide in His love."<sup>1</sup> But He gives no ἡγάπησα ὑμᾶς. 13. μέλινα ταύτης ἀγάπης οὐδεὶς ἔχει, ἵνα τις τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἴθι ὑπὲρ τῶν φίλων αὐτοῦ. 14. ἡμεῖς φίλοι μοῦ ὄντε, detailed instructions, no set of precepts for the conduct of their lives. He gives only one commandment, for it will be enough, if fully realised.

ἵνα ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους κτλ., "that you love one another." This was the commandment, repeated a little later in the evening, when it is described as a new commandment, as something that had never been enjoined before (13<sup>36</sup>, where see note). That Christian disciple must "love" Christian disciple, because of their common discipleship, was a new idea, perhaps not yet universally understood.

καθὼς ἡγάπησα ὑμᾶς. This mutual love is to be no faint affection of goodwill; it must be a love which will pour itself out in sacrifice, if it is to be like the love of Jesus for all of them. This is the commandment which must be fulfilled by the disciple who will claim the promise "Ye shall abide in my love" (v. 10). You can live in the abiter of my love only if you love one another. Cf. Eph. 5<sup>2</sup>.

Abbott (Diat. 2539) calls attention to the frequent use of the present subjunctive in these Last Discourses, "that you may be loving," etc., the precept extending to all future generations of Christian disciples.

18. μέλινα ταύτης ἀγάπης κτλ. He reminds the disciples what was the measure of His love for them, having just told them that their love for each other must be of the same type. He was about to lay down His life for them, and this is the supreme sacrifice of love. A man can show no greater proof of his love for his friends than to die on their behalf. The love of God, indeed, has a wider range, as Paul reminds us: "While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us," thus showing the all-embracing character of God's love (Rom. 5<sup>7, 8</sup>). But here something less is commended to the imitation of the Christian disciple, for the "new commandment" does not speak of universal brotherhood, but only of the obligations of Christian brethren to each other. The precept is reproduced, 1 Jn. 3<sup>14</sup>: ὁ τοῦτο ἐργάσαμεν τὴν ἀγάπην, ὅτι ἕκαστος ὑπὲρ ἑαυτοῦ τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ ἴθικεν, καὶ ἡμεῖς ἀγαπήσαμεν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀδελφῶν τὰς ψυχὰς ἑαυτῶν. For the expression τὴν ψυχὴν τῆς αἰτίας, see on 10<sup>11</sup>; and for the position of οὐδεὶς, see on 1<sup>19</sup>.

ἵνα τις τὴν ψυχὴν κτλ. This is in apposition to ταύτης: cf. 4<sup>14</sup> for a similar use of ἵνα. τις is omitted by κ<sup>2</sup>D*Θ and some Latin vs., but κ<sup>2</sup>ABD<sup>2</sup>L have it.

14. ἡμεῖς φίλοι μοῦ ὄντε κτλ. This is another way of expressing what has already been said in v. 10. Those who αὐδ ποιῆτε ἂ ἐγὼ ἐπαύλωμαι ὑμῶν. 15. οὐκέτι λέγω ὑμᾶς δοῦλους, ἀλλὰ φίλους.

abide in Christ's ἀγάπη are His φίλοι: see on 21<sup>15</sup> for ἀγαπᾶν and φίλος.

ἂ ἐγὼ ἐπαύλωμαι ὑμῶν. According to Mt. 28<sup>20</sup>, this was also to be the burden of the apostles' preaching: ἀδιδάσκοντες αὐτοῖς τῆραυ πάντα ἅτα ἐπιτελλόμεν ὑμῶν.

ἂ. So ND<sup>L</sup> Jas. 13. B has δ, and AΓΔΘ have ἵνα. 15. οὐκέτι λέγω ὑμᾶς δοῦλους κτλ. They were accustomed to call Him Mar as well as Rabbi (see on 1<sup>36</sup>, 13<sup>37</sup>), and δοῦλος, "slave," is the correlative of Mar, "Lord." He had applied the term δοῦλος to them, 13<sup>14</sup>; and He had implied that to be His δοῦλος was a dignity.

There is nothing derogatory in being described as δοῦλος κυρίου, πῆν' ἵπν; on the contrary, it was a title of honour, and as such is used of Joshua (Josh. 24<sup>29</sup>), Moses (Deut. 34<sup>7</sup>), David (Ps. 89<sup>20</sup> etc.); in the N.T. Simeon uses it of himself (Lk. 2<sup>29</sup>), the Epistle to Titus begins Παῦλος δοῦλος θεοῦ and the Epistle of James has Ἰάκωβος θεοῦ καὶ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ δοῦλος (Jas. 1<sup>1</sup>). To this day, Abdallah is a favourite name in the East. Abraham was singularly honoured by being called the friend of Yahweh (Ἰβραῆμ δὲ ἡγάπησα, Isa. 41<sup>8</sup>; cf. 4 Chron. 20<sup>7</sup>, Jas. 2<sup>20</sup>), and still is called by the Arabs, El-Khalil.

This distinction between God's "slave" and His "friend" appears in Philo. He says that while we speak of God as the θεοπότης or κύριος of the external world, in reference to the spiritual world (τὸ νοητὸν ἀγαθόν) He is called σωτήρ καὶ ἐνεργήτης. "For wisdom is God's friend rather than His slave" (φίλον γὰρ τὸ σοφὸν θεῷ μᾶλλον ἢ δοῦλον, de sobrietate, 11). Philo then cites Gen. 18<sup>31</sup> in the form "Shall I hide it from Abraham my friend?" According to the Book of Wisdom (7<sup>20</sup>), to be God's friend (φίλος) is a privilege of holy men in every generation.

Thus the difference drawn out in the text between the δοῦλοι and the φίλοι of Jesus corresponds to the difference, familiar to the Jews, between the δοῦλοι and the φίλοι of God, and conveys an additional suggestion of the Divinity of Jesus, which is behind the teaching of the Fourth Gospel from beginning to end.

The chief officials of an Eastern monarch were called his "friends" (1 Macc. 2<sup>38</sup> 3<sup>38</sup> 10<sup>36</sup> etc.), and Swete suggests that there is here an allusion to this nomenclature. "He has lifted them out of the condition of menial service, and raised them gradually into that of the friends of the Messianic king." But this does not seem to be in harmony with vv. 14, 15<sup>2</sup>, where the duties and privileges of "friends" as distinct from "slaves" are explained.

To be a δοῦλος of Jesus was the first stage in the progress of a Christian disciple; and the early Christian leaders, speaking of themselves, claim to be His δοῦλοι (Acts 4<sup>10</sup>, Rom. 1<sup>1</sup>, Gal. 1<sup>10</sup>, etc.), while they do not venture to claim the further honour of His φίλοι, which was given to the Eleven on the eve of the Lord's Passion. The difference appears in this, that a slave obeys his lord, without claiming to know the reason for his lord's actions, while a friend shares his knowledge and is admitted to his secrets. ὁ δοῦλος οὐκ οἶδεν κτλ. Thus the apostles did not know the significance of the action of Jesus in washing their feet (13<sup>7, 12</sup>).

ὑμεῖς δὲ εἰρήνη φίλους. So Luke records (Lk. 12<sup>4</sup>), at an earlier stage of their training, that Jesus addressed His disciples as "my friends." And He had implied many times that they were His friends, because He had expounded to them more freely than to others the mysteries of the kingdom of God (Mk. 4<sup>11</sup>).

ὅτι πάντα ἡ ἡκούσα παρὰ τοῦ π. κτλ. Always His message was of the things which He had "heard" from His Father (cf. 8<sup>19, 47</sup>); but He did not disclose everything to the multitudes. It was only to His chosen friends that He had made known the ὄνομα of the Father (17<sup>26</sup>); but from them He had hidden nothing that they were able to bear (cf. 16<sup>12</sup>).

γνωρίζαι, "to make known," occurs in Jn. again only at 17<sup>26</sup>.

16. The apostles were henceforth His chosen friends, and herein was encouragement for them, who were so soon to take up their mission, in the absence of their Master. It would be a mission of difficulty, but their Call was their Power.

οὐχ ὑμεῖς με ἐξελέξασθε, ἀλλ' ἐγὼ ἐξελέξαμην ὑμᾶς, "You did not choose me, but I chose you," the personal pronouns being repeated for emphasis. See on 6<sup>70</sup> 13<sup>18</sup> and v. 19, where the aor. ἐξελέξαμην is used as here to mark the moment when the apostles were selected from the larger body of disciples. Each of them was a σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς (Acts 9<sup>17</sup>), and had been chosen by Jesus after a night of prayer (Lk. 6<sup>12</sup>). It is constantly taught in the Fourth Gospel that God's love precedes the movement of man's soul to Him (see on 3<sup>16</sup>).

ἵνα ὑμεῖς ἐπάγγελτε. ἐπάγειν is used at Lk. 10<sup>8</sup> of the "going forth" of the Seventy on their mission. For ἐπάγειν in Jn., see on 7<sup>30</sup>.

καὶ ὁ καρπὸς ὑμῶν μένη, "and your fruit may abide." Jesus had said to a group of disciples on a former occasion, ὁ θεράπων . . . σιωπῆσει καρπὸν εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον (4<sup>26</sup>), and the thought is the same in this passage. Cf. Rev. 14<sup>13</sup> and 1 Cor. 15<sup>28</sup>.

ἵνα ὅ τι ἐν αἰτήσῃτε (so KADNΘ, but BL have αἰτήσῃ) τὸν πατέρα ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου ἔσθ' ὑμῶν (cf. v. 7). This great promise occurs six times (with slight variations) in the Last Discourses (cf. 16<sup>23</sup>, 24, 25, 14<sup>13, 14</sup>); and in these passages the philosophy, so to speak, of Christian prayer is unfolded, as nowhere else in the N.T.

In the Sermon on the Mount we have the simple words αἰτῆσαι καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῶν (Mt. 7<sup>7</sup>). But, when the Lord's Prayer is prescribed for use, it is made plain that there are conditions which must be fulfilled, if prayer is to be acceptably offered, and one of these is Thy Will be done. Prayer that is not submissive to that condition has no promise of answer. Another condition is suggested Mt. 18<sup>13</sup>: "If two of you shall agree as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them by my Father." Prayer may be selfish, so that the granting of one man's petition may be the refusal of another's. But if men agree, that barrier is removed. If all men agreed in asking the Eternal for the same thing, the prayer could be offered with entire confidence. And Jn. tells that Jesus expressed the supreme condition of Christian prayer by saying that it must be offered ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου, "in my Name." For Christ embraces all men. He is the Man. A petition which is one that He could offer is one the fulfilment of which could hurt none and would benefit all (cf. 17<sup>26</sup>). So, in Johannine language, the prayer which is of certain efficacy must be ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ, and that is enough. Jn. does ἐντάλλομαι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπήτε ἀλλήλους. 18. Εἰ ὁ κόσμος ὑμᾶς not speak of importunity in prayer, as Lk. does (Lk. 11<sup>9</sup>); but it is reiterated in the Fourth Gospel that the will of the man who prays must be in harmony with Christ's will (cf. 1 Jn. 5<sup>14</sup>). The man must be ἐν ἐμοί, a phrase used several times in these Last Discourses (14<sup>20</sup> 15<sup>4</sup> 7 16<sup>22</sup>; cf. 6<sup>38</sup>, 1 Jn. 5<sup>20</sup>), with which Paul's ἐν Χριστῷ should be compared (Rom. 12<sup>5</sup> 16<sup>7</sup>, 1 Cor. 15<sup>18</sup>, 2 Cor. 5<sup>17</sup>).<sup>1</sup> This condition has been already expressed in different words at v. 7: "If ye abide in me, and my sayings abide in you, ask (αἰτήσασθε) what you will, and it shall be done to you." To pray "in the Name" of Christ is not any magical invocation of the Name, nor is it enough to add per Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum, but it is to pray as one who is "in Christ." Such are the prayers of the saints.

For the significance of "the Name," see on 1<sup>18</sup>; and for ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου in other contexts, cf. Lk. 10<sup>17</sup>, Jn. 14<sup>26</sup> 20<sup>21</sup>, Eph. 5<sup>20</sup>.

The repeated ἴνα . . . ἴνα challenges attention. The final cause of the choice of the apostles was that they should "go forth and bear fruit," in their own lives as well as in their missionary labours, so that at last they should become masters of effectual prayer.

17. ταῦτα ἐντάλλομαι ὑμῖν (cf. v. 14), ἵνα ἀγαπήτε ἀλλήλους (v. 12). The purpose of these instructions was that they might appreciate the urgency of this novel precept (see on 13<sup>34</sup>) which enjoined the love of Christian disciple for Christian disciple. This is not any vague recommendation of universal brotherhood; it is something much more definite. Indeed, as vv. 18, 19 show, the doctrine of mutual love cannot be extended so as to embrace all mankind. For the "world" hates Christians, as it hated Christ. There can be no reciprocity of ἀγάπη, in the special sense in which it is here enjoined between the Church and the world.

See on 1<sup>8</sup> for the Johannine use of the term κόσμος. It is solemnly repeated five times in vv. 18, 19.

The world hates Christian disciples because it hated Christ (vv. 18-25)

18. εἰ ὁ κόσμος ὑμᾶς μισεῖ κτλ. The disciples are not to expect that the world will love them (cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>13</sup>), and of its future hostility they are now warned explicitly (see on 16<sup>4</sup> below). Jesus had told His "brethren" that the world could

μισεῖ, γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐπὶ πρώτων ὑμῶν μεμίσσηκεν. 19. εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ἦτε, ὁ κόσμος ἂν τὸ ἴδιον ἐφίλει: ὅτι ἐκ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου οὐκ ἐστὶ, ἀλλ' ἔγωγ ἐξελεξάμην ὑμᾶς ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, διὰ τοῦτο μισεῖ ὑμᾶς not hate them (?), but that was because they were on the world's side, and not on His, as all His disciples must be.

γινώσκετε ὅτι ἐπὶ πρώτων ὑμῶν μεμίσσηκεν, "know (scitote) that it has hated me first." γινώσκετε is imperative, like μνημονεύετε in v. 20. Despite His words on a former occasion (?), the disciples had not yet realised the measure of the "world's" hatred for Jesus, the world being here represented by the hostile Jews.

ὑμῶν is omitted by <sup>18</sup>D a b c e f<sup>2</sup>, but is found in <sup>18</sup>ABL N<sup>0</sup> f g l v g, etc. and the Syriac vss. If it be omitted, the constr. is easy; but if it be retained, <sup>18</sup>αἰωνος ὑμῶν presents the same difficulties as πρώτος μου in 1<sup>18</sup>. Abbott (Diat. 1901) would translate here "that it hath hated me, your Chief," which might be defended by the vg. priorum uobis. But this seems unsatisfactory, and it is best to take πρώτων ὑμῶν as if it were πρώτων ὑμῶν (see on 1<sup>18</sup>).

19. εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου ἦτε. Those who are "of the world" (cf. 1 Jn. 4<sup>5</sup>) are sharply contrasted by Jn. with the Christian disciples, whose "otherworldliness" he always speaks of with emphasis. See, particularly, 17<sup>14</sup> 19. One of the characteristics of the writings of Jn. is that he always paints in black and white, without allowing for intermediate shades of colour. He will have no compromise with evil. For him the Church and the world are set over against each other, and he does not contemplate their reconciliation.<sup>1</sup>

ὁ κόσμος ἂν τὸ ἴδιον ἐφίλει, "the world would have loved its own," that which is in harmony with worldly ideals. The apostles, on the other hand, are not "of the world." Out of it they had been chosen. (see v. 16, and cf. 13<sup>34</sup>), and so the world hated them. διὰ τοῦτο refers to what has gone before, as at 6<sup>38</sup>. Thus vv. 16-20 taught the apostles that if to abide in Christ is the secret of fruitful lives and of effectiveness in prayer, it also provokes the world's hostility. But this hostility carries with it a promise and a benediction (cf. 1 Pet. 4<sup>14</sup>, Mt. 5<sup>11</sup>).

With the Johannine teaching as to the hatred of the Church by the world (? 17<sup>14</sup>, 1 Jn. 3<sup>13</sup>), cf. the fine saying of Ignatius: "Christianity (χριστιανισμός) is not talk, but power, when it is hated by the world" (Rom. 3).

ὁ κόσμος. 20. μνημονεύετε τοῦ λόγου οὗ ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν Οὐκ ἔστιν δοῦλος μείζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ. εἰ ἡμὲ ἐδίωξαν, καὶ ὑμεῖς διώξεσθε· εἰ τὸν λόγον μου ἠγάπησαν, καὶ τὸν ὑμέτερον τηρήσουσιν. 21. ἀλλὰ

20. μνημονεύετε τοῦ λόγου οὗ ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν, "Be mindful of the saying which I said to you." μνημονεύειν occurs again in Jn. only at 16<sup>4</sup>. It reads here τὸν λόγον ἐν ἐγὼ ἐλάλησα ὑμῖν.

We have already had the saying οὐκ ἔστιν δοῦλος μείζων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ at 13<sup>16</sup> (where see note), but Jesus probably repeated it more than once, the reference here perhaps being to the occasion when He gave a charge to the newly chosen apostles (Mt. 10<sup>24</sup>; cf. Lk. 6<sup>9</sup>). They had been warned then that they would not be exempt from persecution (cf. Mt. 10<sup>17-23</sup>); it was even more necessary that they should bear this in mind in the days that were coming. He had told them that He counted them as friends rather than servants (v. 15), but for all that the saying "The servant is not greater than his lord" would be applicable to their situation in a hostile world. The moral He had drawn from this saying at the Last Supper, earlier in the evening, was different (13<sup>16</sup>).

εἰ ἡμὲ διώξαν, "if they persecuted me," the subject being ὁ κόσμος, taken as a noun of multitude, from v. 19. Jn. has already spoken of the persecution (διώξεις) of Jesus by the Jews, because of the freedom with which He treated the rules of the Sabbath (5<sup>18</sup>).

καὶ ὑμεῖς διώξεσθε, "they will persecute you also," a warning repeated in other language at 16<sup>3</sup>. Lk. records a similar warning (Lk. 21<sup>17</sup>), and Mk. 10<sup>20</sup> notes that Jesus accompanied a promise of temporal blessings to the faithful with the significant addition of μετὰ ὀνειργιών. There is no reason to doubt that Jesus did thus predict that persecution would be the lot of His disciples; and it is unnecessary to accumulate proofs that the prediction came true (cf. 1 Cor. 4<sup>14</sup>, 2 Cor. 4<sup>8</sup>, Gal. 4<sup>29</sup>, 2 Tim. 3<sup>13</sup>).

εἰ τὸν λόγον μου ἠγάπησαν, καὶ τὸν ὑμέτερον τηρήσουσιν, "if they kept my word, they will keep yours also." For the phrase τὸν λόγον τηρεῖν, a favourite phrase in Jn., see on 8<sup>31</sup> 14<sup>23</sup>. In Ezek. 3<sup>7</sup> Yahweh is represented as saying to the prophet, "They will not hearken unto thee, because they will not hearken unto me"; and this would apply to the apostles of Jesus. But the saying recorded here by Jn. goes farther. Those who observe the word of Jesus will also observe the word of His apostles, it being implied of course that the apostles will utter no "word" for which they have not the authority of their Master. A world which "observed" the teaching of

Jesus would inevitably "observe" the teaching of those who could rightly claim His commission. The difficulty of drawing inferences from this great assurance, once Christendom was divided, is illustrated by the whole course of Christian history. Jesus, however, goes on to insist that it is the other alternative which the apostles must prepare to face; not acquiescence, but opposition, will be the portion of those who proclaim His gospel.

διὰ τὸ ὄνομα μου, "for my Name's sake." Persecution will come, but it will be easier to bear if they remember why it comes, and whose cause it is that they are upholding. This, again, had been said to them before, when they received their apostolic commission: ἕνεκεν τοῦ ὀνόματός μου διὰ τὸ ὄνομα μου (Mt. 10<sup>28</sup>; see above on v. 20). The same warning appears in the Marcan tradition in a different context (Mk. 13<sup>13</sup>, Mt. 24<sup>9</sup>, Lk. 21<sup>17</sup>), but in identical terms. A few verses before these passages in Mk. and Lk., the apostles had been told that they would be hated before rulers and kings, ἕνεκεν ἑμοῦ (Mk. 13<sup>9</sup>) or ἕνεκεν τοῦ ὀνόματός μου (Lk. 21<sup>19</sup>); and there is no substantial difference in meaning between these expressions and διὰ τὸ ὄνομα μου.

The Name of God is equivalent in the O.T. to His revealed character (see on 1<sup>19</sup>); and in 1 Sam. 12<sup>28</sup>, 2 Chron. 6<sup>6</sup>, Jer. 14<sup>21</sup>, we find διὰ τὸ ὄνομα [τὸ μέγα], "on account of His great Name," sc. because He is what He is. In the N.T. we have the phrase διὰ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, used of the Name of Christ, not only in the passages cited above, but at 1 Jn. 2<sup>15</sup>, Rev. 2<sup>8</sup>. His "Name" signified His revealed character, His Person; and those who suffered "on account of His Name" suffered because they proclaimed His Name as supreme. Cf. Polycarp, τὸν πέμψαντά με. 22. εἰ μὴ ἦλθον καὶ ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχουσαν ἢν ἔβλεπον οὐκ ἔχουσαν περὶ τῆς ἁμαρτίας αὐτῶν. 23. ὃ ἐμὲ μισῶν καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου μισεῖ. 24. εἰ τὰ ἔργα μὴ ἔβλεπον οὐκ εἶδαν τὸν πέμψαντά με. Ignorance of the character of God is the cause of failure to recognise the claims of Christ, who came as the Ambassador of the Father, Cf. Lk. 23<sup>34</sup>, Acts 3<sup>17</sup>, for ignorance as the cause of the Jews' rejection of Christ; and see further on 16<sup>7</sup>.

Phil. 8: ἄν πτόσχωμεν διὰ τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ, δοξάζομεν αὐτόν. In the persecutions of the early centuries, to confess "the Name" was to court death. Cf. 1 Pet. 4<sup>14</sup>, Acts 5<sup>41</sup>; Ignatius, Eph. 3.

Jesus said before (8<sup>19</sup>; cf. 14<sup>7</sup>) that to know Him is to know the Father; here He says that to know the Father is to know Him (cf. 8<sup>19</sup>). For the conception of Jesus as "sent" by the Father, which so frequently appears in Jn., see on 3<sup>17</sup>.

22. That the Jews did not "know" God as revealed in Christ would be the cause of their hatred of Christ and of Christians (v. 21); and this ignorance is now shown to be inexcusable, (a) because the words of Jesus should have found an echo in their minds (v. 22), and (b) because His works should have convinced them of His Divine mission (v. 24).

The constr. εἰ μὴ . . . ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχουσαν ἢν ἔβλεπον . . . is identical in vv. 22, 24; and it is noteworthy that ἢν is omitted, which perhaps makes the sentence more emphatic, "If I had not . . . assuredly they would have no sin." In both verses εἶχουσαν (KBLN) is to be preferred to the rec. εἶχον.

εἰ μὴ ἦλθον. This is the Messianic ἐρχέσθαι. He who was to come had come.

καὶ ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς, "and discoursed to them"; see on 3<sup>12</sup> for λαλῶν. Cf. 12<sup>28</sup>.

ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχουσαν. For ἁμαρτίαν ἔχον, cf. 9<sup>41</sup> 10<sup>21</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>8</sup>. But their failure to accept Jesus, when they had heard Him speak, was a moral failure, and therefore blameworthy. See on the parallel passage 9<sup>41</sup>. Involuntary ignorance, on the other hand, is excusable; cf. Acts 17<sup>30</sup>.

ἢν ἔβλεπον, "but now, as things are."
πρόφασιν οὐκ ἔχουσαν κτλ. πρόφασιν does not occur again in Jn.; cf. Ps. 141<sup>4</sup> (LXX).

23. Those who hate Christ, hate God, because in Christ's words and works God is revealed.

24. εἰ τὰ ἔργα μὴ εἴποινα κτλ. The Jews were blameworthy because they did not recognise that the "works," as well as the "words" of Jesus revealed God.

εἴποινα ἢν αὐτοῖς ἔδειξαι ἄλλως εἴποινα, ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχουσαν ἢν ἔβλεπον καὶ ἁμαρτίαν οὐκ εἶχουσαν καὶ μεμνημένον καὶ ἐμὲ καὶ τὸν Πατέρα μου. 25. ἀλλ' ἴνα ἠληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος ὃν ἐγὼ τόμψ αὐτῶν γυγραμμένος διὰ Ἐπισητῶν με ἠαρῶν.

εἴποινα. So NABDLΘ; the rec. has πειρώσεν.
ἢν ἔβλεπον καὶ αὐτοῖς, "but now they have both seen and hated both me and my Father," the perfects indicating the persistence of their hostility (cf. Abbott, Diat. 2443). The construction of the sentence, καὶ being four times repeated, shows that ἁμαρτίαν as well as μεμνημένον governs τὸν πατέρα μου no less than ἐμὲ. Jesus said later on ὁ παρὸς ἐμὲ εἶπεν τὸν πατέρα (14<sup>7</sup>); but the original fault of the Jews was, as He had said before (6<sup>30</sup>), ἁμαρτανὴν με καὶ οὐ πιστεύετε (see on 14<sup>7</sup>). Neither in His words nor in His works did they discern the Divine mission of Jesus; and, not discerning who had sent Him, they hated Him and therefore implicitly His Father (v. 23).

25. For the ellipse ἀλλ' ἴνα, cf. 9<sup>7</sup>; and see on 13<sup>18</sup>. ἴνα ἠληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος κτλ. The hatred of the Jews for Jesus was part of the mysterious purpose of God, disclosed in the O.T. scriptures. See Introd., p. clv.

The phrase "their law" has already been discussed in the note on 8<sup>17</sup>. "The law" is used for the whole of Scripture (see on 12<sup>50</sup>); but although a Greek Christian might readily say "their law," to suppose that Jesus thus separated Himself from the Jewish race is hard of credence. Two of His Words from the Cross are quotations from the Psalms, which, if the phrase "their law" be His, He declines to recognise as having any special value for Him.

The allusion is either to Ps. 35<sup>19</sup> or Ps. 69<sup>7</sup> (most probably from Ps. 69, as this was regarded as a Messianic Psalm; see on 2<sup>17</sup>), in both of which αἰμαίνοντές με ἠαρῶν faithfully reproduces the Hebrew. The hatred of the Jews for Jesus was gratuitous and without cause (δωρεάν; cf. πρόφασις οὐκ ἔχουσι of v. 22).

INTRODUCTORY NOTE ON ΠΑΡΑΛΗΓΟΣ (v. 26).

The term παράκλητος does not occur in the Greek Bible outside the Johannine writings. On the other hand, Jn does not use παρακαλέω or παράκλητος, the latter word being specially Lucan and Pauline, while the former is common to most of the N.T. writers.

Etymologically, παράκλητος is a passive form, and is equivalent to the Latin advocatus, signifying one who is "called in" to give help or advice, and being especially used of the counsel for the defence.<sup>1</sup> In classical writers this is always the meaning. Demosthenes (de falsa leg. 34) has εἰ τῶν παρακλήτων δεόμενοι καὶ σπουδαί, and in Diog. Laert. iv. 50, Bion is made to say, "I will do what is sufficient for you if you will send παράκλητοι (i.e. representatives) and don't come yourself." The term is used in the same way in Philo. Thus the city of Alexandria is called the παράκλητος by whom the emperor might be propitiated (in Flaccum, 4; cf. also de Josepho, 40). In de opif. mundi, 6, Philo says that God employed no παράκλητος (i.e. helper) in the work of creation. Again, in Ph. Mos. iii. 14, speaking of the high priest, "one consecrated to the Father of the world," Philo says that it was necessary that he should employ as his παράκλητος, "a son most perfect in virtue."<sup>2</sup> In like manner, Barnabas (§ 20) has πλουσίων παράκλητος, "advocates of the wealthy"; and in s. Clem. 6 we have the question, "Who shall be our παράκλητος, i.e. our advocate, if we are not found doing what is right?" So in the Letter of the Churches of Lyons and Vienne (about 177 A.D., Eus. H.E. v. 1), it is said that Vettius Epagathus, confessing that he was a Christian, was taken into the order of martyrs (εἰς τὸν κλήρον τῶν μαρτυρῶν), being called παράκλητος Χριστιανῶν, having the Paraclete within himself.

It may be added that the word was borrowed from the Greek by the Jews, and appears in Talmudic writings (see Wetstein on Jn. 14<sup>26</sup>) as פְּרַכְלִיט in the sense of advocatus.

Although the verb παρακαλέω does not appear in Jn., an

<sup>2</sup> This "son" is not the Logos (as has been erroneously stated), but the Cosmos (cf. Drummond, Philo Judaeus, ii. 238; Sanday, Criticism of Fourth Gospel, 197; and Bacon, Fourth Gospel, 298). Philo's use of παράκλητος does not relate the term to his Logos.

παρακαλέω is to call a person to stand by one (παρά), and hence to help in various ways, e.g.

(a) as a witness, to be present when a thing is done.

Cf. Demosthenes, c. Phorm. § 29.

(b) as an adviser. Cf. Xenophon, Anab. i. vi. 5,

Κλέαρχον δὲ καὶ ἄλλους παρακλήσας σύμβουλον.

(c) as an advocate. Cf. Eschines, Fals. Leg., § 184;

παρακαλῶ δ' ἑββόλων μὲν ἐκ τῶν πολιτικῶν καὶ

σφαιρόνων ἄνδρα συνηγόρου.

The verb is specially applied to the invoking of a god, and calling him in to help: e.g. Thucydides, i. 118 fin., αὐτὸς ἐφῆ συλλήψεσθαι καὶ παρακαλομένους καὶ ἀλητος; Epicetus, Disc. iii. xxi. 12, τοὺς θεοὺς παρακαλεῖν βοηθοὺς; Plutarch, Alexander, 33, παρακαλεῖ τοὺς θεοὺς.

It appears from these passages that παράκλητος is naturally used for a Divine helper called in, either as a witness (15<sup>26</sup>), or as an advocate (16<sup>26</sup>), or as an adviser (16<sup>26</sup>). παρακαλέω is also used in the sense of encourage, e.g. Polybius, iii. xix. 4, οἱ περὶ τὸν Δημήτριον συναθροίσαντες σφᾶς αὐτοῦ καὶ παρακαλέσαντες; but παράκλητος, being a passive form, cannot be equivalent to "one who encourages."

The familiar rendering "Comforter" was introduced into our English versions by Wyclif, who meant by it "confortor," i.e. strengthenener, not consoler (see his rendering of Phil. 4<sup>12</sup>). But there is some patristic authority for the translation "consoler." Origen (de princ. ii. vii. 4) says distinctly that while in 1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup> παράκλητος means intercessor, in the Fourth Gospel it means consoler. So, too, Cyril of Jerusalem says (Cat. xvi. 20) that the Spirit is called παρακλήτος from παρακαλέω, "to console," as well as because He "helps our infirmities" and "makes intercession" for us (Rom. 8<sup>30</sup>). Gregory of Nyssa (c. Eunom. ii. 14) also calls attention to the two meanings of the verb παρακαλέω. It is perhaps in consequence of an early interpretation of παράκλητος in Jn. 14 as "consoler," that Aquila and Theodotion render πῆρ in Job 16<sup>2</sup> by παράκλητος, where the LXX has παραλήγω. But the weight of evidence is undoubtedly in favour of "advocate" rather than "comforter" as the rendering of παράκλητος in Jn.; and the notes on 14<sup>16, 26</sup> 16<sup>7</sup> will show also that this rendering is more in accordance with the contexts in which it occurs. At 1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup> "advocate" is ti.: only possible rendering.

The R.V. margin suggests "Helper" as an alternative, and this is adopted by Moffatt. This might include the idea of consoling as well as of pleading one's cause; but its vagueness veils the meaning here and at 16<sup>7</sup>.

26. Ὁταν ἔλθῃ ὁ Παράκλητος ὃν ἔγωγ πέμψω ὑμῖν παρὰ τοῦ

Witness to Christ in the future will be borne by the Paraclete as well as by Christian disciples (vv. 26, 27)

26. Ὁταν ἔλθῃ ὁ παρὰ κλ. After ὅταν the rec. inserts ἔδ, with ADL<sup>78</sup>, but om.  $\alpha\beta\delta$ ; the omission of a connecting particle is a familiar feature of Jn.'s style.

Verses 26, 27, follow at once upon the rebuke (vv. 21-25) pronounced upon the enemies of Jesus. Their hostility was blameworthy. And in the future they will be proved in the wrong by the witness of the Spirit (v. 26) as well as by the witness of the apostles (v. 27).

The rendering of ὁ παρὰ κλητος by advocate is here demanded by the context, to which the rendering comforter would be quite foreign. Jesus had explained that the hostility of the Jews to Him was sinful, for they ought to have recognised His Divine mission in His words and works (vv. 22-24). They hated Him, not knowing Him, although they ought to have known Him. But when the Paraclete came, He would bear true testimony to Jesus, being indeed the Spirit of Truth (v. 26). The Paraclete is the Divine advocatus defending the Righteous One, and pleading His cause against false accusers. He is not, as at 1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup>, represented as pleading the cause of man with God, but rather as pleading the cause of Christ with the world. See further on 16<sup>7</sup>; and cf. Introd., p. xxxi.

ὃν ἔγωγ πέμψω ὑμῖν κτλ. So also at 16<sup>7</sup>, the promise is that Jesus will send the Paraclete; but at 14<sup>16</sup> He is to be given by the Father in response to the prayer of Jesus, and at 14<sup>26</sup> the Father is to send Him in the Name of Jesus. The Lucan doctrine is that Jesus sends the Spirit, "the promise of the Father" (Lk. 24<sup>49</sup>, Acts 2<sup>39</sup>); see further on 14<sup>26</sup>.

παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς. Cf. 16<sup>7</sup> 17<sup>8</sup> and see on 1<sup>14</sup> for παρὰ as expressing the relation of the Spirit to the Father. The Paraclete is to be sent "from the Father's side."

τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας. The full phrase occurs again 16<sup>13</sup> 14<sup>17</sup>, 1 Jn. 4<sup>6</sup>. In the last passage it is contrasted with τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ψεύδους, as in Testaments of XII. Patriarchs (Judah, xc.), where the spirit of truth and the spirit of deceit both wait upon man, and it is said that "the spirit of truth testifieth all things and accuseth all." It is probable that this sentence is a Christian interpolation introduced into the text Πατρὸς, τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας ὃ παρὰ τοῦ Πατρὸς ἐκπορεύεται, of the Testaments; but see on 1<sup>9</sup>, where there is another parallel to their language.

In these Last Discourses, however, τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας is but another name for the Paraclete who is to be sent after Jesus has been withdrawn from the sight of men. The spirit of truth is the Spirit which brings truth and impresses it on the conscience of the world. In this passage the leading thought is of the witness of the Spirit to Jesus, infallibly true, however perverted the opinion of the world about Him may be.

The phrase τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας has, like the phrase ὁ ἄρτος τῆς ζωῆς (see on 6<sup>22</sup>), a double meaning. Primarily (α) it is the Spirit which brings truth and gives true testimony, but (β) this is the case because the Spirit has truth as the essential characteristic of His Being. So, also, the Logos is πλήρης ἀληθείας (1<sup>14</sup>), and Jesus says, later in this discourse, ἐγὼ εἰμι . . . ἡ ἀλήθεια (14<sup>6</sup>).

ὃ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκπορεύεται. ἐκπορεύεσθαι occurs once elsewhere in Jn., sc. at 5<sup>38</sup>, where it is used of the dead "coming forth" out of their graves. Here it is used in the same way of the Spirit "coming forth" from God in His mission of witness (cf. ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ ἐποστολάρι εἰς ὀρανοῦ, 1 Pet. 1<sup>19</sup>). To interpret the phrase of what is called "the Eternal Procession" of the Spirit has been a habit of theologians, which has been the cause of the endless disputes between East and West as to the "Procession" of the Spirit from the Son as well as from the Father. As far back as the fourth century, at all events,<sup>1</sup> the clause τὸ ἐκ (not παρὰ) τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκπορεύεσθαι has found a place in the Creed as descriptive of the Holy Spirit, and is taken from the verse before us. But to claim that this interpretation was present to the mind of Jn. would be to import into the Gospel the controversies and doctrines of the fourth century. ὃ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκπορεύεται does not refer to the mysterious relationships between the Persons of the Holy Trinity, but only to the fact that the Spirit who bears witness of Jesus Christ has come from God (cf. Rev. 22<sup>1</sup>, where in like manner the river of the water of life is described as ἐκπορεύεσθαι ἐκ τοῦ θρόνου τοῦ θεοῦ).

ἐκεῖνος μαρτυρήσει περὶ ἐμοῦ. ἐκεῖνος calls special attention to the Spirit as the subject of the sentence, exactly as at 14<sup>26</sup>. It is He, and none less than He, who shall bear august and true witness to the world about Christ. Cf. 1 Jn. 5<sup>7</sup> τὸ πνεῦμά ἐστιν τὸ μαρτυροῦν, ὅτι τὸ πνεῦμα ὄντιν ἡ ἀλήθεια.

XVI. 1. Ταῦτα λέλασκα ὑμῖν ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε. 2. ἀποστολογίμου ποιήσους ὑμᾶς· ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ἄρα ἵνα πᾶς ὁ ἀποκτείνῃ

However little modern conceptions of personality and of what it implies were present to the mind of the first century, the repeated application of ἐκείνος to the Spirit in these chapters (16<sup>a</sup>, 18, 14, 14<sup>b</sup>) shows that for Jn. τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας meant more than a mere tendency or influence.

27. The Spirit was to be a Witness concerning Jesus in the future: the disciples' ministry of witness had already begun.

ἐπ' ἀρχῆς occurs again 8<sup>44</sup> only, but is frequent in the Johannine Epistles, sometimes (e.g., 1 Jn. 2<sup>7</sup>, 3<sup>11</sup>, 2 Jn. 4<sup>6</sup>) referring to the beginning of Jesus' ministry, as here, but sometimes also to the beginning of all things (e.g., 1 Jn. 1<sup>1</sup>, 2<sup>13</sup>, 14<sup>3</sup>, 3<sup>7</sup>, as always in the Synoptists). See 8<sup>44</sup>, 16<sup>4</sup>.

ἐστέ, "ye are with me from the beginning." So Jesus said τωσούτων χρόνων μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμί (14<sup>9</sup>), using the present tense as here. The Twelve had been chosen ἵνα ὡσιν μετ' ἀποσῶ (Mk. 3<sup>14</sup>), and they continued to be in close fellowship with Him.

Future persecution (XVI. 1-4)

XVI. 1. ταῦτα λέλασκα ὑμῖν: see on 15<sup>11</sup>. ταῦτα covers all that has been said about future persecution (15<sup>20</sup>), as well as about the promise of the Paraclete, who was to bear witness concerning Christ.

ἵνα μὴ σκανδαλισθῆτε. This image of the σκάνδαλα of faith, the stumbling-blocks which trip up a disciple, is very common in the Synoptists, but in Jn. only here and at 6<sup>61</sup> (cf. 1 Jn. 2<sup>16</sup>). These parting counsels were given in order that they might not be surprised or "offended" when troubles came.

2. ἀποστολογίμου ποιήσους ὑμᾶς, "they will put you out of synagogue," i.e. excommunicate you. For ἀποσινάγωγου, see on 9<sup>22</sup> and 12<sup>62</sup>.

ἀλλ' ἔρχεται ἄρα, "indeed, furthermore, a time is coming."

ὑμᾶς δόξῃ λατρείων προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ. 3. καὶ ταῦτα ποιήσους ὑμῖν ὅτι οὐκ ἔγνωσαν τὸν Πατέρα οὐδὲ ἐμέ. 4. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα λέλασκα ἀλλὰ has no adversative sense here, nor must we press ἄρα to mean "it is predestined time," as if it were ὁ ἄρα (but cf. v. 4), although, as we have seen (2<sup>7</sup>), the idea of the inevitableness of what has been foreordained is a favourite one in Jn. See 4<sup>21</sup>.

ἵνα, i.e. "when"; see note on 12<sup>28</sup>.

πῶς ὁ ἀποκτείνῃ ὑμᾶς, "whosoever killeth you," whether he be Jew or Gentile.

δόξῃ λατρείων προσφέρειν τῷ Θεῷ, "shall think (so blind will he be) that he is offering service to God." (λατρεία does not occur elsewhere in the Gospels.) Paul's persecution of the early disciples was a notable instance of such mistaken zeal (cf. Acts 22<sup>4</sup>, 26<sup>9</sup>, also 8<sup>1</sup> 9<sup>1</sup>). A Midrash on Num. 25<sup>12</sup> (cited by De Wette) has the maxim, "Quisquis effundit sanguinem impii idem facit ac si sacrificium offerat." And among Gentiles the same fanaticism has often displayed itself. Tacitus (Ann. xv. 44) evidently thought that persecution of Christians to their death was morally justified. Many persecutors are sincere, but their sincerity does not excuse them, if they might have learnt the truth, and did not do so.

3. ταῦτα ποιήσους ὑμῖν. The rec., with κτλ and some vss., retains ὑμῖν, which ABΓΔΘ omit. Probably it ought to be retained (cf. 15<sup>21</sup>).

ὅτι οὐκ ἔγνωσαν κτλ., "because they did not recognise the Father or me." This is virtually repeated from 15<sup>21</sup> (where see note). That the Jews did not "know" God, and thus did not recognise Divinity in Jesus, has been said several times before (7<sup>30</sup> 8<sup>19</sup>); and that "the world knew Him not" (11<sup>10</sup>) when He came is the constant theme of the "Gospel of the Rejection."

Ignorance, or want of appreciation of the true bearing of facts, may often be at the root of wrong doing, and it is wholesome to remember this. "When some one does you an injury or speaks ill of you, remember that he either does it or speaks it, believing that it is right and meet for him to do so. . . . So you will bear a gentle mind towards him . . . saying each time, So it appeared to him" (Epictetus, Enchir. 42). Cf. Lk. 23<sup>34</sup>, Acts 3<sup>17</sup>, 1 Cor. 2<sup>6</sup>.

But the ignorance of the Jews of the true character of Jesus is always treated in Jn. as blameworthy and as deserving of punishment, for they ought to have known.

4. For ταῦτα λέλασκα ὑμῖν, see on 15<sup>11</sup>. It is preceded by ἀλλὰ, not because what follows is in contrast with what goes ἑμῶν ἵνα ὄταν ἔλθῃ ἡ ἄρα αὐτῶν μηχανεύητε αὐτῶν, ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπα ὑμῖν.

Ταῦτα δὲ ἑμῖν ἐξ ἀρχῆς οὐκ εἶπον, ὅτι μὲθ' ὑμῶν ἤμην. 5. τῶν δὲ before, but as a resumptive particle, v. 3 being in the nature of an explanatory parenthesis.

ἡ ἄρα αὐτῶν is the true reading (AB<sup>5</sup> syr<sup>1</sup>), although αὐτῶν is omitted by KDFa, to assimilate the sentence to the more usual ἔλθῃ ἡ ἄρα.

ταῦτα refers primarily (but cf. v. 1) to the persecutions which have been foreshadowed (15<sup>20</sup> 16<sup>1-9</sup>), of which Jesus says that when their hour comes the disciples will remember that He had predicted them. See on 13<sup>19</sup>; and cf. 2<sup>22</sup>.

ἐγὼ is emphatic, "that I told you." See Intro., p. cxvii.

ταῦτα δὲ ἑμῖν ἐξ ἀρχῆς οὐκ εἶπον. We cannot distinguish ἐξ ἀρχῆς from ἀπ' ἀρχῆς of 15<sup>27</sup> (see on 6<sup>44</sup>). The statement is precise: "These things I did not tell you from the beginning"; that is, He did not speak in the early stages of His teaching of the persecutions which would come upon His disciples after He had gone. That is what one would have expected; and the predictions of future persecutions in the Synoptists are mainly found at the close of His ministry, e.g. Mt. 23<sup>34</sup>, Mk. 13<sup>36</sup> = Lk. 21<sup>34</sup>. It is true that Mt. puts his parallel passage to Mk. 13<sup>36</sup>, as early as the tenth chapter (Mt. 10<sup>32</sup>); and it is also noteworthy that persecution is foreshadowed in the Sermon on the Mount (Mt. 5<sup>10, 11</sup>, Lk. 6<sup>22</sup>). But Mt. has rearranged our Lord's sayings in such contexts as suit the frame of his narrative, and it is not surprising that he has placed the warning about persecution immediately after the charge to the Twelve. Nor is it to be thought that all the reported sayings in the Sermon on the Mount were delivered at one time: the Beatitude of the Persecuted would naturally be one of the last that would have been proclaimed, so austere a saying is it. There is, therefore, no good reason for doubting the statement which Jn. places in the mouth of Jesus, sc. that He did not speak at the beginning of His ministry of the ardua in store for His followers, although the perpetual burden of His exhortation was that they must be ready to "take up the cross." Cf. 15<sup>18</sup>.

The reason assigned for this reserve is ὅτι μὲθ' ὑμῶν ἤμην, "because I was with you." That is, seemingly, as long as He was there, the attacks of His enemies would be directed against Him rather than against them; persecution of a serious kind would come upon them only after His departure.

ἑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πέμψαντά με, καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐξ ὑμῶν ζῶντι με Παῦ ἑπάγει; 6. ἀλλ' ὅτι ταῦτα λελάθατε ὑμῖν, ἡ λόγη σπευλίθωσαν ὑμῶν τὴν καρδίαν. 7. ἀλλ' ἐγὼ τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω ὑμῖν, συμψέροι καὶ οὐδεὶς κτλ. καὶ is used for ἀλλά, as often in Jn.: see note on 1<sup>10</sup>. These words show that 13<sup>36</sup> 14<sup>4</sup> came after the present chapter in their original setting (see Intro., p. xx); for τοῦ ἐπάγει; is the question put by Peter directly, and indirectly by Thomas at 14<sup>4</sup>. At the point which the discourse has now reached, the disciples were thinking rather of themselves and of the dangers in front of them (15<sup>24</sup> 16<sup>2</sup>), than of the issue of their Master's mission.

The coming of the Paraclete consequent on the departure of Jesus (vv. 5-7)

5. ἑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πέμψαντά με, repeated verbally from 7<sup>25</sup>, where see note on ἑπάγειν. Cf. vv. 10, 17, 23, and 14<sup>14</sup>.

For the Johannine use of ἐρωτῶν, primarily meaning "to ask a question," see on 11<sup>22</sup>.

The "going" of Jesus "to the Father" throughout this chapter refers directly to His Death, when He re-entered the world of spirit (cf. Lk. 23<sup>43</sup>). This was the moment when His mission was completed: τετέλεσται (19<sup>30</sup>). Jn. lays no stress on the Ascension as distinct from the Resurrection of Christ (although he makes allusion to the Ascension as a specific event, 6<sup>62</sup>). See 20<sup>17</sup>. For him the hour of the "glorification" of Jesus was the hour of His Passion (cf. 13<sup>31</sup> and 14<sup>4</sup>).

6. ὅτι ταῦτα λελάθατε ὑμῖν, sc. because He had told them of the persecutions which they would experience: see on 15<sup>21</sup>.

λόγη is found in Jn. in this chapter only (vv. 20, 21, 22); λόγη, λυπέει, are never used of Jesus in the Gospels.

7. For the asseveration τὴν ἀλήθειαν λέγω, cf. Rom. 9<sup>1</sup>, 1 Tim. 2<sup>1</sup>. Jesus had used it before, in disputation with the Jews (8<sup>44, 45</sup>). Here, however, it introduces with solemnity the enigmatical saying "it is expedient for you that I go away," and is used like the prelude ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν (vv. 20, 23), which is a feature of the Fourth Gospel (see on 1<sup>12</sup>). συμψέροι (cf. 11<sup>50</sup> 18<sup>14</sup>) ἑμῖν ἵνα ἐγὼ ἀπέλθω. This was a hard and perplexing saying. The disciples, who had been accustomed to look to Jesus for counsel and guidance in every difficulty, were now told that it would be better for them that He should go away than that He should stay with them. (1) Hitherto, He had trained them for His service by precept and visible example, but this method of spiritual direction was only preliminary. His strange words told them now that there is a better education in discipleship than that which can be supplied by a visible master, whose will for his disciples can never be misunderstood. The braver and more perfect disciple is he who can walk by faith, and not by sight only (cf. 20<sup>30</sup>). So much might be reasoned out after reflection on the way in which Jesus dealt with some would-be disciples who wished to be always by His side (cf. Lk. 8<sup>35</sup> 9<sup>37</sup>). (2) But the reason assigned by Jesus Himself for the profitableness to His disciples of His departure is quite different. He said that if He did not go away from them, the Paraclete would not come to them, and that the mission of the Spirit could not begin until He had gone. This is one of those profound spiritual sayings in the Fourth Gospel which cannot be fully explained; but we have it hinted at before in the evangelist's words, "the Spirit was not yet, for Jesus was not yet glorified" (7<sup>39</sup>). Why the Spirit's influence could not be released during the earthly ministry of Jesus, as it was after His Passion and Resurrection, is a question to which no complete answer can be given. Perhaps it provides the supreme illustration of the gospel law that life comes only through death: a principle which is applied by Paul as well as by Jn., when he speaks of the Risen Christ (who had passed through death) as a Quickening Spirit. See further on 7<sup>39</sup> above.<sup>1</sup> It has been well said that "the Coming of the Holy Ghost was not merely to supply the absence of the Son, but to complete His presence."<sup>2</sup> ἀπέλθῃ. Three verbs are used in this passage (vv. 7-9) of Jesus "going" to God; and attempts have been made to distinguish their meaning. Thus, ἀπερχοῦσθαι is "to depart," simply; πορεύεσθαι is "to journey," sc. with a definite purpose, the purpose here being the sending of the Paraclete; while ὑπάγειν, the word most commonly used in Jn. by Jesus of His "going to the Father" (see on 7<sup>39</sup>), is "to withdraw," sc. from the visible presence of men. But such distinctions are over subtle; e.g. in 14<sup>3</sup> ὑπάγειν is not used of a withdrawal, but of going to Judaea with a definite purpose. Again, Mk. 14<sup>28</sup> has ὑπάγει where the parallel Lk. 22<sup>28</sup> has πορεύεται; in Tob. 8<sup>21</sup> B has πορεύεσθαι, while α has ὑπάγειν. These verbs are discussed at length by Abbott (Dial. 1653-1664), who endeavours to distinguish the Johannine usage of each: see on 7<sup>39</sup>, and cf. 6<sup>7</sup>.

ἂν γὰρ μὴ ἀπέλθῃ. After ἂν γὰρ ΑΓΔ ins. the emphatic ἐγώ, as in the preceding clause; but om. n. EDLΘ.

ὁ παράκλητος (see on 15<sup>26</sup>) οὐκ λείπεται πρὸς ἡμᾶς. So MADΘ; but BL have οὐ μὴ ἴδθῃ, an even stronger negative.

The language of this passage implies that the mission of the Paraclete, to help and to bear witness, will be of a different order from that influence of the Spirit of God which is a frequent topic of the O.T. writers. His mission will, henceforth, be primarily a mission of witness, bearing testimony to Jesus as the Revealer of God. The Spirit of God had always been at work in the world, inspiring, enlightening, strengthening mankind; but that He was to come as the παράκλητος of Jesus and His disciples was a new thing. Henceforth He will come ἐν ὀνόματι Χριστοῦ (see note on 14<sup>26</sup>).

ἂν δὲ πορευθῇ, πέμψω αὐτὸν πρὸς ἡμᾶς. See 15<sup>26</sup>, where we have ἐγὼ πέμψω ἡμᾶς, ἔμῳ and πρὸς ἡμᾶς being identical in meaning. Jn. is apt (see on 3<sup>17</sup>) to repeat an important statement in slightly different words.

The work of the Paraclete (vv. 8-15)

8. In the following verses the work of the Paraclete is predicted in some detail. We have already had His office described as one of witness (15<sup>26</sup>): He is to vindicate Jesus to the world. But He is also to vindicate the apostles in the testimony which they are to deliver (15<sup>27</sup>). They will be exposed to persecution (16<sup>1-7</sup>); but, notwithstanding this, they will have a powerful advocate by their side (16<sup>7</sup>). He will be their παράκλητος no less than the παράκλητος of Jesus; or, rather, He will be theirs because He is His.

In the Synoptists, this promise of support and Divine help in persecution is recorded more briefly, but quite explicitly. "When they lead you to judgment . . . be not anxious what you shall speak . . . ; for it is not you that speak, but the Holy Spirit" (Mk. 13<sup>11</sup>, Mt. 10<sup>19</sup>, Lk. 12<sup>11</sup> 21<sup>14</sup>). Here is assured to the apostles the help of the παράκλητος, as the advocate for their defence, who speaks through their mouths. In the present passage Jn. presents this thought more fully. The παράκλητος will not only provide their defence, but He will assume the part of the prosecutor, who convicts their accusers and the accusers of Jesus of being in the wrong. All early Christian preaching was, of necessity, apologetic and polemical. The first heralds of the gospel had to defend their new message, and were constrained to attack the Jewish and heathen doctrines in which much of evil was present. Both in defence and attack, the Holy Spirit was their unseen παράκλητος.

8. καὶ Ἰησοῦς ἑαυτὸς ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον περὶ ἁμαρτίας καὶ περὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ περὶ κρίσεως· 9. περὶ ἁμαρτίας μὲν, ὅτι οὐ πισ-καὶ Ἰησοῦς ἑαυτὸς ἐλέγξει κτλ. ἐλέγχειν τὰ περὶ τίνος (cf. 8<sup>40</sup>) is a classical construction (Aristoph. Plutus, 574), "to convict one of anything." ἐλέγχειν is to cross-examine for the purpose of convincing or refuting an opponent (the word being specially used of legal proceedings), and the ἄλλοις may be brought to a head by means of witness or testimony.<sup>1</sup> Philo speaks of the ἄλλοις of a man's conscience, and in one place identifies it with the Logos (τὸν σωφρονιστὴν ἄλλοις, τὸν ἰατροῦ λόγον, quod det. pot., c. 40; cf. also c. 8). In another passage (de animal. sacr. idom. 11), when speaking of a penitent going into the Temple, he calls the ἄλλοις or conviction of his soul (ὁ κατὰ ψυχὴν ἄλλοις) a "blameless advocate," παρὰλόγος οὐ μωρὸς. This brings together the ideas of παρὰλόγος and ἄλλοις, as in the verse before us.

ἐλέγξει τὸν κόσμον (see on 1<sup>8</sup> for the Johannine use of κόσμος) περὶ ἁμαρτίας. Jesus had confidently asked τίς . . . ἐλέγξει με περὶ ἁμαρτίας; (8<sup>40</sup>; cf. Lk. 3<sup>18</sup> for the constr.); but the Paraclete would definitely convict the world of sin, as Jesus Himself had begun to do while He was in the flesh (7<sup>7</sup>). This would not be until the Passion had been fulfilled (cf. 8<sup>40</sup>; and see on v. 7 above). An early illustration of this "conviction" is given Acts 2<sup>36, 37</sup>, where the crowds who had heard Peter's inspired preaching were "pricked to the heart": cf. 1 Cor. 14<sup>24, 25</sup>. It will be observed that in vv. 7-11, as well as at 15<sup>26</sup>, the Paraclete is spoken of, not as man's advocate with God (1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup>), but as Christ's advocate with the world. See Introd., p. xxi.

9. Abbott (Diat. 2077) notes that in Johannine words of Jesus, μὲν occurs only twice (here and at v. 25), in both cases being followed by ἔτι.

περὶ ἁμαρτίας μὲν, ὅτι οὐ πιστεύουσιν εἰς ἐμέ. This was the sin to which He had just referred (15<sup>22</sup>), and which He had already said (15<sup>22</sup>) that the witness of the Paraclete would expose. It is the touchstone of moral character to discern God in Christ, as is repeatedly insisted on by Jn.: cf. 3<sup>18, 19</sup> 9<sup>31</sup>, 1 Jn. 5<sup>10</sup>. This is "to believe on Him": cf. 1<sup>12</sup> 4<sup>19</sup>, and see 8<sup>24</sup>.

The primary thought is of the vindication of Jesus to the world, which shall be "convicted" by the Paraclete of the sin which is inherent in its rejection of Jesus. But, although it is not directly stated here, the fact that the Spirit "convicts" of sin has been the experience of every disciple, as well as of the antagonists, of Jesus.

τεύουσιν εἰς ἐμέ· 10. περὶ δικαιοσύνης δέ, ὅτι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα ἠγάπη καὶ οὐκ ἐτι θεοσπύρι μὲ· 11. περὶ δὲ κρίσεως, ὅτι ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου

10. περὶ δικαιοσύνης. Syr. sin. has (at v. 8) "He will improve the world in its sins and about His righteousness." This brings out that the δικαιοσύνη of which the world will be "convicted" to its shame is the δικαιοσύνη of Christ. It will be "convicted of righteousness" by pointing to Christ the Righteous One (1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup>, 1 Pet. 3<sup>18</sup>, Acts 3<sup>14</sup> 7<sup>30</sup>). The Jews, as Paul says, were "ignorant of God's righteousness" (Rom. 10<sup>3</sup>); they had not perceived that a new type of righteousness had been exhibited in the Person of Jesus, in whom was "no unrighteousness" (7<sup>18</sup> above). But the words used here go deeper.

"He shall convict the world of righteousness, because I go to the Father." Absolute Righteousness could be revealed only in the Risen Christ. With the Passion, His Revelation of the Father was completed (see on v. 5); and henceforth the Paraclete was to convince the world of the Perfect Righteousness which is in Christ revealed and made accessible to men.

It is apposite to cite here the testimony of one of the most impartial of modern historians. "It was reserved for Christianity," writes Lecky,<sup>1</sup> "to present to the world an ideal character, which through all the changes of eighteen centuries has inspired the hearts of men with an impassioned love; has shown itself capable of acting on all ages, nations, temperaments, and conditions; has been not only the highest pattern of virtue, but the strongest incentive to its practice; and has exercised so deep an influence that it may be truly said that the simple record of three short years of active life has done more to regenerate and soften mankind than all the disquisitions of philosophers and all the exhortations of moralists." If we put this tribute into Johannine language, we shall say that the Spirit has convinced the world of the Righteousness of Christ.

ἔτι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ἠγάπη. Cf. vv. 5, 16, 17, 19, 28; and see 7<sup>26</sup> for ἠγάπη. After πατέρα, the rec. inserts μου, with ATA®, but om. κβDLW.

καὶ οὐκ ἐτι θεοσπύρι μὲ, "and ye behold me no longer," sc. with the bodily eyes, for Jesus will have entered into the region of spirit: cf. vv. 16, 17, 19. There is no contradiction between this and ἦν ἐτι θεοσπύρι μὲ of 14<sup>19</sup> (g.v.), θεοσπύρι being there used of spiritual vision. See on 2<sup>22</sup> for the various usage of this verb in Jn.

11. περὶ δὲ κρίσεως. As the Spirit will convict the world of its sin, and reveal the true δικαιοσύνη, thereby the spiritual significance of judgment will be disclosed (cf. 5th, Acts 17th). There is nothing arbitrary in the Divine judgment; it is the inevitable issue of moral laws. Good is not the same as evil, and the sharpness of the distinction is revealed by the Spirit in His assurance of κρίσις, i.e. separation or judgment. He will convince the world at once of the justice and the inevitableness of God's judgments.

The world (see 8th) is not yet judged; but it will be judged at last; and the assurance of this is part of the message of Christ's Passion; for in this, which was apparently defeat but really victory, δ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου (cf. 12th 14th 30th for this title) κέρηται, "the prince of this world has been judged." See on 12th, where this has been said before, in similar words; and cf. 13th, where the Passion is regarded as already begun. For this aspect of the Passion, that it is the defeat of the Evil One, cf. Heb. 2<sup>d</sup>, "that through death He might bring to nought him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." In later times, pious imagination played round the idea of the defeat and judgment of Satan, and the legend of the Harrowing of Hell, first found in the Gospel of Nicodemus, was widespread. All that is said in Jn. is κέρηται, "he has already been judged" (cf. Lk. 10th), and this will issue in final expulsion from the domain over which he claims rule (12th).

In the fifth century Freer MS. (W), which contains the last twelve verses of Mark, there is interpolated after Mk. 16th, in which Jesus has rebuked the unbelief of the disciples, a remarkable passage which recalls the order of ideas in Jn. 16<sup>th-21</sup>, as follows: "And they excused themselves, saying that this age of lawlessness and unbelief is under Satan, who, through the agency of unclean spirits, does not allow the true power of God to be apprehended. Wherefore, they said to Christ, reveal now Thy righteousness. And Christ said to them, The limit of the years of Satan's authority has been fulfilled (συνπλήρωται ὁ χρόνος τῶν ἐτῶν τῆς ἑξουσίας τοῦ Σατανᾶ), but other terrors (δεινά) draw near, and I was delivered up to death on behalf of those that have sinned, that they may be turned to the truth and sin no more, so that they may inherit the spiritual and incorruptible glory of righteousness in heaven. But go ye into all the world, etc." Here we have a complaint of unbelief caused by Satan, to be cured by the revelation of Christ's righteousness, to which Christ replies that Satan's power is ended, that is, "he has been judged" (Jn. 16th). The impending "terrors" may be the persecutions foretold in Jn. 16<sup>th-17</sup>. In this συνπλήρωσιν there may be preserved an independent tradition of words recorded in Jn. 16<sup>th-17</sup>.

τούτου κέρηται. 12. Ἐπι πολλὰ ἔγω ὤμην λέγειν, ἀλλ' οὐ δύνασθε βαστάζειν ἄρα. 13. ὅταν εἰ ἔλθῃ ἑκείνος, τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ἀγγελήσει ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν ἀλήθειαν πάντων· οὐ γὰρ λαλήσει ἑφ' ἑαυτοῦ, 12. Ἐπι πολλὰ ἔγω ὤμην λέγειν κτλ. So κΒL, but the rec. has λέγειν ὤμην. The constr. is thoroughly classical; cf. Demosth. Olynth. II. τὰ μὲν ἄλλα σιωπῶ, πολλὰ δὲ ἔγω εἶπαι.

At 15th Jesus had assured His disciples that He had withheld from them nothing of His Father's purpose, but this was necessarily subject to the reservation that there were some matters which they could not understand. All revelation is subject to the condition "Quicquid recipitur, recipitur ad modum recipientis." So He now tells them that there are many things which they cannot yet hear (cf. 1 Cor. 3th). βαστάζειν is used figuratively (as at Acts 13th) of "bearing" a mental burden; see on 12th. For ἄρα, see on 9th; its position here at the end of the sentence gives it emphasis.

The words of this verse show that the full Christian message is not contained in such teaching as, e.g., is found in the Synoptic Gospels. That marks a stage only in the revelation of God in Christ. If the challenge "Back to Jesus" means that we may safely neglect the interpretation of His gospel put forth by the Christians of the Apostolic age, then it is misleading. It is part of the teaching of Jesus Himself, if Jn. 16th truly expresses His mind, that much would be learnt of Divine things under the guidance of the Spirit, which could not have been taught with profit during His public ministry on earth.

18. We have here a new thought as to the office of the Paraclete. Hitherto He has been presented as the vindicator of Jesus to the world, by His witness (15th), and His convincing and convicting power (16<sup>th-17</sup>). But now He appears in a different capacity, sc. as a Guide and Teacher of the faithful (vv. 13-15). Cf. 14th, where a short summary is given of what is said more fully here as to the office of the Spirit in relation to the Church.

ὅταν εἰ ἔλθῃ ἑκείνος, τὸ πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας. This is repeated from 15th, where see the note.

ἀγγελήσει ὑμᾶς εἰς τὴν ἀλήθειαν πάντων. So AB, but the rec. has πάντων τῶν ἀλήθειαν. εἰ τῆ ἀληθείας πίστις is read by κDLWΘ, and supported by many O.L. texts: a reading perhaps due to the greater frequency of εἰ than εἰς after ἀγγέλω in the Psalms (e.g. 5th 27th 67th 106th 119th).

The Vulgate rendering docetis nos omnem veritatem has been thought to represent ἀγγησεται ὑμῖν τὴν ἀλ. πᾶσ., a reading which is found in Cyril Hier. (Cat. xvii. 11) and in Eusebius, but which is not supported by any extant Greek

MS. of the Gospel. Wordsworth and White (in loc.) suggest that we have here a trace of a Greek MS. used by Jerome which is now lost, but the inference is doubtful.<sup>1</sup> Neither θεγγόμεναι nor δδγγέτω are used elsewhere by Jn., but the true Greek reading may be taken to be δδγγήσω ἑμῆς εἰς κτλ. The Spirit is represented as the Guide or Leader who points the Way (ὁδὸς) to the Truth (ἀλήθεια), Christ being Himself both the Way and the Truth (14<sup>6</sup>).

In Rev. 7<sup>17</sup> δδγγείν is used of the Lamb leading the saints to fountains of living water; but the thought and the language of the verse before us seem to go back to the O.T. conception of the Divine leadership of Israel as a whole and of individual Israelites, which is so often expressed in the Psalms. Cf. Ps. 143<sup>10</sup> τὸ πνεῦμά σου τὸ ἅγιον (v.l. ἀγαθόν) δδγγήσω με ἐν τῇ εὐθείᾳ, Ps. 25<sup>5</sup> δδγγήσω με ἐπὶ τὴν ἀληθείάν σου. See also Ps. 107<sup>7</sup>.

We have a similar phrase in Philo (de vit. Mos. iii. 36), who says that sometimes a guess is akin to a prophecy, for the mind would not hit on the point so directly, were not a divine spirit leading it towards the truth, εἰ μὴ καὶ θείον ἦν πνεῦμα τὸ πωθηγμένον πρὸς αὐτὴν τὴν ἀλήθειαν.

In this verse, then, the work of the Paraclete is a guide is brought into close relation with what is said in the Psalms (especially Ps. 143<sup>10</sup>) as to the work of the Spirit of Yahweh. The Paraclete is not explicitly identified with the "Holy Spirit," a Name familiar to every Jew, until 14<sup>26</sup>; but what is said at this point prepares us for the identification.

δδγγήσω ἑμῆς κτλ. "He will guide you," sc. the apostles, to whom the words were addressed. It is natural, and in a sense legitimate, for modern readers to give the promise a wider reference, and to interpret it of a gradual revelation of the truth to the Church under the guidance of the Spirit.<sup>2</sup> But it is not clear that the author of the Fourth Gospel would have recognised such an interpretation of the words which he records. For him, the revelation to the apostles after the Descent of the Spirit was final and complete (cf. 20<sup>22</sup> and Heb. 1<sup>1</sup>). In any case, by "all the truth" is meant here "all the truth about Christ and His Gospel"; the thought of the gradual revelation of scientific truth, and the ever-increasing knowledge of the works of God in nature, is not present in the text. The promise to the apostles did not mean, e.g., that they would be divinely guided into all truth as to economic law or as to the distribution of property (Acts 4<sup>35</sup>). See further on 14<sup>26</sup>.

οὐ γὰρ λαλήσω ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ. This is the reason why the guidance of the Paraclete is sure and trustworthy in the things of God and Christ. As the Son did not speak "of Himself" (12<sup>44</sup> 14<sup>10</sup> and cf. 7<sup>17</sup> 5<sup>10</sup>), so the Spirit will not speak "of Himself."<sup>1</sup> ἀλλ' ὅσα ἀκούσω λαλήσω. So BDW; the rec. has ὅσα ἀκούσω; Θ has ὅσα ἐν ἀκούσει; vL read ἀκούω. "Whatsoever He shall hear (sc. from God), that will He speak"; cf. 8<sup>26</sup>, where Jesus says, "The things which I heard from Him, these I speak unto the world." Westcott calls attention to the difference of tense, ἤκουσα at 8<sup>26</sup>, ἀκούω here. In the former passage, the message which the Son had to deliver was complete and definite, but here the thought is of a message being enlarged from time to time. This is attractive, but it is not certain (see above) that this thought of the continuous education of the Church was really present to the mind of the evangelist.

καὶ τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ἑμῖν. It was popularly believed that Messiah when He came would reveal new truths: cf. ἀναγγελεῖ ἡμῖν πάντα (4<sup>21</sup>, where see note; and cf. 16<sup>22</sup> for ἀναγγελλέτω, "to report"). Here it is thrice repeated (vv. 14, 15) that the Spirit's office will also include that of "declaring" or "reporting" Divine things.

To report τὰ ἐρχόμενα is to predict the future, so that prophecy in the sense of prediction is included here in the work of the Paraclete. This is the only place in Jn. where any of the Pauline χρηρίσματα of the Spirit is mentioned (cf. 1 Cor. 12<sup>10</sup>, 10<sup>9</sup>); and Wendt would treat the words τὰ ἐρχ. . . ἑμῖν as an editorial addition, regarding them as out of harmony with the context.<sup>1</sup> But we have already seen that the description of the Paraclete's office as "guiding into truth" recalls O.T. phrases as to the work of the Holy Spirit, a main part of which, to Jewish thought, was the inspiration of the prophets. That it should be said of the promised Paraclete τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ ἑμῖν is entirely in harmony with the identification of Him with the Divine Spirit (cf. Rev. 1<sup>2</sup> 22<sup>6</sup>).

To Jewish thought the expected Christ was ὁ ἐρχόμενος, the Coming One (Lk. 7<sup>30</sup>, Jn. 6<sup>41</sup>); and to Christian thought He is still ὁ ἐρχόμενος, for He is, in some sense, to come again. There is a hint of apocalyptic prevision of the Last Things in τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἀναγγελεῖ, such as Jn. keeps in the background for the most part, although we have it in the Synoptists (Mk. 13<sup>30</sup>). See Intro. d, p. cix.

14. ἐκείνος ἔμαρ βεβαίωται, ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἔμοσ λήμμεται καὶ ἀναγγελεὶ ἔμιν. 15. πάντα ἴσα ἔχει ὁ Πατήρ ἔμαρ ἔστω διὰ τοῦτο εἶπον ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἔμοσ λαμβάνει καὶ ἀναγγελεὶ ἔμιν.

14. ἐκείνος ἔμαρ βεβαίωται. The Spirit was not to come until Jesus had been "glorified," i.e. in His Passion (7th); but thenceforth every fresh revelation of the Spirit, all new insight into the meaning of Christ's gospel, would be a fresh "glorification" of Christ, an enlargement of man's sense of His majesty. As the Son had "glorified" the Father while He was on earth (17th), so the Spirit will "glorify" the Son after He has departed from human vision.

ὅτι ἐκ τοῦ ἔμοσ λήμμεται καὶ ἀναγγελεὶ ἔμιν. This "glorification" will be brought about by the Spirit's revelation of Christian truth. The advanced Christology of the Pauline Epistles, and of the Fourth Gospel itself, as compared with that to which the apostles had attained before the Passion, is a signal illustration of this.

See 14th, where the question of Jude shows that very different thoughts as to the future "glorification" of Jesus filled the hearts of the apostles. They expected a visible manifestation in glory, which should convict the world and put it to shame.

16. πάντα ἴσα ἔχει ὁ πατήρ ἔμαρ ἔστω. This is the perpetual claim of the Johannine Christ, repeated once more at 17th. So Paul can speak of "the unsearchable wealth of the Christ" (Eph. 3rd).

διὰ τοῦτο, referring to what precedes (see on 5th). "Wherefore I said that (ὅτι recitantis) He takes of mine and shall show it unto you," repeated from v. 14, with the slight verbal change of λαμβάνει (BDLNWΘ) for λήμμεται of v. 14 (which is retained by the rec. with κ'Α, the Latin vas., and Syr. sin.). This repetition of a striking phrase, a word or two being altered, is a feature of Johannine style (see on 3rd).

ἀναγγελεὶ ἔμιν, thrice repeated at the end of vv. 13, 14, 15, is like a solemn refrain, calling special attention to the revealing office of the Spirit.

The disciples' perplexity as to Jesus' return (vv. 16-19)

16. μικρὸν, "a little while": see on 7th-13th 14th. Jesus dwells again and again on the nearness of His Passion.

οὐκ ἐτί is the true reading at this point (κΒD<sup>W</sup>NΘ); but the rec. has οὐ (assimilated to v. 17), with ΑΓΔ. καὶ οὐκ ἐτί θεωρεῖτέ με is here repeated from v. 10.

"A little while, and ye no longer behold me," sc. with the hoddily eyes (see on 2nd for θεωρεῖν). On the day after these words were spoken, He would meet death, after which they would no longer be able to look upon His face as heretofore. It is to be observed that οὐκ ἐτί (see on 4th) always means "no longer" in Jn., sc. that the action in question is discontinued; it does not necessarily mean "never again."

16. Μικρὸν καὶ οὐκ ἐτί θεωρεῖτέ με, καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθί με. 17. Ἔβαν ὄν ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ πρὸς ἀλλήλους τί ἔστω τοῦτο ὃ λέγει ἡμῖν Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με, καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθί με; καὶ "Ὅτι ἰσάγω πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα; 18. Ἐβαν ὄν τί ἔστω τοῦτο ὃ λέγει, τὸ μικρὸν; οὐκ οἶδαμεν τί λαλεῖ. 19. Ἔβαν

καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ ὄψεσθί με, "And again, a little while," sc. the period between His Death and His Resurrection, "and ye shall see me." Ἐβαν, a verb always used in Jn. of the vision of spiritual realities (see on 1st), now takes the place of θεωρεῖν. καὶ ἡμῖν ὄψεσθί με, Jesus says, in like manner, at v. 22. The "seeing" of the Risen Lord in His spiritual body, and His "seeing" of His disciples after His Resurrection, are more suitably expressed by ὄψεσθί than by θεωρεῖν (although cf. 20th).

The rec. adds (from v. 10 or v. 17), after ὄψεσθί με, ὅτι ἐγὼ ἰσάγω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, with ΑΝΔΘ; but the phrase is not found at this point in κΒDLW or Pap. Oxy. 1781.

17. The disciples were puzzled. ἰσάγω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (v. 10) seemed to indicate a final withdrawal of His visible presence, and yet He used the word μικρὸν (v. 16), which suggested that it would be only temporary.

ἔβαν ὄν ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ κτλ. We must supply τῶν. For a similar elliptical construction, cf. 7th; and for πρὸς ἀλλήλους, cf. 4th.

They repeated the enigmatic words of Jesus to each other, being unable to catch their meaning.

Note that they quote Jesus as having said Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ (not οὐκ ἐτί) θεωρεῖτέ με, and Jesus is represented in verse 19 as repeating οὐ θεωρεῖτε. This provides one more illustration of Jn.'s habit of altering slightly a striking phrase when it is reproduced for the second or third time (see on 3rd). Such verbal alterations are not to be taken as indicating a subtle change of meaning; they exemplify merely the freedom of Jn.'s style.

18. τί ἔστω τοῦτο. So κΒD*LΘ and Pap. Oxy. 1781; but the rec. has τοῦτο τί ἔστω, with ΑΔ<sup>AN</sup>.

ὃ λέγει, τὸ μικρὸν; "What is this that He says, this word μικρὸν?" τί before μικρὸν singles out the word as the point of difficulty.

Ἰησοῦς ὅτι ἤθελον αὐτὸν ἰδεῖν, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς Περὶ τούτου ζητεῖτε με; ἀλλήλων ὅτι εἶπον Μικρὸν καὶ οὐ θεωρεῖτέ με, καὶ πάλιν μικρὸν καὶ εὐρεσθή με; 20. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι κλαίσετε καὶ θρηνήσετε ἡμεῖς, ὃ δὲ κόσμος χαρήσεται: ἡμεῖς λυπηθήσομεθ, ἀλλ' ἢ οὐκ οἴστανε τί λαλοῦ. (See on 2<sup>11</sup> for the frequent interchangeability of λέγων and λαλῶν in Jn.) "That which is quite clear to us was to them all mystery. If Jesus were about to found an earthly kingdom, why should He depart? If not, why should He return?" (Godet).

19. ἔγωγ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι κτλ. He recognised that the disciples wished to interrogate Him (see below on v. 23 for ἔρωτῶν). Cf. 2<sup>14</sup>.

The rec. adds οὐν after ἔγωγ, with AΔN; but om. ΞBDLW. For οὐν, Θ has ἐξ. Also the rec. has δ before Ἰησοῦς, with WADNΘ; but om. BLW and Pap. Oxy. 1781. See on 1<sup>29</sup>; and cf. 6<sup>14</sup>.

The repetition of phrases in vv. 16-19 is quite in the Oriental manner of narrative. The crucial word μικρὸν is repeated 7 times; and "A little while, and ye behold me not, and again, a little while, and ye shall see me," is said 3 times over. Although the Fourth Gospel is thoroughly Greek, the Semitic undertone is often present.

Words of comfort and hope (vv. 20-24)

20. In the answer which Jesus gives to the bewildered disciples, He fixes on the word μικρὸν, which was the centre of their difficulty, and says nothing about the meaning of "I go to the Father." Their short time of sorrow at His departure will be followed by a season of joy. That is enough for them to know at the moment.

ὃ δὲ κόσμος χαρήσεται: but the hostile world, i.e. the Jewish λόγη ὑμῶν εἰς χαρὰν γενήσεται. 21. ἢ γυνὴ ὄντα τίση λόγην ἔχει, ὅτι ἤλθεν ἢ ἄρα αὐτῆς; ὅταν δὲ γενήσῃ τὸ παιδίον, οὐκ εἶμι μνημονεύει τῆς θλίψεως διὰ τὴν χαρὰν ὅτι ἐγενήθη; ἐθρηνῶτε εἰς τὸν κόσμον. 22. καὶ ἡμεῖς οὐν νῦν μὲν λόγην ἔχεται; πάλιν δὲ θρηνῶμα ὑμῶν, καὶ χαρήσεται ὑμῶν ἢ καρδία, καὶ τὴν χαρὰν ὑμῶν οὐδεὶς αἶρει adversaries of Jesus, will rejoice that the Prophet whom they hate (15<sup>18</sup>) has been removed.

ἀλλ' ἢ λόγη ὑμῶν εἰς χαρὰν γενήσεται. So it came to pass. ἔχασσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ ἰδόντες τὸν κύριον (20<sup>20</sup>). Cf. ἀπὸ πένθους εἰς χαρὰν (Euth. 9<sup>28</sup>); and see Jer. 31<sup>13</sup>). See also 2 Esd. 2<sup>27</sup>.

21. ἢ γυνή, sc. any woman, what follows being universally true; cf. ὃ κόκος (12<sup>20</sup>) or ὃ δοῦλος (13<sup>20</sup>). Abbott (Dict. 1948) takes the article as indicating that it is the woman of a household, i.e. the wife, that is in question. But this is to miss the point.

The image of a woman in travail is frequent in the O.T., where the suddenness and inevitableness of travail pains are often mentioned (e.g. Isa. 26<sup>17</sup>; 2 Esd. 16<sup>20</sup>); but the thought of the joy which follows the pain does not occur except here. Some expositors have thought that the Birth of the Church and the travail pains of the Passion are contemplated in this passage (cf. Isa. 66<sup>7</sup>, Hos. 13<sup>14</sup>, Mk. 13<sup>37</sup>); but it is over subtle and inconsistent with the context to bring in such an idea. The apostles were not in travail with the Church that was to be. The true (and only) exposition of this beautiful image is given in the verse which follows. The image provides a familiar and touching illustration of the truth that pain is often the necessary antecedent to the supreme joys of life.

22. καὶ ἡμεῖς οὐν. For the constr. see 8<sup>20</sup>. Τῆς εἰς the application of the image of the joy which follows the pain of childbirth. "You now, indeed (for μὲν, see on v. 9), have grief," but presently you will rejoice. ἔχεται (κ<sup>2</sup>BCA) is to be preferred to ἔχει of K<sup>2</sup>ADLΘ.

πάλιν δὲ θρηνῶμα ὑμῶν. Here is even a greater promise than ἀφασθή με of v. 16: it is better to be seen of God than to see Him (cf. Gal. 4<sup>7</sup>). This was the promise of Jesus, that He would see His disciples after He was risen.

καὶ χαρήσεται ὑμῶν ἢ καρδία. The phrase is identical with that of Isa. 66<sup>14</sup> (ἀφασθή με, καὶ χαρήσεται ἢ καρδία ὑμῶν; cf. also Ps. 33<sup>21</sup>). Cf. 20<sup>14-16</sup>, when the promise was fulfilled in the first instance. Such joy is inalienable, οὐδεὶς αἶρει ἐξ' ὑμῶν, the future which is certain being represented by a present

tenes. Nevertheless BD*P Oxy. 1781 have ἀρεῖ, which Westcott adopts. But RACD*PLA<sup>o</sup> and Pap. Oxy. 1228 give ἀρεῖ. W has ἀφ'αυτοῦ.

38. ἐν ἑαυτῇ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ. This phrase occurs again at v. 26, and at 14<sup>30</sup>; and in each case it signifies the day when the Spirit has been released, Jesus having been "glorified" (see on 7<sup>39</sup>). The teaching of the Fourth Gospel is that the moment of consummation of the work of Jesus is the moment of His Death: τεθνήσκων (19<sup>30</sup>). After His Resurrection, He gave the Spirit to the assembled disciples: λάβετε πνεῦμα ἄγιον (20<sup>22</sup>). The Day of Pentecost is described in Acts 2 as a Day when a special gift of spiritual power was manifested, and there is nothing in Jn. which is inconsistent with such a manifestation. But for Jn. the Day of the Spirit's Advent is the Day of the Resurrection of Jesus; and to introduce the thoughts of what happened at Pentecost into the exegesis of these Last Discourses is to make confusion. ἐν ἑαυτῇ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ signifies the new Dispensation or Era of the Spirit, which began with the Resurrection, to the thought of Jn.

ἐπὶ οὐκ ἐρωτήσετε οὐδέν. ἑαυτῶν may mean either "to ask a question" as often in Jn. (12<sup>19</sup>, 21, 28, 51<sup>23</sup>, 9<sup>2</sup>, 12, 19, 21, 28, 16<sup>24</sup>, 18, 20, 18<sup>12</sup>, 23), or "to entreat, to beseech, to ask a boon" (as at 4<sup>21</sup>, 46, 47, 12<sup>21</sup>, 19<sup>13</sup>, 28). We have already noted (on 11<sup>20</sup>) that it is the verb used of the prayers of Jesus by Himself (16<sup>26</sup>, 14<sup>18</sup>, 17<sup>9</sup>, 14, 20), but that it is not used elsewhere in the Gospel of the prayers of men (cf., however, 1 Jn. 5<sup>16</sup>).

Hence ἐπὶ οὐκ ἐρωτήσετε οὐδέν may be translated in two ways:

(1) "In that day ye shall ask me no questions," as they had desired to do, v. 19; cf. v. 30. When the Paraclete came, they would no longer need to ask Jesus questions, such as those addressed to Him at 13<sup>30</sup>, 14<sup>6</sup>, 25; for the Spirit would teach them all things (14<sup>26</sup>, 16<sup>13</sup>). But this seems to break the sequence of thought, and there is no mention of the Spirit in the immediate context. Further, as Field points out, the emphatic position of ἐπὶ before the negative and the verb, naturally suggests a comparison with τὸν πατέρα in the next clause.

(2) It is better to render, "In that day, ye shall ask nothing of me." The visible company of Jesus would be withdrawn, so that they would no longer be able to ask favours of Him or proffer requests to Him, face to face. But there is a great compensation, and its promise is introduced by the solemn prelude ἄμην ἄμην λέγω ὑμῶν (see on 3<sup>11</sup>). They can henceforth have direct access to the Father, and whatever they ask of

Him, the due conditions of Christian prayer being observed (see on 15<sup>16</sup>), shall be given.

The view that the contrast is between "asking me" and "asking the Father" has been rejected by some commentators because ἑαυτῶν is used in the first case, and αὐτῶν in the second. But (see on 11<sup>20</sup>) these verbs are not sharply distinguished in later Greek (cf. Acts 3<sup>1</sup>, 8) for an illustration of their being used interchangeably). The general purport of the teaching of these discourses is that it will be spiritually beneficial for the disciples that their Master should depart (16<sup>7</sup>). New sources of knowledge and spiritual power will henceforth be available for them. They will be empowered to achieve great things on earth (14<sup>13</sup>), and their prayers will have a potential efficacy, such as could not have been before it was possible to offer them in the Name of Jesus.

δώσει ὑμῶν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου. This is the order of words in RBC*P*LA, and is supported by Origen and the paraphrase of Nonnus. The rec. has ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου δώσει ὑμῶν, with AC*DNWT<sup>o</sup>, the Syriac and Latin vs. generally.

If we adopt the former reading, which prima facie has the weight of MS. authority, the natural rendering of the sentence is, "If you ask anything of the Father, He will give it to you in my Name." This is difficult of interpretation. It is true that Jesus speaks later of "the Holy Spirit whom the Father will send in my Name" (14<sup>26</sup>, where see note), but that is a way of speaking which has parallels at 5<sup>28</sup>, 10<sup>25</sup>. To say that the Father gives in the Name of the Son a boon which has been sought in prayer is unlike anything elsewhere in the N.T. It is not adequate to interpret this as meaning only that the Son is the medium through which prayer is answered as well as offered. That is true in a sense (see on 14<sup>26</sup>), but to speak of the Father acting ἐν ὀνόματι τοῦ υἱοῦ is foreign alike to Johannine doctrine and to Johannine phraseology. The phrase ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου occurs 15<sup>16</sup>, 16<sup>23</sup>, 24, 26, 14<sup>13</sup>, 14, 28 (7 times in all) in these Last Discourses; and in every case (except the last, 14<sup>26</sup>, to which reference has already been made) it has reference to the essential condition of Christian prayer, sc. that it should be offered "in the Name" of Christ.

The Greek, however, does not necessarily require us to connect ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου here with δώσει ὑμῶν, even if δώσει ὑμῶν precedes ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι μου. For we have seen above (on 12<sup>12</sup>) that ἐλογημένος ὁ ἐρχόμενος ἐν ὀνόματι κυρίου μου be rendered "Blessed in the Name of the Lord is He that cometh," ἐν ὀνόματι κυρίου being taken with ἐλογημένος, although ὁ ἐρχόδόματί μου 24. ὡς ἄρα οὐκ ἤγγρατε οὐδὲν ἐν τῷ δόματί μου αἰτέιτε, καὶ λήψασθε, ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν ᾖ πληρωμένη.

25. Ταῦτα ἐν παροιμίαις λαλάθηκα ὑμῖν ἕρχεται ἄρα ὅτε οὐκ εἶμεν μου immediately precedes. In the present passage, in like manner, it is legitimate to take ἐν τῷ δόματί μου with αἰτήσατε τὸν πατέρα, although ὅσοις ὑμῖν immediately precedes. The meaning, then, is exactly similar to that of 13<sup>18</sup> ἵνα ὁ ὅτι ἐν αἰτήσῃ τὸν πατέρα ἐν τῷ δόματί μου ὅρ ὑμῖν. See notes on 14<sup>18</sup> 15<sup>18</sup>. And that this is here also the true sequence of words is confirmed by the next verse, where Jesus goes on to say that hitherto the apostles had asked nothing in His Name. See on 20<sup>18</sup>.

24. For ὡς ἄρα, cf. 2<sup>18</sup> 5<sup>18</sup>. Hitherto they had asked nothing in the Name of Jesus. They could not have done so, nor had they before this been taught to do so. The dispensation of the Spirit had not yet begun. Not yet could a Christian disciple say δι' αὐτοῦ ἔρχομεν τὴν προσευχὴν . . . ἐν εὐπρέμιατι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (Eph. 2<sup>18</sup>). αἰτέιτε, "Be asking," the pres. indicating continuous prayer; καὶ λήψασθε, "and ye shall receive." The new mode of prayer has a more certain promise of response than anything that had gone before, although αἰτέιτε καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῖν (Mt. 7<sup>7</sup>) had been a precept of the Sermon on the Mount (see on 14<sup>18</sup>).

ἵνα ἡ χαρὰ ὑμῶν ᾖ πληρωμένη. Christian prayer issues in the fulness of Christian joy. For this thought of "joy being fulfilled," which is frequent in Jn., see on 15<sup>11</sup> above, with the references there given.

Jesus ceases to speak in parables, and promises the disciples direct access to the Father who loves them and to whom He returns (vv. 25-28)

25. ταῦτα ἐν παροιμίαις λαλάθηκα ὑμῖν. For παροιμία, see on 10<sup>6</sup>; cf. Ps. 78<sup>5</sup>.

We have seen (on 15<sup>14</sup>) that ταῦτα in the seven-times-repeated ταῦτα λαλάθηκα ὑμῖν refers in each case to what has immediately preceded. So here ταῦτα points back to the sayings in 16<sup>18a</sup>. about the approaching departure of Jesus. The apostles had not understood the meaning of ἵνα γὰρ πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (v. 18), or of what Jesus had said about their seeing Him again. He puts it more plainly in v. 28, whereupon they reply at once that now they know what He means (v. 29). Whatever allusion ταῦτα ἐν παροιμίαις λαλάθηκα ὑμῖν may carry to the veiled teachings suggested by the images of the

ἐν παροιμίαις λαλάθηκα ὑμῖν, ἀλλὰ παρηγορία τοῖς τοῦ Πατρὸς ἀπαγγελοῦ ὑμῖν. 26. ἐν ἑσπέρῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐν τῇ δόματί μου αἰτήσασθε, καὶ σὺ λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι ἐγὼ ἔρωτήσω τὸν Πατέρα περὶ ὑμῶν 27. αἰτῶν γὰρ

Vine (15<sup>1</sup>) and of the Woman in Travail (16<sup>24</sup>), or more generally by the parables of the Ministry (Mk. 4<sup>26</sup>), the primary reference here is to vv. 15-18.

For the phrase ἕρχεται ἄρα, see on v. 3 and 4<sup>21</sup>. Here it must be equated with ἐν ἑσπέρῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ of v. 26 (see v. 23 above). When the visible presence of Jesus was withdrawn, and when His oral teaching was replaced by the fuller teaching of the Spirit (see on 14<sup>26</sup>), then His revelation of the Father (the central theme of His ministry), conveyed through the Spirit, would be plainer.

For παρηγορία, "unreserved and open speech," see on 7<sup>4</sup>. ἀπαγγελοῦ. So ABC<sup>2</sup>DLW<sup>6</sup>, but the rec. (with N) has ἀπαγγελοῦ (from vv. 13, 14, 15). On the other hand, ἀπαγγελοῦ occurs again in Jn. only twice (1 Jn. 1<sup>2</sup> 9), while we have ἀπαγγελοῦ at Jn. 4<sup>22</sup> 5<sup>18</sup> 16<sup>22</sup> 24<sup>15</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup>. It is doubtful if any distinction in meaning can be traced. παρηγορία περὶ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀπαγγελοῦ ὑμῖν means "I will bring word to you plainly about the Father"; ἀπαγγελοῦ, "to report," being a quite appropriate word to employ of the revelations which the Spirit is to bring.

If it be urged that ἀπαγγελοῦ must refer to some future oral teachings of Jesus Himself, then we must suppose that the post-Resurrection discourses contained such fuller and plainer doctrine (cf. 20<sup>27</sup>); but it is most likely that the future disclosures of the Spirit are in view.

26. ἐν ἑσπέρῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ (see on v. 23) ἐν τῷ δόματί μου αἰτήσασθε (see on 15<sup>14</sup> for this phrase). With the coming of the Paraclete, the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God as revealed in Christ would be better understood. They would know more of God as Father, and so would be bolder and more ambitious in prayer (cf. 1 Jn. 5<sup>14</sup> αὐτὴ ἐστίν ἡ παρηγορία ἣν ἔρχομεν πρὸς αὐτόν, ὅτι ἴσως τὸ αἰτησάμεθα κατὰ τὸ θέλημα αὐτοῦ, ἁκούει ἡμῶν). Cognitio pariti orationem (Bengel).

καὶ σὺ λέγω ὑμῖν ὅτι ἐγὼ ἔρωτήσω τὸν πατέρα περὶ ὑμῶν, "I do not say to you that I will entreat the Father for you" (see for ἔρωτῶν on 11<sup>22</sup> 16<sup>29</sup>), because in the dispensation of the Spirit prayer in the Name of Jesus does not fail to reach the Father and to receive its answer. The prayers of those who are "in Christ," and offered "in His Name," are virtually His prayers. Before the Coming of the Spirit He did pray for His disciples (14<sup>12</sup> 17<sup>9</sup> 22<sup>26</sup>), but here the thought is of the ideal disciple after the Spirit has descended. This does

ὁ Πατήρ φιλᾷ ἑμᾶς, ὅτι ἠμεῖς ἐμὲ πεφιλῆκατε καὶ πιστωσάμεθα ὅτι ἐγὼ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον. 28. ἐξῆλθον ἐκ τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ ἔλθω not exclude the perpetual intercession of Jesus for sinful disciples; ἔάν τις ἀμαρτίαν πεφιλῆσθαι ἔχοντα πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν θέσω (1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup>; cf. Rom. 8<sup>34</sup>, Heb. 7<sup>25</sup>). But the true disciple is encouraged to be bold in prayer for himself, and the reason why he may be bold is now stated.

27. ἀκούσθε γὰρ ὁ πατήρ φιλᾷ ἑμᾶς, "for the Father Himself loveth you." There will be no reluctance in His answer to the prayers of those who love Jesus and have faith that His mission was from the Father.

Field calls attention to the "elegant Greek use" of ἀκούσθαι in the sense of ἀκούσασθαι, proprio motu, and compares Homer, Iliad, viii. 293, τί με σπειρόντα καὶ ἀκούσθαι ὀτρύνεις. This is one of the many passages in which the Greek of the Fourth Gospel does not resemble translation-Greek.

At 3<sup>14</sup>, the love of God for the κόσμος (all mankind) has been mentioned; here and at 14<sup>21, 22</sup>, 17<sup>26</sup> it is rather the special love of God for those who are disciples of Jesus that is in view (as at 1 Jn. 4<sup>19</sup>). Here the verb φιλᾷν is used, the only instance in which Jn. employs it to express the love of God for man; in the other passages he uses ἀγαπᾷν. It is clear (see further on 21<sup>14</sup>) that the attempt to distinguish ἀγαπᾷν from φιλᾷν in Jn. cannot be sustained.

ὅτι ἠμεῖς ἐμὲ πεφιλῆκατε, "because you are they who have loved me," ἠμεῖς and ἐμὲ being both emphasised. Here, again, φιλᾷν is used of the love of His disciples for Jesus (21<sup>14-15</sup>) providing the only other examples of this phraseology in Jn.; but cf. Mt. 10<sup>21</sup>, 1 Cor. 16<sup>22</sup>); while in 14<sup>21, 22</sup>, 22, 24, 25, ἀγαπᾷν is consistently used to express this affection (cf. 21<sup>14, 15</sup>).

καὶ πιστωσάμεθα (the perfect tenses bring back the discourse from a prospect of the future to the facts of the present) ὅτι ἐγὼ παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον. To have believed this is to have accepted the central message of the Gospel.

παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον. So  $\mu^a A^c N W F$  and Syr. sin. (see on 8<sup>42</sup>). The rec. for θεοῦ has πατρὸς (from v. 28), with  $\mu^a B C^* D L$ . W om. the repeated ἐξῆλθον παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς in the next verse.

Cf. παρὰ σοῦ ἐξῆλθον (17<sup>7</sup>); and see on 14<sup>24</sup> 7<sup>38</sup> for παρὰ as expressing the relation of the Son to the Father. See on 13<sup>3</sup> for ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξῆλθον.

28. Here, in four short phrases, we have the Pre-existence of Christ, His Incarnation, His Death, and His Ascension. ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς. For ἐκ (BCL) the rec. has (from v. 27) παρὰ, with  $\mu^a C^* N D \Delta \theta$ .

λυθὼ ἐκ τὸν κόσμον πάλιν ἀφίημι τὸν κόσμον καὶ παροίμαι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα.

29. Λέγουσι ὁ μαθητὰ αὐτοῦ Ἴδεν ἔν ἐν παραρρησία λαλοῦν, καὶ παροίμαι οὐδὲμίαν λέγει. 30. τὸν οὐδαμὸν ὅτι αἰῶνα πάντα καὶ οὐ παρὰ in v. 27 and ἐκ in v. 28 cannot be differentiated in meaning without over subtlety. The classical distinction between these prepositions was being obliterated by the first century. To interpret ἐκ θεοῦ or ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς in the Fourth Gospel as if we had to do with the formal theology of the Nicene Creed is not legitimate (see on 8<sup>42</sup>). We cannot press the force of ἐκ so as to make it indicate the unique relation of the Son to the Father, in a fashion that παρὰ will not indicate it equally well. It must be remembered that ὁ ἐκ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ at 8<sup>42</sup> does not mean Jesus, the Eternal Son, but any man who hears with understanding the Divine message.

παρὰ in v. 27, ἐκ in v. 28, and ἐπεὶ in v. 30 carry the same meaning for Jn.

καὶ ἀνήλθω (D has ἦλθον) ἐκ τὸν κόσμον, sc. at the Incarnation. Cf. 11<sup>27</sup> 13<sup>36</sup> for this phrase; and for κόσμος, see on 1<sup>10</sup>.

πάλιν (next, marking the sequence; cf. 1 Jn. 2<sup>8</sup>) ἀφίημι τὸν κόσμον. Hitherto the apostles had not understood that He was going to leave the world.

καὶ παροίμαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα. We shall have this phrase again 14<sup>28, 29</sup>; it is not to be distinguished from ὄνάμω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (16<sup>14, 17</sup>; cf. 7<sup>38</sup> 16<sup>2</sup> and note on 16<sup>7</sup>).

The disciples now become confident of their faith, and are warned that it will fail them in the hour of trial (vv. 29-32)

30. The rec. adds αὐτῶ after λέγουσιν, but om.  $\mu^a B C^* D^* N W \theta$ . "Ibe, an interjection of astonished admiration; see on 1<sup>10</sup> for its frequency in Jn.

ἔν ἐν παραρρησία λαλοῦν, "now you are speaking explicitly." But they did not really understand, as they thought they did. The promise of teaching ἐν παραρρησία in v. 25 was for a future day.

The rec. omits ἐν before παραρρησία, but ins.  $\mu^a B C D$ .

καὶ παροίμαι οὐδὲμίαν λέγει. For παροίμαι, cf. v. 25; and see note on 10<sup>7</sup>.

In the latter part of the Epistle to Diognetus, which Lightfoot places at the end of the second century, there is a reference to the manifestation of the Logos, παραρρησία (§ 11), which may be a reminiscence of this verse. See on 17<sup>1</sup>.

χρειάς ἔχεις ἵνα τίς σε ῥωπῆ; ἐν τούτῳ πιστεύομεν ὅτι ἀπὸ θεοῦ ἐξῆλθες. 31. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτοῖς Ἰησοῦς Ἄρει πιστεύετε, 32. ἴδοθ

80. ὡν οὐκ ᾔδειν κτλ. They were so surprised that He had discerned their thoughts, and so bewildered at His words (see v. 19), that they assure Him of their absolute confidence in Him as all-knowing. With οὐκ ᾔδειν cf. 21<sup>17</sup>. Jn. comes back again and again to the penetrating insight of Jesus into men's thoughts; see on 2<sup>26</sup>.

ἵνα τίς σε ῥωπῆ, "that any one shall question thee," ῥωπῆαῦν being here used in its most frequent sense of asking questions; see on v. 23 above.

ἐν τούτῳ, "by this," ἐν being used in a quasi-causal sense, as at 13<sup>25</sup>, where see note.

πιστεύομεν ὅτι ἀπὸ θεοῦ ἐξῆλθες. Nicodemus had confessed as much (3<sup>2</sup>); what Jesus had said of their faith was that they had come to believe ὅτι ἐγὼ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐξῆλθω. But they were not yet strong in this faith, as He reminds them in His reply. See note on 13<sup>3</sup> and also on v. 28 above. Strictly, ἀπὸ ought to signify mission, while παρὰ or (especially) ἐκ ought to signify origin; but these prepositions are not sharply distinguished in Jn.

81. The form of the reply of Jesus is comparable with that in 13<sup>26</sup>, the disciples' expression of confidence being repeated, and then a warning given. Here, however, the reply does not begin with an interrogative. The stress is on ἀρει, coming at the beginning of the sentence (cf. Rev. 12<sup>10</sup>).

ἀρει πιστεύετε, "at this moment you believe." He had just before recognised their belief as genuine, so far as it went (v. 27; cf. 17<sup>9</sup>), and He does not question it now. But He goes on to warn them that this faith will not keep them faithful in the time of danger which is imminent.

To translate "Do ye now believe?" is inconsistent with what has gone before, and also with the position of ἀρει in the sentence.

For ἀρει as compared with ὡν, see on 9<sup>18</sup>.

82. For ἴδοθ, see on 4<sup>26</sup>; it has an adversative force: "At this moment you believe, it is true, but an hour is imminent when you will all abandon me."

ἔρχεται ὥρα, "an hour is coming." See on 4<sup>28</sup> and on vv. 2, 25. It is not ὥρα, which would indicate the inevitableness of the predestined hour, and this thought is not prominent yet.

καὶ ἐλάβησεν. The time for His arrest was at hand; cf. ἐλάβησεν ὁ ἄρας (12<sup>20</sup>), and cf. 4<sup>2</sup>, 5<sup>25</sup>.

ἔρχεται ὥρα καὶ ἐλάβησεν ἵνα σκορπισθῆτε ἕκαστος εἰς τὰ ἴδια κῆμα μόνον ἔσθητε· καὶ οὐκ εἰμι μόνος, ὅτι ὁ Πατήρ μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔσται.

33. Ταῦτα λαλῶντες ὡμῶν ἵνα ἐν ἡμοῖς εἰρήνην ἔχητε. ἐν τῷ ἵνα σκορπισθῆτε. The ἵνα clause the predestined sequence of events. σκορπίζω occurs again at 10<sup>13</sup>, and we find διασκορπιζέτω at 11<sup>22</sup>.

The prophecy Zech. 13<sup>3</sup>, which (in the A text) runs as follows, πατέρον τὸν ποιμένα καὶ διασκορπισθήσονται τὰ πρόβατα, is cited as a prediction of the arrest of Jesus by Mk. 14<sup>27</sup> (followed by Mt. 26<sup>31</sup>), as well as by Barnabas (v. 12) and Justin (Ζγγρβ. 53). Jn. does not mention Zechariah, but he places in the mouth of Jesus a prediction which reproduces the significant word σκορπισθῆτε.

Cf. the verbal parallel ἐσκορπισθησαν ἕκαστος εἰς τὸν νότον αἰῶσός (I Macc. 6<sup>14</sup>).

For εἰς τὰ ἴδια, "to his own home," see note on 19<sup>27</sup> below. Cf. Appian, vi. 23 (quoted by Field), ἀπέλιπε τοὺς αἰχμαλώτους εἰς τὰ ἴδια.

κῆμα μόνον ἔσθητε, "and shall leave me alone." This is the only word of reproach, and it is softened by the next words, "yet not alone, because, etc."

καὶ, "and yet." Jn. never uses καίτοι: see on 11<sup>10</sup>.

οὐκ εἰμι μόνος, ὅτι ὁ πατήρ μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔσται. So Jesus had said before, and in almost identical terms. See 8<sup>14, 18</sup> and the notes there.

Jn. does not tell of the disciples' abandonment of Jesus after His arrest, as in Mk. 14<sup>50</sup>, except by implication (see on 18<sup>26</sup>).

Jesus bids His disciples to be courageous, for He has overcome the world (v. 33), in the Passion, which is His glorification (XIII. 31<sup>3</sup>, 32)

88. ταῦτα λαλῶντες ὁμῶν: see on 15<sup>21</sup>. Here ταῦτα seems to refer to what has been said in v. 32 about the dispersion of His disciples after their Master's arrest (cf. 16<sup>1, 9</sup>).

The purpose of these instructions was ἵνα ἐν ἡμοῖς εἰρήνην ἔχητε (see for εἰρήνην on 14<sup>27</sup>). Peace can be found only in Christ (cf. 15<sup>27</sup>); ἐν ἡμοῖς is in antithesis to ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ which follows. For κόσμος, see on 1<sup>7</sup>; here it is "the world," which "hates" Christ's disciples (cf. 15<sup>18</sup>), and in which therefore "tribulation" must be their portion.

κόσμῳ θλίβει ἔχετε· ἀλλὰ θαρσύνετε, ἐγὼ νενίκηκα τὸν κόσμον. XIII. 31<sup>a</sup>. Νῦν ἐδοξάσθη ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐγὼ is the ἐγὼ of dignity (see Introd., p. cxvii).

The rec. text (cf. v. 22) has ἔχετε with D 69, but the true reading is ἔχετε, "ye are having tribulation"; their trial has begun.

νικῶν is rare in the LXX except in the later books, and in the N.T. except in the Apocalypse. It does not occur again in the Fourth Gospel, but is found 6 times in 1 Jn. Sometimes it is transitive, as here and at Lk. 11<sup>32</sup>, Rom. 12<sup>13</sup>, Rev. 11<sup>7</sup>, 12<sup>11</sup>, 13<sup>7</sup>, 17<sup>14</sup>, and 1 Jn. 2<sup>13</sup>, 14<sup>5</sup>, 4<sup>10</sup>, 5<sup>5</sup>; sometimes it is used absolutely, as in Rev. 2<sup>7</sup>, 11<sup>17</sup>, 20<sup>6</sup>, 21<sup>7</sup>, 22<sup>3</sup>, 21<sup>7</sup>, 22<sup>3</sup>, 21<sup>7</sup>, 22<sup>3</sup>. The verb is only once used in the LXX of God as the Conqueror, sc. Ps. 51<sup>4</sup> (quoted Rom. 7<sup>5</sup>), νικῆσθε ἐν τῷ κινήσει; and in the N.T. it is applied to the conquests of Christ only here and at Rev. 3<sup>21</sup>, 5<sup>6</sup>, 17<sup>14</sup>. (Cf. 1 Esd. 3<sup>18</sup> ὅστις διὰ πόλεως νικᾷ ἢ ἀλίθου.) In all the passages of 1 Jn. where it appears, it is used of the spiritual conquests of Christian believers. νικῶν, then, is a favourite word both with the author of the Fourth Gospel and the author of the Apocalypse, both of whom apply it—alone among N.T. writers—to the victory of Christ.

The phrase νικῶν τὸν κόσμον is found only here and at 1 Jn. 5<sup>4</sup>. Here the majestic announcement ἐγὼ νενίκηκα τὸν κόσμον is placed in the mouth of Jesus, when His public ministry had, to all seeming, ended in failure. In 1 Jn., the apostle claims for himself and his fellow-believers that their faith is "the victory which overcomes the world."<sup>1</sup> The words of Jn. 14<sup>13</sup> that they should do "greater things" than their Master did, are coming within the range of their spiritual understanding. ἐγὼ νενίκηκα τὸν κόσμον is thus a prophetic word for those who are "in Christ."

The aorist ἐδοξάσθη challenges attention, for we should expect the future tense, "Now shall the Son of Man be glorified." But it is a Hebrew usage to employ an aorist with prophetic anticipation of the future. Thus to Abraham it was said (Gen. 15<sup>5</sup>), "Unto thy seed have I given this land," where the LXX marks the meaning by the rendering ὄψεσθε. And this way of speaking is specially appropriate when the

ἐν αὐτῷ 32. εἰ ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς δοξάσει αὐτὸν ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ εὐθὺς δοξάσει αὐτὸν. 33. ταῦτα, ἔτι μῆρον μὲν ἔργων

Speaker is Divine (which Jn. never allows his readers to forget when he is recording the words of Jesus), and is One to whom the inevitable future is involved in the present, and is foreseen. See also, for this use of the aorist, on 12<sup>30</sup>, 15<sup>24</sup>.

ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ. This is a different thought from that expressed in the first clause of the verse. Not only was Christ "glorified" in His Passion (see on 7<sup>39</sup>), but God was glorified thereby (cf. 12<sup>30</sup>). Martyrdom is always a glorifying of God, in whose name the martyr lays down his life. See 21<sup>18</sup>, and the note there.<sup>1</sup> In other passages of the Gospel we have the idea of the Father being glorified in Christ (e.g. 14<sup>13</sup>, 15<sup>17</sup>, and cf. 1 Pet. 4<sup>13</sup>) because of Christ's ministry and works; but here the idea is confined to "glorification" of God by Christ's Passion, of which lower illustrations may be found in every martyrdom.

32. The reading εἰ ὁ Θεὸς ἐδοξάσθη ἐν αὐτῷ at the beginning of the verse is supported by *AC*ΓΘΔ, with many MSS., including the Vulgate, which has "Nunc clarificatus est filius hominis et Deus clarificatus est in eo. Si Deus clarificatus est in eo, et Deus clarificabit eum in semet ipso, etc."<sup>2</sup> This redundant style is characteristic of Jn., and the words may stand part of the text. But they do not appear in *BC*DLW and the majority of the Old Latin vs. with Syr. sin. Yet they might easily have dropped out by homoioteleuton (ἐν αὐτῷ . . . ἐν αὐτῷ).

καὶ ὁ Θεὸς δοξάσει αὐτὸν ἐν αὐτῷ (some texts have ἑαυτῷ), "and God shall glorify Him in Himself." This goes beyond the "glorification" of Christ in His Passion (v. 31); it is the "glorification" which succeeded it, God the Father glorifying Him in Himself, by taking up the humanity of Christ into the Godhead, after the Passion. This great conception appears again and is more fully expressed at 17<sup>7</sup>. It is of this summation that Peter said ὁ Θεὸς Ἀβραάμ καὶ Ἰσαὰκ καὶ Ἰακώβ ἐδόξασεν τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦν (Acts 3<sup>13</sup>).

καὶ εὐθὺς δοξάσει αὐτὸν, "and straightway He will glorify Him." The time was near; the Passion would be short, for it is to this thought of His impending Death that the Speaker returns. For εὐθὺς, see on 5<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> In the Collect for Innocents' Day it is said that the infants were made to "glorify" God by their deaths.

εἰμι: Ἐγγήστετέ με, καὶ καθὼς εἶπον τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις ὅτι Ὁσπου ἐγὼ ἐτάγω ὑμᾶς εἰς δόξασθε ἰθὺς, καὶ ὑμῖν λέγω ἄρτι. 34. ἐντολὴν

Jesus gives the New Commandment of brotherly love to those whom He leaves behind (vv. 33-35)

88. ἡσούια. From the thought of what the Passion means for Him, Jesus turns to the thought of how it will affect His disciples when He is gone and they are like fatherless orphans (14<sup>15</sup>). So He addresses them tenderly, as the Head of His little family (ἡσούια, "children"). ἡσούιος is a Johannine word (1 Jn. 2<sup>1</sup>, 12, 27, 3<sup>1</sup>, 13, 4<sup>1</sup>, 5<sup>1</sup>, only again in N.T. at Gal. 4<sup>10</sup>; cf. τίκτω, Mk. 10<sup>30</sup>).

ἐτι μικρόν μεθ' ὑμῶν εἰμι. The rec., with κLWT, adds χρόνον after μικρόν, this being a reminiscence of 7<sup>36</sup> (where see note). The verse reproduces the words of 7<sup>36</sup>, 24 and of 8<sup>24</sup>, the warning, which in those passages was addressed to unbelieving Jews, being repeated for the disciples, but not now in rebuke; and being followed in v. 36 by the consolatory promise that, although the disciples could not go where He was going immediately, yet they should follow afterwards. See on 7<sup>36</sup>.

Ἐγγήστετέ με. This would not be like the remorseful search which was in store for the unbelieving Jews (see on 7<sup>36</sup> 8<sup>25</sup>); but it would be a search in perplexity and tears, when their Master was taken from them (cf. 14<sup>2</sup>, 9).

καθὼς εἶπον τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις κτλ. It is not certain whether the reference is to 7<sup>36</sup>, 24 or to 8<sup>24</sup>. Jn. represents the warning to the Jews as having been given twice, and it may have been so.

ὅπου ἐγὼ ἐτάγω ὑμᾶς εἰς δόξασθε ἰθὺς. This is verbally identified with 8<sup>21</sup>. See the note on 7<sup>36</sup> for the meaning. καὶ ὑμῖν λέγω ἄρτι, "so I tell you at this moment." ἄρτι is a favourite word with Jn. (see on 9<sup>1</sup>).

34. ἐντολὴν καινήν. For ἐντολή as a commandment given by Jesus, cf. 15<sup>10</sup>, 11, 14<sup>15</sup>, 21, 1 Jn. 2<sup>3</sup>, 4, 3<sup>23</sup>. He claimed to "give commandments," and so claimed to be equal with God. See on 14<sup>15</sup>.

Mandatum novum dō vobis. So the Latin vulgate renders, and hence Thursday before Easter has been commonly called Mandatum (Mandat) Thursday, from the words of the Antiphon appointed for that day in the Latin rite.

The disciples had been disputing that evening about precedence (see on v. 4), and the "New Commandment" bade them "love one another." This ἐντολή καινή had been already mentioned (15<sup>12</sup>, although it is not there called "new"). It is often mentioned in 1 Jn. (e.g. 2<sup>7-10</sup>, 3<sup>11</sup>, 23; cf. 2 Jn. 9): "Love one another, as I have loved you." The Old Command*καινήν* διδομι ὑμῖν, ἵνα ἀγαπήτε ἀλλήλους, καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς ment was, "Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Lev. 19<sup>18</sup>), and Jesus had explained the wide range of the term "neighbour" (Lk. 10<sup>26-36</sup>); this was never superseded, and Paul notes its importance (Rom. 13<sup>8</sup>, Col. 3<sup>14</sup>). But the New Commandment is narrower in range, and is inspired by a new motive. φιλαδελφία, "love of the brethren," is not so wide in its reference as ἀγάπη, but to cultivate it is a new commandment. A new circle, an inner circle, has been formed, and in this a special obligation is due from each to each (cf. Gal. 6<sup>10</sup>). Here is the test of true discipleship: "We know that we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brethren" (1 Jn. 3<sup>14</sup>). A later writer makes it clear that this is not the highest of Christian graces; to φιλαδελφία must be superadded ἀγάπη (2 Pet. 1<sup>7</sup>), the love which is like the Love of God in the catholicity of its range (see on 3<sup>14</sup>). But the idea that φιλαδελφία, the love of Christian disciple for Christian disciple, is a virtue at all was a new idea; and this grace is inspired by a new motive: "Love one another, as I have loved you." The common love which Jesus has for His own binds them to each other.

The story preserved by Jerome (ad Galat. vi. 10), that John the son of Zebedee, in his old age, never ceased to repeat "Little children, love one another," as his most important counsel, shows how deeply the precept had impressed itself upon the first generation of Christians.

καθὼς ἠγάπησα ὑμᾶς. The idea of the love of Jesus for His own hardly needs references, but cf. Rom. 8<sup>35</sup>, Rev. 1<sup>8</sup>. Observe that their love for each other is to be like His love for them, sc. it is to be a love which is ready to pour itself out in sacrifice (cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>16</sup>).

The words of this verse are repeated from 15<sup>12</sup>. There may be a distant allusion to 13<sup>1</sup>, where the love of Jesus for His disciples is specially mentioned; and to the incident of the Feet-washing, which was a remarkable illustration of it. As His love for the Twelve was exhibited by His ministrations to them, so ought the love of Christian for Christian to be exhibited by mutual service. Some expositors have found in the "New Commandment" a reference to the institution of the Eucharist, which is the sacrament of unity (cf. 1 Cor. 10<sup>16, 17</sup>). But, whatever allusion it may carry to the duty of ministering to each other, or to the sacrament by which Christians are united in communion with each other as well as with Christ, there can be no doubt that the primary and essential obligation of the ἐντολή καινή is brotherly love, and was so understood by Jn.

ἵνα καὶ ὑμεῖς ἀγαπᾶτε ἀλλήλους. 35. ἐν τούτῳ γινώσκονται πάντες ὅτι ἔμοι μαθηταὶ ἔστε, ἵαν ἀγάπην ἔχητε ἐν ἀλλήλοις.

36. Λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Πέτρος Κύριε, σοῦ ὑπάγεις; ἀπεκρίθη

That the verb φάσκει is never used in Jn. of man's love for man, but always ἀγαπᾶ (cf. 1:5<sup>12</sup>, 17, 1 Jn. 2<sup>10</sup> 3<sup>16</sup>, 14, 20 4<sup>7</sup>, 20), does not justify us in distinguishing sharply between the meaning of the two verbs (see on 2:16).

For the constr. in this verse, ἵνα . . . καθὼς . . . ἵνα, see on 17<sup>8</sup>.

γινώσκονται πάντες κτλ., "all men (cf. ὁ κόσμος, 14<sup>22</sup> 17<sup>23</sup>) shall know that ye are my disciples" (cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>14</sup>). μαθητής is the highest title of a Christian: the apostles can aspire to nothing higher than ἔμοι μαθηταὶ implies (see on 15<sup>6</sup>).

The badge of discipleship was to be mutual love, and so it proved. Cf. Tertullian, Apol. 39, "Vide, inquit, ut inuicem se diligant."

Peter breaks in with a wish to follow Jesus even to death: he is warned that he will soon deny his Master (vv. 36-38)

36. The story of the warning to Peter, and the prediction that he would deny Jesus, are common to all four Gospels (cf. Mk. 14<sup>30</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>34</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>34</sup>). Mk., followed by Mt., says the warning was given after they had left the house and were on the way to Gethsemane. Jn. agrees with Lk. in placing the incident in the upper room; but the narrative of Jn. connects it more closely with what went before, sc. the announcement of the approaching departure of Jesus, than does that of Lk.

λέγει αὐτῷ Σίμων Π. As usual, Peter is the first with his question, and he fastens on what Jesus had said about His "going away," not only in its relation to Him, but in its relation to the disciples. What is to happen to them? They had already found difficulty in the saying ἵνα γὰρ πρὸς τὸν ναῦρα (16<sup>7</sup>, where see note).

κύριε, σοῦ ὑπάγεις; Domine, quo vadis? words which became very familiar from their use in the beautiful legend of the death of Peter, found in Acta Petri et Pauli, § 82. See on 14<sup>6</sup>.

Ἰησοῦς Ὅπου ὑπάγω οὐ δύνασαι μοι τὸν ἀκολουθεῖσαι, ἀκολουθεῖσαι δὲ ὕστερον. 37. λέγει αὐτῷ Πέτρος Κύριε, διὰ τί οὐ δύνασαι σοὶ ἀκολουθεῖσαι ἄρτι; τὴν ψυχὴν μου ὑπὲρ σοῦ θήσω. 38. ἀποκρίνεται Ἰησοῦς Τὴν ψυχὴν σου ὑπὲρ ἑμοῦ θήσεις; ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοὶ, οὐ μὴ ἀλλετέρω φωνήσῃ ἔως οὐ ἀφήσῃ με τρίς.

For ὑπάγεις, see on 7<sup>32</sup>; and cf. 16<sup>6</sup>.

ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς. So BC<sup>19</sup>; the rec. has ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ δ' Ἰησοῦς. See on 1<sup>36</sup> and on 1<sup>30</sup>.

ἵπου ὑπάγω. κD and fam. 13 ins. ἐγὼ after ὅπου (as in v. 33); om. ABCW<sup>Θ</sup>.

οὐ δύνασαι μοι κτλ., "thou canst not follow me now," sc. into the heavenly places; see on v. 33.

ἀκολουθεῖσαι δὲ ὕστερον, "thou shalt follow afterwards." There is no reference, as it seems, to Peter's death by martyrdom (cf. 21<sup>19</sup>, 2 Pet. 1<sup>14</sup>); the promise is not confined to martyrs (cf. 14<sup>2</sup> 5).

37. διὰ τί οὐ δύνασαι κτλ. "Why can I not follow thee this minute?" (ἀρτι, see on 9<sup>19</sup>). Peter had not yet realised that the death of Jesus was near, and that it was this which was in His mind; but even if to follow Him was dangerous, he was confident that he would take all risks. Thomas had expressed similar feelings (11<sup>16</sup>).

τὴν ψυχὴν μου ὑπὲρ σοῦ θήσω. This willingness is the mark of the Good Shepherd (10<sup>11</sup>); it is the mark also of a true disciple.

τὴν ψυχὴν σου κτλ. This repetition of the words used by Peter is thoroughly Johannine; cf. 16<sup>18</sup> and 16<sup>22</sup>.

ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω σοὶ. The prophetic warning to Peter is introduced in Mk. 14<sup>30</sup> by the same solemn ἀμὴν λέγω σοὶ. See on 1<sup>61</sup>.

οὐ μὴ ἀλλετέρω φωνήσῃ ἔως οὐ ἀφήσῃ με τρίς. This is almost verbally identical with Lk. 22<sup>36</sup>, where the word σήμερον is added. Mk. (followed by Mt.) has "this night."

Mk.'s version of this warning is peculiar in that it runs "the cock shall not crow twice (δύς, etc.); and, accordingly, a second cock-crowing is narrated Mk. 14<sup>72</sup>. No other Gospel has this, but it is found also in a Fayyûm papyrus fragment.<sup>1</sup>

It seems to be an eccentric variant, rather than a relic of genuine tradition. At all events, Jn., who knew Mk.<sup>1</sup> and who betrays knowledge of Mk.'s version of this warning by prefacing it with ἀμὲν, does not accept it. His report of Jesus' prediction is simply that He told Peter that he would deny Him thrice before the cock crew. The fulfilment of the prediction is recorded in 18<sup>27</sup>, where see the note.

ἀφήση. So BDL; but KACWΓΔΘ give ἀπαφήση, which is perhaps due to a reminiscence of Mk. 14<sup>30</sup>.

It is not recorded that Peter gave any reply to this prediction, which, introduced as it was by the solemn "Verily, verily," must have been a grievous blow to him. He does not appear again until 18<sup>14</sup>.

XIV. 1 ff. The opening verses of c. 14 are among the most familiar and the most precious in our Authorised Version of the Bible. It is an ungrateful task to disturb their beautiful cadences, charged with many memories, by offering a different rendering of the Greek text. But it must be attempted here, as at other points in the Fourth Gospel, if we are to express as nearly as we can the meaning of the evangelist's words. In v. 1, as will be seen, Tyndale's translation of 1534 has been preferred to the A.V. of 1611.

The promise of a future life, where the disciples would be with Jesus (XIV. 1-4)

1. D prefixes καὶ εἶπεν τοῖς μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, probably to soften the apparent abruptness of the words which follow. But no introduction is necessary; for there is an intimate connexion between 13<sup>30</sup> and 14<sup>1</sup>. The warning to Peter that he would presently deny his Master must have shocked him, as it silenced him. He is not among the disciples who ask questions as to the meaning of Jesus' sayings in c. 14, nor is he mentioned again until c. 18. But the other disciples, too, must have been startled and saddened by the thought that the foremost among them would fail in the hour of trial. If that were so, who among them could be confident of himself? Indeed, they had already been warned that their faith would not be strong enough to keep them at the side of Jesus when the dark hour of His arrest came (16<sup>21-22</sup>). But this renewed suggestion of the instability of their allegiance, superadded to the announcements that Jesus had made of His impending

XIV. 1. Μὴ παραστέθη ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία: πιστώσετε εἰς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ εἰς ἐμὲ πιστώσετε. 2. ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ Πατρὸς μου μοῖαί πολλαὶ εἰσίν' departure from them (16<sup>7-7</sup> 13<sup>30-30</sup>), and of the persecutions which were in store for them (15<sup>18-21</sup> 16<sup>20</sup>), had filled them with deep sorrow. So He sought to reassure them with a new message of consolation, which taught them to look beyond this earthly life to the life after death.

μὴ παραστέθη ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία. The human experience of a "troubled" spirit had been His, more than once, during the last weeks (cf. 11<sup>22</sup> 12<sup>27</sup> 13<sup>30</sup>), and He knew how painful it was.

πιστώσετε εἰς τὸν Θεόν, καὶ εἰς ἐμὲ πιστώσετε. These are probably both imperatives: "believe in God (cf. Mk. 11<sup>20</sup>); in me also believe." Belief in God should, of itself, turn their thoughts to the security of the future life; and then, if they believed in Jesus, they would recall promises to them which He had made about this (see v. 3, with its two clauses).

Grammatically, πιστώσετε might be pres. indicative in either place or in both, and the familiar "Ye believe in God; believe also in me," gives a good sense. But it seems more natural to take πιστώσετε in the same way in the first clause as in the second.

The true source of consolation for a troubled spirit is faith in God (cf. Ps. 27<sup>28</sup> 141<sup>1</sup> etc.), and in Jesus whom God sent (cf. Mk. 5<sup>20</sup>). The disciples had already professed it (16<sup>20</sup>) their faith in Jesus, but He had warned them that it was not invincible (16<sup>21</sup>).

For the constr. εἰς τινὰ πιστῶσαι, never used by Jn. of faith in man, see on 1<sup>12</sup>.

2. ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ τοῦ πατρὸς μου κτλ., i.e. heaven; cf. Philo, who speaks of the soul returning εἰς τὸν πατρῶν οἶκον (de somn. i. 43).

μοῖαί πολλαί. The idea that there are "many mansions" in heaven, corresponding to different degrees of human merit, may not have been entirely new in Jewish religion. In the Slavonic Book of the Secrets of Enoch (lxi. 2) we find: "In the world to come . . . there are many mansions prepared for men: good for the good; evil for evil" (cf. Ethiopic Enoch, xxxix. 4: "The mansions of the holy, and the resting-places of the righteous"). Charles dates the Slavonic Enoch as between 1 and 50 A.D.; but we cannot be sure that it was known in Palestine during our Lord's ministry. Nor can we be sure that μοῖαί was the Greek behind the Slavonic word which Charles translates "mansions." If it were, then μοῖαί meant "mansions" in the sense of "abodes," not of "stages," which are only halting-places.

μονή is found elsewhere in the Greek Bible only at v. 23 (where it must mean "permanent abode," not a mere passing stage) and 1 Macc. 7<sup>38</sup> (where again the idea of permanence is involved). In Pausanias (x. 41) μονή is used in the sense of a stopping-place, a station on a journey; and this sense, if introduced into the present passage, suggests interesting speculations.

Thus Origen (de Princip. ii. xi. 6) says that departed saints first live in some place "on the earth, which Scripture calls Paradise," where they receive instruction. If worthy, they quickly ascend to a place in the air and reach the kingdom, through mansions; "which the Greeks call spheres, but Scripture heavens"; following Jesus, who "passed through the heavens" (Heb. 4<sup>14</sup>). Origen then quotes Jn. 14<sup>2, 3</sup>, showing that he understood μοναί, as stations or halting-places on the journey to God. His singular interpretation is not likely to be accepted, but his use of μονή is to be noted.

An earlier citation of Jn. 14<sup>3</sup> is to be found in a passage quoted by Irenæus (adv. Hæc. v. xxxvi. 12) from the "Sayings of the Elders," which is probably an extract from Papias.<sup>1</sup> According to the Elders, some good men will be counted worthy of a διարκίη in heaven; others will enjoy paradise; others "the city," the Saviour being seen of them all. This, the Elders say, is what is meant by the distinction between the thirtyfold, sixtyfold, hundredfold harvests in the Parable of the Sower. καὶ διὰ τοῦτο εἰρηκίμει τὸν κύριον, Ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρὸς μου μοναῖς εἶναι πολλὰς. For all are of God, who gives to each his appropriate οἰκίσματα. This is the trichlinium, the couch for three, on which shall recline those who are called to the Marriage Feast. This, the Elders said, is the dispositio of those who are saved, who advance by steps of this kind, through the Spirit to the Son, and through the Son to the Father.

The first part of this implies that the μοναί are the permanent abodes of the blessed, which vary in glory; but the last sentence suggests, on the contrary, that the μοναί are stages, and that a saint may pass from one to another. The general patristic interpretation of μοναί is, however, "abiding-places"; not mansions, which are like inns on a journey, but permanent habitations.

Clement of Alexandria often has the word μοναί, and always with allusion to Jn. 14<sup>3</sup>. In Strom. vi. 14 he refers (as Papias does) to the thirtyfold, sixtyfold, hundredfold harvests, which he says hint at (ἀντίτροφα) the three μοναί where the saints dwell according to their respective merits. So, again, he says (Strom. iv. 6) that there are with the Lord καὶ ἄρθροι καὶ

μοναί πλείους κατὰ ἀναλογίαν βίωσιν. Clement taught consistently that there were degrees of glory in the heavenly world. In Strom. vii. 14 he explains that the "other sheep not of this fold" (Jn. 10<sup>6</sup>) are deemed worthy of another fold and another μονή in proportion to their faith. "Once more, in Strom. v. 1, he uses μονή for the dwelling-place of God, as distinct from τόπος, which is the locality where the μονή is situated.

These citations show that μοναί in v. 2 (as in v. 23 and 1 Macc. 7<sup>38</sup>) must mean "abodes" or permanent dwelling-places, not merely temporary stations on a journey. The idea conveyed by the saying "In my Father's house are many mansions" is that of a hospitable palace with many chambers, rather than of a journey with many stages.

οἰκία is hardly to be distinguished from οἶκος, except that οἰκία is the larger word, embracing the precincts of the house as well as the house itself. Cf. Abbott, Diat. 2060. For the significance of the full phrase "My Father," cf. 2<sup>18</sup> 4<sup>17</sup> and vv. 20-23.

In heaven there are "many mansions," i.e. there is room for all the faithful, although it is not said that they shall all be housed with equal dignity.

εἰ δὲ μὴ occurs again in Jn. at v. 23 only; and then after an imperative. It seems here to mean "if it were not so," i.e. if the preceding statement were not true. Cf. Abbott, Diat. 2060.

ὅτι before πορείαις is omitted in the rec. text, with Com<sup>2</sup>NT<sup>2</sup> ΔΘ α ε ζ η. Accordingly the A.V. places a full stop after "told you," and proceeds with "I go to prepare a place for you," as a new sentence. But ὅτι must be retained with NABC<sup>2</sup>DLW, δ ε ζ η syrr. and cop. vs. How to translate it is not obvious, for ὅτι may mean either because or that.

(a) The R.V. takes ὅτι as equivalent to because, with Meyer, Westcott, Godet, Swete, and others. "If it were not so, I would have told you, for (i.e. because) I go to prepare a place for you." It is difficult to accept the sequence of thought which this rendering involves, sc.: if there was not plenty of room, He would have told them this bad news, because He is going to prepare a place. But that He was going to prepare a place for them could not be a reason for telling them that there was not plenty of room. This translation, when analysed, is hardly intelligible.

(b) A second expedient is to treat εἰ δὲ μὴ, εἶπον ἅν ἑμὶν, as parenthetical, and to connect directly "In my Father's house are many mansions" with "because I go to prepare a place for you." But again the sequence fails, for we should rather ἐν πορευθῆ και ἑτοιμάσω τόπον ὑμῶν, πάλιν ἔρχομαι και παραλήμ-expect, "I go to prepare a place for you, because in my Father's house are many mansions."

(c) It is more natural to take ἐν after ἔστω ἢ ὑμῶν as meaning that; sc., it is what the grammarians call ἐν recitantis, introducing the actual words that might have been spoken.
 Syr. sin takes it thus: "I should have said that I go." Then we render: "In my Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so, I would have told you that I am going to prepare a place for you." But the difficulty of this is that He was going to prepare a place for them, as v. 3 implies. Origen took the verse thus, assuming that ἐν is recitantis, although he notices the contradiction with v. 3.<sup>1</sup>

(d) The remaining alternative is to take ἔστω ἢ ὑμῶν ἐν
 κτλ. as interrogative: "If there were not many mansions, would I have said to you that I go to prepare a place for you?"
 There is only one difficulty about this rendering, sc. that hitherto there has been no record of Jesus having told His disciples that He was going to prepare a place for them. At 13<sup>36</sup> He had told Peter that he would follow Him later, and no doubt the other disciples expected that this promise was to be fulfilled in their case also. But the explicit words "I go to prepare a place for you" do not appear before this verse.
 Jn., however, more than once records references made by Jesus to former sayings of His which cannot be traced with certainty (see 6<sup>38</sup> 10<sup>40</sup> 11<sup>46</sup>), so that there is no insuperable difficulty, on this head, of taking the sentence interrogatively. This rendering is adopted by Moffatt, Strachan, and W. Bauer.<sup>2</sup> πορευομαι. See on 16<sup>7</sup> for this verb.

ἑτοιμάσαι τόπον ὑμῶν. This was one of the purposes of His impending departure. He was the πρόδρομος of all the faithful (Heb. 6<sup>20</sup>). Jn. does not use ἑτοιμάζω elsewhere, but the verb is used Mk. 10<sup>40</sup>, Mt. 20<sup>23</sup>, of the highest seats in the Messianic kingdom which have been "prepared" by God for those whom He has chosen (cf. Heb. 11<sup>19</sup>). In the present passage, ἑτοιμάζω does not carry the idea of predestination;
 it is only "to make ready," as at Mk. 14<sup>14</sup>, Lk. 5<sup>27</sup>.

τόπος is used of a "place" in heaven, Rev. 12<sup>8</sup>; also in Clem. Rom. 5, where it is said of Peter ἑτοιμάθη εἰς τὸν ἀφαιλούμενον τόπον τῆς δόξης. In the Revelation of Peter, τόπος is similarly used; and also in the Acts of Thomas, c. 22.

3. και ἐάν πορευθῆ, repeated in substance from 16<sup>7</sup>.

φομαι ὑμῶν πρὸς ἑμαυτὸν, ἵνα ἵστω εἰμὶ ἐγὼ και ὑμεῖς ἴητε. 4. και ἵστω ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἶδατε, και τὴν δόδον οἶδατε.

τόπον ὑμῶν is the order of words in MBDLN; but the rec. has ὑμῶν τόπον, with WΘ.

πάλιν ἔρχομαι. The present tense expresses the certainty of the future return: "I am coming back." This is an explicit announcement of the Parousia, or Second Advent. Not as much is said about this in Jn. as in the Synoptists; but it is nevertheless an integral element in Johannine doctrine, more emphatic in the First Epistle than in the Gospel (cf. 21<sup>22</sup>, 22 and 1 Jn. 2<sup>22</sup>).<sup>1</sup>

και παραλήμφομαι κτλ. Perhaps παραλαμβάνω has here, as at 11<sup>11</sup>, the meaning of receiving with welcomes (cf. Cant. 8<sup>7</sup>); but at 19<sup>11</sup> it is equivalent to "seize." For this meeting of Master and disciples, cf. 1 Thess. 4<sup>17</sup>.

ἵνα ἵστω εἰμὶ ἐγὼ και ὑμεῖς ἴητε. This is, in a sense, true of earthly discipleship (12<sup>46</sup>), but it is to be fulfilled more perfectly hereafter (17<sup>36</sup>).

4. ἵστω ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἶδατε τὴν δόδον is the reading of κBC<sup>3</sup>LW.
 But, as Field has pointed out, this is an ungrammatical construction. τὴν δόδον ἵστω ὑπάγω is not good Greek, if it means τὴν δόδον ἦν ὑπάγω. Furthermore, the comment of Thomas in v. 5 distinguishes clearly between the goal and the way, so that we should expect to find the same distinction inherent in the words of Jesus which drew it forth. The rec. text is ἵστω ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἶδατε, και τὴν δόδον οἶδατε. This is supported by AC<sup>2</sup>DNTA<sup>3</sup> with most cursives, and by the Syriac, Coptic, and O.L. vsa. generally. If this were the original reading, we can see how easily the words οἶδατε και might have dropped out, the eye being caught by the second οἶδατε.
 To claim that the uncials κB must outweigh the evidence of practically all the ancient versions, especially when they present an ungrammatical reading, is to claim too much for them.
 Accordingly, we follow the textus receptus here.

ἵστω ἐγὼ ὑπάγω οἶδατε. Peter had already shown that he,
 at any rate, did not know this, for he asked σοῦ ὑπάγεις; (13<sup>36</sup>). But the disciples οὐκ ἔδει to have known, for Jesus had told them several times. He was going, He had said, πρὸς τὸν πατέρα με (7<sup>33</sup> 16<sup>7</sup>), or πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (16<sup>10</sup>, 22), or to His Father's house (v. 2). The phrase ὑπάγω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα had already been the subject of perplexed comment by the disciples (16<sup>7</sup>). They had not understood how Jesus was to "go to the Father," but that this was the goal of the journey, of which He had spoken to them so often on this last night, He had

5. λέγει αὐτῷ Θωμαῆς Κύριε, οὐκ οἶδαμεν ποῦ ὄντας σου οἶδαμεν

repeated again and again. And so He said now, "You know where I am going."

καὶ τῶν ἁδόν οἶδαμεν. This too they should have understood. They did not yet know that for Him the Way to the Father was the Way of Death (see on 16th), for even yet they had not realised that He was soon about to die. They may not have understood that they, too, must die before they could inhabit the heavenly mansions where He was to prepare a place for them (v. 2). It is not clear that they had abandoned hopes of a Messianic kingdom shortly to be established on earth, in which high stations of honour should be theirs. τῶν ἁδόν οἶδαμεν did not mean that they knew, or ought to have known, that the way to the Father was through death. But they ought to have "known" that the way to the Father's house was in fellowship with Jesus. This, in some measure, they must have realised at the end of their training; and so He reminds them that they "know the way," sc. they know that only in that fellowship with Him which Jn. calls "believing on Him" could the way to life be trodden.

The question of Thomas, and the answer to it (vv. 5-7)

5. Thomas now intervenes. Peter was the first to interrupt the great discourse by asking, "Whither goest thou?" (see 13th). Thomas presses the question, and urges that they could not be expected to know the answer. The Eleven had been perplexed when this "going" of Jesus to the Father had been mentioned at an earlier point in the discourse (16th), and their perplexities had not yet been removed. We have already had Thomas appearing as spokesman for the rest (11th), Peter perhaps being absent on that occasion. But Peter is silent now, although present, probably because of the severity of the rebuke and warning which he had just received (13th). He would hardly venture again to interrupt Jesus by questions.

For κύριε, see on 1st. Thomas declares that they do not know where Jesus was going, and that therefore they cannot be expected to know the way. Yet one may know the way without knowing exactly the goal of one's journey; and this is specially true of the Christian pilgrimage.

There are unimportant variants. κΑC*NTAΘ, with most vsb., have καὶ after ὄντας, and this may be right; but BC*LW and Syr. sin. omit καὶ, the omission being characteristic of Jn.'s paratactic style. Again, for ποῦ οἶδαμεν τῶν ἁδόν; (BC*D a b c), the rec., with AC*LNWTAΘ, has ποῦ τῶν ἁδόν; 6. λέγει αὐτῷ Ἰησοῦς Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ὁδὸς καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια καὶ ἐπιφάνεια τῶν ἁδόν εἰδέναι; which looks like an explanatory correction of the shorter reading.

6. κC*Lm. ο ἰ before ἡσοῦς, but ins. ABC*DNWΘ. See on 1st.

ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ὁδός. This is the central thought here, the words following, sc. καὶ ἡ ἀλήθεια καὶ ἡ ζωή, being not directly involved in the context, but added to complete the great declaration.

To walk in God's way has been the aspiration of pious men of every race; and Israel was especially warned not to turn aside from the ὁδός which God had commanded (Deut. 5th, 32nd; cf. Isa. 30th 35th). "Teach me Thy way" is the Psalmist's prayer (Ps. 27th 11; cf. Ps. 25th 86th). Philo, after his manner, describes the "royal way" (ὁδός) as philosophy, and he says that Scripture calls it the ἡγούμενα and λόγος of God (de post. Caini, 30), quoting Deut. 17th. More apposite here, however, is the declaration of the Epistle to the Hebrews that the way to the holy place was not made plain before Christ (Heb. 9th), who dedicated "a new and living way" through the veil of His flesh (Heb. 10th). This is the doctrine which becomes explicit (cf. Eph. 2nd 19th) in the words "I am the Way." In the Acts (9th 19th) the Christian profession is called "the Way," but this does not provide a true parallel to the present verse. Again, in the second-century Acts of John (§ 95) there is a Gnostic hymn ascribed to Christ which ends with ὁδός εἰμι εὖς προσοδῆν, "A Way am I to thee, a wayfarer." This, however, does not go so far as the claim involved in ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ ὁδός. The uniqueness of Christ's claim in Jn. is that He is the Way, i.e. the only Way, to God. This is the heart of the Johannine message, which admits of no compromise with non-Christian religions, and in fact takes no account of such. See on 10th.

For ἀλήθεια in Jn., see on 2nd. Both the exclusiveness and the inclusiveness (cf. Col. 2nd) of the claim ἐγὼ εἰμι . . . ἡ ἀλήθεια are thoroughly Johannine. This is to say much more than to admit, as the Pharisees did, that Jesus taught τῶν ἁδόν τοῦ θεοῦ ἐν ἀληθείᾳ (Mk. 12th, Mt. 22nd, Lk. 20th).

The idea of Christ's teaching as truth does not strictly come into the argument or exposition here; and it would seem that the juxtaposition of ἡ ὁδός and ἡ ἀλήθεια is due to a reminiscence of O.T. phraseology. Cf. "I have chosen the way of truth" (Ps. 119th); and see the same expression, ὁδὸς ἀληθείας, ὁ ζωῆς οὐδέτις ἔρχεται πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα ἐὰν μὴ δι' ἐμοῦ. 7. εἰ ἠγάπησεν at Wisd. 5th, Tob. 1st (cf. a Pet. 2<sup>d</sup>). More striking still is "Teach me thy Way, O Lord; I will walk in thy Truth" (Ps. 86th; cf. Ps. 26th), where the "Truth" is a synonym for the "Way." So, again, a Psalmist says that the δόξα of the Lord are mercy and truth (Ps. 25th). Perhaps the close association in O.T. phraseology between ἡ δόξα and ἡ ἀλήθεια may account for the introduction of the word ἀλήθεια at this point.

καὶ ἡ ζωῆς. This is included in another of the great Similitudes, ἐγὼ εἶμι ἡ ἀνάστασις καὶ ἡ ζωῆς (11:26). ζωῆς is one of the keywords of the Fourth Gospel: "in Him was life" is the explicit pronouncement of the Prologue (1st), and that men might have "life in His Name" was the purpose of the composition of the book (20th). Cf. Col. 3<sup>d</sup>. The declaration "I am the Life" could not be out of place at any point of the Gospel (cf. v. 19); but nevertheless it does not help the exposition at this point, where the thought is specially of Christ as the Way.

Here again we are reminded of the O.T. phrase "the way (or 'ways') of life" (Prov. 6th 10th 15th): cf. ἑρπύρατος μου ὁδοῦς ζωῆς (Ps. 16th). In Mt. 7th the way that leads to life is described as straitened; and in Heb. 10th we hear of the "living way" (ὁδοῦς ζῶσα) which Jesus dedicated. The thought of Jesus as the Way would naturally be associated with the thought of Him as the Life. Cf. also Heb. 7th.

Lightfoot (Hor. Hebr.) suggests that the idiom here is Hebrew, the Way and the Truth and the Life meaning the True and Living Way. (He compares Jer. 29th, where the Hebrew "a latter end and hope" means "a hoped-for latter end.") This at any rate brings out the point, that the emphasis is on the Way, as the concluding words, "No one comes to the Father but through me," show. To claim to be not only a way to God, but the only Way, is in effect to claim to be the Truth and the Life.

There is a curious Christian interpolation in the Vulgate text of Ecclus. 24th, which is a paraphrase of this Similitude. Wisdom says of herself, "In me gratia omnis usae et veritatis, in me omnis spes uitae et iuritis," where the triple alliteration, Vita, Veritas, Vita, is reinforced by a fourth word, Veritas.

7. The verb contains a rebuke. The disciples ought to have known what was meant by going to "the Father." That they did not know the Father was due to the fact that they had not yet learnt to know the Son.

εἰ ἠγάπησεν με, καὶ τὸν πατέρα μου ὃν ᾔδειτε. Jesus had said the same thing to His Jewish critics (8th), in identical language, except that in the former passage we have εἰ μὴ ᾔδειτε instead of εἰ ἠγάπησεν με. But we cannot distinguish αὐτὸν from γινώσκω in passages like this (see on 1st for the usage of these verbs).

εἰ ἄρα γινώσκετε αὐτόν κτλ., "from now (see on 13th for εἰ ἄρα) you are beginning to know Him." This is the force of the present tense γινώσκετε, which κ tries to emphasise by reading γινώσθητε. The moment marked by εἰ ἄρα is the moment of the Passion; cf. τὸν ἐδοξάσθη ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου (13th), and see on 16th. The Revelation of the Father was not complete until Jesus had removed His visible presence. Only after that did His disciples begin to understand how much He had revealed of God's nature and purpose (cf. 17th). In the next generation, Jn. could say of his younger fellow-disciples ἠγάπησεν τὸν πατέρα (1 Jn. 2nd). But during the earthly ministry of Jesus that claim could not have been made. ("No one knoweth (γινώσκει) who the Father is, save the Son, and he to whom the Son willeth to reveal Him" (Lk. 10th; cf. Mt. 11th, who substitutes ἐγγινώσκει, signifying complete knowledge, for the simple γινώσκει).

καὶ ἐπαύσατε αὐτόν. BC<sup>2</sup> omit αὐτόν (perhaps because of the difficulty of the phrase), but ins. κAC<sup>2</sup>DLNW<sup>2</sup>. The verb ἔπαυ in the pres. and pft. tenses (see on 3rd; and cf. 1st) is generally, but not always, used in Jn. of seeing with the eyes of the body. θεὸν οὐδέτις ἐπαύσατο ὡραῖον (1:18; cf. 5th) is a general principle of Judaism: the only One of whom it could be said ἐπαύσατο τὸν πατέρα is Jesus (6th), and in that case the reference is to spiritual vision. But at v. 9 we have ὁ ἐπαύσατο ἐμὲ ἐπαύσατο τὸν πατέρα, which is parallel to ὁ θεωρεῖν ἐμὲ θεωρεῖ τὸν πατέρα μὲ (12th, where see note). In neither case can the verb for "seeing" be taken as representing physical vision, for many of the opponents of Jesus who "saw" Him in the flesh did not thereby "see the Father." Accordingly θεωρῶν at 12<sup>48</sup> and ἑώρακεν in v. 9 must imply spiritual insight in some degree. Those who saw in the Works and Life of Christ something of His purpose and personality, thereby saw something of the nature of God who sent Him. Those who "saw and hated" Jesus, on the other hand, could be justly said to have "seen and hated" God the Father (15<sup>24</sup>); the false impression which they acquired of Jesus, issuing in an equally false impression of God. Thus the strange statement, as it must have seemed, "You are beginning to know Him, and (indeed) ἄρα ἴσασθε ἡμῖν," must mean that while the disciples would begin henceforth consciously to appropriate the new revelation of God as He is, they had already (although unconsciously) "seen" the reflection of His mind and purpose in the life of Jesus, with whom they had long been in close intimacy.

8. Λέγω αὐτῷ Θεῶς ἦν, δειξὼν ἡμῖν τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ

Abbott (Diat. 2760-2764) suggests as possible another rendering (apparently favoured by Nonnus) of εἰς ἄρα γινώσκετε αὐτὸν καὶ ἑώρακατε αὐτὸν, which takes γινώσκετε as an imperative, "From henceforth begin to know Him, and (then) you have seen Him." But this makes ἑώρακατε αὐτὸν even more difficult than it is when we take γινώσκετε as indicative, for with this rendering there can be no reference to "seeing" God in Jesus, visible in the flesh.

Philip asks to be shown the Father. The coincidence of the Father and the Son explained (vv. 8-14)

8. λέγω αὐτῷ Θεῶς ἦν κτλ. For Philip, see on 1<sup>48</sup>. This is the thirsd interruption of the discourse by a disciple. Their intimacy with Jesus was such that they ventured, even at this solemn hour and while He was bidding them farewell, to ask questions at any point where they did not understand Him; always addressing Him with the Kyrie of respect (13<sup>31</sup> 14<sup>8</sup>. 22). Philip goes beyond a mere question. His remark is rather an argumentative challenge: "Show us the Father, and it is enough for us."

ἀρα εἶν has occurred before at 6<sup>7</sup>; Moulton-Milligan illustrate (s.v.) the impersonal use of the verb, as here, from the papyri.

δειξὼν ἡμῖν τὸν πατέρα. Probably Philip wished for theophany, such as that which Ex. 33<sup>13</sup> tells was granted to Moses when he prayed "Show me Thy glory." Judas the son of James had similar desires and perplexities (see v. 22).

ἀρα εἶν ἡμῖν. 9. λέγω αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς τοσοῦτον χρόνον μεθ' ἡμῶν εἰμι καὶ σὺ ἐγνωκῶς με, φησὶπτε; ὁ ἑώρακας ἐμὲ ἑώρακεν τὸν Πατέρα. πῶς σὺ λέγεις δειξὼν ἡμῖν τὸν Πατέρα; 10. οὐ πιστεύετε ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ καὶ ὁ Πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοὶ ἵσται; τὰ ῥήματα δ' ἐγὼ λέγω ἡμῖν

9. τοσοῦτον χρόνον. So ABNTAΘ, but κDLW have the dative τοσοῦτον χρόνον.

There is something of pathos in the reproach, "Have I been so long with you all (μεθ' ἡμῶν), and hast thou not learnt to know me, Philip?" the personal name (cf. 20<sup>14</sup> 21<sup>13</sup>) suggesting affectionate regard. The sheep know (γινώσκουσιν) their shepherd (10<sup>27</sup>), and Philip ought to have "known" Jesus by this time. But to fail to see God in Jesus was to fail to know Jesus.

πῶς σὺ λέγεις κτλ., "how is that you say, etc.," σὺ being emphatic, "you who have followed me from the beginning" (1<sup>18</sup>).

10. οὐ πιστεύετε κτλ. This was to expect a greater faith than He asked of the blind man (9<sup>35</sup>), or even of Martha (11<sup>27</sup>). Jesus expected of the Eleven, who had enjoyed a longer and more intimate association with Him than others, that they should appreciate in some measure the deeper secrets of His being. The "evolution" of faith is always towards a larger faith.

ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ κτλ. Here is the mystery of that oneness with the Father which is always prominent in Jn. Jesus had held this Divine coincidence up to the Jews as a belief which they might ultimately recognise as true (10<sup>39</sup>), but He did not reproach them for not having reached it yet. Philip was in a different position, and ought to have learnt something of it before now. The two lines of testimony to which Jesus appeals in support of His claim to reciprocal communion with the Father, here as elsewhere, are His words and His works. See on 10<sup>38</sup>, where the argument is almost identical with that of vv. 10, 11, and expressed in the same terms.

τὰ ῥήματα. See on 3<sup>36</sup> for the "words" of Jesus as divine.

τὰ ῥήματα δ' ἐγὼ λέγω ἡμῖν. The rec., with κATAΘ, has λαλῶ from the next clause, but B<sup>1</sup>LN have λέγω (which has been omitted in B* through misreading ἐγὼ λέγω). λέγω is often used in Jn. interchangeably with λαλῶ, as here. See on 3<sup>11</sup>.

ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ οὐ λαλῶ· ὁ δὲ Πατήρ ὁ ἐν ἐμοὶ μένων ποιεῖ τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ.
 11. πιστεύετε μοι ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ καὶ ὁ Πατήρ ἐν ἐμοὶ· εἰ δὲ μὴ, διὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶ πιστεύετε μοι. 12. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ ἐκείνους ποιήσει, καὶ μέγιστα ἀπ' ἐμαυτοῦ οὐ λαλῶ. This He had said several times. See the references given in the note on p. 71.

ὁ δὲ πατήρ ὁ ἐν ἐμοὶ μένων. The second ὁ is omitted in BL, but is preserved in  $\kappa$ ADNW $\theta$ .

ποιεῖ τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ. So  $\kappa$ BD; but the rec., with AΓΔ $\theta$ , has αὐτὸν ποιεῖ τὰ ἔργα, a correction due to the tendency to describe the miracles as Christ's rather than as the Father's. But to distinguish thus is contrary to Johannine teaching. See especially on 5<sup>18</sup>. The ἔργα of Jesus are also the ἔργα of God the Father.

In this verse the words of Jesus are treated as among His works. Both are, as it were, the λαλία of the Father. But they may be considered separately, His words appealing more directly to the conscience and spiritual insight of His hearers, His works appealing rather to their intellect, as indicative of His superhuman personality.

11. πιστεύετε μοι. The plural shows that Jesus now addresses Himself not to Philip individually, but to the disciples collectively, whose spokesman for the moment Philip was. "Believe me," sc. believe my words when I tell you that I am in the Father and the Father in me (repeated in identical terms from v. 10). He does not say "Believe in me" here. He merely appeals (as at 5<sup>47</sup> 10<sup>25</sup>) to the testimony of His own sayings, as worthy of credit (cf. 4<sup>21</sup>).

εἰ δὲ μὴ, διὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτῶ πιστεύετε μοι. This is the appeal to His miraculous works (cf. 3<sup>3</sup> 5<sup>34</sup> 10<sup>25</sup>) in support of His great claim of unity with the Father. The faith which is generated by an appeal like this is not the highest type of faith, but it is not despised by Jesus. Better to believe because of miracles than not to believe at all. See on 6<sup>36</sup> 10<sup>28</sup>; and cf. 2<sup>13</sup> 3<sup>4</sup> 4<sup>46</sup>.

The concluding μοι is omitted after πιστεύετε by  $\kappa$ DLW, but ins. AΒΓΔ $\theta$ .

12. ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγω ὑμῖν, the customary prelude to a solemn and unexpected saying. See on 1<sup>24</sup>.

He had appealed to His ἔργα. He now assures His hearers that the Christian believer shall be endowed with power to do the like or even greater things, and in particular that he shall have the secret of efficacious prayer (vv. 13, 14).

ὁ πιστεύων εἰς ἐμὲ. This He had bidden them all to do (v. 1), and He returns to the phrase, which involves more than τούτων ποιήσει, ὅτι ἐγὼ πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα πορεύομαι· 13. καὶ ὁτι ἂν πιστεύετε μοι of v. 11 (see on 1<sup>24</sup>). But, as Bengel says, "qui Christo de se loquuntur credit, in Christum credit."

τὰ ἔργα ἃ ἐγὼ ποιῶ ἐκείνους ποιήσει. He had already given such power to the Twelve (Mk. 6<sup>7</sup> 13), and in [Mk.] 16<sup>17</sup> it is recorded that He renewed this assurance after His Resurrection.

καὶ μέγιστα τούτων, "greater things," not necessarily more extraordinary "miracles," to the eye of the non-spiritual observer. These works of wonder, healing the blind and the sick, etc., were not reckoned by Jesus among His own "greater" works (see on 5<sup>20</sup>). The "greater things" which the apostles were to achieve, were the far-reaching spiritual effects which their preaching was to bring about. The teaching of the Incarnate Son was confined to one country, and while He was in the flesh His adherents were few. But His Church made conquest of the nations of the world.

ὅτι ἐγὼ πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα πορεύομαι. His departure from their visible presence increased the apostles' spiritual power (see on 16<sup>7</sup> above). As He goes on to explain (vv. 13, 14), their spiritual effectiveness in prayer will be increased beyond all limits hitherto presupposed, for their prayers will be offered "in His Name."

For πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα πορεύομαι, cf. v. 28; and see on 16<sup>28</sup>.
 13. καὶ ὁτι ἂν ἀνέτηναι κτλ. "And" (further, in addition to the promise of v. 12, and following from it) "whatsoever ye shall ask in my Name, I will do it." See on 15<sup>16</sup> for this great promise, here repeated for the fifth time.

It is not said here to whom the prayer is addressed, but we should probably understand τὸν Πατέρα as at 15<sup>14</sup> 16<sup>28</sup>. Jesus is the Way (v. 6), and while prayers are naturally addressed to the Father, they are addressed through Jesus, "in the Name of" Jesus.

There is, however, an advance here on the teaching of 15<sup>14</sup> 16<sup>28</sup>. In the former passages it is the Father who answers prayer, who gives what the faithful petitioner asks; but here and at v. 14 it is the Son who is to grant the boon, ποιήσω being twice repeated. For, in the teaching of Jesus as presented in Jn., what the Father does, the Son does (cf. 10<sup>26</sup>). Swete's paraphrase is thoroughly Johannine. "We pray to the Father in Christ's Name; we receive the answer from the Father. Yet we receive it through the Son and by the action of the Son." The difference between δώσει, "He will give," of 16<sup>28</sup>, and ποιήσω, "I will do," of 14<sup>13</sup> is the difference between the Jewish and the Christian doctrine of prayer.

αἰρήσῃτε ἐν τῷ ἐνομίῳ μου, τοῦτο ποιήσω, ἵνα δοξασθῆ ὁ Πατήρ ἐν τῷ ἑαυτοῦ. 14. ἔάν τι αἰτήσῃτε ἐν τῷ ἐνομίῳ μου, ἐγὼ ποιήσω.

ἵνα δοξασθῆ ὁ πατήρ ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ. This is only verbally similar to 13<sup>31</sup>, where see note. All that is done by Christ in His heavenly ministry is a "glorification" of the Father, a revelation to men of His power and compassion. This is the final cause of Christ's work.

For the absolute use of vōs in Jn., see on 3<sup>35</sup>.

14. This verse is wholly omitted in two minor uncials, as well as in 1, 22, δ, ful, the Sinai Syriac, and Nonnus—a strong and unusual combination. The omission may be due to homoioteleuton, v. 14 being repeated from v. 13. ABL and fam. 13, indeed, repeat τοῦτο ποιήσω from v. 13, but ADW in v. 14 replace τοῦτο by ἐγώ. So ADL follow v. 13 in reading αἰρήσῃτε ἐν κτλ, but MBWΓΔΘ have αἰρήσῃτε με ἐν κτλ.

If the verse is to be retained, it must be taken as a repetition in slightly different terms of what has been said already; a construction which is quite in the style of Jn.<sup>3</sup> ἐγὼ clearly lays special emphasis on Jesus being Himself the answerer of the prayer: "I will see that it is done."

But the insertion of me after αἰρήσῃτε, which the best MSS support, involves the harsh and unexampled phrase, "If ye shall ask me in my Name." No doubt, it may be urged that the man who is in Christ alone can offer petitions to Christ which are certain of acceptance. He whose will is in harmony with Christ's will, and who therefore can truly pray "in His Name," may be assured that Christ will perform what he asks. Yet the expression "ask me in my Name" is awkward, and does not occur elsewhere, the other passages in these discourses in which prayers in the Name of Christ are recommended explicitly mentioning the Father as Him to whom these prayers should be addressed (cf. 13<sup>16</sup> 16<sup>23</sup>, 26). The Johannine teaching would not indeed stumble at the addressing of prayer to Christ. He who prays to the Father, prays to the Son, so intimate is their ineffable union (cf. 10<sup>30</sup>); but, nevertheless, no explicit mention of prayer to the Son is found elsewhere in Jn., unless 16<sup>26</sup> (where see note) is an exception.

We conclude that me must be rejected here,<sup>3</sup> despite its strong MS. support; and we read ἔάν τι αἰτήσῃτε ἐν τῷ ἐνομίῳ μου, ἵνα ποιήσω, the thought being carried on from the previous verse, a special emphasis being laid upon ἐγώ.

15. Ἐάν ἀγαπήτεί με, τὰς ἐπιτολάς τὰς ἐμὰς τηρήσατε. 16. κἀγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν Πατέρα καὶ ἄλλων Παράκλητον ἕσσει ὑμῶν ἵνα ἦ μετ' ὑμῶν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, 17. τὸ Πνεῦμα τῆς ἀληθείας, ὃ ὁ κόσμος οὐ

Love issuing in obedience will be followed by the gift of the Paraclete, revealing the union of the Father and the Son (vs. 15-20)

15. ἔάν ἀγαπήτεί με, τὰς ἐπιτολάς τὰς ἐμὰς τηρήσατε (so MBL, which is to be preferred to τηρήσατε of AD<sup>Θ</sup> and the rec. text), "if you love me, you will keep my commandments," as it is said again (v. 23), ἔάν τις ἀγαπῆ με, τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσει. Love issues in obedience. The converse, "he who keeps my commandments loves me," is found at v. 21 (the love then fulfilling itself in knowledge, 1 Jn. 2<sup>2</sup>). For the verb ἀγαπᾶν, as used in Jn. of the love of His disciples for Jesus, see on 3<sup>14</sup>.

16. κἀγὼ ἐρωτήσω τὸν πατέρα. See on 11<sup>22</sup> 16<sup>23</sup>, 26 on ἐρωτᾶν as the verb used of the prayers of Jesus Himself; cf. 17<sup>9</sup>. καὶ ἄλλων παράκλητον ἕσσει ὑμῶν. The Sinai Syriac renders "He will give you Another, the Paraclete"; but the more natural rendering is "He will give you another Paraclete," sc. another besides myself. Jesus does not directly call Himself a "Paraclete" nor is the term applied to Him anywhere in the Gospels (cf. 1 Jn. 2<sup>2</sup>); but He has just spoken of Himself (vv. 13, 14) as discharging in the future the functions of a παράκλητος, or a Helper and Friend at the court of heaven, in that it is He who will cause to be fulfilled the prayers which are addressed to the Father. For παράκλητος see on 15<sup>26</sup>.

ἵνα ἦ μετ' ὑμῶν. The rec. text (with ADΓΔ<sup>Θ</sup>) has μέγθ for ἦ (perhaps from v. 17).

εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. Jesus had been with them as Helper and Friend on earth only for a short time, but the "other Paraclete" would be in fellowship with them "for ever," i.e. until the end of the present dispensation (cf. Mt. 28<sup>20</sup>). See on 4<sup>14</sup> for εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, which is generally used as including eternity.

17. For τὸ πν. τῆς ἀληθείας, see on 15<sup>26</sup>.

With the sharp contrast between the "world" and δύναται λαβεῖν, ὅτι οὐ θεωρεῖ αὐτὸ οὐδὲ γινώσκει ἕως γινώσκει αὐτὸ, ὅτι παρ' ὑμῶν μένει καὶ ἐν ὑμῶν ἑστίν. 18. οὐκ ἀφῆρω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς, ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς. 19. ἐν μικρῶν καὶ ὁ κόσμος the "disciples" in regard to their faculty of spiritual perception, cf. 1 Cor. 2<sup>14</sup>.

ὁ ὁ κόσμος οὐ δύναται λαβεῖν. It could not have been said to the "world," λάβετε πνεῦμα ἄγιον (20<sup>26</sup>). That gift could be received only by spiritually minded men.

ὅτι οὐ θεωρεῖ αὐτό. θεωρεῖν (see on 2<sup>25</sup>) is generally used in Jn. of bodily vision, but sometimes (as at 6<sup>40</sup> 12<sup>40</sup>) of mental and spiritual appreciation. The analogy of v. 19 would suggest that bodily vision is intended here, as there. The only kind of vision that the "world" has is physical, and with this the Spirit cannot be perceived. Observe that it is not said that the disciples could thus (θεωροῦσι) behold the Spirit.

οὐδὲ γινώσκει. So it is said in the Prologue (1<sup>18</sup>), ὁ κόσμος αὐτὸν οὐκ ἔγνω. The world did not recognise Jesus as the Word: nor does it recognise the Spirit.

ὑμεῖς γινώσκειτε αὐτό. Disciples are not "of the world" (15<sup>18</sup>): they can, and will, recognise the workings of the Spirit, as they have in some measure recognised Christ for what He was (cf. v. 9).

ὅτι παρ' ὑμῶν μένει, "because He abides with you," καὶ ἐν ὑμῶν ἑστίν, "and is in you," the present tenses being used proleptically of the future. The rec. has ἑστίν (with  $\kappa\alpha\Delta^{\alpha}L^{\alpha}$ ), which is a correction of the better reading ἑστίν (BD<sup>8</sup>W).

First it is said that the Spirit of Truth abides μετὰ ὑμῶν, then παρ' ὑμῶν, and finally ἐν ὑμῶν, the last phrase signifying the indwelling of the Spirit in the individual disciple (Rom. 8<sup>9</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>17</sup>, 2 Jn. 2), while the other phrases (the former of which occurs also in 2 Jn. 2) lay the emphasis on the fellowship of the Spirit with the disciples collectively, that is, with the Church (cf. ἡ κοινωρία τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος μετὰ πάντων ὑμῶν, 2 Cor. 13<sup>14</sup>).

18. οὐκ ἀφῆρω ὑμᾶς ὀρφανούς. ὀρφανός occurs in the N.T. again only at Jas. 1<sup>17</sup>, and there in its primary meaning of "fatherless." It has been thought that this is the idea here also; at 13<sup>28</sup> Jesus addressed his disciples as τεκνία, which suggests the relation of a father to his children. But, although ὀρφανός, both in the LXX and in classical literature, generally means "fatherless" in the most literal sense, it may be used of bereavement of any kind. ὀρφανὴ οὐ ἦρθε βοηθός (Ps. 10<sup>14</sup>) appears in Coverdale's Psalter as "Thou art the helper of the friendless," which brings out the sense well. Milligan (Vocab. s.v.) quotes a modern Greek song where friendless must be the meaning; and also Epictetus, III. xxiv. 14 for this more general με οὐκέτι θεωρεῖ, ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με, ὅτι ἐγὼ ζῶ καὶ ὑμεῖς sense. The rendering "comfortless" of the A.V. cannot be defended.

"I will not leave you friendless" means, then, "I will not leave you without a Helper and Friend (a παράκλητος), such as I have been."

ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, "I am coming to you," σοφ., as in v. 3, in the Parousia, but after His Resurrection, when the Spirit will be imparted (20<sup>26</sup>). See on 16<sup>29</sup> for the Day of the Spirit's Advent.

19. ἐν μικρῶν (see on 16<sup>19</sup>) καὶ ὁ κόσμος με οὐκέτι θεωρεῖ, "the world perceiveth me no longer," θεωρεῖν (see on 2<sup>25</sup>) being used here of any kind of vision, for Jesus will have been removed from the world's sight after His Passion.

ὑμεῖς δὲ θεωρεῖτέ με, "but you perceive me," sc. with the spiritual perception which the disciples were to have of the Risen Lord. Jesus had indeed told them at an earlier point in this last discourse that, like the world, they would see Him no longer with the eyes of the body after His Passion: οὐκέτι θεωρεῖτέ με (16<sup>19</sup>). The assurance of the present verse is in verbal, although not real, contradiction with the former warning. He had led them on step by step, in the endeavour to make them understand that it was better for them that He should be removed from their bodily eyes (16<sup>7</sup>), and that He would be present with them spiritually. And, at last, He assures them—so intimate and vital will His presence be—"you shall perceive me," ὑμεῖς θεωρεῖτέ με, the present tense being used proleptically to mark the certainty of the future.

θεωρεῖν is the verb used of Mary's "seeing" the Risen Lord (20<sup>16</sup>), as it is used here of the disciples' "seeing" Him after His Passion, while such "seeing" would be impossible for the unbelieving world.

ὅτι ἐγὼ ζῶ καὶ ὑμεῖς ζήσετε. So BL, but  $\kappa\alpha\Delta\Gamma\alpha\Theta$  have ζήσεσθε. This had been said before (6<sup>27</sup>, where see note), and the thought is present also in Paul (Rom. 5<sup>10</sup>, 1 Cor. 15<sup>22</sup> s. v. Gal. 2<sup>20</sup>, Eph. 2<sup>5</sup>; cf. Rev. 20<sup>6</sup>). But the words "because I live, you also shall live," have here a direct connexion with the context. Jesus has just assured the disciples that they shall "see" Him in His Risen Life. But this would only be possible—for ordinary physical vision is not in question—for those who are in spiritual sympathy with Him, who are "in Him" and in whom He abides (v. 20), who share His Life, ἴσαστε. 20. ἐν ἑκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ γνώσεσθε ὅμαις ὅτι ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ Πατρὶ μου καὶ ὅμαις ἐν ἐμοὶ κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν. 21. ὁ ἔχων τὰς ἐντολάς μου καὶ τηρῶν αὐτάς, ἐκείνός ἐστιν ὁ ἀγαπῶν με ὃ δὲ ἀγαπᾷν με

And so He adds, "because I live, ye also shall live"; not ye do live (in the present), for He was not yet risen from the dead, and His quickening power was not yet set free in those who "believed on Him."

20. ἐν ἑκείνῃ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ, i. e. in the new Dispensation of the Spirit, which will begin with the Resurrection. See on 16<sup>20</sup>.

γνώσεσθε ὅμαις κτλ., "you will know" (ὅμαις being emphatic) "that I am in my Father, etc." At v. 10 (where see note) Jesus had indicated that the disciples ought to have reached as far as faith in His ineffable union with the Father; but He now promises that they shall know it, and recognise it as true, when the illumination of the Spirit has been granted to their minds.

καὶ ὅμαις ἐν ἐμοὶ κἀγὼ ἐν ὑμῖν. He had given this to them as a precept of life (15<sup>9</sup>, where see note); but the assurance that they might indeed reckon themselves as "in Him" could not be complete until the realisation that they shared His Life (v. 19) was confirmed by the Spirit's internal witness. This assurance is the highest point in Christian experience. Cf. 17<sup>21</sup>. 22. 26; and see especially the note on 17<sup>21</sup>.

The loving disciple is loved by God, and to him Jesus will manifest Himself (v. 21)

21. What has heretofore been said in terms primarily applicable to the listening disciples is now said more generally. The teaching of v. 21 is for all future believers. Not only for the apostles, but for every disciple, the sequence of spiritual experience is Obedience, Love, Life, Vision.

ἔχων τὰς ἐντολάς (the phrase does not occur again) is to have them in one's heart, to know them and apprehend their meaning; but τηρῶν τὰς ἐντολάς is to keep them, which is a harder thing. See on v. 15 above, where (as at v. 23) it is said that love issues in obedience; here the point is, that obedience is the proof of love.

ἐκείνός: he it is (and no other) who loves me.

ὃ δὲ ἀγαπᾷν με ἀγαπηθήσεται ἐνὸς τοῦ πατρὸς μου. This has been said before at 16<sup>27</sup>, where φιλεῖν was used instead of ἀγαπᾷν (but see on 21<sup>16</sup>), and where, in accordance with Jn.'s usual style, the active voice (ὁ πατὴρ φιλεῖ ἡμᾶς) was preferred to the passive. Abbott (Diat. 1885f) notes that in this verse ἀγαπηθήσεται ἐνὸς τοῦ Πατρὸς μου, κἀγὼ ἀγαπήσω αὐτὸν καὶ ἔμφανίσω αὐτῷ ἑμαυτόν.

22. Λέγει αὐτῷ Ἰούδας, οὐχ ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης, Κόρις, καὶ τί γέγονεν ὅτι ἦνιν μὴδὲν ἔμφανίζων σεαυτὸν καὶ οὐχὶ τῷ κόσμῳ; 23. etc.

is the only instance in Jn. of ἐνὸς followed by a genitive of the agent.

κἀγὼ ἀγαπήσω αὐτόν. Cf. Prov. 8<sup>17</sup>.

καὶ ἔμφανίσω αὐτῷ ἑμαυτόν. ἔμφανίζω (in Jn. only here and at v. 22) is used as in Ex. 33<sup>13</sup>, 16 of a special manifestation of the Divine; cf. also Wisd. 1<sup>5</sup> 17<sup>4</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>54</sup>. The reference is to that fuller revelation of Christ which will be made through the Spirit's illumination: cf. 16<sup>14</sup>.

Jude asks why Jesus will not manifest Himself to the world; no direct answer is given, the former teaching being repeated (vv. 22-24)

22. λέγει αὐτῷ Ἰούδας κτλ. This is the fourth interruption of the discourse by an apostle anxious to understand what was being said (cf. 13<sup>37</sup> 14<sup>1-4</sup>); this time the speaker is Judas the son of James (Lk. 6<sup>14</sup>, Acts 1<sup>13</sup>, who is also called Thaddæus Mk. 3<sup>18</sup>, Mt. 10<sup>3</sup>; see on 21<sup>16</sup> above). Syr. sin. reads "Thomas" here for "Judas," and Syr. cur. has "Judas Thomas," which apparently was the personal name (Judas the Twin) of the doubting apostle. The Syriac vs. have confused the undistinguished apostle, Judas the son of James, with the better known Judas Thomas.

οὐχ ὁ Ἰσκαριώτης. Judas Iscariot had left the company some time before (13<sup>30</sup>), but Jn. is anxious that the name "Judas" shall not mislead. For "the Iscariot," the man of Kerioth, see on 6<sup>7</sup>.

καὶ τί γέγονεν κτλ., "What, then, has happened that, etc." For the initial καὶ, which is retained by κ, see on 6<sup>7</sup>. It is omitted by ABDL8, but its omission is probably due to a mistaken correction of the text by scribes who did not understand the initial καὶ.

Jude catches at the word ἔμφανίζω. This is what he has been waiting for. For this verb seemed to suggest (see Ex. 33<sup>12</sup>, 16) a visible manifestation of Jesus in glory, which had been the hope of the Twelve. They clung to the thought of a Messianic theophany which should convince the world. There was a truth behind this Jewish expectation, as Jesus had said on former occasions (5<sup>29</sup>, 30). But the promise to the faithful in these Last Discourses was not that of any speedy return of the Son of Man in the clouds, although it was mis-

interpreted thus by some. The ἐμφανισμός which Jesus promised was the illumination of the heart of the individual disciple: "I will manifest myself so him," not to the world. Judas is perplexed by such a limitation, as it seems to him, of the Messianic hope. What, then, about your manifestation of your glory to the world? See on v. 8 for similar perplexity exhibited by his brother apostle Philip. Both of them desired the same kind of public vindication by Jesus of Himself as His incredulous "brethren" had demanded when they said φανέρωσον σεαυτὸν τῷ κόσμῳ (7<sup>9</sup>).

Such vindication, however, was not given. Even after He had risen, Jesus was not seen by those who hated Him or were sceptical as to His claims. ὁ θεὸς . . . ἔβλεπεν αὐτὸν ἐμφανῆ γενέσθαι (Acts 10<sup>40</sup>). not to everybody, but only to the select few. And the only answer that Jesus gives to Jude is to repeat the assurance that He will, in truth, manifest Himself to every loving and obedient disciple: a promise which points forward to the illumination which the Spirit is to give.

No direct answer is given as to the manifestation in glory of Jesus to the world at large. This is in complete correspondence with the habit of Jesus when problems were put to Him by questioners as to the destiny or the duty of other people. He rebuked Peter for asking about John's future career (21<sup>20</sup>). "Are there few that be saved?" another asked Him (Lk. 13<sup>30</sup>). But His answer was to bid the man look to his own salvation: "Strive to enter in at the strait gate." And so here, it is said (in effect) to Jude: "If you love and obey me, I will come and abide with you; that is enough for you to know."

ἴδω τις ἀγαπᾷ με κτλ. The answer of Jesus to Jude is indirect, and begins by repeating what He had said before v. 15 (cf. v. 21) as to the necessity of obedience for a true disciple.

τὸν λόγον μου τηρήσει. For τὰς ἐπιτολάς of v. 21, the specific commandments of Jesus, is substituted here τὸν λόγον, the message of Jesus as a whole. For the phrase τὸν λόγον τηρεῖν, see on 8<sup>31</sup> 17<sup>6</sup>. Jn., as has been pointed out before, is fond of changing slightly the form of a great saying, when he repeats it (see on 3<sup>17</sup>).

καὶ ὁ πατήρ μου ἀγαπήσει αὐτόν. Cf. 17<sup>23</sup>. This must be taken to mean something more than the fundamental Johannine doctrine that "God loved the world" (3<sup>16</sup>), although καὶ μόνῃ παρ' αὐτῷ ποιησόμεθα. 24. ὁ μὴ ἀγαπᾷ με τοὺς λόγους μου οὐ τηρεῖ καὶ ὁ λόγος ὃν ἀκούετε οὐκ ἔστιν ἐμὸς ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με Πατρὸς.

this tremendous fact is prior to, and at the root of, every special manifestation of God's love to individual disciples.

καὶ πρὸς αὐτὸν θεωροῦμαι. Here the singular ἵσχυομαι πρὸς ἑμᾶς (v. 18) is replaced by the plural θεωροῦμαι, marking the claim of equality with the Father which is prominent throughout the Fourth Gospel. Cf. 10<sup>39</sup> ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. In both passages the reference is to that Divine Advent in the disciple's heart which is mediated by the Spirit. Cf. Rev. 3<sup>20</sup> εἰσελεύσομαι πρὸς αὐτόν.

καὶ μόνῃ παρ' αὐτῷ ποιησόμεθα. The Spirit παρ' ἑμῶν μένει (v. 17), and the same must be true of the Father and the Son. "In the coming of the Spirit, the Son too was to come; in the coming of the Son, also the Father."<sup>1</sup> In v. 2 (where see note) the μοναί where man shall dwell with God in the future are promised; here we have the promise of a greater thing, the dwelling of God with man in the present. The main thought associated with the sanctuary in the Pentateuch was that there Yahweh dwelt with His people (Ex. 25<sup>8</sup> 29<sup>6</sup>, Lev. 26<sup>11, 12</sup>; cf. 2 Cor. 6<sup>16</sup>); but the indwelling promised here is associated with no special sanctuary or holy place. It is a Presence, real although invisible, in the disciple's heart (Mt. 28<sup>20</sup>): the peculiar benediction of the kingdom which does not come "by observation" (Lk. 17<sup>20</sup>). So Jn. writes later of the disciple who "keeps His commandments," that Christ "abides in him," adding "this we know by the Spirit which He gave us" (1 Jn. 3<sup>24</sup>; cf. 1 Jn. 4<sup>13</sup>).

ποιησόμεθα. So MBLW fam. 13; but A<sup>0</sup> have ποιήσομεν, μόνῃ ποιούμενος occurs in Thucydides (i. 131), the phrase being good classical Greek.

24. The implied argument of this verse is that the "world," which does not love Jesus and does not "keep His commandments," is spiritually incapable of apprehending such spiritual manifestations of God and Christ as those which have been promised to faithful disciples. Nothing is said of a manifestation in glory, such as that which Jude and his fellow-disciples longed to see (cf. v. 22).

ὁ μὴ ἀγαπᾷ με κτλ., "he that does not love me" (sc. the world) "does not keep my sayings" (λόγους as distinct from λόγος, His full message). Λόγους here is practically equivalent to ἐπιτολάι (v. 21).

καὶ ὁ λόγος ὃν ἀκούετε. καὶ is for καίτοι, in accordance with <sup>1</sup>Gore, Bampton Lectures, p. 132.

25. Ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῶν παρ' ἑμῶν μόνον 26. ὁ δὲ Παράκλητος, τὸ Πνεῦμα τὸ Ἅγιον ὃ πέμφει ὁ Πατήρ ἐν τῇ ὀνομασίᾳ μου, ἐκείνος

Jn.'s usage (see on 3<sup>11</sup>): "and yet, the word which ye hear," i.e. which the world hears without understanding what it implies. The phrase ἐκείνου τὸν λόγον τὸν ἑμῶν has appeared before at 8<sup>48</sup>, where see note.

ὅσα ἔστιν ἡμῶς κτλ. Cf. 7<sup>18</sup> ἡ ἐμὴ διδασχὴ ὅσα ἔστιν ἡμῶν, ἀλλὰ τοῦ πέμψαντός με. See also 8<sup>26</sup> 12<sup>20</sup>; and for the thought of Christ being "sent" by God, see on 3<sup>17</sup>.

Parting words: a summary of the Last Discourse (vv. 25-31)

26. ταῦτα λελάληκα ὑμῶν. This is the seventh time that this solemn refrain (see on 15<sup>11</sup>) appears in the Last Discourse. Here ταῦτα may embrace all that has been said throughout the evening, and not only the sentences immediately preceding. "These things have I spoken to you, while abiding with you," sc. in the flesh. But this temporary companionship in the body is now to be replaced by a permanent spiritual abiding, in the Person of the Paraclete.

26. This is the fifth (and last) time that the Paraclete is mentioned (see on 15<sup>26</sup> for the meaning of the word). Here ὁ παράκλητος is for the first time identified with τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, an august title familiar to every Jew (cf. Ps. 51<sup>12</sup>, Isa. 63<sup>10</sup>). The complete title does not occur again in Jn. (but cf. 20<sup>22</sup>). We have it, however, in Mk. 3<sup>28</sup> 13<sup>11</sup>, Mt. 12<sup>31</sup>; cf. Lk. 12<sup>10</sup>, 11.

ὃ πέμφει. For ὃ, M<sup>c</sup>L have ὅν. The Old Syriac treats the Spirit as feminine, but the Peshitta does not follow this Semitic doctrine.

ὃ πέμφει ὁ πατήρ. This is the Lucan doctrine, that the Father sends the Spirit (Lk. 24<sup>49</sup>, Acts 2<sup>33</sup>), and we have had it already at v. 16; but at 15<sup>26</sup> 16<sup>7</sup> the Spirit is sent by the Son (see also 20<sup>22</sup>). This is only an additional illustration of the Johannine doctrine that what the Father does, the Son does (see note on v. 13 above).

ἐν τῇ ὀνομασίᾳ μου. "In my stead" does not convey the meaning adequately. At 5<sup>43</sup> Jesus said that He had come "in the Name" of the Father, and at 10<sup>25</sup> that He wrought His works in the same Name; the meaning in both cases (see notes in loc.) being not only that He came as the Father's representative, but as One to whom "the Name," i.e. the providential power of the Father, had been given, and who was to reveal the Father's character and purpose. So here it is said that the Spirit will be sent "in the Name" of Christ, to explain ἡμῶς διδάξει πάντα καὶ ὑπομνήσει ἡμῶς πάντα ἃ ἔειπον ὑμῶν ἐγὼ.

His mission and to reveal its consequences. As the Son was sent in the Name of the Father (5<sup>43</sup>), so the Holy Spirit will be sent in future "in the Name" of the Son. This does not imply that the Holy Spirit was not operative before the Incarnation, but rather that after the Passion and Resurrection (see on 16<sup>7</sup>; and cf. 7<sup>39</sup>) He will come with the more effective quickening power of the new revelation of God in Christ.

ἐκείνος. It is He, the Spirit, whose twofold work is now described in relation primarily to the listening apostles, but probably what is said may apply in some measure to all Christian disciples of succeeding generations.

ἡμῶς διδάξει πάντα. This has already been said at 16<sup>13</sup> ὁδηγήσει ἡμῶς εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν. The two phrases are treated as identical at Ps. 25<sup>7</sup>: ὁδηγήσων με ἐπὶ τὴν ἀλήθειάν σου, καὶ διδάξόν με. Cf. also Ps. 25<sup>7</sup>:

ὁδηγήσει πρὸς εἰς ἡρόσας,
διδάξει πρὸς εἰς ὁδοὺς αὐτοῦ.

See, for other apparent reminiscences of the Psalter, on 16<sup>13</sup>.

πάντα in this verse corresponds to εἰς πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν of 16<sup>13</sup>, and stands in contrast to ταῦτα of v. 25, sc. the things that have already been taught by Jesus. For πάντα, cf. 1 Jn. 2<sup>20</sup> τὸ αὐτοῦ χρίσμα διδάσκει ἡμῶς περὶ πάντων. The reference is only (see again on 16<sup>13</sup>) to religious doctrines (cf. 1 Cor. 2<sup>12</sup> πνεῦμα πάντα ἐρωτᾷ, καὶ τὰ βάθη τοῦ θείου), but of these Divine truths the Spirit is to teach new things as time goes on.

καὶ ὑπομνήσει ἡμῶς πάντα ἃ ἔειπον ὑμῶν. BL add ἐγὼ after ὑμῶν, and this would bring out the emphasis well; but it is omitted by most authorities. "And He will bring to your remembrance all that I said to you," the sc. εἶπον indicating that the personal oral teaching of Jesus was ended. This is the second side of the work of the Spirit, who not only was to reveal what was new, but was to recall to the memory of the apostles the old truths that Jesus had taught. Cf. 2<sup>22</sup> 12<sup>18</sup>, Acts 11<sup>16</sup>, for illustrations of the fact that after His Resurrection the apostles entered more fully into the meaning of His words than they had done at the time they were spoken. Here, however, the promise is that their memory of them shall be stimulated. Bengel says pregnantly, "Exemplum praebebat haec ipsa homilia."

ὑπομνήσει ἡμῶς πάντα. ὑπομνήσκει does not occur again in Jn.; but cf. Lk. 22<sup>41</sup>, where Peter "remembered" the words of Jesus. There is a literary parallel (but no more) in Jubilees

27. Ειρήνην ἀφήμι ὑμῖν, εἰρήνην τὴν ἡμῶν δίδωμι ὑμῶν· οὐ καθὼς ὁ κόσμος δίδωσιν ἐγὼ δίδωμι ὑμῖν. μὴ ταρασσέσθε ὑμῖν ἢ καρδία μὴδὲ δαλιᾶτω. 28. ἤκούσατε ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν Ὑψίστω καὶ ἔρχομαι

xxiii. 25, where God says to Jacob after his vision, "I will bring all things to thy remembrance."

27. εἰρήνη, i.e. εἰρήνη "peace," the ordinary salutation and the ordinary word of farewell in the East. The words καὶ ὑμῶν μένου in v. 25 are suggestive of His departure, and He is not forgetful of the parting word of peace. Except in salutations (2Co. xi. 2, 2 Jn. 3, 3 Jn. 4), εἰρήνη is used by Jn. only here and at 16<sup>22</sup>; and in both cases it refers to the spiritual peace which Christ gives. Just as in the Priestly Blessing (Num. 6<sup>24</sup>) the meaning of the familiar εἰρήνῃ is transfigured, "The Lord . . . give thee peace," so here εἰρήνην τὴν ἡμῶν δίδωμι ὑμῖν conveys more than the customary "Go in peace." The peace which Jesus bequeaths (ἀφήμι ὑμῖν) is His to give as a permanent possession (cf. 16<sup>22</sup>), and is given, not by way of hope or assurance of good will only, as the world (i.e. the ordinary run of mankind; see on 2<sup>9</sup>) gives it in farewells, but in the plenitude of Divine power. εἰρήνην δίδωμι ὑμῖν is no less absolute a gift than that other ζωὴν αἰώνιον δίδωμι αὐτοῖς (10<sup>28</sup>).

It is noteworthy that in the Apocalypse εἰρήνη is used only of earthly peace (6<sup>4</sup>; cf. 7<sup>2</sup>), while in Jn. it is used only of spiritual peace. Paul has it in both senses, but more frequently in the latter (cf. Col. 3<sup>15</sup>, 2 Thess. 3<sup>16</sup>).

μὴ ταρασσέσθε ὑμῖν ἢ καρδία. This is repeated from v. 1 (see note on 3<sup>7</sup>), and now is added μὴδὲ δαλιᾶτω. This is the only occurrence of the verb δαλιᾶω in the N.T.; although we find δαλιᾶς (Mk. 4<sup>30</sup>, Mt. 8<sup>23</sup>, Rev. 21<sup>8</sup>) and δαλιᾶ (2 Tim. 1<sup>7</sup>). μὴδὲ δαλιᾶ is the parting counsel of Moses (Deut. 31<sup>8</sup>); so also μὴδὲ δαλιᾶσθαι is the counsel of Joshua to his warriors (Josh. 10<sup>25</sup>), as it was the word of Yahweh to him (Josh. 1<sup>8</sup> 8<sup>1</sup>). μὴδὲ δαλιᾶτω, "let not your heart be dismayed," is, in like manner, the parting word of Christ. There is no place for cowards in the ranks of His army; and the seer of the Apocalypse ranks them with "the unbelieving . . . and murderers . . . and liars," who, in his vision, have their portion in hell (Rev. 21<sup>8</sup>).

28. Jesus has told them that they must not be cowards; now He tells them that they must not be selfish. His departure means for Him the resumption of the Divine glory.

ἤκούσατε ἐγὼ εἶπον ὑμῖν (sc. at vv. 2-4) Ὑψίστω (sc. for this verb on 7<sup>28</sup>) καὶ ἔρχομαι πρὸς ὑμᾶς (vv. 3, 18). His departure is the condition of His return through the Spirit. This has πρὸς ὑμᾶς. εἰ ἤγαγετέ με, ἐχάρητε ἂν ὅτι πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα, ὅτι ὁ Πατὴρ μείζων μου ἐστίν. 29. καὶ τὸν ἀίρησα ὑμῖν πρὶν γενέσθαι, ἵνα ὅταν γένηται πιστεύσητε. 30. οὐκ εἶμι πάλιν ἀληθῶς all been said before. He now makes a new appeal to them, based on their love for Him.

εἰ ἤγαγετέ με (see on 3<sup>14</sup> for ἀγαπήν used of the love of His disciples for Jesus; and cf. v. 15 above), "if ye loved me." It is a tender, half-playful appeal. He does not really question their love for Him, but He reminds them of it.

ἐχάρητε ἂν (cf. 16<sup>22</sup>), "you would have rejoiced."

ὅτι πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (repeated from v. 12). His return to the Father is His elevation to His true glory. No precise distinction can be drawn between ὁπάω and πορεύεσθαι in such phrases (see on 16<sup>7</sup>).

The rec. inserts εἶπον after ὅτι, but om. KABDL<sup>0</sup>. Fam. 13 add μου after πατέρα.

ὅτι ὁ πατὴρ μείζων μου ἐστίν. To this sentence theologians devoted close attention in the fourth century, but it would be out of place in a commentary on the Fourth Gospel to review the Arian controversy. It suffices to note that the filial relationship, upon which so much stress is laid in Jn., implies of itself that the Son is from the Father, not the Father from the Son. There is no question here of theological subtleties about what a later age called the "subordination" of the Son, or of any distinction between His οὐσία and that of the Father. But, for Jn., the Father sent the Son (see on 3<sup>17</sup>), and gave Him all things (see on 3<sup>36</sup>). Cf. Mk. 13<sup>32</sup>, Phil. 2<sup>6</sup>, 1 Cor. 15<sup>27</sup>, for other phrases which suggest that ὁ πατὴρ μείζων μου ἐστίν is a necessary condition of the Incarnation. It is the same Person that says "I and my Father are one thing" (10<sup>30</sup>), who speaks of Himself as "a man who hath told you the truth which I have heard from God" (8<sup>40</sup>). See on 5<sup>18</sup>, 20.

29. καὶ τὸν, "And now," sc. "to make an end" (cf. 17<sup>2</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>26</sup>, for καὶ τὸν used thus; and see on 11<sup>22</sup>), "I have told you before it comes to pass, that when it is come to pass ye may believe." See note on 13<sup>18</sup>.

πιστεύσητε may be used here absolutely (see 7<sup>7</sup>); or the meaning may be governed by 13<sup>18</sup>, where the words are οὕτως πιστεύσητε . . . ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι, "that I (am) He."

In vv. 26 ff., Jesus had told the disciples of His approaching departure, which as yet they had hardly brought themselves to believe, and of the coming of the Holy Spirit which would ensue. The experience of this heavenly illumination would convince them of His superhuman foreknowledge. Cf. 2nd.

μεθ' ἑμαῖν, ἔρχεται γὰρ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου ἄρχων, καὶ ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν. 31. Δὲν ἰσὺ γὰρ ὁ κόσμος ὅτι ἀγαπᾷ τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ οὐδὲν ἀπετίλειτό μοι ὁ Πατήρ, οὕτως τοῦα. Ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν ἐντεύθεν.

80. οὐδέτι πολλὰ λαλῶμε μεθ' ἑμαῖν. If cc. 15 and 16 follow c. 14, this is difficult to understand, for then sixty verses of exhortation must be supposed to have been added before the discourse came to an end. But, in our arrangement of the text, the discourse has come to its conclusion. See Introd., p. xx.

ἔρχεται γὰρ ὁ τοῦ κόσμου ἄρχων. The rec. inserts τοῦτον after κόσμου, as at 12th 16th, but WABDLX omit. For the phrase "the prince of this world," see on 12th. It means Satan, not merely Satan in the form of Judas (cf. 13th), but Satan himself, to meet whose last assault (cf. Lk. 4th 22nd) Jesus now prepared.

καὶ ἐν ἐμοὶ οὐκ ἔχει οὐδέν "and has nothing in me," i.e. has no point in my personality on which he can fasten. Twice in the last hours, Jesus said that He Himself was not "of this world" (cf. 17th 28th); and thus "the prince of this world" had no power over Him. This was to claim in serene confidence that He was sinless (cf. Heb. 4th). But, although thus superior to the forces of evil, He must go to meet them in the agony of conflict, for this was the predestined purpose of God.

31. Δὲν ἰσὺ γὰρ ὁ κόσμος κτλ. We must supply something before ἰσὺ, "but I do these things that the world may recognise" my love for, and obedience to, the Father. For similar elliptical constructions with ἰσὺ, see 9th 13th 15th, 1 Jn. 2nd. Otherwise we are obliged to take the whole clause as subordinate to "Arise, let us go hence," which is very harsh. Whichever constr. is adopted, the meaning is the same. Jesus assures His apostles once more that what He does at this critical hour is done voluntarily and in obedience to the Divine purpose. Having made this declaration, He offers His Prayer (c. 17) before He leaves the house to face arrest and death.

ἰσὺ γὰρ ὁ κόσμος . . . cf. 17th for this ideal of the future; and cf. 1 Cor. 1st for the reality of the present.

ὅτι ἀγαπᾷ τὸν Πατέρα. This is the only place in the N.T. where the "love" of the Son for the Father is mentioned explicitly. The love of the Father for the Son is mentioned often in Jn. (see on 3rd, where ἀγαπᾷν is the verb employed, and 5th, where we find φιλεῖν); but it is remarkable that Jn. never again speaks of Jesus as "loving" God. See on 3rd for ἀγαπᾷν in Jn.

ἐντεύθεο. So WABDΓΔΘ; but BL have ἐντολήν δέδοικεν, from the parallel saying at 12th, where see the exegetical note. For the obedience of Christ to the commandment of the Father, see 4th 8th, and cf. Phil. 2nd, Heb. 5th. This obedience was perfect throughout His life on earth, but here the allusion is rather to the last act of self-surrender in going to meet the Passion. Here is the last word of Jesus to the Eleven: "As the Father commanded me, so I do."

ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν. According to Mk. 14th, Mt. 26th, these were the words with which Jesus summoned the sleeping disciples at Gethsemane, just before His arrest. Jn. adds ἐντεύθεν, and puts the words in a slightly different context; i.e. they mark the conclusion of the Discourse in the Upper Room, which was followed by a short pause for prayer, the solemn prayer of c. 17 being said standing, before Jesus and His disciples left the house for Gethsemane and the arrest (18th).

For those who accept the traditional order of chapters, the sharp finality of ἐγείρεσθε, ἄγωμεν ἐντεύθεν is not easy of explanation. The allegory of the Vine (c. 15) comes in strangely after such words,<sup>1</sup> which must mark a break in, or the termination of, the Last Discourse of Jesus. Several exegetes suppose that, after He had said "Arise, let us go hence," Jesus and His eleven disciples left the house, the rest of the discourse being spoken as they were walking to Gethsemane. It is difficult to suppose that teaching so profound and so novel was given under such conditions, or that Jn. intends thus to represent the course of events. Westcott suggested that before the little party crossed the Kidron they halted for a time in the Temple precincts, where quiet opportunity could be found for the delivery of cc. 15, 16 and for the great prayer of c. 17. But there is no evidence for such an hypothesis. The simplicity of the exegesis which emerges from placing the text in the order that is here adopted is a strong argument in its favour.

ἄγωμεν, it may be noted, is used thrice in c. 11 of a going forth to meet death (see on 11th).

XVII. 1 ff. Of the Prayer of Jesus which is now recorded, it would be too much to suppose that we have the exact words, or even an exact translation of the Aramaic words which He used. We have not here a shorthand report, taken down at the time, but rather the substance of sacred intercessions preserved for half a century in the memory of a disciple. On the other hand, the occasion must have been felt by all who were present to be specially momentous, and the words used of extraordinary significance. They would be remembered when other things were forgotten, as the Last Prayer of Jesus, said in the hearing of His disciples, when the Last Discourse was ended, before He went to meet the Cross. The topics upon which He dwelt—His coming glorification, His committal of His chosen friends to the compassionate protection of the Father while they were in the world with its trials, His intercession for those other disciples who were to receive the Gospel through the ministry of the Eleven, His prayer that the mutual love of Christian for Christian might at last convince the hostile world of the truth of His claims—these things could never pass from the memory of one who heard Him speak of them at the last. Phrase after phrase is repeated, and more than once, as is characteristic of the style of Jn.; but Jn. is drawing all the while upon the tenacious memory of an old man recalling the greatest days of his life. This, at any rate, seems more probable than the hypothesis that the Prayer is a free composition of the evangelist himself. To take such a view would be to ascribe the deepest thoughts in the Fourth Gospel to the disciple rather than to the Master. As Harnack says, the confidence with which Jn. makes Jesus address the Father, "Thou lovest me before the foundation of the world" (v. 24), "is undoubtedly the direct reflection of the certainty with which Jesus Himself spoke."<sup>1</sup>

No other long prayer of Jesus is recorded. His habit of prayer at crises or great moments is often mentioned (Mk. 1<sup>36</sup> 6<sup>46</sup>, Lk. 3<sup>31</sup> 5<sup>16</sup> 9<sup>18</sup> 11<sup>1</sup>), but these prayers were usually (as it seems) offered in private, and were overheard by none. Something, however, of His methods of prayer may be gathered from the Synoptists. Two, at any rate, of His ejaculations from the Cross were verses of the Psalms (Ps. 22<sup>1</sup> 31<sup>9</sup>), hallowed by long and venerable use. That they should come to His lips in the agony of death, shows that they were familiarly used by Him in life. Again, it was His habit to begin with the word "Father" (cf. Lk. 22<sup>42</sup> 23<sup>46</sup>, Mt. 11<sup>26</sup>, and Jn. 11<sup>42</sup> 12<sup>27</sup>), as this great Prayer begins (17<sup>1</sup>). He prayed, at the end at least, for His own needs, when distressed in spirit (Lk. 22<sup>42</sup>, Jn. 12<sup>27</sup>), and the prayer of c. 17 begins with intercession for Himself. He prayed for His disciples (Lk. 22<sup>32</sup>), and He is represented as doing so in 17<sup>9-19</sup>. The solemn note of thanksgiving at the beginning of His Prayer of Consecration (17<sup>1-9</sup>) has a parallel at Jn. 11<sup>41</sup>, and also in Mt. 11<sup>30</sup>, a passage which recalls the manner of Jn. 17<sup>1-9</sup> more than any other passage in the Gospels: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that Thou didst hide these things from the wise and understanding, and didst reveal them unto babes; yes, Father, for so it was well pleasing in Thy sight. All things have been delivered unto me of my Father, etc."<sup>2</sup>

XVII. 1. Ταῦτα εἰλάλησεν Ἰησοῦς, καὶ ἐπέρας τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς

It has been pointed out<sup>3</sup> that several of the thoughts underlying the Lord's Prayer, which Jesus prescribed for the use of His disciples, appear also in the great Prayer of Intercession in c. 17. With the opening address, "Our Father," cf. 17<sup>1-9</sup>, ὁ. ἡ. ἡ. ἡ. where "Father" is used in the special and personal sense in which Jesus was accustomed to use it. "Hallowed be Thy Name" is recalled, vv. 6, 11, 12, 26. Perhaps "Thy kingdom come" is the form in which we may express something of what Christ expressed when He said "Glorify Thy Son" (vv. 1, 5). "As in heaven, so in earth," has echoes in vv. 4, 5. With "lead us not into temptation" cf. "I kept them . . . I guarded them" (v. 12). And "deliver us from evil" is almost verbally reproduced (v. 15).

None of these coincidences or parallels is likely to have been invented by one setting himself to compose a prayer for the lips of Christ on the eve of His Passion; but, when taken together, they show that the spirit which breathes throughout c. 17 is similar to that with which we have been made familiar when reading Jesus' words as recorded by the Synoptists and elsewhere in Jn.

The prayer of c. 17 falls naturally into three divisions. First, Jesus prays for Himself (vv. 1-8); then, for the eleven apostles, His intimate friends (vv. 9-19); and lastly, for the disciples of future generations, who were to be evangelised through the ministry begun by the apostles (vv. 20-26). That is, the prayer begins with what is immediate, intimate, and urgent, and only gradually passes into intercession for that which is distant and of universal import.

XVII. 1. ταῦτα εἰλάλησεν Ἰησοῦς, "these things said Jesus," viz. the discourse ending 14<sup>31</sup>. The rec. has ὁ before ἴηρ. but κΒΘ om. See on 1<sup>36</sup>.

καὶ ἐπέρας τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς κτλ. See on 11<sup>41</sup>. The rec. text has ἐπέρα . . . καὶ ἐπέρας with ΑC<sup>2</sup>NTA; but ἐπέρας . . . εἶπεν is found in NBC*DLW<sup>6</sup>.

αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν εἶπεν Πάτερ, ἐλάβηθες ἡ ὄρα· δόξα σου σου τὸν Υἱόν, ἵνα ὁ Υἱὸς δοξάσῃ σὲ, 2. καθὼς ἔδωκας αὐτῷ ἰξουσίαν πάντα

πάντα. For this beginning of the prayers of Jesus, see on 11<sup>24</sup>; πάτερ is repeated, vv. 5, 11, 21, 24, 25.

ἐλάβηθες ἡ ὄρα, sc. the hour of His "glorification," as He had already told them (13<sup>31</sup>, 32 and 13<sup>30</sup>), had come. The same precence is ascribed to Him at Gethsemane in Mk. 14<sup>41</sup>. The idea that the whole course of His Ministry and Passion was predetermined runs through the Gospel, e.g. 7<sup>30</sup> 8<sup>30</sup> 13<sup>1</sup>; see on 2<sup>4</sup>.

δόξα σου σου τὸν υἱόν. Here is the only personal intercession throughout this Prayer of Consecration. He cared nothing for the "glory" which men can bestow (cf. 8<sup>50</sup>, εὐχὴ οὐ ζηρῶ τὴν δόξαν μου), but He prays that the Father may "glorify" Him in His impending Passion (cf. 12<sup>16</sup>, 13<sup>31</sup>, 32), and see on 7<sup>30</sup> for this use of δοξάζω. This goes deeper than a prayer for support in the hour of death. A martyr might pray for such signal measures of grace to be bestowed in the day of trial, that all who perceived his courage and faith might recognise that he was honoured of God. The "glorification" of Jesus included this. The centurion, standing by the Cross, was constrained to say, as he watched the bearing of the Crucified, "Truly this man was the Son of God" (Mk. 15<sup>32</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>54</sup>; cf. Lk. 23<sup>47</sup>). But there was more than this. The "glorification" of Jesus in the Passion was the Divine acceptance of His Sacrifice by the Father, the sealing of His Mission as complete. Cf. Phil. 2<sup>9</sup>, "Wherefore God highly exalted Him (ὑπερήψωσεν) and gave Him the Name that is above every name."<sup>10</sup>

ἵνα ὁ υἱὸς δοξάσῃ σὲ. The redemption of mankind through the Crucified is a glorification of the Father. The final cause of the Passion, viewed sub specie aeternitatis, is "ad majorem dei gloriam," as was every incident in the ministry of Jesus. See on 11<sup>4</sup> and cf. 1 Pet. 4<sup>11</sup>.

2. The constr. ἵνα . . . καθὼς . . . ἵνα, which we have here, appears also 13<sup>34</sup> 17<sup>21</sup>, in each case the clause introduced by καθὼς being parenthetical, and the second ἵνα being reiterative, the clause following it being identical in meaning with that introduced by the first ἵνα. Consequently ἵνα πᾶν δὲ δέδωκας αὐτῷ κτλ. in this verse is only another way of saying ἵνα ὁ υἱὸς δοξάσῃ σὲ of v. 1.

καθὼς ἔδωκας αὐτῷ ἰξουσίαν κτλ. To the Son, the Father gave authority to determine the final destinies of mankind (see on 5<sup>27</sup>). His ἰξουσία is over "all flesh" (although not fully acknowledged by the world), πᾶσα σὰρξ being the renderσφακί, ἵνα πᾶν δὲ δέδωκας αὐτῷ δόξα αὐτοῦ ζωῆν αἰώνιον. 3. αἰτῆ

 δεῖ ἔστιν υἱ αἰώνιος ζωῆ, ἵνα γινώσκωσιν σὲ τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν

ἵνα πᾶν δὲ δέδωκας αὐτῷ κτλ. The meaning is "that He may give eternal life to all whom thou hast given to Him" (see on 6<sup>37</sup>), the latter clause limiting the πᾶσα σὰρξ which has preceded. This consummation of His redemptive work is the "glorification" of the Father by the Son.

πᾶν δὲ δέδωκας αὐτῷ. The constr. with a nom.-pendens is like πᾶν δὲ δέδωκέν μοι οἱ 6<sup>38</sup>, where see the note on the collective use of the neuter singular, which perhaps is here a forecast of ἵνα . . . ἔν ὄντι of v. 21. πᾶν δὲ δέδωκας αὐτῷ is the Universal Church (cf. v. 24).

αὐτοῦ refers to all who are included in πᾶν δὲ δέδωκας αὐτῷ, with disregard of formal grammar. As Blass notes (Gram. p. 166), this is a usage with classical precedent.

3. This verse seems to be an explanatory comment on the phrase "eternal life," which the evangelist says that Jesus used in His prayer. Jn. often supplies such comments (see Intro., p. cxvi), and this is quite in his manner. To suppose that he means to represent Jesus as introducing a definition of "eternal life" into His prayer, and as calling Himself "Jesus Christ" when speaking to His Father, is not a probable hypothesis. Further, the sequence of thought from v. 2 to v. 4 is direct, and the interposition of a parenthesis in a prayer is unlikely.

αἰτῆ δεῖ ἔστιν υἱ . . . ἵνα . . . For this Johannine construction, cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>13</sup> 5<sup>8</sup> (also 15<sup>10</sup>).

κ<sup>o</sup>BC<sup>o</sup> have γινώσκωσιν, but ADLNWA read γινώσκουσιν. The possibility of "knowing" the Father, see on 14<sup>7</sup>: the present tense (γινώσκουσιν) marking that continual growth in the knowledge of God which is a characteristic of spiritual life, as physical growth is a characteristic of bodily life. The prophet's ideal was, "We will follow on to know

Wetstein quotes a verbal parallel from Athenaeus (vi. p. 523c): describing the flattery of the Athenians in their reception of Demetrius, he says, ἀπαδόντες, ὡς εἰς μόνον θεόν ἀληθινόν. This shows how natural is the combination of μόνος and ἀληθινός. Cf. Philo, Leg. All. ii. 17, μὴ τὸν ἀληθῆ μόνον θεόν.

That to know God is, itself, eternal life, is a doctrine which has its roots in Jewish sapiential literature. Wisdom "is a tree of life to them that lay hold on her" (Prov. 3<sup>18</sup>). Again, περίσσεια γνώσεως τῆς σοφίας ζωοποιεῖται τὸν πατέρα αὐτῆς (Eccles. 7<sup>12</sup>). An even nearer parallel to Jn.'s definition of eternal life is: εἰδέναι σου τὸ κρῆτος μίζα θάνατος (Wisd. 15<sup>9</sup>).

Alford appositely cites the words of Irenaeus: ἡ δὲ ὑπερβίη τῆς ζωῆς ἐκ τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ παραγίνεται μετοχής μετοχῆ δὲ θεοῦ ἰστί τὸ γινώσκειν θεόν, καὶ ἀπολαύειν τῆς χρηστότητος αὐτοῦ (Haer. iv. 20. 5). A little lower down (§ 5, where the Greek is deficient) Irenaeus combines with wonderful insight the two thoughts that the giving of eternal life by the Son is a glorification of the Father (v. 2), and that eternal life is the knowledge of God (v. 3), although he does not cite the present passage. "Gloria enim dei uiuens homo; uita autem hominis uisio dei." It would not be easy to express these profound thoughts more succinctly.

The writer of the last paragraphs of the Epistle to Diognetus (whom Lightfoot identifies with Pantemus<sup>2</sup>), commenting on the presence in Paradise of both the Tree of Knowledge and the Tree of Life, says: οὐδὲ γὰρ ζωὴ ἀνευ γνώσεως, οὐδὲ γνώσεως ἀσφαλῆς ἀνευ ζωῆς ἀληθοῦς (§ 12. 4).

καὶ ὃν ἀπέστειλες Ἰη. Χρ. To "know" Jesus Christ is eternal life; cf. 6<sup>50</sup>. Jn. treats this knowledge as on a par with the knowledge of "the only true God." So the apostles were bidden to "believe" not only in God, but in Christ (14<sup>1</sup>).

For the thought of Jesus as "sent" by God (cf. vv. 8, 13, 21, 23, 25), see on 3<sup>17</sup> above.

The only other place in the Fourth Gospel where the historical name "Jesus Christ" occurs is 1<sup>17</sup> (see note, in loc.)

τὸ ἔργον τελειώσας ὁ δέδικται μοι ἵνα ποιήσω" 5. καὶ τὸν δέξασάν με σὺ, Πάτερ, παρὰ σεαυτοῦ τῇ δόξῃ ἣ εἶχον παρὰ τοῦ τὸν κόσμον εἶναι

4. ἐγὼ σε ἐδόξασα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς. This is in direct sequence with v. 3 (v. 3 being parenthetical). He had spoken of the "glorification" of the Father by Him, which was to be consummated in the gift of eternal life through His ministry to those whom the Father had given Him. This "glorification" had been His aim throughout His earthly sojourn. "I glorified Thee on earth" (the aorist ἐδόξασα being the aorist of historical retrospect) by making known as never before the nature of God. τὸ ἔργον τελειώσας ὁ δέδικται μοι ἵνα ποιήσω. This had been His purpose throughout (see on 4<sup>6</sup>), from the day when He asked ὅσα ᾄδον ἐπὶ ἐν τοῦ τοῦ πατρός μου δεῖ εἶναι με; (Lk. 24<sup>49</sup>). His "works" had been "given" Him by the Father to accomplish (3<sup>36</sup> 5<sup>26</sup>). They had now been accomplished, and presently He would say τετέλεσται (19<sup>30</sup>).

For τελειώσας (KABCLNW) the rec. (with Θ) has τελείωσας, and for δέδικται (KABLNΘ) CDW have έδωκεν. The variants έδωκεν, έδωκα frequently occur (cf. vv. 6, 8, 24, etc.) in similar contexts throughout the Gospel. Abbott (Diat. 2454) holds that "the aorist usually describes gifts regarded as given by the Father to the Son on His coming into the world to proclaim the Gospel; the perfect describes gifts regarded as having been given to the Son and as now belonging to Him." But we cannot always press this distinction.

8. καὶ νῦν, "and now," that this earthly ministry is ended (cf. 14<sup>30</sup> for καὶ νῦν).

δέξασάν με. There is emphasis on νῦν. The glorification prayed for here transcends the glorification in the Passion prayed for in v. 1. Here the thought is of a heavenly glorification already predicted, 13<sup>31</sup>, ὁ θεὸς δοξάσει αὐτὸν ἐν αὐτῇ. For Jesus asks now, with lofty assurance (σὺ, πάτερ), that the eternal glory which was His before the incarnation (cf. 1<sup>1</sup>) may be resumed in fellowship with the Father (παρὰ σεαυτοῦ . . . παρὰ σοῦ). Cf. Prov. 8<sup>30</sup>, Jn. 6<sup>42</sup>, and Rev. 3<sup>11</sup>. The glory of the Eternal Word is distinguishable from the glory of the Incarnate Word (see on 1<sup>10</sup>); the spheres of life are different, ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς (v. 4) implying the Incarnate Life, but παρὰ σεαυτοῦ implying life in the bosom of the Godhead.

As He had said, "Before Abraham was, I am" (8<sup>58</sup>), so here He expresses His sure conviction that He was in eternal relation with God. τῇ δόξῃ ἣ εἶχον . . . παρὰ σοῦ indicates a real, and not only an ideal, pre-existence.

παρὰ σοῦ. 6. Ἐφανέρωσά σου τὸ ὄνομα τοῖς ἀσθράτοις οὓς ἔδικας μοι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. σοὶ ἦσαν κέμοι αὐτοῦν ἔδικας, καὶ τὸν λόγον σου τετήρηκαν. 7. νῦν ἔργωκαν ὅτι πάντα ὅσα δέδικας μοι παρὰ

6. Ἐφανέρωσά σου τὸ ὄνομα. This means the same thing as ἐγὼ σε ἐδίδασκα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς of v. 4, and as ἐγίνωκα τὸ ὄνομά σου of v. 26, although different phrases are used to bring out the full meaning. For the "Name" of God as indicating His true nature, see on 12<sup>28</sup> and especially on v. 11 below.

For the verb φανεροῦν, see on 12<sup>28</sup>.

One of the Messianic Psalms has the aspiration, ἀγγήγομαι τὸ ὄνομά σου τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς μου (Ps. 22<sup>28</sup>), and in the apostolic age the words were interpreted of Christ (Heb. 2<sup>12</sup>). As He looks back on His ministry, He can say that this has been accomplished: Ἐφανέρωσά σου τὸ ὄνομα. Although the disciples had not appreciated all of His teaching, they had learnt, through Him, something more of the nature of God than any Jew had learnt before.

τοῖς ἀσθράτοις οὓς ἔδικας μοι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. See on 6<sup>27</sup> for the thought of disciples being "given" to the Son by the Father, which recurs throughout the Priestly Prayer of Jesus (vv. 2, 9, 12, 24).

σοὶ ἦσαν. "They were thine," and σοὶ εἶσιν, "they are thine" (v. 9). This means more than that they were "Israelites indeed" (1<sup>47</sup>); it is rather that they were among the men ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ of whom He spoke before (8<sup>47</sup>).

καὶ τὸν λόγον σου τετήρηκαν. This was some of the fruit of His ministry; the chosen disciples (except Judas) had "kept" the Divine word revealed to them through Jesus. Cf. 8<sup>21</sup> 14<sup>24</sup> for the phrase τὸν λόγον τηρεῖν, and see on 5<sup>20</sup>.

ἔδικας (κABDWΘ) is the true reading in this verse, in both places where it occurs, as against the rec. δέδικας. The reference is to the definite "gift" of the faithful disciples chosen ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. See on v. 4 above.

There is a passage in the Odes of Solomon (xxxii. 4, 5) which recalls the thought of this verse: "He offered to Him the sons that were in His hands. And His face was justified, for thus His holy Father had given to Him." Cf. also v. 11.

7. νῦν ἔργωκαν κτλ. The disciples had said (16<sup>28</sup>) νῦν οἴδαμεν ὅτι οἶδας πάντα κτλ., but their confidence was not so deep-rooted as they had supposed. Yet they had come to recognise (ἔργωκαν expressing the gradual growth of their spiritual insight) that His words were divine (v. 8), or (as it is expressed in this verse) that "all things which Thou hast given me are from Thee" (see on 3<sup>20</sup>).

σοῦ εἶσιν. 8. ὅτι τὰ ῥήματα ἃ δέδικας μοι δέδικας αὐτοῖς, καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔλαβον, καὶ ἔργωσαν ἀληθῶς ὅτι παρὰ σοῦ ἐξήλθον, καὶ ἐπίστευσαν ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας.

Godet calls attention to the apparent scantiness of the spiritual harvest for which Jesus gives thanks in these verses. "Eleven Galilean peasants after three years' labour! But it is enough for Jesus, for in these eleven He beholds the pledge of the continuance of God's work upon earth."

For ἔργωκαν, there is a Western variant, ἔργων (ε lat. 5777), the mistaken correction of a scribe who returns to the first person of v. 6.

For δέδικας (see on v. 4), AB have ἔδικας. And for εἶσιν (κBCLNW) the rec. has ἐστίν, with ADΓΔΘ.

8. ὅτι τὰ ῥήματα κτλ., "that the words which Thou gavest me I have given unto them." For ῥήματα, see on 3<sup>24</sup>: cf. 5<sup>27</sup> ε<sup>28</sup> κ.

These "words" of Jesus were "given" Him by the Father, as has been said before. See on 12<sup>28</sup> and cf. 12<sup>15</sup> 17<sup>14</sup>.

καὶ αὐτοὶ ἔλαβον. The chosen disciples had received and appropriated His words, which "abode" in them (cf. 15<sup>5</sup>). Here was the token that the disciples were, indeed, ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ (cf. 8<sup>47</sup>).

The rec. has δέδικας (so κLNΓΔΘ) for ἔδικας (ABCDW), but the sense requires the aorist here (see on v. 4). The ῥήματα of Jesus were "given" to Him by the Father, when He entered on His mission (see on 3<sup>20</sup>).

καὶ ἔργωσαν . . . καὶ ἐπίστευσαν. Here, again, we have the aorist tense. The disciples recognised, "knew of a truth," i.e. inferred from what they saw and heard, that Jesus had come from God (cf. 3<sup>7</sup>); and, further, they believed (for this was not a matter of merely intellectual inference) that God had sent Him. But perhaps we must not lay stress on the distinction between ἔργωσαν and ἐπίστευσαν here; for at 16<sup>28</sup> Jesus has already said to the Eleven, πεπιστεύκατε ὅτι ἐγὼ παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐξήλθον. And at 8<sup>48</sup> οὐδὲ γὰρ εἶ' ἑμαυτοῦ ἐλήλυθα, ἀλλ' ἐκείνους με ἀπέστειλεν is a single sentence, the "sending" by the Father being the only possible alternative to Jesus having come "of Himself." Cf. 11<sup>46</sup> ἵνα πιστεύσωσιν ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας, and for the "sending" of the Son by the Father, see on 3<sup>17</sup>. For the combination of πεπιστεύκατε and ἔργωσαν, see on 6<sup>28</sup>.

σὺ με ἀπέστειλας is found five times in this Prayer of Christ (cf. vv. 12, 21, 23, 25), the phrase being repeated like a kind of solemn refrain (see on 15<sup>41</sup>).

9. Ἐγὼ περὶ πάντων ἑρωτῶ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν καὶ κόσμου ἑρωτῶ, ἀλλὰ περὶ ὧν δέδικασάς μοι, ἵνα σὺ εἶσθαι, 10. καὶ τὰ ἑμὰ πάντα σὺ ἔσθαι καὶ τὰ σὺ ἑμὰ, καὶ δεδωξάσαι ἐν αὐτοῖς. 11. καὶ οὐκ ἐστὶ εἷμα ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ,

The prayer of Jesus for the Eleven—(1) that they may be divinely guarded (vv. 9-16) and (2) that they may be consecrated men (vv. 17-19)

9. Ἐγὼ περὶ πάντων ἑρωτῶ. From v. 9 to v. 19, we have the prayer of Jesus for His chosen disciples, that the Father may guard them from evil, and that He may sanctify them in the truth. He had prayed for Peter that his faith should not fail (Lk. 22<sup>31</sup>), but this prayer does not contemplate any failure of faith among the Eleven, in the days to come when their Master had returned to His glory. For ἑρωτῶν, which is the verb generally used by Jesus of His own prayers, see on 11<sup>22</sup>, 16<sup>30</sup>, and cf. 16<sup>30</sup> 24<sup>14</sup>.

σὺ περὶ τοῦ κόσμου ἑρωτῶ, i.e. "I am not praying for the world now"; the prayers which follow were for those who loved Him, not for those who rejected Him. But this is not to be interpreted as indicating that Jesus never prayed for His enemies (cf. Lk. 23<sup>34</sup> and His own precept Mt. 5<sup>44</sup>). The κόσμος (see on 1<sup>7</sup>) was hostile to Him, but God loved it (3<sup>16</sup>); and even this Prayer of c. 17, which was primarily a prayer for Himself and His own disciples, present and future, does not exclude the thought of the world's acceptance of Him at last (v. 21).

The language of 1 Jn. 5<sup>18</sup>, "there is a sin unto death: I do not say that he should pray (ἑρωτῆσαι) for that," is verbally similar, but the thought there is different, viz. of the propriety or duty of praying for a fellow-Christian whose sin is πρὸς θάνατον.

ἀλλὰ περὶ ὧν δέδικασάς μοι, ἵνα σὺ εἶσθαι, sc. because they are God's. See on v. 6, from which verse this clause is repeated.

Only in this chap. (cf. vv. 15, 20) is ἑρωτῶ used by Jn. absolutely or intransitively, being generally followed by the account of the person who is asked either to give something or to reply. See on [8]<sup>7</sup>.

10. καὶ τὰ ἑμὰ πάντα σὺ ἔσθαι. So He had said before; see on 16<sup>18</sup>.

καὶ τὰ σὺ ἑμὰ. This goes further than the preceding clause. Meyer cites Luther's comment: "This no creature can say in reference to God."

καὶ δεδωξάσαι ἐν αὐτοῖς. The apostles were Jesus' own men, not only because the Father "gave" them to Him, when they were chosen, not only because all that belonged to the καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ εἰσίν, καὶ γὰρ πρὸς σὺ ἔρχομαι. Πάτερ ἄγιε, Father belonged to Him, but for the additional reason that He had been "glorified" in them. He was "glorified" in the physical miracle of the Raising of Lazarus (11<sup>4</sup>), much more in the spiritual miracle of the faith of the Eleven. They exhibited and continued to exhibit (note the perfect tense δεδωξάσαι) the power of the message which He brought. So Paul said of his Thessalonian converts ἵνα εἴτε ἡ δόξα ἡμῶν (1 Thess. 2<sup>20</sup>). Cf. 2 Thess. 1<sup>10</sup> of the future "glorification" of Christ in His saints.

Through misunderstanding of the meaning, for δεδωξάσαι D has ἰδοξασάς με (cf. v. 1).

11. The occasion and ground of the prayer are now more distinctly stated. He is going away from the disciples whom He had trained and guarded; henceforth the relations between Him and them will be different from those of the days of His ministry in the flesh. He had told them about this, but they had hardly understood it (13<sup>36, 38</sup>; cf. 16<sup>10, 16</sup>). They will need a special measure of the Father's care. Swinburne has finely paraphrased some of the thoughts behind vv. 11, 12:

"Who shall keep Thy sheep,
Lord, and lose not one?
Who save one shall keep,
Lest the shepherd sleep?
Who beside the Son?"

οὐκ ἐστὶ εἷμα ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ. Cf. v. 14. His visible ministry in the world of men is over. Meyer cites Calvin's comment: "nunc quasi provincia sua defunctus."

The rec. text has οὐρα, but RB have αὐτοῖ.

αὐτοῖ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ εἰσίν: the disciples are still in the world and have their service and ministry to fulfil.

καὶ γὰρ πρὸς σὺ ἔρχομαι, repeated v. 13; cf. 13<sup>3</sup> 14<sup>18</sup>.

After ἔρχομαι D adds οὐκ ἐστὶ εἷμα ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ καὶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ εἷμα, a Western gloss, which has some support from a c e, and which evidently was added because the scribe stumbled at the words, "I am no longer in the world."

πάτερ. B reads πατήρ (with N), as it also does at v. 21 (with D), at vv. 24, 25 (with A), and (teste Abbott, Diat. 2053) at 12<sup>28</sup>. But, although the nom. with the article sometimes takes the place of the voc. (e.g. Mt. 11<sup>28</sup>, Lk. 10<sup>21</sup>), πατήρ without the article is not easy to defend. At v. 5, D, in like manner, has πατήρ for πάτερ.

πάτερ ἄγιε. The holiness of God is fundamental in the Hebrew religion. This is a characteristically Jewish mode of address in prayer; cf. 2 Macc. 14<sup>36</sup>, ἄγιε πατὴρ ἀγαπητοῦ τήρησον αὐτοὺς, "keep them," as now specially needing care. For τρησις, of keeping persons safe, cf. vv. 12, 15; Acts 16<sup>24</sup> 24<sup>25</sup> 25<sup>2</sup>, and esp. Jude<sup>1</sup>, "keep for Jesus Christ," Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τηρημένους. For τρησις, of keeping or observing commandments, see on 8<sup>21</sup>.

ᾧ δέδωκάς μοι. The reading here and in v. 12 presents difficulty, and the variants are important.

(1) The rec. text has οὗς δέδωκάς μοι, but this is poorly attested (D<sup>3</sup>, 69 f g θ vg. cop.), and οὗς may have come from 18<sup>2</sup>, or from v. 6. It gives an excellent sense; that His disciples were "given" to Jesus by the Father is said five times elsewhere in this chapter (vv. 2, 6, 9, 12, 24; see on 6<sup>27</sup> for other references).

(2) ὁ δέδωκάς μοι is read by D<sup>3</sup> ful. This might have the same meaning as οὗς, and ὁ δέδωκας is the right reading at vv. 2, 24. For this collective use of the neuter sing., see on 6<sup>27</sup>. Field, whose opinion is always weighty, prefers ὁ.

(3) But the harder reading, ᾧ, has such strong attestation that it must be accepted. It is supported by the great bulk of MSS and vs., including  $\kappa$ ABCLW $\theta$ . ᾧ must refer to ὀνόματι, so that "in Thy Name, which Thou hast given me" is the only possible rendering. This is accepted by most modern editors, including Westcott and Abbott (Diat. 2408 f). Burney (Aramaic Origin, etc., p. 103), while recognising that ᾧ is the reading best attested, holds that οὗς must; have been intended by the evangelist, and he traces the variants to the ambiguity of the relative particle  $\tau\eta$ , which might stand for either οὗς, ὁ, or ᾧ. But this does not explain the superior attestation of ᾧ, even if an Aramaic origin for the Fourth Gospel were accepted.

We have seen (on 3<sup>20</sup>) that it is a favourite thought with Jn. that the Father gave all things to the Incarnate Son; but it is only here and at v. 12 that the idea is expressed that the Father has given His "Name" to Christ, and that it is in this "Name" that Jesus guarded His disciples. This does not mean only that the Son was "sent" by the Father (see on 3<sup>17</sup>), and that therefore His ministry was accomplished "in the Name of the Father" (see on 5<sup>26</sup> 10<sup>26</sup>) as His delegate and representative; but that in Christ God was revealed in His providential love and care, His "Name," that is, His essential nature as Father, being exhibited in the Incarnate Son. Thus that "the Name" of the Father was "given" to Christ is yet another way of expressing the essential unity of the Father and the Son (see on 10<sup>26</sup>). This transcends any such idea as that of Num. 6<sup>27</sup>, where the "Name" of Yahweh is "put" upon Israel by the priestly blessing; or of Ex. 23<sup>21</sup>, where it is said of the guardian angel of the people, "My Name is in him"; or of Jer. 23<sup>5</sup>, where the "Name" of the Messianic King is "Yahweh our Righteousness." The nearest parallel is Phil. 2<sup>2</sup>, ἀγαπήσατο αὐτὸν τὸ ὄνομα τὸ ὑπὲρ πάντων ὀνομα (cf. Rev. 10<sup>19</sup>); but in no N.T. passage except Jn. 17<sup>11</sup>.<sup>12</sup> is found the conception of the Father giving His "Name" in the sense of His revealed character as Fatherly Providence, to Christ. See on v. 22 for the δέξα which the Father had given to the Son.

This interpretation (demanded by the reading, ᾧ δέδωκάς), viz. that the Father gave His "Name" to the Son, is in consonance with the thanksgiving quoted above from the Didache, according to which the Father causes His "Name" to tabernacle in the hearts of believers, i.e. His Fatherly protection rests upon them.

ᾧσιν is read by  $\kappa$ LNW, but the true reading is δέδωκας (see on v. 4), the perfect indicating not merely one act of giving at a definite moment in time, but a continuous "giving" of the Father to the Son, throughout His earthly ministry.

ἵνα ᾧσιν ἐν καθέ τῆς ἡμέρας, sc. that the apostles might be united in will and purpose and spiritual fellowship even as the Father and the Son are united (see on 10<sup>26</sup>). They had been given a "new" commandment, enjoining all disciples

ἡμεῖς. 12. ὅτε ἤμαρ μετ' αὐτῶν, ἐγὼ ἐτήρουν αὐτοὺς ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι σου ᾧ δεδικασί μοι, καὶ ἐφύλαξα, καὶ οὐδέ τις ἐξ αὐτῶν ἀπώλετο εἰ μὴ to love one another (see on 13<sup>36</sup>), and the Fatherly protection of God is now invoked for them, that they may be kept of one mind in their sacred fellowship. At v. 21 the thought is no longer of the apostles only, but of all future generations of Christian disciples, for whom again the prayer is ἐν τῶντων ἐ ζωον.

The petition ἵνα ζωον ἐν, as applied to the apostles, was fulfilled in their case, for otherwise the earliest apostolic preaching could not have achieved its wonderful success; but it was not fulfilled in such fashion that no differences of opinion as to method were observed among the apostolic body, or that they were always right, as compared, e.g., with Paul (cf. Acts 11<sup>4</sup>, Gal. 2<sup>11</sup>, etc.). See further on v. 21.

It is probably due to its difficulty that the whole clause, ᾧ δεδικασί μοι, ἵνα ζωον ἐν καθὼς ἡμεῖς, is omitted in the O.L. texts a b c e f g h and by the Coptic Q.

12. After ὅτε ἤμαρ μετ' αὐτῶν, the rec. with AC<sup>2</sup>ΠΔΘ inserts the explanatory gloss ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι, but om. κBC<sup>2</sup>DLW.

ἐγὼ ἐτήρουν αὐτοὺς κτλ., "I (ἐγὼ being emphatic) used to keep them," ἐτήρουν marking the continual training of disciples that was so great a feature of the ministry of Jesus.

ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι σου ᾧ δεδικασί μοι, repeated from v. 11 (where see note) in the Johannine manner. It is "in the Name," that is, in the sure protection of the Father's providence and love, that Jesus guarded (and guards) His disciples.

καὶ ἐφύλαξα κτλ., "and I guarded them (sc. while I was with them in the flesh), and none perished." For φύλασσω, cf. 2 Thess. 3<sup>3</sup>, Jude<sup>24</sup>; and see Wisd. 10<sup>8</sup>, where τηραῖν and φυλάσσειν are both used of the Divine guardianship of Abraham.

The rec. text, as in v. 11, has οὐς for ᾧ, and omits καὶ before ἐφύλαξα, making the latter govern οὐς directly; κBC<sup>2</sup>LW ins. καὶ.

καὶ οὐδέ τις ἐξ αὐτῶν (cf. for constr. 7<sup>12</sup>) ἀπώλετο κτλ., "and not one of them perished, except the son of perdition." The falling away of Judas has already been described (13<sup>27</sup>); ἀπώλεια is used of the final "perishing," as at 3<sup>18</sup> (where see note) 10<sup>28</sup>. Jesus is represented as speaking of the fate of Judas as if it were already in the past (see 6<sup>24, 29</sup>). Cf. 6<sup>29</sup> 10<sup>28</sup>, where his exceptional case is not in view; and see note on 18<sup>9</sup>, where is quoted this saying of Jesus that He lost none of those whom the Father had "given" to Him. It has often been discussed by theologians whether Judas had really been pre-

destined to destruction, or whether his fall from faithfulness was of his free choice. Such questions are foreign to the philosophy of the first century. For Jn., all that happened to Judas was, indeed, predestined, but that this involves any difficulty as to his guilt does not suggest itself to the evangelist.

εἰ μὴ ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας. The play on words ἀπώλετο . . . ἀπωλείας can hardly be reproduced in English. The constr. υἱὸς τινος (see on 12<sup>36</sup>) is not exclusively Hebraic, but it is frequent in Eastern literature. Antichrist is called ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας (2 Thess. 2<sup>3</sup>), the same expression being applied to those who perished in the Flood (Jubiles, x. 3), and to Satan (Evang. Nicodem., xx.). It signifies one whose end will be perdition, not necessarily that this is inevitable but that it will be so because of his own acts. He is one of whom it may be said, "good were it for him if he had not been born" (Mk. 14<sup>21</sup>). Cf. υἱὸς γένους (Mt. 23<sup>35</sup>), υἱὸς θανάτου (2 Sam. 12<sup>9</sup>), and τέκνον ἀπωλείας (Isa. 57<sup>9</sup>). Judas was "the son of loss," although Jesus came to save the lost. For him Jesus did not pray (cf. 1 Jn. 5<sup>16</sup>).

ἀπώλεια is generally used in the N.T. for the final "loss" of a man (it does not occur again in Jn.); but at Mk. 14<sup>8</sup> it is the word for the "waste" of the ointment, of which (as Jn. tells, 12<sup>9</sup>) it was Judas that complained. It has been suggested that possibly this incident was in mind when Judas was called ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, "the son of loss," the man who really wasted what was precious.<sup>1</sup> But the ordinary interpretation is simpler and more probable.

ἵνα ἡ γραφή πληρωθῇ. It is not quite certain whether this is a comment of Jn. on the words of Jesus which he has just narrated, or whether he means to place it in the mouth of Jesus Himself.<sup>2</sup> It is to be observed that in 18<sup>9</sup>, where the words, "of those whom Thou hast given me, I lost not one," are cited from the present passage, there is no appeal to the O.T., but Jn. applies ἵνα πληρωθῇ ὁ λόγος κτλ. to the saying of Jesus as carrying with it the certainty of its fulfilment. Probably here ἵνα ἡ γραφή κτλ. is a reflective gloss or comment added by the evangelist or an early editor.

ἐρχομαι, καὶ ταῦτα λαλῶ ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ ἵνα ἔχωσιν τὴν χαρὰν τὴν ἔμην πεπληρωμένην ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. 14. Ἐγὼ δὲ δίδακα αὐτοὺς τὸν λόγον σου, καὶ ὁ κόσμος τήμνησεν αὐτούς, ὅτι οὐκ εἶδον ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἶμι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. 15. οὐκ ἔρωσὶ ἵνα ἄρῃς αὐτούς his replacement by Matthias, but Ps. 41<sup>b</sup> is more in place here.

18. νῦν δὲ πρὸς σὲ ἔρχομαι, repeated from v. 11; cf. 14<sup>12</sup> καὶ ταῦτα λαλῶ, "And I say these things," viz. "I say them aloud," for λαλῶ implies this.

ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, sc. before my departure. ἵνα ἔχωσιν κτλ. The prayer was spoken aloud, so that the apostles might overhear His intercessions for them, and hearing might rejoice. See on 11<sup>40</sup>, where Jesus is represented, in the rec. text, as having said explicitly that some words of His thanksgiving were uttered διὰ τὸν ὄχλον.

τὴν χαρὰν τὴν ἔμην πεπληρωμένην ἐν ἑαυτοῖς. This is a phrase several times repeated in Jn.; see on 15<sup>11</sup> 16<sup>24</sup>. To hear Jesus rejoice when speaking in prayer of the faithfulness of His chosen friends would awaken in them feelings of joy, which would be His joy "fulfilled in them."

For ἑαυτοῖς (NABNW), the rec. has αὐτοῖς (probably from the next line).

14. ἐγὼ δὲ δίδακα αὐτοὺς τὸν λόγον σου, repeated from v. 8, τὸν λόγον being substituted for τὰ ῥήματα (see on 5<sup>20</sup>), the perfect δίδακα in both cases implying that Jesus had continued to give to the disciples the revelation of the Father, and was still giving it.

καὶ ὁ κόσμος ἔμνησεν αὐτούς. This was the badge of a disciple (15<sup>14</sup> 19, where the verb is in the present tense, μνησέ, which D substitutes here for the harder ἔμνησεν). We should expect the perf. μνησικην as in 15<sup>20</sup>, if not μνησι; this is one of the cases in which Jn. uses the aorist as if it were a perfect (cf. 12<sup>30</sup> 13<sup>34</sup> 15<sup>18</sup>; and see Abbott, Diat. 2441).

ὅτι οὐκ εἶδον ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. A fine and eloquent exposition of the thought that Christian disciples generally, and not the apostles only, are in the world but not of the world is given in the second-century Ep. to Diognetus (vl. 3), with a probable allusion to vv. 11, 14. See on 3<sup>18</sup>.

καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἶμι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. So He had said at 8<sup>20</sup>, where see note.

15. οὐκ ἔρωσὶ ἵνα ἄρῃς αὐτούς κτλ. The question as to how far Christians were to separate themselves from the company of non-Christians, from the Jewish and heathen world, was urgent and difficult in the apostolic age. In 1 Cor. 5<sup>10</sup> Paul explains, in terms similar to those of this passage, that ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, ἀλλ' ἵνα τηρήσῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ. 16. ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου οὐκ εἶδον καθὼς ἐγὼ οὐκ εἶμι ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου. 17. ἀγίασόν for a complete dissociation from heathen of evil lives, a Christian disciple would have to "go out of the world." On the other hand, he is equally explicit in his statement (Gal. 1<sup>9</sup>) that the purpose of the sacrifice of Christ was that He might deliver us from the present evil age (αἰῶνος). These two principles are tersely enunciated in the present verse. The apostles would have to live in the world, for that was to be the theatre of their evangelical ministry; but they would need the special grace of God to keep them from its evil influences.

ἀλλ' ἵνα τηρήσῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ. This is the first petition of Jesus for the Eleven, viz. for their protection and deliverance. τηρῶν ἐκ is found again in N.T. only at Rev. 3<sup>10</sup>, a passage very similar to the present: ὅτι ἐτήρησας τὸν λόγον (cf. v. 6, τὸν λόγον σου τητήρησας) . . . ἀγαγὼ σε τηρήσω ἐκ τῆς ἄρας τοῦ πειρασμοῦ (cf. v. 12, τηρήσων αὐτούς). A nearer parallel is in 1 Jn. 5<sup>18</sup>, where it is said of a child of God, that Christ τηρεῖ αὐτόν, καὶ ὁ πονηρὸς οὐκ ἄντεται αὐτόν.

ὁ πονηρὸς appears again 1 Jn. 2<sup>14</sup> 5<sup>19</sup> (ὁ κόσμος ὅλος ἐν τῷ πονηρῷ κείται). The agency of the personal devil, Satan, is not doubted by Jn.; cf. 13<sup>27</sup>, and the references to ὁ ἄρχων τοῦ κόσμου τούτου (12<sup>31</sup> 13<sup>30</sup> 16<sup>11</sup>).

In the words ἵνα τηρήσῃς αὐτοὺς ἐκ τοῦ πονηροῦ, we probably have an echo of the clause in the Lord's Prayer, ῥῆσαι ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ (Mt. 6<sup>13</sup>; see above on v. 1).<sup>1</sup> Some commentators have endeavoured to distinguish the meaning of ἀπὸ from that of ἐκ in constructions like this (see on 4<sup>14</sup>), but this is over subtle. Cf. the parallelism in Ps. 140<sup>1</sup>:

ἀπὸ ἀνηρῶν δίκαιον ῥῆσαι με.

16. This verse is repeated from v. 14, οὐκ εἶμι here preceding ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου, according to NAB<sup>2</sup>DLW.

17. Here is the second petition for the Eleven (cf. v. 15), viz. for their consecration. ἀγιάζων (see on 10<sup>39</sup>) connotes not so much the selection of a man for an important work as the equipping and fitting him for its due discharge. It is applied to the divine separation of Jeremiah for the work of a prophet (Jer. 1<sup>9</sup>); and also to Aaron and his sons for their priestly office, Ex. 28<sup>41</sup>, where the Divine command to Moses is ἀγιάσωσιν αὐτούς, ἵνα ἁγιασῶσιν μου. (See Additional Note on 18<sup>14</sup>.)

ἀγιάζων is not equivalent to καθαρίζειν; one who is not αὐτοὺς ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ· ὁ λόγος ὁ οὗς ἀληθεὶς ἔστιν. 18. καθὼς ἐμὲ ἡγιασμένους is not necessarily impræ. Of the apostles it had already been said ἦδη ἡμεῖς καθαρὸί ἐσμεν, and the effective instrument of their purification was the λόγος which Jesus had spoken to them (17<sup>5</sup>), as the Divine λόγος is said here also to be the medium of their consecration. But the two ideas of ἡγιασμός and καθαρισμός are not identical. Just because the Eleven were already, in a sense, pure, being not "of the world" even as their Master was not "of the world" (v. 16), is their consecration for their future task a fitting boon to be asked in prayer of God who is Himself ἅγιος (v. 11). Cf. Paul's prayer for his Thessalonian converts that God would consecrate them wholly (ἀγιασὺν ἡμᾶς ὁλοκληρῶς, 1 Thess. 5<sup>23</sup>).

ἐν τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. Truth would be the medium of their consecration, as (although this is not expressed in the present passage) the "Spirit of Truth" would be the Agent (cf. 16<sup>13</sup>). See also 8<sup>26</sup>. So Paul said of his Thessalonian converts that God had chosen them εἰς σωτηρίαν ἐν ἡγιασμῷ πνεύματος καὶ πίστει ἀληθείας (2 Thess. 2<sup>13</sup>). Westcott makes the pregnant comment that "the end of the Truth is not wisdom . . . but holiness."

After ἀληθείᾳ the rec. text adds σοι, but om. κ*ABC*DLWΘ. What is meant by ἀληθείᾳ is explained in the next clause.

ὁ λόγος ὁ οὗς ἀληθεὶς ἔστιν. It is not always noticed that this is a quotation from the LXX of Ps. 119<sup>248</sup>, ὁ λόγος σου ἀλήθεια (cf. 2 Sam. 7<sup>26</sup>). Jesus had already said of the disciples, τὸν λόγον σου τηροῦσαν (v. 6, where see note); and thus they were in the way of consecration, which is in truth (cf. 14<sup>6</sup>). Such consecration is not an isolated event in the life-history of a disciple, but is a continuous process (cf. of ἀγιαζόμενοι, Heb. 2<sup>14</sup>).

Westcott quotes an interesting parallel from a Jewish prayer for the new year: "Purify our hearts to serve Thee in truth. Thou, O God, art Truth, and Thy word is truth, and standeth for ever."

18. καθὼς ἐμὲ ἡγιασμένους. For this thought, five times expressed in this chapter, cf. v. 8 and see on 3<sup>17</sup>.

That the relation between Jesus and His disciples is comparable with that between the Son and the Father is several times stated in the discourses of Jesus as reported by Jn. As is the love of the Father to the Son, so is the love of Jesus for His disciples (17<sup>5</sup>). The glory which the Father gave to the Son was given by Jesus to His disciples (17<sup>26</sup>). As the Son lives by the Father (διὰ τὸν πατέρα), so His disciples live by Jesus (ὡς ἐμὲ, 6<sup>27</sup>). As the Father knows the Son, and the Son the ἀπίστευται εἰς τὸν κόσμον, καθὼς ἀπίστευται αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν κόσμον" 19. καὶ ὡς ἐγὼ αὐτοὺς ἐγὼ ἀγιαζῶ ἑμαυτὸν, ἵνα ᾖσιν καὶ αὐτοὶ ἡγιασμένοι ἐν ἀληθείᾳ.

Father, so does Jesus know His sheep, and they know Him (10<sup>14, 15</sup>). As the Son is "in" the Father, so are His disciples "in" Jesus (14<sup>20</sup>). These are amazing teachings, but they are deep-rooted in the Fourth Gospel. And, corresponding to them, we have the saying of this verse that as the Father sent the Son into the world, so Jesus sent His apostles into the world.

The comparison καθὼς . . . καὶ in such passages can never be exact or definite (see on 6<sup>7</sup>), but at the same time it points in each case to something more than a superficial analogy.

καθὼς ἀπίστευται αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν κόσμον. The words carry a reference not only to the original choice of the Twelve, ἐν ἀπιστοῦντων αὐτοὺς κηρύσσειν (Mk. 3<sup>14</sup>; cf. Lk. 9<sup>7</sup>), but to their future mission, the aorist being used because of the certainty of this predetermined future in store for them. The actual commission is recorded at 20<sup>21, 22</sup>: καθὼς ἀπίστευται με ὁ πατήρ, καθὼς πέμψω ἡμᾶς . . . λάβετε πνεῦμα ἁγίου. (No distinction can be drawn between ἀπιστοῦντα and πέμψω in such passages; see on 3<sup>17</sup>.) Cf. also 4<sup>26</sup>.

19. καὶ ὡς ἐγὼ αὐτοὺς ἐγὼ ἀγιαζῶ ἑμαυτὸν. ἐγὼ is om. by κW, but ins. BCDLNΘ rightly; it is here emphatic.

ὡς ἐγὼ is a favourite prep. with Jn., who always uses it as meaning "in behalf of." See on 1<sup>16</sup>, and cf. 6<sup>11</sup>.

ἐγὼ ἀγιαζῶ ἑμαυτὸν. At 10<sup>28</sup> He had spoken of Himself as One ἐν ὃ πατήρ ἡγίασεν. But there is no inconsistency. The Father "consecrated" Jesus for His mission to the world; and now that His mission is about to be consummated in death, Jesus "consecrates" Himself, as He enters upon the Passion. So He had said before of His life, "I lay it down of myself" (10<sup>28</sup>). In His death He was both Priest and Victim.

The two petitions for the disciples were for their deliverance from the Evil One (v. 15), and for their consecration (v. 17). These are the two purposes of the Atonement, as set out Tit. 2<sup>14</sup>, "Who gave Himself for us, in order that He might (1) redeem us from all iniquity, and (2) purify to Himself a peculiar people zealous of good works." So here the "consecration" of Himself to the Cross by Jesus was not only that (ὡς) His chosen apostles might in their turn be guarded and consecrated, but that the same consecration might be the portion of all future disciples (v. 20). There is a special emphasis on ἐγὼ. No one else could say, "I consecrate myself." It is only through His consecration that His disciples can be consecrated; and so in Heb. 10<sup>18</sup> we find the confession, "We have been consecrated through the offering of the Body of Jesus Christ." In a sense, He is the consecrator of all such: "He that consecrates and they that are being consecrated are all of one" (ἐξ ἑνός, Heb. 2<sup>13</sup>), a thoroughly Johannine statement, although it does not appear in Jn.

ἵνα ὦσιν καὶ αὐτοὶ ἡγιασμένοι ἐν ἀληθείᾳ. Cf. v. 17 for truth, the Divine λόγος, the full revelation of the Father, as the medium of consecration to the Christian life.

The prayer of Jesus for all future disciples (vv. 20-26)

20. We now reach the third division of the Prayer of Jesus, which passes from the thought of the apostles to the thought of all those who should reach discipleship through their ministry.

ἀλλὰ καὶ περὶ τῶν πιστευόντων κτλ. πιστεύοντων is a proleptic or anticipatory present participle, with the force of a future, qui credituri sunt (Vulg.). Some minuscules, which the rec. text follows, through misunderstanding, have adopted πιστευόντων.

διὰ τοῦ λόγου αὐτῶν. The "word" of the evangelical preachers was the message of God in Christ which they brought, such preaching being an essential preliminary to faith. Cf. Rom. 10<sup>14</sup>.

εἰς ἐμὲ. For πιστεύω εἰς . . ., see on 1<sup>28</sup>.

21. As the Church grew, so would the risk of disunion among its members be intensified. Jesus had already prayed that His apostles might be united in will and purpose even as the Father and the Son are united (v. 11, ἵνα ὦσιν ἐν καθῶς ἡμεῖς). He now repeats this petition for all future disciples, ἵνα πάντες ἐν ὄψει, stating more fully what the nature of this ideal unity was to be.

There is no suggestion of a unity of organisation, such as that which appears in Paul's conception of the Church as one body with many members, each performing its appropriate function (Rom. 12<sup>4</sup>, 1 Cor. 12<sup>12</sup>). No biological analogy is offered here to assist us in comprehending the sense in which Christians are intended to be one. Jesus had said already that His sheep would ultimately be one Flock, even as they had One Shepherd (10<sup>16</sup>). But the mystical phrases used in this passage transcend even that thought. For He prays that the unity of His disciples may be realised in the spiritual life, after the pattern of that highest form of unity, in which the Father is

Πάτερ, ἐν ἐμοὶ κἀγὼ ἐν σοί, ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἡμῖν ὦσιν, ἵνα ὁ κόσμος πιστεύῃ ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας. 22. κἀγὼ τὴν δόξαν ἣν δέδωκας μοι

"in" the Son and the Son "in" the Father. This unity, however, as appertaining to Christian discipleship, is not invisible; it is to be such as will convince the world of the Divine mission of the common Master of Christians. And He has already explained that the badge of this unity is love, the love of Christian for Christian which all men may see (13<sup>35</sup>).

καθὼς σὺ, Πάτερ, ἐν ἐμοὶ (cf. 14<sup>20, 26</sup>) κἀγὼ ἐν σοί (cf. 14<sup>21</sup>). That men might come to acknowledge this central assertion of His claim had been the immediate object of His mission (see on 10<sup>26</sup>).

Jn. always expresses the voc. by πάτερ. In this passage πατήρ is read by EDW, and by AB at vv. 24, 25. See Abbott, Diát. 2052, and cf. note on 8<sup>10</sup>.

ἵνα καὶ αὐτοὶ ἐν ἡμῖν ὦσιν. Before ὦσιν the rec. text inserts ἐν, with  $\mu^a c^p l n o$ , but BC\*DW a b c e om. ἐν. It has probably come in from the earlier clause ἵνα πάντες ἐν ὄψει.

The ideal is that all Christians may be ἐν ἡμῖν. "Abide in me" was the counsel of 15<sup>4</sup> (cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>14, 5, 6</sup>), but rightly obeyed this implies abiding in God; the use of the plural ἡμῖν here, recalling the plural verbs at 14<sup>20</sup>. Cf. 1 Jn. 1<sup>7</sup>, ἡ κοινωνία ἣ ἡμετέρα μετὰ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ μετὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. To be "in Christ" is to be "in God." Those who are thus "in God" share the Divine life in common, and are therefore one, ἐν καθῶς ἡμεῖς (v. 11); it being always remembered that καθῶς in such passages is only suggestive of a partial, not a complete, analogy (see on v. 18 above, and cf. 6<sup>27</sup>).

Ignatius has some sentences reminiscent of these thoughts, where he approves the Ephesian Christians for being closely joined with the bishop: "as the Church is with Jesus Christ, and as Jesus Christ is with the Father, that all things may be harmonious in unity (ἵνα πάντα ἐν ἑνότητι συμφωνῶν ἢ, Éph. 5).

ἵνα ὁ κόσμος πιστεύῃ ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας. The consequence of the spiritual unity of Christians, as indicated by their common love for each other, is that the world will be at last convinced (cf. 16<sup>9</sup>) that the mission of Jesus was divine, and that He is "the Saviour of the world" (4<sup>49</sup>). For such forecasts of universal homage, cf. Rev. 3<sup>9</sup> and 1 Cor. 15<sup>28</sup>. See v. 23 below.

πιστεύῃ. So  $\mu^a b c^p w$ , but the rec., with  $\mu^a d l n o$ ,

has the inferior reading παινεῖσθαι. παινεῖσθαι indicates the gradual growth of faith, "may come to believe."

22. καὶ ἐγὼ τὴν δόξαν κτλ. "And I, even I, have given to them the glory which Thou hast given to me." Quanta maiestas Christianorum! is Bengel's penetrating comment. But what is this δόξα? It is not the glory of the Eternal Word, spoken of in v. 24. That a faithful disciple may hope to see, but not to share (although 1 Pet. 5<sup>1</sup> seems to claim more than is suggested in Jn.). It is rather the glory of the Incarnate Word (see on 1<sup>14</sup>), which Jesus exhibited in His earthly ministry (2<sup>11</sup>), the manifestation of the Divine Nature in man. His disciples were the branches of which He was the Vine (15<sup>5</sup>), or, as it is expressed in 2 Pet. 1<sup>4</sup>, they had become θεῖαι κοινωνοὶ φύσεως, "partakers of the Divine Nature." See on 8<sup>54</sup> for the "glorification" of the Son by the Father; and for the "glorification" of believers, cf. Rom. 8<sup>30</sup>.

For δίδωκα (δΒCLΛΔ), ADNW have εἰδωκα; and for δίδωκα (BCDLWΓΔ), KAN have εἰδωκα. See on v. 4 for similar variants.

ἵνα ὡσαν ἐν καθότι ἡμεῖς ἐν. The rec. (Θ) adds ἵσμεν, but om. BC<sup>2</sup>DLW. The consequence of the imparting of His Incarnate δόξα to His disciples by Jesus would be that, sharing this in common with Him and with each other, they would be spiritually united, and thus be οἷα, even as the Father and the Son are οἷα.

23. ἔγω ἐν αὐτοῖς καὶ σὺ ἐν ἐμοί, the nature of the unity of believers being once again illustrated by that highest pattern of Unity, the Unity of the Godhead. "I in them"; so He had spoken before (14<sup>20</sup>), and the idea of Christ being "in" the believer is as familiar a thought to Paul as it is to Jn.; cf. Rom. 8<sup>10</sup>, 2 Cor. 13<sup>5</sup>, Gal. 2<sup>20</sup> 4<sup>16</sup>.

ἵνα ὡσαν τετελειωμένοι εἰς ἐν. The imparting of His δόξα to the disciples of Jesus would not only tend to unite them, but it would at last completely unite them, "that they may be perfected (cf. for τελειοῦσθαι used thus, 1 Jn. 3<sup>3</sup> 4<sup>11</sup> 11. 12; cf. Phil. 3<sup>12</sup>) into one." With rec. εἰς ἐν, cf. συναγάγῃ εἰς ἐν (12<sup>28</sup>).

ἵνα γινώσκῃ ὁ κόσμος ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας. Here is the final consequence of the impartation of the "glory" of Jesus to His disciples, viz. that the world might come to be assured of His Divine mission; the phrase being repeated from v. 21, γινώσκῃ being substituted for πιστεύῃ. Cf. the concluding words of the Farewell Discourse, ἵνα γινῶ ὁ κόσμος . . . (14<sup>22</sup>). This is Jesus' ideal of the world's future.

ἀπέστειλας καὶ ἠγάπησας αὐτοῦς καθὼς ἐμὲ ἠγάπησας. 24. Πάτερ, ὃ δίδωκάς μοι, θέλω ἵνα ἵππου εἶμαι ἐγὼ κἀκεῖνοι ὡσαν μετ' ἐμοῦ, ἵνα θεωρῶσιν τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἐμὴν, ἣν δίδωκάς μοι ἐνι ἠγάπησάς με πρὸ καὶ ἠγάπησας αὐτοῦς καθὼς κτλ. For thus will the world be led to the knowledge that God loved it (αὐτοῖς) with the same kind of love as that with which He loved His Son (5<sup>20</sup>); and that therefore He had sent His Son. These are the thoughts of the "comfortable word" of 3<sup>18</sup>, which are here expressed as a prayer.

For ἠγάπησας there is a Western reading, ἠγάπησα (D a δ, etc.), which is a mistaken correction (introduced from 15<sup>7</sup>), the connexion of the passage with 3<sup>18</sup> having been missed.

24. There follows the thought of those who have been "perfected into one" on earth, sharing the fellowship of their common Lord in heaven, as they behold His eternal glory.

ὃ δίδωκάς μοι. δ is for οὗς (cf. v. 12), the neuter singular suggesting their unity, as at 6<sup>27</sup>, 3<sup>27</sup>, where see note.

θέλω. He does not now say ἠρωτῶ (v. 20 and see on 11<sup>22</sup>), but θέλω, "I wish." He has said repeatedly that He did not come to do His own will (θέλω), but the will of the Father (4<sup>24</sup> 5<sup>30</sup> 6<sup>38-40</sup>); and in the Agony at Gethsemane He distinguishes His human will from the Father's (οὐ τὴν ἐγὼ θέλω, ἀλλὰ τὴν σὺ, Mk. 14<sup>36</sup>). But at this moment of spiritual exaltation, the climax of His consecration of Himself to death, He realises the perfect coincidence of His will with the Father's, and so can say θέλω (cf. ὁ νόσος οὗς θέλει ζωοῦσθαι, 5<sup>21</sup>). The use of θέλω at 21<sup>28</sup> is different, for there it is the θέλω of authority which the master may address to a disciple.

ἵνα θεωρῶσιν τὴν δόξαν τὴν ἐμὴν. This is not the glory of the Incarnate Christ. That they had been permitted to see with the eyes of the body, ἰδωσάμεθα τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ (see on 1<sup>14</sup>). θεωρεῖν is used here of spiritual perception (cf. 15<sup>26</sup>), and see on 2<sup>20</sup>. The δόξα, of which the vision is to be the portion of the saints, is the glory of the Eternal Logos, which He had with the Father "before the world was" (v. 3). They are to see Him "as He is" (1 Jn. 3<sup>2</sup>).

ἣν δίδωκάς μοι. The rec. has εἰδωκάς with BNFΔΘ, but KACDLW have δίδωκάς (see on v. 4), which is accepted by Westcott-Hort against the testimony of B.

Against the interpretation of δόξα here as referring to the καταβολῆς κόσμου. 25. Πάντε δίκαια, καὶ ὁ κόσμος σε οὐκ ἔγνω, ἐγὼ δὲ σε ἔγνω, καὶ οὗτοι ἔγνωσαν ὅτι σὺ με ἀπέστειλας· 26. καὶ glory of the Eternal Word, several exegeses have urged that a "giving" of glory by the Father to the Son before the Incarnation is not explicitly mentioned elsewhere in the N.T. But there is no other passage which refers to the eternal relationships inherent in Deity with the same boldness and confidence of vision that appear in this Last Prayer of Christ. These are unique utterances (cf. also v. 3); and a clear distinction seems to be indicated between the δόξα of v. 22 which had been given to the disciples, and the δόξα of v. 24 which they might hope to contemplate hereafter, but which was given only to Christ.

ὅτι ἀγάπησός με πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. This, in fact, is the δόξα of the Eternal Word. Eternal Love is Eternal Glory; even as Eternal Love and Eternal Glory may be regarded as respectively the subjective and objective aspects of Eternal Life.

πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου. καταβολή occurs only once in the LXX (2 Macc. 2<sup>30</sup>, of the foundation of a house), and eleven times in the N.T., in nine of which it is followed by κόσμου (ἀπὸ κατ. κόσμ., Mt. 25<sup>31</sup>, Lk. 11<sup>30</sup>, Heb. 4<sup>3</sup> 5<sup>30</sup>, Rev. 13<sup>8</sup> 17<sup>8</sup>). We find πρὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου, as here, at Eph. 1<sup>4</sup>, 1 Pet. 1<sup>20</sup>. The phrase also occurs in the Assumption of Moses, a first-century work, in a passage of which the Greek has been preserved (l. 13, 14, ed. Charles). The sentence "in that Thou hast loved me before the foundation of the world," suggests the idea of predestination, so frequently appearing in Jn. (see on 2<sup>4</sup>).

καὶ, before ὁ κόσμος, "is intended to keep the reader in suspense, aware that the meaning is incomplete" (Abbott, Diat. 2164). It is omitted by D.

ὁ κόσμος σε οὐκ ἔγνω. See on 8<sup>20</sup>.

ἐγὼ δὲ σε ἔγνω. This is a parenthetical sentence, the real antithesis to "the world knew Thee not" being "but these knew," which follows. Jesus, as Incarnate, habitually claims a unique knowledge of God (7<sup>26</sup> 8<sup>26</sup> 10<sup>15</sup>).

καὶ οὗτοι ἔγνωσαν κτλ. "But these knew that Thou didst ἐγνώρισα αὐτοῖς τὸ ὄνομα σου καὶ γνώρισα, ἵνα ἡ ἀγάπη ἣν ἀγάπησός με ἐν αὐτοῖς ᾗ ἐκγὼ ἐν ἀνάοις.

send me," this being the important thing to be assured of, viz. that God had sent Jesus, this refrain occurring for the last time (see on v. 9). The thought of Jesus returns from the Church of the future to the disciples in whose company He offered a last prayer. Its final clauses have to do with them. οὗτοι, these, knew this much at least, that the mission of Jesus was divine.

The contrast with the failure of "the world" to recognise Him is brought up by καὶ, used here adversatively, as often in Jn. (see on 3<sup>11</sup>): "but these knew."

25. καὶ ἐγνώρισα αὐτοῖς τὸ ὄνομα σου, repeated in slightly different form from v. 6, where see note. For γνώριζαι, cf. 15<sup>28</sup>.

καὶ γνώρισα, sc. in the Church of the future, by the Spirit which is to come (16<sup>13</sup> 20).

ἵνα ἡ ἀγάπη ἣν ἀγάπησός με ἐν αὐτοῖς ᾗ. This is not a prayer that God may love Christian disciples with the same kind of love as that with which He loved Christ. Already, at v. 23, we have seen that even "the world"—in its alienation and hostility—was thus loved by God, although the world did not recognise it. But the prayer is that the love of God for all Christian disciples, similar as it is to the love of God for Christ, may be "in them," that is, their sense of it may become vivid and efficacious; so that they may recognise, in Paul's words, "that the love of God has been shed abroad in their hearts, through the Holy Spirit" (Rom. 5<sup>5</sup>).

For ἣν after ἀγάπη D substitutes the more usual ᾗ, qua; but there is an exact parallel to the true reading at Eph. 3<sup>2</sup>: διὰ τὴν πολλὴν ἀγάπην αὐτοῦ ἣν ἀγάπησεν ἡμᾶς (cf. 7<sup>28</sup> for a similar constr.).

ἐκγὼ ἐν ἀνάοις. "I in them." This has already been proclaimed as the ideal condition of the disciples of Christ (v. 23, where see note). Here the thought is, as in the preceding clause, of a growing sense of Christ's presence in the believer's heart. It is this for which the last petition is offered, "ut cor ipsorum theatrum sit et palestra huius amoris" (Bengel). Ἐγὼ ἐν ἐπίσιν is the last aspiration of Jesus for His own, before He goes forth to meet death.

The arrest of Jesus in the garden (XVIII. 1-11)

XVIII. 1. ταῦτα εἰπὼν. As soon as the Prayer of Consecration was ended (see Introd., p. xx), Jesus and His disciples

XVIII. 1. Ταῦτα εἰπὼν Ἰησοῦς ἐξῆλθεν ἀπὸ τοῦ μαθηταῖς ἀπὸ πύργου τοῦ χειμάρρου τοῦ Κεδρὼν, ὅπου ἦν κήπος, εἰς ἓν left the upper room, and went out, ἐξῆλθεν perhaps implying (as was in fact the case) that they went outside the city.

ἀπὸ τοῦ μαθηταῖς αὐτοῦ, sc. with the faithful Eleven (see on 2<sup>o</sup>). This is one of the very rare occurrences of ἀπὸ in Jn. (see on 12<sup>o</sup>), and it is exchanged for μετὰ within a couple of lines, μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ (v. 2).

πύργου τοῦ χειμάρρου τοῦ Κεδρὼν. The Kedron gorge between Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives rarely has any water in it. It is called χειμάρρος by Josephus as well as in the LXX (Neh. 2<sup>12</sup>, x Macc. 12<sup>27</sup>), but it is nearly always dry, except after very heavy rain.<sup>1</sup> The modern name is Wady Sitti Maryam.

The majority of texts (κ<sup>o</sup>BCLNΘ) give τῶν κέδρων; κ<sup>o</sup>DW have τοῦ κέδρου; and Δα c f g γ give τοῦ κέδρου. This last, despite the weakness of the MS. support, we take to be the true reading (as the Syriac vss. suggest), and that from which both the others have originated, owing to misunderstanding on the part of scribes. For κέδρου is the transliteration of the Hebrew קֶדְרוֹן, dārā, the name as applied to a torrent being perhaps equivalent to our Blackwater. Josephus treats it as a declinable noun in the nom. case. Twice in the LXX (2 Sam. 15<sup>20</sup>, 1 Kings 15<sup>23</sup>) we find τῶν κέδρων after χειμάρρος, the word being taken as a gen. pl., and the rendering of the phrase being "the ravine (or torrent) of the cedar trees."<sup>2</sup> It is said that at the time cedars grew on the Mount of Olives, and some may have been as low as the wady at its base. But it is not likely that the ravine was called Kidron on that account. A Greek scribe, finding τοῦ κέδρου in his exemplar, would naturally take κέδρου as the gen. pl. of κέδρος, and would correct it either to τοῦ κέδρου or to τῶν κέδρων.<sup>3</sup>

The reading has been much discussed, because assuming τῶν κέδρων to have been the original reading, it has been argued that the evangelist was but ill acquainted with Hebrew names, if he supposed that Kidron meant "of the cedars." But, as the LXX shows in the passages cited above, χειμάρρος τῶν κέδρων was treated as a correct rendering of קֶדְרוֹן הַיָּד, and it might have been adopted by Jn. as the title familiar to Greek ears. We hold, however, that it is not the original reading in this verse, so that the argument based on it is worthless.

ἐξῆλθεν ἀπὸν καὶ οὐ μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. 2. ᾧ δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας ὁ παραδίδους ἀπὸν τὸν τόπον, ὅτι πολλὰκις συνήχθη Ἰησοῦς ἐκεῖ μετὰ τῶν nor does Lk.; Mk. 14<sup>23</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>50</sup> have χωρίον (i.e. a farm or small property) οὗ τὸ ὄνομα Γεθσημανεῖ. Jn. alone speaks of it as κήπος, i.e. it was one of the private gardens in the eastern outskirts of Jerusalem (cf. 19<sup>41</sup> for the garden of Joseph). The word κήπος is common in the LXX, but in the N.T. is found only here, at v. 26, 19<sup>41</sup> (cf. 20<sup>12</sup>), and Lk. 13<sup>19</sup>. For ἦν, see on 11<sup>18</sup>.

εἰς ἓν ἐξῆλθεν, the verb showing that it was an enclosed place. The site that is now shown was recognised as the Garden of the Agony in the fourth century at any rate, and it is quite possible that tradition accurately preserved its position from the beginning.

Jn. does not insert at this point any account of the Agony in Gethsemane, as the Synoptists do (Mk. 14<sup>36</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>36</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>39</sup>); but the allusion to "the cup which the Father gave" (v. 21, where see note) indicates that the omission was not due to ignorance. We have seen (on 12<sup>27</sup>) that the prayer there recorded is virtually the prayer of anguish at Gethsemane.

It has been suggested, indeed, that the Prayer of the Agony, if it followed here, would be inconsistent with the Prayer of Consecration and Farewell that Jn. has just placed on record; so different are the sublime calm and dignity of c. 17 from the sadness and shrinking of "remove this cup from me—yet not what I will, but what Thou wilt" (Mk. 14<sup>36</sup>). But such a criticism would be at variance with the facts of human experience, in which the moments of greatest spiritual depression and trial often follow close on moods of the highest spiritual exaltation. And it may have been so with the Son of Man Himself.

2. ᾧ δὲ καὶ Ἰούδας. The garden was a favourite resort of Jesus and His disciples (πολλὰκις συνήχθη), and probably belonged to a friend. It is specially mentioned by Jn. that Judas knew the place. Jesus was not now trying to escape arrest (cf. 10<sup>39</sup>), for Jn. is anxious to indicate that His surrender to His captors was voluntary. Jesus had told Judas to delay no longer the execution of his purpose (13<sup>27</sup>), and He proceeded the same night to a place where Judas knew that He was accustomed to resort.

ὁ παραδίδους αὐτόν, the pres. tense indicating that Judas was then engaged in the business of the betrayal. Cf. 13<sup>21</sup>.

πολλὰκις, only here in Jn. Jesus went to the garden, as His custom was (κατὰ τὸ ἔθος, Lk. 22<sup>36</sup>), and probably not only on this last visit to Jerusalem. συνήθη tells only that this was a place of habitual resort of Jesus and His disciples, but possibly they may have slept there occasionally. (Cf. Lk. 21<sup>37</sup>, τὰς δὲ νύκτας ἐξερχόμενος ἐβλέπετο εἰς τὸ ἕρος τὸ καλοῦμαιον Ἑλαιῶν.) If this be so, the sleep of the apostles in the garden during the hour preceding the arrest was natural indeed, although they had been bidden to keep awake.

μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ. 3. ἡ οὖν Ἰουδα λαβὼν τὴν σπείραν καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων ὑπέρτας ἔρχεται ἐκεῖ μετὰ φωτῶν

3. The Synoptists say nothing about soldiers taking part in the arrest of Jesus, and mention only the emissaries of the Sanhedrim (Mk. 14<sup>43</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>52</sup> stating that members of the Sanhedrim were themselves in the crowd). Jn. mentions these latter (ἐκ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων ὑπέρτας) in the same terms that he has done before when telling of a projected arrest (7<sup>32</sup>), where see the note for the constitution and authority of the Sanhedrim; but he adds here that Judas had brought with him also a detachment of soldiers (τῆς σπείρας).

Troops were always quartered in Fort Antonia, at festival seasons when the city was crowded, to be ready in case of a riot; and a representation from the Sanhedrim to the military authorities that soldiers might be needed to help the Temple guard (ὑπέρτας: cf. 7<sup>32</sup>) would naturally have been acted on. Pilate, the procurator, seems to have known that something important was taking place that night, for he was ready at an early hour in the morning to hear the case (v. 28; cf. Mt. 27<sup>18</sup>, for the dream of Pilate's wife). There is nothing improbable in Jn.'s statement that soldiers were present at the arrest.

The term σπείρα (if the soldiers were legionaries) was generally equivalent to the Latin cohort, which numbered 600 men. Polybius, indeed, uses it (xi. 23. 1) for manipulus, which is only one-third of a cohort. But here (if, as is probable, they were auxiliaries) and in the N.T. elsewhere (see esp. Acts 21<sup>31</sup>) it numbered 1000 men (240 horse and 760 foot), commanded by a chiliarch (cf. v. 12 below), a tribunus militum. It is not, however, to be supposed that Jn. means that the whole strength of the regiment (cf. Mk. 15<sup>47</sup>) was turned out to aid in the arrest of Jesus; the words λαβὼν τὴν σπείραν indicate no more than that Judas had got the help of "the cohort," i.e. a detachment, with whom the commanding officer of the garrison came (v. 12), in view of possible developments.

Fam. 13 insert ὅλην before τὴν σπείραν (probably from Mk. 15<sup>47</sup>), which shows that the scribe of the common exemplar thought that τὴν σπείραν was not sufficiently definite.

καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρχιερέων καὶ ἐκ τῶν Φαρισαίων ὑπέρτας, i.e. officers

καὶ λαμπάδων καὶ δόλων. 4. Ἰησοῦς οὖν εἶδὼς πάντα τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἐκ' αὐτῶν ἐξήλθεν καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς τίνα ζητεῖτε; 5. ἀπεκρίθησαν of the Sanhedrim (see on 7<sup>32</sup> for οἱ ἀρχ. καὶ οἱ Φαρισ., as indicating the Sanhedrim in its official capacity). For ὑπέρτας, cf. 18<sup>12</sup>, 19<sup>6</sup> and Mt. 26<sup>56</sup>; they were the Temple police, under the control of the Sanhedrim.

μετὰ φωτῶν καὶ λαμπάδων. It was the time of the Paschal full moon, but lights were brought, nevertheless, to search out the dark recesses of the garden, in case Jesus should attempt to hide Himself.

φάνος (ἀν. λεγ. in N.T.) is a "link" or "torch," made of strips of wood fastened together, and λαμπάς is an ordinary torch-light, the word being used in later Greek for a lantern. Both were carried by Roman soldiers on duty; cf. Dion. Hal. xi. 5, ἐξέρχοντο ἅπαντες ἐκ τῶν σκηνῶν ἀρόριοι, φανούς ἔχοντες καὶ λαμπάδας. Lights also were carried, when necessary, by the Temple guard; thus Lightfoot (on Lk. 22<sup>5</sup>) quotes: "The ruler of the mountain of the Temple takes his walks through every watch with torches lighted before him" (Middoth i. 2).

καὶ δόλων. The Temple guard was not always armed (Joseph. B.J., iv. 4. 6), but on this occasion they probably carried weapons as well as the soldiers. Mk. 14<sup>48</sup> speaks of a crowd with swords and staves (ὄχλος μετὰ μαχαίρῶν καὶ ῥόλων) who had been sent by the Sanhedrim.

4. Ἰησοῦς οὖν. *κ*DLW have οὐ for οὖν.

εἶδὼς. Cf. 13<sup>1</sup>. Jn. is at every point careful to insist that Jesus foreknew the issues of His ministry, πάντα τὰ ἐρχόμενα ἐκ' αὐτῶν, "everything that was coming upon Him."

καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς. He does not address Himself directly to Judas, but to those who had come, armed, to arrest Him, and He asks τίνα ζητεῖτε; Cf. 1<sup>28</sup> 20<sup>12</sup>.

In the Synoptic narratives (Mk. 14<sup>46</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>46</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>47</sup>) Judas comes forward and identifies Jesus by a kiss, that is, by kissing His hand, the recognised salutation from a disciple to His Master (not by kissing His cheek, as Western painters have been accustomed to depict the act). Jn. does not mention this treacherous sign, and his omission to do so is a difficulty in the way of critics who think that Jn. displays special animus against Judas (see on 13<sup>2</sup>). His reason for the omission is probably that he is laying stress throughout on the voluntariness of Jesus' acceptance of arrest. Jesus does not wait to be identified by any one, for He at once announces who He is. Jn.'s narrative seems to suggest that He had not been recognised in the uncertain light, even after He came out of the garden and asked, "Whom seek ye?" Tatian places the kiss of Judas immediately before v. 4, i. e. before Jesus came out of the garden; and if it is sought to bring the evangelical narratives into exact correspondence, Tatian's solution may be the right one.<sup>1</sup>

Jn. says (v. 5) that "Judas, who was in the act of delivering Him up" (ὁ παραδόξους αὐτόν, cf. 13<sup>9</sup>), was standing (ἰστῆκεν) with those who were making the arrest. Judas had done his part when he had guided the emissaries of the Sanhedrim to the place where Jesus was. The scene is described very vividly.

6. ἀπεκρ. αὐτῷ Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον. "Jesus the Nazarene," or "Jesus of Nazareth," was the name by which He had been popularly known. The blind man was told that it was "Jesus of Nazareth" who was passing by (Mk. 10<sup>47</sup>, Lk. 18<sup>37</sup>). The man with the unclean devil addressed Him as "Thou Jesus of Nazareth" (Lk. 4<sup>34</sup>). The two disciples on the way to Emmaus spoke of Him thus (Lk. 24<sup>19</sup>). So did Peter in his sermon at Pentecost (Acts 2<sup>39</sup>). In Mk.'s account of the Resurrection, the young man at the sepulchre says to the women, "Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth" (Mk. 16<sup>7</sup>). After His arrest, He was familiarly described in this way by the maid in the court of the high priest (Mk. 14<sup>67</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>71</sup>). It is clear that the instructions given to those sent to apprehend Him were that they should take "Jesus of Nazareth." They inquired for Him by the designation by which He was best known. See 10<sup>18</sup>.

Jn.'s narrative indicates, as has been said above, that Jesus identified Himself voluntarily, by saying, "I am He" in answer to the request for "Jesus of Nazareth." And ἐγὼ εἰμι in v. 5 may mean simply, "I am He of whom you are in search" (cf. 4<sup>26</sup>, 9<sup>7</sup>). The reading of B ἐγὼ εἰμι Ἰησοῦς πιστῆ carry this meaning.

6. The words which follow, "they retired and fell to the ground," then, imply no more than that the men who came to make the arrest (some of whom at least did not previously

Ἐγὼ εἰμι, ἀπῆλθαν εἰς τὰ θυσίω καὶ ἔπεσαν χαμαί. 7. πάλιν οὖν ἐπηρώτησαν αὐτοῖς τίνα ἔργεῖτε; οἱ δὲ εἶπεν Ἰησοῦν τὸν Ναζωραῖον. 8. ἀπεκρήθη Ἰησοῦς Εἶπεν ἡμῖν ὅτι ἐγὼ εἰμι· εἰ οὖν ἐμὲ ἔργεῖτε, ἄφετε τοῦτον θανάτου· 9. ἵνα πληρωθῆῖ δὲ λόγος ὃν εἶπεν, ὅτι Οὐδὲ δόξακαί know Jesus even by sight) were so overcome by His moral ascendancy that they recoiled in fear. (For the Johannine ὡς οὖν, see on 4<sup>40</sup>.) On a previous occasion (7<sup>40</sup>), when some wished to arrest Him, they had faltered and failed to do so. It may have been a similar shrinking which caused some now to recoil from their distasteful task, and in the confusion they, or some of the crowd, stumbled and fell. Indeed, ἔπεσαν χαμαί might be taken figuratively, as expressing discomfiture only. Thus in Ps. 27<sup>8</sup>, Isa. 8<sup>18</sup>, Jer. 46<sup>8</sup>, "stumbled and fell" means no more than that enemies were "overthrown"; and ἔπεσαν χαμαί might be rendered in colloquial English "were floored."

There is no hint in the Synoptists of any hesitancy on the part of those sent to make the arrest. The phrases ἀπῆλθαν εἰς τὰ θυσίω (cf. 6<sup>59</sup>) and ἔπεσαν χαμαί (χαμαί is only found again in the N.T. at 9<sup>7</sup>) are peculiar to Jn. And it has been suggested (e.g. by W. Bauer) that Jn. means us to understand that ἐγὼ εἰμι, as used by Jesus on this occasion, is the equivalent of the mysterious ἐντὸς Ἰ (em) He, which is the designation of Yahweh in the apocryphal books (cf. 8<sup>58</sup> 13<sup>19</sup> above, and Introd., pp. ccxvii ff.); and that so awful a claim overwhelmed with terror those who heard it made (cf. Dan. 10<sup>6</sup>, Rev. 1<sup>7</sup>). But this is too subtle a rendering of the Johannine narrative of the arrest. Cf. Rev. 1<sup>17</sup>.

In the Gospel of Peter, § 5, where the darkness at the Crucifixion is described, we have περιήρχοντο δὲ πολλοὶ μετὰ λόχων, νομίζοντες ὅτι νύξ ἴσταν. [τῶν δὲ] ἔτάσαντο. This seems to be a reminiscence of Jn. 18<sup>6-8</sup>; cf. also Acta Thoma, § 157.

7. The question and answer are repeated: "Whom seek ye? . . . Jesus the Nazarene." This time, those who had come to arrest Him knew to whom they were speaking, but they were so much overawed that they could only repeat what they had said before.

The rec. has αὐτοῖς ἐπηρώτησεν, with BDN®; but ABCL give the more usual order ἐπηρώτησεν αὐτοῖς.

8. The reply is stern and authoritative. He repeats ἐγὼ εἰμι (see on v. 5).

εἰ οὖν ἐμὲ ἔργ. κτλ. "If, then, it is I (emphatic) whom you seek, let these (i.e. the Eleven) go their way," or "go home," for ἄνάγειν has a suggestion of this meaning (see on 7<sup>58</sup>). His solicitude for His faithful disciples is characteristic of the Good Shepherd (cf. 10<sup>18</sup>, and see on v. 19).

μοι, οὐκ ἀπέλασα ἐξ αὐτῶν οὐδένα. 10. Χίμων οὖν Πέτρος ἔχων

9. Ἦν πληρωθῆ δὲ λόγος κτλ. For the phrase Ἦν πληρωθῆ, introducing a saying of Jesus, see Introd., p. cxliii f. Another example is in v. 32. For Jn., the words of Jesus were possessed of authority, and inspired, like the language of the O.T., by foreknowledge of future events. The λόγος, or "saying" (see on 2nd), of which reference is here made is that of 17th loosely quoted. Ἦν is recitans, but it does not introduce the exact words previously ascribed to Jesus.

The comment of Jn. (Ἦν παλ. δὲ λόγος κτλ.) would seem to limit the application of "I lost none of those whom thou gavest me" to the fact that the disciples were let go free when Jesus was arrested. Some at least of Jn.'s explanations of the words of Jesus are of doubtful accuracy (see on 2nd, 21); but it is hard to believe that he could have missed here the larger and more spiritual meaning of 17th, which is already indicated at 6th 10th.

οὐκ ἐδέσκαί μοι, οὐκ ἀπέλασα ἐξ αὐτῶν οὐδένα. The close verbal parallel in 2 Esd. 2nd is interesting: "servos quos tibi dedi, nemo ex eis interit, ego enim eos requiram de numero tuo," words which are addressed by God to the personified nation. Chapters i. and ii. of 2 Esdras are Christian, and probably belong to the second century. The passage quoted above may be a reminiscence of Jn. 18th or Jn. 17th or Jn. 6th. See on 3rd above for other parallels between 2 Esdras and Jn.

10. The incident of one of the Twelve attacking the high priest's slave is in all the Gospels (Mk. 14th, Mt. 26th, Lk. 22nd), although the names, Peter and Malchus, are given by Jn. only.

It appears from Lk. 22nd, that the apostles had two swords or knives in their possession; and Lk. also tells that, when they understood that the salutation of Judas was the signal for the arrest of Jesus, they exclaimed, "Lord, shall we smite with the sword?" It would seem that Peter, always hasty and impulsive, struck a blow without waiting for permission from Jesus. He had been forward in declaring that he would give his life for his Master, if there was need (13th). He did not generally carry a sword; ἔχων μάχαιραν implies that he happened to have one with him at the time, presumably because he and others had learnt from what Jesus had said previously that their Master was in danger. It was unlawful to carry arms on a feast-day, and—although at such a crisis, an eager disciple like Peter would probably have had no scruple in breaking the law if the safety of his Master was at stake—the fact that two of the company had knives with them earlier in the evening tends to show that the Last Supper was not μάχαιραν εἰλασκον αὐτὸν καὶ ἔσπασεν τὸν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως δοῦλον καὶ ἀπέκοψεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ὄταρον τὸ δεξιόν· ἦν δὲ ὄνομα τῷ δοῦλῳ Μάλχος.

the Passover, and that the Johannine rather than the Synoptic tradition of the day of the Crucifixion is to be followed (see Introd., p. cvf.).

Peter drew (see on 6th for δέξιας) the sword, καὶ ἔσπασεν τὸν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως δοῦλον, "and struck the high priest's slave." This man was one of the crowd which had gathered; he was not one of the Temple guard (Gertrudes, v. 3). There was something of a scuffle, and Peter hit out.

καὶ ἀπέκοψεν αὐτοῦ τὸ ὄταρον τὸ δεξιόν, "and cut off his right ear," the blow missing the slave's head, as he swerved to his left to avoid it. That it was the right ear is a detail only found in Lk. and Jn. ὄταρον, the true reading here (RBC<sup>2</sup>LW), is the word used by Mk. (14th); ὄταρον, of the rec. text (AC<sup>2</sup>DN<sup>2</sup>), is the word in Mt. 26th and in Lk. 22nd.

We have here, without doubt, a tradition of an historical incident. If it be asked why Peter was not immediately arrested by the Temple guard or the soldiers who were standing by, the answer may be that it was not observed in the scuffle who had dealt the blow. The earlier Gospels do not disclose Peter's name, although by the time that Jn. wrote, there would be no risk in giving it. Again, an injury to a slave would not excite much interest; had Peter struck one of the officials, it would have been a different matter. Lk. tells, indeed, that Jesus healed the wound (Lk. 22nd), apparently suggesting that the ear had not been wholly severed from the man's head.

ἦν δὲ ὄνομα τῷ δοῦλῳ Μάλχος. Here, again, is a detail that comes from first-hand knowledge. No evangelist has it except Jn. The name Malchus is found five times in Josephus, and probably goes back to the root malch or "king." Cf. Neh. 10th.

11. Jesus forbids the use of arms in resisting His arrest. The Synoptists represent Him as expostulating against it, and especially against the violent way in which it was effected (Mk. 14th, Mt. 26th, Lk. 22nd); but in Jn.'s narrative there is none of this. He moves voluntarily towards the predestined end.

Βάλε τὴν μάχαιραν εἰς τὴν θήκην, "put back the sword into the sheath." Mt., alone of the Synoptists, tells of this saying, which he gives in a more diffuse form: ἀποστρέφόν σου τὴν μάχαιραν εἰς τὸν ῥότον αὐτῆς· πάντες γὰρ οἱ λαβόντες μάχαιραν ἐν μαχαίρᾳ ἀπολοῦνται (Mt. 26th), the latter clause suggesting the hand of an editor. According to Jn., Jesus gave no reason for the quiet command, "Put up your sword." See on v. 36 below.

11. εἶπεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς τῷ Πιλάτῳ Βάλε τὴν μάχαιραν εἰς τὴν θήρην ἢ ποτήριον ὃ δίδωκεν μοι ὁ Πατήρ, οὐ μὴ πῖω αὐτό;

12. Ἢ οὐκ σφέτερα καὶ ὁ χλειαρχος καὶ ὁ ὑπηρέτης τῶν Ἰουδαίων συνέλαβον τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἔθρῃσαν αὐτόν, 13. καὶ ἤγαγον πρὸς Ἄνναν

After μάχαιραν the rec. adds σου (from Mt. 26<sup>68</sup>), but om. NABCDLNWΘ.

οὐ μὴ πῖω αὐτό is probably to be taken as an interrogative. Abbott, however (Diat. 934*f*, 2232), prefers to take it as an exclamation, "I am, of course, not to drink it!" [sc. according to your desire], comparing οὐ μὴ πῖω of Mk. 14<sup>36</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>41</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>42</sup>. See on 6<sup>27</sup>.

10. Jn. does not record explicitly that His disciples fled in fear after Jesus had been arrested (Mk. 14<sup>50</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>68</sup>), although he has told that Jesus earlier in the night had predicted that they would abandon Him (16<sup>28</sup>). Jn. implies, however (see on v. 15), that Jesus was abandoned at this point by His friends.

The arrest was effected by the Roman soldiers (see on v. 3 for σπείρα), with their commanding officer (cf. Acts 21<sup>31</sup> for χλειαρχος), acting in co-operation with the Temple police (οἱ ὑπηρέται τῶν Ἰουδαίων). συναλαμβάνουσιν does not occur again in Jn., but it is the verb used by the Synoptists in this context.

καὶ ἔθρῃσαν αὐτόν. That was a matter of course; probably His hands were fastened behind His back. The Synoptists do not mention this detail until a later point in the narrative (Mk. 15<sup>2</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>1</sup>; cf. v. 24). It was a patristic fancy that the binding of Jesus was foreshadowed in the binding of Isaac at the altar (Gen. 22<sup>7</sup>); see on 10<sup>17</sup> below.

πρὸς Ἄνναν πρῶτον. Annas was not, at this time, the high priest, but he had held the office before and was a personage of such influence that he was often called "high priest" in a loose way (cf. Lk. 3<sup>1</sup>, Acts 4<sup>6</sup>, and see on 7<sup>29</sup>), although that great office was now held by his son-in-law Caiaphas (see on 11<sup>50</sup> above).<sup>1</sup> It was to his house that Jesus was brought after

His arrest, and there an informal and extra-judicial questioning of Him went on during the night hours (Mk. 14<sup>58c</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>67</sup>). Mk. does not give any name: he only says, "they led Jesus away to the high priest"; but Mt. inserts the name Caiaphas at this point, in which he seems to have been mistaken. Caiaphas presided at the formal meeting of the Sanhedrim (Mk. 15<sup>1</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>1</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>36</sup>, Jn. 18<sup>24</sup>), held the next morning as early as possible, when the sentence of death, already agreed on (Mk. 14<sup>64</sup>), was ratified, and submitted to Pilate, who alone had authority to order it to be carried out.

It was during the night, at the house of Annas (not the house of Caiaphas, or the formal place of meeting for the Sanhedrim, which could legally meet only by day), that the evidence, such as it was, was prepared, and that the Prisoner was treated with insult and contumely. Such irregular proceedings would not have been countenanced at a formal meeting of the Sanhedrim, but they were winked at in the courtyard of Annas' private house, which was the scene of Peter's denial and the reproachful look which Jesus bestowed on him (Lk. 22<sup>61</sup>). Probably some of the evidence as to blasphemy was repeated in due form at the official sitting of the Sanhedrim, at which Luke (who says nothing of the preliminary hearing before Annas) states that Jesus admitted His claim to be Messiah (Lk. 22<sup>67</sup>), in similar words to those which Mk. 14<sup>62</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>64</sup> ascribe to Him at the earlier cross-examination.

Such seems to have been the course of events on the night of the arrest and the next morning; but it is not possible to reconcile precisely all the evangelic accounts.<sup>1</sup> The narrative of Jn. seems at certain points (vv. 13, 19-23, 26) to be based on first-hand knowledge, to which the other evangelists had not access.

ἦν γὰρ πνευθερός τοῦ Καϊάφα. This piece of information is not given in the other Gospels, nor does the word πνευθερός occur again in the N.T.

ὃς ἦν ἀρχιερεῖς τοῦ θναυτοῦ ἐκείνου. This is repeated from 11<sup>50</sup>, 51. Caiaphas was the official high priest, and that a man of his principles should have held the position in that fateful year had grave and awful consequences. See on 11<sup>50</sup>.

The Sinai Syriac places v. 24 at this point after v. 13. The marginal texts of the Jerusalem and Philoxenian Syriac also have here "Annas sent Jesus (bound) to Caiaphas," although v. 24 is retained in its traditional place. Similarly the Cursive 15. Ἡελοοῦθι δὲ τῷ Ἰησοῦ Σίμων Πέτρος καὶ ἄλλος μαθητής.

Ἄννας δεξιμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερέα.

These additions or transpositions are due probably to a desire to bring Jn.'s narrative of the examinations of Jesus by the Jewish authorities into line with the narrative of the Synoptists, who say nothing of the part played by Annas. If v. 24 is moved to a point between v. 13 and v. 14, then all that happens takes place in the house of Caiaphas (as is explicitly said by Mt.), and Annas really does nothing, although Jesus in the Johannine narrative is brought to his house in the first instance.

But, if this were the original position of the words "Annas sent Him bound unto the high priest," it is difficult to find a reason for their being moved by a scribe to their traditional place, after v. 23. See, further, Intro., p. xxvii.

14. The reference is to 11<sup>30</sup>, the unconscious prophecy (as Jn. deems it) made by Caiaphas, which expressed his deliberate conviction that Jesus must be brought to His death. For ἀποθανεῖν (πBC<sup>2</sup>DWΘ), the rec. here has ἀπολέσθαι (with AC<sup>2</sup>N), which may be the original reading, corrected by scribes to bring the words into verbal correspondence with 11<sup>30</sup>.

At 11<sup>30</sup> we had συμφέρει . . . ἕνα εἰς ἀνθρώπος ἀποθάνει, but here συμφέρει ἕνα ἀνθρώπων ἀποθάνει, a more correct constr.

Peter's first denial of Jesus (vv. 15-18)

Σίμων Πέτρος. Jn. likes to use the double name (see on 1<sup>40</sup>) when Peter has been absent from the picture for some little time, but he generally relapses into the simple "Peter" as the story proceeds; see, e.g., 13<sup>36-38</sup>, 18<sup>16, 11</sup>, 20<sup>2, 2, 4</sup>, 21<sup>2, 7, 13, 17, 20, 21</sup>. Jn. never gives the short title "Peter" to this apostle at the beginning of an incident in which he is concerned. In the present passage we have Simon Peter (v. 15), followed by Peter (vv. 16, 17, 18); then there is an interval, and so when the courtyard scene is resumed, we have Simon Peter again (v. 25), followed by Peter (vv. 26, 27).

This "other disciple" was "known to the high priest," and so was admitted into the courtyard or εὐαῖς of the house where Jesus had been brought. He was sufficiently well known to the portress, at any rate, to persuade her to admit his companion. It does not follow that he was a personal friend of Annas or of Caiaphas, or of the same social class, although this is possible. As Sanday put it: "The account of what happened to Peter might well seem to be told from the point of view of the servants' hall."<sup>1</sup> The word γνωστός as applied to persons is uncommon, as Abbott points out (Diat. x. ii. p. 351 f.), but it is to press it too far to interpret it here as meaning "a familiar friend," with an allusion to Ps. 55<sup>18</sup>. Abbott adopts the curious view that the "other disciple" was Judas Iscariot, whose face would have been familiar to the portress, because of his previous visit or visits to the high priest in pursuance of his scheme of betrayal. But that Judas should wish to introduce Peter, or that Peter would have tolerated any advances from him or accepted his good offices, is difficult to believe.

The view most generally taken<sup>2</sup> as to the personality of this ἄλλος μαθητής is that he was John the Beloved Disciple, whose reminiscences are behind the Gospel, and whose identity is veiled in some degree (see on 13<sup>24</sup>; and cf. 1<sup>17</sup>, 21<sup>24</sup>). This agrees with the close association elsewhere of Peter and John (see Intro., p. xxxvi). Indeed, John the son of Zebedee had priestly connexions. His mother was Salome, the sister of the Virgin Mary (see pp. 73, 84 f., and note on 19<sup>25</sup>); and Mary was a kinswoman (συγγενίς, Lk. 1<sup>36</sup>) of Elisabeth, who was "of the daughters of Aaron" (Lk. 1<sup>9</sup>). Hence John was connected with a priestly family on his mother's side, and there is no improbability in his being "known to the high priest."<sup>3</sup>

But the available evidence does not permit us securely to identify the ἄλλος μαθητής, as Augustine saw (Tract. cxiii. 2), saying that it is not plain who he was. This unnamed disciple was probably some one of influence and social importance; if

<sup>3</sup> Mommsen, in his paraphrase, explains the phrase by saying that it was because of John's fishing business, ἰχθυοφάσκων κατὰ τέχνην, which apparently means that the high priest bought fish from him; but this is not convincing.

Ἰησοῦ εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, 15. ὁ δὲ Πέτρος εἰσέρχεται πρὸς τῆν we were to guess, the names of Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea suggest themselves at once. There were disciples outside the circle of the Twelve, some of them men of rank, members of the Sanhedrim itself (see 12<sup>40</sup>); and it is quite likely that Peter was known, by sight at least, to one of these who had attended at the house of Annas.<sup>2</sup> It is probable that it is to this unnamed disciple (whether John or another) that the details given in vv. 19-23 about the private examination of Jesus at night by the high priest, and also perhaps about the private examination before Pilate (vv. 33 f.), are ultimately due. There are also traces of first-hand information in the statements that "it was cold" (v. 18), and that a kinsman of the slave Malchus identified Peter (v. 26).

εἰς τὴν αὐλὴν κτλ., "into the courtyard." All the evangelists represent this courtyard as the scene of Peter's denial. He was not admitted even so far, until his unnamed friend intervened, but was standing outside at the door. See on 10<sup>1</sup> for αὐλή and θύρα. The examination of Jesus was not conducted in the outer court where all the servants were, but in a chamber of the house of Annas. Mk. implies that this chamber was not on the ground floor, as he says that Peter was κάτω ἐν τῇ αὐλῇ, "below, in the court" (Mk. 14<sup>60</sup>).

ADDITIONAL NOTE ON XVIII. 15

Delf identified the ἄλλος μαθητὴς of v. 15 with the Beloved Disciple, whom he distinguished from John the son of Zebedee. In connexion with the remark that he was "known to the high priest," Delf cited the statement of Polycrates (see Intro., p. 1) that the Beloved Disciple wore the priestly frontlet; and inferred that he belonged to an aristocratic priestly family in Jerusalem, it being thus easy for him to obtain access to the high priest's house.<sup>3</sup> We have already treated the problem of the ἄλλος μαθητὴς.

But a larger question is raised by the words of Polycrates, to which some reference may be made at this point. Polycrates says of the Beloved Disciple ἑνεσθῆ ἱερῆς τῷ πέταλον πεφορεῖσθαι, an observation difficult to explain. This πέταλον was a golden plate attached in front to the turban or mitre of Aaron (Ex. 28<sup>36c</sup> 29<sup>6</sup> 39<sup>30c</sup>, Lev. 8<sup>7</sup>), and in later times was part of the official dress of the high priest (cf. Josephus, Anti. III. vii. 6).<sup>4</sup>

Similar statements are made about James the Just, and about Mark.<sup>5</sup>

Of James the Just, Epiphanius says: τὸ πέταλον ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆ; ἐξ ἧν ἀπέφραζεν (Hæc. xxix. 4). He adds that his authority was the ἱστορηματιογράφοι of former writers of repute; and Lawlor<sup>6</sup> has shown that he is alluding to the ἱστορηματα of Hegesippus. Hegesippus, as quoted by Eusebius (H. E. II. 23), said that to James alone was it allowed to enter εἰς τὰ ἄγια of the Temple, which he used to frequent in prayer for the people, and that his custom was to wear not woolen but linen garments.<sup>7</sup> Epiphanius may be reproducing other words of Hegesippus when he tells (Hæc. xxix. 4) that James exercised the priestly office according to the old priesthood (ἱερατεῖσάντα κατὰ τὴν παλαιάν ἱερωσύνην); but he is probably in error when he says that James alone was permitted to enter the Holy of Holies once a year, as the high priest did, διὰ τὸ Ναζωραίων αὐτὸν εἶναι καὶ μεμύχθαι τῇ ἱερωσύνῃ (Hæc. lxxviii. 13). He adds explicitly, ὁ Ἰάκωβος ἄλλοτε τῇ ἱερωσύνῃ, καὶ πέταλον ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς ἐφόρετε.

Of Mark, Valois quoted a legend as a note on Eus. H. E. v. 24, as follows: "beatum Marcum iuxta ritum carnalis sacrificii pontificalis apicis petalum in populo gestasse Iudæorum . . . ex quo manifeste datur intelligi de stirpe enim Leuitica, imo pontificis Aaron sacrae successioneis originem habuisse."<sup>8</sup> Mark was probably of Levite race (compare Acts 4<sup>36</sup> with Col. 4<sup>10</sup>), and the Vulgate Preface to his Gospel speaks of him as "sacerdotium in Israel agens,"<sup>9</sup> so that it is quite possible that he was one of the Jewish priests who accepted Christ (Acts 6<sup>7</sup>; cf. Acts 21<sup>16</sup>).

The language of Polycrates, then, about John ἑνεσθῆ ἱερῆς τῷ πέταλον πεφορεῖσθαι is almost identical with what is <sup>4</sup> The word is used in Protosangelium 5 as if it meant the λογέιον or oracle of the Urim and Thummim, from which it was clearly distinguished.

<sup>5</sup> Bingham (Ant. II. ix. 5) and Routh (Reliquiæ Sacrae, II. 27) give the facts. A special treatise, De lamina pontificali apostolorum Ioannis Iacobi et Marci (Tübingen, 1755), was written by J. F. Cotta—a scarce book, as to which I am indebted to Dr. Wieland, the University Library at Tübingen, for information. It does not seem to add anything to what was known before.

told about James and Mark. If the πέταλον were worn by the high priest only on great occasions, it is impossible to suppose that John, James, or Mark ever wore it. But if it was (even occasionally) worn by the ordinary Jewish priest in N.T. times, Mark may have worn it. And if John and James were eligible for the priesthood, they too might have had the privilege. But while James and John were certainly akin to the priestly race on their mother's side, the argument of Epiphanius to prove that James also was "mingled with the priesthood" by blood is not convincing. Yet we know so little of the insistence upon hereditary qualifications for the Jewish priesthood in the first century, that it is not easy to reject the explicit statements made about John and James as well as about Mark.<sup>1</sup>

Jerome, when discussing the statement of Polycrates about John, understands ιερείς to mean a Christian priest, and translates: "qui supra pectus domini recubuit, et pontifica eius fuit, auream laminam in fronte portans" (de script. eccl. 45). This explanation will not apply to the parallel traditions about James and Mark, upon the Jewish character of whose priesthood stress is laid. It is conceivable (although improbable) that the Beloved Disciple might have been allowed by his Christian brethren to wear the insignia of a Jewish priest at Ephesus, where he was so greatly venerated. But neither James nor Mark would ever have been allowed such a distinction as Christian priests at Jerusalem while the Temple was yet standing. Further, it would be strange that Polycrates should call John a Christian ιερείς, while studiously avoiding in his case the title επισκοπος, which he gives to others of repute.<sup>2</sup> And, finally, that the mitre or πέταλον should have been used as an ornament of Christian bishops in the first century, but never heard of again until three centuries later at least, is highly improbable.

Others interpret the wearing of the πέταλον by John and the others as metaphorical only.<sup>3</sup> The dress of the high priest is used in Rev. 2<sup>17</sup> as the symbol of the investment of the true <sup>1</sup> The legend is that Mark was σολοβοδερνής, which would have made him ineligible as a Jewish priest, being blemished; but the Vulgate Preface says that he mutilated his thumb after he became a Christian, precisely that he might be counted sacerdotio reprobus.

<sup>2</sup> The title ιερείς (sacerdos) for a Christian minister is used by Tertullian, Cyprian, and Origen (see my essay on Cyprian in Early Hist. of Church and Ministry, pp. 223, 228). It might therefore have been used by Polycrates; but the context makes it improbable that he did use it thus.

Christian with the sacerdotal character; cf. Ex. 28<sup>11, 26</sup> with the "white stone" and the "new name" of Rev. 2<sup>17</sup>. This idea is worked out in detail by Origen (in Lev. Hom. vi.), who treats the πέταλον as symbolic of the knowledge of divine things by all baptized persons; cf. Clem. Alex. Strom. v. 6. If we pursue this line of thought, we recall that engraved on the πέταλον were the words "Holy to Yahweh," ἅγιος μου κυρίου (Ex. 28<sup>29</sup>), and the command to Moses was ἐγράψαμι αὐτοῖς, ἵνα ἱερανοῦσίν μοι (Ex. 28<sup>31</sup>). The πέταλον, in short, was the symbol of consecration, which was the topic of Christ's intercession for His apostles (Jn. 17<sup>9</sup>). John, James,<sup>4</sup> and Mark were all ἁγιασμένοι (Jn. 17<sup>19</sup>); and the tradition of wearing the πέταλον in their case might have grown out of a metaphorical statement as to their personal holiness. But this view does not explain why the πέταλον symbol should have been used only of John, James, and Mark among the saints of the apostolic age.

We are inclined to accept the tradition that James, John, and Mark literally wore the πέταλον, at least occasionally, in virtue of their service as Jewish priests. It is to be remembered that James, John, and Peter were the "pillars" of the Jerusalem Church (Gal. 2<sup>9</sup>); they were the heads of the conservative or Judaizing party as contrasted with Paul. Of these, Peter was suspect by the more rigid Jews (Acts 12<sup>3</sup>). But his disciple Mark was under no such suspicion, for he had actually separated himself from Paul because of the latter's liberal policy (Acts 13<sup>13, 15</sup><sup>16</sup>). John had, indeed, incurred the hostility of the Temple authorities in early days (Acts 4<sup>3, 19</sup>); but there is no later indication of opposition to him by them, or any trace of distrust of him by his fellow-disciples. James was thoroughly respected by all. James, John, and Mark were, then, the three Christian leaders who were most fully trusted by the conservatives at Jerusalem.<sup>5</sup> While whole-hearted disciples of Jesus, they were Jews who were understood to have pride in their Jewish heritage. Provided that they were qualified for the priesthood, there would be nothing surprising in their occasional discharge of priestly offices; for by the first disciples the Christian faith was not regarded as inconsistent with Judaism. Thus the tradition that they had been privileged to wear the priestly πέταλον is less improbable in their case than it would be in that of any other early leader of the Church of whom we have information.

θύρα ἔξω. ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ ἄλλος ὁ γνωστός τοῦ ἀρχιερέως καὶ ἔβη ἐπὶ θυροῦν, καὶ εἰσῆλθεν τὸν Πέτρον. 17. λέγει οὖν τῷ Πέτρῳ ἡ παιδίσκη ἡ θυροῦς Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν εἶ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου τούτου; λέγει ἑαυτοῦ Οὐκ εἰμί. 18. εἰστήκεισαν δὲ οἱ 16. For ἄλλος, fam. 13 have ἑαυτοῦ, ille occurs in some O.L. codices.

καὶ εἶπε τῇ θυροῦν, καὶ εἰσῆλθεν τὸν Πέτρον, i.e., apparently, the friend spoke to the portress and brought Peter in; but the rendering "and she brought Peter in" is defensible.

The θυροῦς was a maid-servant (παιδίσκη), as at Acts 12<sup>13</sup> and 2 Sam. 4<sup>1</sup> (LXX), a custom which Moulton-Milligan illustrate from papyrus.

17. μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν ἐσθ. The form of the question μὴ καὶ . . . shows that the portress expected a negative answer: "You are not another of His disciples, are you?" See on 6<sup>67</sup>; and cf. v. 25. That is, she knew that the person who had already been admitted as γνωστός τῷ ἀρχιερῷ was a disciple of Jesus, although not necessarily of the inner circle.

τοῦ ἀθρώπου τούτου, "of this person," a contemptuous way of speaking.

According to the Johannine account, the first challenge to Peter and his first denial of his Master occurred as he was being admitted to the courtyard. The Synoptists put it later, after he had been admitted and was warming himself at the fire, when he was recognised by a slave girl who saw his face lit up by the flames (Lk. 22<sup>29</sup>). Mk. says that after Peter repudiated any knowledge of Jesus he went outside into the vestibule or porch (προαίλιον, Mk. 14<sup>68</sup>; cf. εἰς τὸν πυλῶνα, Mt. 26<sup>71</sup>), and that the second interrogation of him (this time apparently by the maid who was portress) took place there.

18. The soldiers had now gone back to barracks, the Temple police (ἐπηρηται) being sufficient guard. The policemen and the slaves lit a fire in the courtyard, as it was a cold night. ὅτι ψύχος ἦν is a touch peculiar to Jn., and suggests that the story has come from one who was present, and who shivers as he recalls how cold it was in the open court. Jerusalem is 2400 feet above sea-level, and it is chilly at midnight in spring-time.<sup>1</sup>

ἀθρακῶς occurs again in the N.T. only at 2<sup>19</sup> (cf. Eccles. 11<sup>23</sup>, 4 Macc. 9<sup>20</sup>): it means "a heap of charcoal," probably burnt in a brazier. True coal was not known in Palestine until the nineteenth century. Lk. mentions the lighting of a fire, using the words ἀφάπτω τῆς ἐν μέσῳ τῆς ἀλλήης, and says

δοῦλος καὶ οἱ ἐπηρηται ἀθρακῶς πεποικότες, ὅτι ψύχος ἦν, καὶ θερμαίνοντο· ἦν δὲ καὶ ὁ Πέτρος μετ' αὐτῶν ἐστῆς καὶ θερμαίνετο.

19. Ὁ οὖν ἀρχιερεὺς ἤρτισεν τὸν Ἰησοῦν περὶ τῶν μαθητῶν that they were all sitting round it. Mk. says that Peter was warming himself in the light (θερμαίνετο πρὸς τὸ φῶς, Mk. 14<sup>68</sup>), i.e. leaning towards the dim flame of the fire. Mt. does not say anything about a fire in the courtyard.

For ἀθρακῶς πεποικότες the Vulgate has only ad furnas, several O.L. codices giving ad carbones. This is a rendering which, as Wordsworth-White point out, seems to represent a reading πρὸς τὴν ἀθρακῶν, for which there is no Greek authority extant.

ὁ Πέτρος μετ' αὐτῶν. So MBCLW, the rec. giving the order of words as μετ' αὐτῶν ὁ Πέτρ. Θ omits Πέτρος. It was necessary for Peter to mingle with the slaves and the police in the courtyard; to have kept to himself would have made him an object of suspicion. The Synoptists represent him as sitting near the fire, with the others; Jn. alone says that he was standing, ἐστῆς.

Jn. follows Mk. (14<sup>68</sup>) in telling that Peter was warming himself (θερμαίνετο); and, like Mk., he tells it twice (see v. 25). Jn.'s narrative of Peter's denials is interrupted by an account of the examination of Jesus which was taking place in the house of Annas (vv. 19-23). After the examination has been described, the story of Peter is resumed. Evidently it was while he was waiting in the outer court that he denied his Master for the second and third times (vv. 25-27).<sup>2</sup> This is consistent with Mk.'s order of events.

19. ὁ . . . ἀρχιερεὺς. The "high priest" who conducted the informal examination at the house of Annas was most probably Annas himself (see v. 24). Caiaphas, however, may have been present, and it is possible that he was the ἀρχιερεὺς of v. 19 and v. 22. But the real leader was Annas (see on 11<sup>60</sup>), and it was probably by his orders that Jesus was brought to his house in the first instance (see on v. 13). Jn. does not tell, as the Synoptists do, of the cross-examination by which the hostile priests and scribes tried to make Jesus incriminate Himself, when they found it difficult to get legal evidence as to His alleged blasphemy about the destruction of the Temple (Mk. 14<sup>60</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>60</sup>). The episode of the Cleansing of the Temple, and the words "Destroy this Temple and I will raise it up in three days," have been given by Jn. in another context (2<sup>18-22</sup>), where see note). Jn. merely says here that the high priest questioned Jesus about His disciples, probably as to who they were and as to their reasons for attaching themselves to Him, and about His doctrine (διδασχῆ, cf. 7<sup>40</sup>). This latter inquiry would cover everything. But the details given here of the reply of Jesus to the high priest are found only in Jn. (See also on v. 32.)

20. ἀπεκριθῆ αὐτῷ Ἰησοῦς. See on 1<sup>28</sup> for the omission of δ before Ἰησοῦς.

Jesus, in His reply, ignores the question as to His disciples and does not mention them. As to His teaching, He declares that it was always available for, and open to, every one, and that there was nothing secret about it. The reply of Socrates to his judges has often been quoted as a parallel: "If any one says that he has ever learnt or heard anything from me in private, which all others could not have heard, know ye that he does not speak the truth" (Plato, Apol. 33 B).

ἐγὼ παρηγοία λελάληκα (not ἐλάλησα, as the rec. text has it) τῷ κόσμῳ, "I have spoken openly to the world," i. e. to all and sundry. ἐγὼ is emphatic: it was His teaching that was challenged. For παρηγοία see on 7<sup>4</sup>, and for κόσμῳ see on 1<sup>2</sup>; cf. ταῖνα λαλῶ εἰς τὸν κόσμον (8<sup>26</sup>), where, however, the meaning is slightly different. The Jews had said of Him παρηγορῆς λαλεῖ (7<sup>26</sup>); and when they had challenged Him on another occasion to speak plainly (εἰπὲ ἡμῖν παρηγορῆς, 10<sup>24</sup>) He had done so, with such openness that they had sought to arrest Him (10<sup>29</sup>). When His own disciples had found difficulty in understanding His mysterious teaching about His approaching departure, He proceeded to make it quite plain (16<sup>24, 29</sup>).

ἐγὼ πάντοτε ἐδίδαξα ἐν συναγωγῇ (the true text has no article before συναγωγῇ) καὶ ἐν τῇ ἱερῇ. "I always taught in synagogue and in the temple"; i. e. it was His custom to teach in these public places, not that He never gave any private teaching to an inquirer like Nicodemus (3<sup>3</sup>). The discourse about the Bread of Life was given in the synagogue at Capernaum, according to the Johannine narrative (6<sup>59</sup>), and the Synoptists frequently speak of His practice of teaching in the synagogues of Galilee. Jn. tells of His teaching in the Temple several times (2<sup>18</sup> 7<sup>44</sup>, 8<sup>20</sup> 10<sup>20</sup>). Cf. Mk. 14<sup>49</sup>, καθ' ἡμέραν ἤμην πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἐν τῇ ἱερῇ διδάσκων. The fact of His public teaching was ἐλάλησα οὐδέ. 21. τί με ἐρωτᾷς; ἐρώτησον τοὺς ἀκριβοῦς τί ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς ἵνα οὗτοι οἴσασιν ἂ εἴπω ἐγὼ. 22. ταῦτα δὲ αὐτοῦ εἰπόντος εἰς παρεστηκότας τῶν ἀκηρῶν εὐκεν βέτασμα τῷ Ἰησοῦ εἰπὼν Οὗτως ἀπεκριθῆ τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ; 23. ἀπεκριθῆ αὐτῷ Ἰησοῦς Εἰ notorious. It had been given ἐν τῇ ἱερῇ, ὅπου πάντες (not πάντοτε with the rec text) οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι συνέρχονται, "where all the Jews come together."

καὶ ἐν κρυπτῇ ἐλάλησα οὐδέ. This is like the utterance of Messiah at Isa. 48<sup>13</sup>, οὐδε ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ἐν κρυπτῇ λελάληκα (cf. Isa. 45<sup>19</sup>). But we have had the contrast between ἐν κρυπτῇ and ἐν παρηγοίᾳ before (see 7<sup>9</sup>); and it is not necessary to suppose that there is here a veiled allusion to the Isaiah passage, although it is possible.

See on 3<sup>11</sup> for Jn.'s use of λαλῶν as signifying frank and unreserved speech. It is noteworthy that the strongest repudiation in the Gospels of cryptic or esoteric teaching in the words of Jesus is found in Jn.

21. For ἐρωτᾷς, ἐρώτησον, the rec., with some lesser initials, has the stronger ἐπερωτᾷς, ἐπερώτησον (cf. v. 7).

τί με ἐρωτᾷς; It was a recognised principle of law that a man's evidence about himself was suspect. See on 5<sup>11</sup>.

τί ἐλάλησα αὐτοῖς . . . ἂ εἴπω ἐγὼ. The two verbs have the same meaning (see on 3<sup>11</sup>).

22. εἰς παρεστηκότας τῶν ἀκηρῶν. So K<sup>2</sup>BW aff., but AC<sup>2</sup>D<sup>2</sup>MS<sup>2</sup>NTG<sup>2</sup>Θ sytt. have ἐπὶ τοῖς εἰς τῶν ἄκρη παρεστ. For the constr. εἰς τῶν . . . cf. 12<sup>4</sup> 10<sup>34</sup>.

This ἄκηρῶν was one of the Temple policemen, who have been mentioned vn. 3, 12 as having taken part in the arrest of Jesus; he was standing by to guard the prisoner.

βέτασμα is also used by Mk. (14<sup>65</sup>) in the same context, and is applied again, 10<sup>2</sup>, to the insults offered to Jesus by the Roman soldiers. As Field has shown (in loc.), it means a slap on the cheek, given with the open hand by way of insulting rebuke rather than with the intention of inflicting bodily injury. Cf. Isa. 50<sup>7</sup>, τὸν νύκτον μου ἴδωκα εἰς μάστιγας, τὰς δὲ σιγαλῶνας μου εἰς βετασματα. βεταῖναι was used by the older Greek writers for βεββίζειν, "to strike with a stick," but it came to be reserved for "to slap." Cf. Hos. 11<sup>7</sup>, Mt. 5<sup>29</sup> 26<sup>67</sup>. Abbott (Diat. 493) cites 1 Esd. 4<sup>26</sup>, where one of the king's favourite women slaps him playfully.

Οὕτως ἀπεκριθῆ τῷ ἀρχιερεῖ; "Answerest Thou the high priest," i. e. probably Annas, "so unbecomingly?"

It is obvious that conduct of this kind on the part of an underling would not have been permitted at a formal judicial sitting of the Sanhedrim.

καὶς ἐλάλησα, μαρτύρησον περὶ τοῦ κακοῦ· εἰ δὲ καλῶς, τί με ἔρεις; 24. ἀπόστειλεν οὖν αὐτὸν ὁ Ἄννας δεδεμένον πρὸς Καϊάφαν τὸν ἀρχιερεῖα.

23. ἀπεκρ. αὐτῷ ἰησοῦς. See on v. 1st for the omission of δ before ἰησ.

μαρτύρησον, i. e. give your testimony in legal fashion. εἰ δὲ καλῶς, τί με ἔρεις; ἔρεις, "to beat," is the word used in the same context at Lk. 22nd. It is used of an insulting blow in the face, as here, at a Cor. 11th.

This dignified reply shows that the precept of Mt. 5th is not always to be obeyed in the letter.

24. ἀπόστειλεν cannot be treated as a pluperfect, as the A. V. treats it: "had sent," in order to escape the difficulties that arise if Caiaphas is supposed to have been the high priest of vv. 19, 23 (see on v. 13). ἀπόστειλεν οὖν κτλ., means, "So Annas sent Him to Caiaphas," i. e. when his preliminary inquiry was over. οὖν is read by BC*LNW<sup>8</sup> and must be retained; it has δέ, and the rec. text omits any conjunctive particle, an omission which obscures the sense. See p. 37 f.

δεδεμένον. He had been unbound, no doubt, during the inquiry (cf. v. 12); but He was bound again, on being sent off to the official place of meeting of the Sanhedrim, where Caiaphas would preside, in order to ratify the sentence that had already been informally arranged. This official hall was not the palace of the high priest, but was situated on the western side of the Temple mount.<sup>2</sup>

Peter's second and third denials of Jesus (vv. 25-27)

25. The courtyard scene is now taken up again from v. 18, where see note. We had there δ Πέτρος ἰσθῆος καὶ θερμαινόμενος, and the phrase is repeated to bring us back to what has been said before, but with the characteristic substitution of Σίμων Πέτρος for δ Πέτρος of v. 18, as the apostle has been out of the narrative for some paragraphs (see on v. 15 above).

That there was some interval between the first denial of Peter and the third is apparent from the Synoptists, although they do not agree in small details. Mk. and Mt. suggest that the second interrogation of Peter followed hard upon the first, but this is told explicitly only by Lk. (μετὰ βραχύ, Lk. 22nd). Then Mk. 14th and Mt. 26th say that the third interrogation was μετὰ μετρίων after the second, but Lk. allows an hour

25. Ἦν δὲ Σίμων Πέτρος ἰσθῆος καὶ θερμαινόμενος. εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ εἶ; ἤγγισατο ἑκείνος καὶ εἶπεν Οὐκ εἶμι. 26. λέγει ἐκ ἐκ τῶν δούλων τοῦ ἀρχιερέως, συγκρατῆς ἐν οὐ ἀπέκασεν Πέτρος τὸ ἄτιον Οὐκ ἔγω εἶπον ἐν τῇ κτῆσῃ to elapse (διαστῆσις ὡσεὶ ὥρας μίας, Lk. 22nd). Jn. brings the second denial nearer to the third than Lk. does; but that there was more than an hour's interval between the first and the third, as Lk. records, is quite in agreement with the Johannine account.

εἶπον οὖν αὐτῷ. The speakers are not defined: on lui dit. Μὴ καὶ σὺ ἐκ τῶν μαθ. αὐτ. κτλ. The question and answer are almost the same as those of v. 17; and the question is again expressed as if a negative answer were expected (see on v. 17). This is a point peculiar to Jn.'s narrative; he describes the first two interrogatories as put in a form which almost suggested that Peter should say "No!" In this (see also on v. 27), Jn. gives a less severe account of Peter's lapse from courage and faithfulness than the Synoptists do.

26. The slaves of the high priest have been mentioned as present in the courtyard (v. 18). One of them is here described as a kinsman of Malchus (v. 10), a remark which has been thought to imply some acquaintance with the high priest's household (see on v. 16). The reason for the slave's insistent identification, viz. that he had seen Peter with Jesus at Gethsemane, is not found elsewhere; the Synoptists telling that Peter was suspected because of his Galilean accent. "Did not I see thee in the garden with Him?" ἐγὼ εἶπα ἐπιθετικῶς, "I, with my own eyes." But the slave apparently was not able to satisfy the bystanders that he was right, for Peter's denial was accepted. The temptation to say "No" was even greater this time than before, for the mention of the blow struck at Malchus suggests that Malchus' kinsman suspected Peter of having been the assailant. Had Peter been arrested on this count, he would have been dealt with very severely. To be a "disciple" of Jesus was not a legal offence, although the confession of it might lead to trouble; but to have drawn a weapon and assaulted one of the high priest's household was another matter.

27. πάλιν οὖν ἀφῆσταν. No words are given; only the fact of the denial is recorded. This is in strong contrast to the denial with curses and oaths which is described by Mk. 14th (followed by Mt. 26th, but not by Lk.).

According to the Lucan narrative, at this point, "the Lord turned and looked upon Peter" (Lk. 22nd). Accordingly, we must suppose Jesus to have come down from the chamber μετ' αὐτοῦ; 27. πάλιν οὖν ἤρξατο Πέτρος, καὶ εὐθέως ἄλεκτωρ ἐφώνησεν.

28. Ἄκουσον οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀπὸ τοῦ Καϊάφα εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον.

where He had been informally examined, and to have been passing through the courtyard on His way to Caiaphas for formal trial and sentence, when Peter again denied his discipleship, and was overheard by his Master. Jn. hurries over this scene of painful memories.

εὐθέως ἄλεκτωρ ἐφώνησεν, "immediately a cock crew." Lk. 22<sup>34</sup> has παραχρῆμα, but Mt. 26<sup>74</sup> has εὐθέως as here. In Jn. εὐθέως always connotes immediate consecutiveness (see on 5<sup>7</sup>).

All the evangelists speak of the actual crowing of a cock (Mk. speaks of two crows, 14<sup>68, 70</sup>) within the precincts of the palace, and find in it the literal fulfilment of the prediction made by Jesus (13<sup>38</sup>). Salmon<sup>1</sup> held that this prediction "meant no more than that Peter should deny Him thrice before the hour of cockcrow, viz. that hour of early morning which was technically known as ἡ ἄλεκτοροφωνία" (cf. Mk. 13<sup>38</sup>). C. H. Mayo made a further suggestion; viz. that the signal heard by Peter was "the gallicinium, the signal given on the bucina at the close of the third night watch, and the change of guard."<sup>2</sup> This is probably what happened. "Before a cock shall crow" (13<sup>38</sup>) would be a vague note of time, for cocks are apt to crow at uncertain hours during the night. But "before the ἄλεκτοροφωνία" is precise; and the hour of ἄλεκτοροφωνία was made public by a military signal.

On this interpretation, the word πρῶσι in v. 28 is peculiarly appropriate, for, according to Roman reckoning, the four watches of the night were ἀφ' ἡμερονικίων, ἄλεκτοροφωνία, and πρῶσι. As soon as the signal had sounded at the close of ἄλεκτοροφωνία, it would be πρῶσι.

Jn. says nothing about Peter's bitter tears of repentance for his failure. Every one knew, when the Fourth Gospel was written, that Peter had repented, and his return to his Master's favour is specially recorded in the Appendix (21<sup>15</sup>). It is quite in the manner of Jn. to omit something which no Christian needed to be told.

(vv. 28-32)

28. Ἄκουσον οὖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀπὸ τοῦ Καϊάφα κτλ. We have in v. 24 the statement that Jesus was "sent to Caiaphas,"

ἀπὸ τοῦ Καϊάφα need not mean "from the house of Caiaphas" (cf. Mk. 5<sup>2</sup>, Acts 16<sup>40</sup>), but more naturally means "from Caiaphas," i.e. from the ecclesiastical court over which he presided. Some O.L. codices, e.g. ε ff 8, etc., have ad Caiphān, a reading due to a misunderstanding of the sequence of events. See Intro., pp. xxvi-xxviii.

εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον. πραιτώριον signified a praetor's or general's quarters in a camp, and the word came to be used of the official residence of a governor (cf. τὸ πραιτώριον of Herod at Caesarea, Acts 23<sup>35</sup>). It is not certain where the praetorium at Jerusalem, that is, Pilate's house, was situated; but it is probably to be identified with Herod's palace on the Hill of Zion in the western part of the upper city. Pilate was certainly lodged there on one occasion, for Philo (ad Caium, 38) reports that he hung up golden shields ἐν τοῖς κατὰ τὴν ἱερουσόλῃν Ἡρώδου βασιλείῳ. Further, Gessius Florus, who was procurator of Judea about thirty-five years after Pilate, had at one time Herod's palace as a residence, for Josephus says so in a passage so illustrative of the Passion narratives that it must be quoted: Φλώρος δὲ τότε μὲν ἐν τοῖς βασιλείῳ σιδήρεται, τῇ δ' ὑστεραίῃ βῆμα πρὸ αὐτῶν βίμενος καθίξεναι, καὶ προσελθόντες αἱ τε ἀρχιερεῖς . . . παρήστησαν τὸ βῆμα (Bell. Jud., ii. 14, 8). And in ii. 15, 5, Josephus explicitly calls the Procurator's residence ἡ βασιλικὴ αἰθρῆ; cf. Mk. 15<sup>15</sup>, ἔσω τῆς αἰθρῆς, ὅ ἐστι πραιτώριον. The mention of the βῆμα placed in full view of the high priests and the notables who came before Florus for judgment is noteworthy (cf. 19<sup>13</sup> below).

The other site suggested for the Praetorium is the Castle of Antonia, to the north of the Temple area, a fourth-century tradition placing Pilate's house in this neighbourhood. That a large part of the garrison lived here is admitted, but that does not favour the idea that it was the Procurator's residence. The course of the Via Dolorosa, as now shown, favours Antonia as the place of condemnation of Jesus; but there is no real authority behind this tradition.<sup>1</sup>

θῶσιν ἀλλὰ φάγωσιν τὸ πάσχα. 29. ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πιλάτος ἐξου πρωτὶ, i.e. early in the morning of Friday, 14 Nisan (see on v. 27). Pilate must have known already that Roman soldiers had been sent to arrest Jesus the night before (v. 3), and he may have been warned to be ready at an early hour. The Jewish ecclesiastics who accompanied Jesus to the Prætorium did not enter ἵνα μὴ μανθῶσιν ἀλλὰ φάγωσιν τὸ πάσχα. See on 11th. By going into a house from which the leaven had not been removed (Ex. 12th), they would have been incapacitated from eating the Passover that evening. Ceremonial uncleanness in many cases lasted until sunset only (Lev. 11th 14th, Num. 19th, Deut. 23rd, etc.); but in the case of the Passover one who was unclean had to postpone his observance for a whole month (Num. 9th 11; cf. 2 Chron. 30th 9). This would have been inconvenient for the priests, and so they remained outside the house, Pilate having to come out to ask for the charge against Jesus, and to go back again into the Prætorium to question Him as to His defence.

For ἀλλὰ φάγωσιν (κABC*DNWΘ), the rec. has ἀλλ' ἵνα φάγωσι. For φαγῶν τὸ πάσχα, which must mean the eating of the Passover meal itself, cf. Mk. 14th, Mt. 26th.

The scruple of the priests about entering the Prætorium is recorded by Jn. only. It is an instance of his "irony" (see on 1st) that he does not comment upon it. These men were about to pollute their souls by unscrupulous testimony which was to bring Jesus to a horrible death, yet were unwilling to incur technical or ceremonial uncleanness while giving that testimony. There is no perversion so sinister as that of the human conscience.

29. The narrative of Pilate's action in regard to Jesus is told with more fullness in Jn. than in the Synoptists (cf. Mk. 15th, Mt. 27th, Lk. 23rd).

ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πιλάτος ἐξου. As the Jews would not enter the Prætorium, Pilate came outside. This is the force of οὖν, "therefore" . . . The redundant ἐξῆλθεν . . . ἐξου is for the sake of explicitness "he came out, outside"; cf. 19th and see on 4th. The rec. text, with AC<sup>2</sup>DNW om. ἐξου, but ins. κBC*LNW.

Abbott points out (Diat. 1966) that Jn.'s habit is to introduce a personal name without the article; but here we have ὁ Πιλάτος, as at Lk. 23rd.

For φησὶν (κBC*L), the rec. has εἶπε.

s.v. "Prætorium"; Sanday, Sacred Sites, p. 52 f. Westcott and Swete favour Antonia.

πρὸς αὐτοὺς καὶ φησὶν τίνα κατηγορίας φέρετε τοῦ ἀδράσαντος τούτου; 30. ἀπεκρίθησαν καὶ εἶπαν αὐτῷ εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος κακὸν ποιῶν, οὐκ ἔν ἐστιν παραβάκιον αὐτόν. 31. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Πιλάτος Δάβετε αὐτὸν ἡμεῖς, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ἡμῶν κρίνατε αὐτόν. εἶπεν αὐτῷ εἰ τίνα κατηγορίας φέρετε κτλ. Pilate (see on v. 28) knew something of the case already; but it was necessary for him to be notified formally of the nature of the accusation brought against the prisoner.

30. The Jews are not sure of their case, and so they hesitate to specify the charge in explicit terms. They say, in effect, "That is our business; we would not have brought the prisoner for sentence, if we were not satisfied with His guilt."

Εἰ μὴ ἦν οὗτος κακὸν ποιῶν κτλ. "If this person were not doing wrong, we should not have delivered Him up to thee." For κακὸν ποιῶν (κ<sup>2</sup>BLWe), the rec., with AC<sup>2</sup>DNWNLGΔΘ, has κακοποιῶν, a word found in N.T. only in 1 Pet. 2nd. 14 3rd 4th. Perhaps ἦν followed by the pres. part. suggests a habitual evil-doer (cf. Abbott, Diat. 2277).

οὐκ ἔν ἐστιν παραβάκιον αὐτόν. σοι μάγ be emphatic, "we should not have delivered Him up to thee" (cf. Abbott, Diat. 2566b). In any case, the reply of the Jews is an insolent one.

31. Pilate, however, knew how to deal with insolence of this kind: "Very well; take Him yourselves (ἡμεῖς being emphatic) and judge Him according to your own law," an answer not unlike that of Gallio in Acts 18th. Pilate repeats this Δάβετε αὐτόν ἡμεῖς at 19th; throughout he is unwilling to take any responsibility, and he knows that if the Jews take over the case for final settlement, they cannot inflict the death penalty. On the other hand, if they wish him to send Jesus to death, they must satisfy him that their sentence was a just one.

This rejoinder disconcerts the Jewish accusers of Jesus, who are bent upon His death, although they are not sure of their legal position as regards evidence; so they can only say, "It is not lawful for us to put any one to death."

This was, in fact, the law from the time that Judæa became a Roman province. The ius gladii was reserved to the procurator (Josephus, B. J. II. viii. 1). Josephus tells of a case in which the high priest had sentenced some persons to death by stoning, a sentence against which some citizens successfully protested as ultra vires, the high priest being deposed for his presumption (Ant. XX. 9. 1). No doubt, violent and high-handed action on the part of the Sanhedrim may have been occasionally winked at by the Roman authorities, for political reasons. If Jesus had been killed by the agents of the Sanhedrim before He had gained the ear of the Jerusalem populace (cf., e.g., 7<sup>1, 2, 3</sup>), it might have been overlooked by the procurator; but the chief priests were not sure now that they had the people with them, and their only safe course was, having examined Jesus themselves, to bring Him to Pilate for sentence.

32. In this, the evangelist, as is his wont, sees the fulfilment of a saying of Jesus. If the Jews had put Jesus to death by stoning, His death by crucifixion, of which He had already spoken (12<sup>20</sup>), would not have taken place; and stoning was the Jewish penalty for blasphemy, of which the Sanhedrim had found Him guilty. Jn. has told nothing as yet of the charge of blasphemy, and he gives no particulars of it, merely indicating at a later point in the narrative (19) that it was reported to Pilate (see on v. 19 above).

Ἦν ὁ λόγος τοῦ Ἰησοῦ πληρωθῆν. Cf. v. 9 for the phrase Ἦν πληρωθῆν, introducing another saying of Jesus, and see Intro., p. clv, for Jn.'s doctrine that the words of Jesus were predestined to fulfilment, even as the words of the O.T. Scriptures. The saying to which allusion is made here is, "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, etc." (12<sup>20</sup>, where see note). There, as here, Jn. adds the comment σημαῖων τοῖς θανάτῃ ἡμελλεν (see on 6<sup>7</sup> for this verb) ἀποθνήσκαι. See Intro., p. clv, for the comments which Jn. is accustomed to make on his narrative; and cf. 3<sup>14</sup> for the predictions by Jesus of His death.

The first examination of Jesus by Pilate (vv. 33-37)

33. The Roman soldiers, at this point, took charge of Jesus. Pilate retired from the open court, where he had met the Jewish leaders, and went back into his palace, summoning Jesus to come before him for private examination.

εἰσήλθεν οὖν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν. So ΜΑΓΔΘ (cf. 19<sup>9</sup>), but BC<sup>5</sup>D<sup>10</sup>W support πάλιν εἰς τὸ πραιτ. For πάλιν, which here signifies "back" to the place where Pilate was before, see on 1<sup>2</sup>.

For εἰσήλθεν, see on 1<sup>2</sup>. The disciple who seems to have been present at the examination of Jesus by Annas (see on v. 15) may also have been a witness of the scene in Pilate's palace which is here told so vividly. The priestly accusers of Jesus could not follow Him inside the house, because of their εἰσέλθοντες τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων; 34. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς Ἀπὸ σαυτοῦ σὺ τοιοῦτο λέγεις, ἢ ἄλλοι εἰσὶν σοὶ παρὶ ἐμοῦ; 35. ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος Μὴτι ἐγὼ Ἰουδαῖός εἰμι; τὸ ἔθνος τὸ σὸν καὶ ἀρχιερεῖς παρέθηκαν σοὶ ἡμαῖ τί ἐποίησας; scruples about ceremonial uncleanness (v. 28); but it is not likely that admission to the chamber of inquiry was forbidden to others duly introduced who wished to hear what was going on.

Σὺ εἶ ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων; This question was immediately put to Jesus by Pilate,<sup>1</sup> as all the evangelists tell (Mk. 15<sup>2</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>1</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>3</sup>); but it is only Lk. who explains that Jesus had first been accused to Pilate of claiming to be a King (Lk. 23<sup>2</sup>). Pilate fixes upon this point as one which it was necessary for him as procurator to examine, and he puts his question in a form which suggests that he expected a negative answer. "Thou! (σὺ is emphatic) art Thou the King of the Jews?" Evidently, Pilate did not believe that Jesus was a revolutionary leader, as he had been informed (Lk. 23<sup>2</sup>). There was nothing in His appearance or His demeanor to make such a charge plausible.

Ἀπὸ σαυτοῦ εἰς the better reading (ABC<sup>5</sup>LN) as against the rec. Ἀπὸ ἐμεῦ (Θ).

The answer of Jesus is to put another question, viz. whether Pilate has any reason of his own, apart from the accusation just now made by the Jewish leaders (ἢ ἄλλοι εἰσιν σοὶ παρὶ ἐμοῦ); for supposing that Jesus had claimed to be "King of the Jews."

35. But Pilate will not bandy words with an accused prisoner. What could he know about Jesus except what he had been told? "Am I a Jew?"

For the form of the question Μὴτι ἐγὼ . . . ; see on 4<sup>19</sup>. "Thy nation (for ἔθνος, cf. 11<sup>20-21</sup>) and the chief priests have delivered Thee to me," the chief priests representing the leaders of the Sanhedrim (cf. 11<sup>20</sup> 12<sup>10</sup>).

τί ἐποίησας; "What did you do?" That was the point which Pilate wished to find out. What action of Jesus had provoked this fierce hostility? Was it an action which ought to be punished, from Pilate's point of view, with death?

<sup>1</sup> The language in which the conversation with Pilate was carried on was probably Greek; but it is, of course, possible that Pilate was able to speak the vernacular Aramaic sufficiently for the purposes of a judicial inquiry.

36. ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς Ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου· εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου ἦν ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ, οἱ ἑσπέρηται οἱ

36. But Jesus does not answer this question. He goes back to the charge that He had claimed to be "King of the Jews." He had refused such a title already (6<sup>34</sup>), but He had often spoken of a coming kingdom. It was the kingdom of which Daniel had written (Dan. 2<sup>44</sup>, 7<sup>14</sup>, 8<sup>25</sup>), a spiritual kingdom of which the saints were to be citizens. And this He states before Pilate, that there may be no ambiguity in His position. When cross-examined by the priests, as the Synoptists tell, He had accepted their statement that He claimed to be Messiah (Mk. 14<sup>61</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>64</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>67</sup>), and so far there was some plausibility in their accusation of Him before Pilate. But He did not interpret the title of Messiah as implying earthly domination and national leadership against the suzerainty of Rome; and this was the gravamen of the charge brought against Him, so far as Pilate was concerned. Hence He tells the procurator that His kingdom is not "of this world" (cf., for the phrase δὲ κόσμος οὗτος, 8<sup>23</sup>, 14<sup>30</sup>). He does not claim to be "King of the Jews" in any sense that was treasonable to Rome.

εἰ ἐκ τοῦ κόσμου τούτου κτλ., "If my kingdom were of this world, then would my officers (ἑσπέρηται) be striving, so that I should not be delivered to the Jews," i.e. the hostile Jews, as regularly in Jn. (see on 5<sup>19</sup>).

Except in this passage, ἑσπέρηται in Jn. is always used of the Temple police, the "officers" of the Sanhedrim. ἑσπέρηται occurs only 4 times in the LXX (Prov. 14<sup>35</sup>, Wisd. 6<sup>4</sup>, Isa. 32<sup>5</sup>, Dan. 3<sup>66</sup>), and always means the minister or officer of a king, as here. Jesus tells Pilate that He, too, has His ἑσπέρηται, as well as the high priests, but that just because His kingdom is of the spirit they are not defending Him by force.

Who are meant here by the ἑσπέρηται of Jesus? Certainly not the small and timid company of His disciples, who made no attempt to prevent His arrest, with the sole exception of Peter, whose action only showed the uselessness of trying to resist the police and the soldiers. Jesus, indeed, according to Mt. (26<sup>52</sup>) as well as Jn. (18<sup>11</sup>), forbade Peter to employ force; but He did not suggest that the resort to arms by the disciples would have been of any practical use. Pilate knew very well that the followers of Jesus were not numerous enough to resist by force the carrying out of any sentence of his.

The ἑσπέρηται of Jesus upon whom He might call, if He would, were mentioned by Him, according to Mt. 26<sup>52</sup>, at the moment of His arrest: "Thinkest thou that I cannot beseech ἔμοι ἀν ἡγωνίζομαι, ἵνα μὴ παραδοθῶ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις· νῦν δὲ ἡ βασιλεία ἡ ἐμὴ οὐκ ἔστιν ἐπιγινώσκουσα. 37. εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος Οὐκοῦν βασιλεὺς εἶ σὺ; ἀπεκρίθη δὲ Ἰησοῦς Σὺ λέγεις ὅτι βασιλεὺς my Father, and He shall even now send me more than twelve legions of angels?" These were the ἑσπέρηται of the kingdom which Jesus had come to establish.

ἡγωνίζομαι. The verb does not occur again in Jn.; cf. 1 Tim. 6<sup>12</sup>.

νῦν δὲ κτλ., "but now, as things are, my kingdom is not from hence," sc. of this world. For νῦν δὲ, cf. 8<sup>48</sup>, 9<sup>11</sup>, 15<sup>23</sup>.

37. Οὐκοῦν βασιλεὺς εἶ σὺ; Pilate fastens on this mention of Jesus' kingdom: "Well then, are you a king?" The concluding σὺ is incredulous in its emphasis: "you poor prisoner." οὐκοῦν is found again in the Greek Bible only in the A text of 2 Kings 5<sup>28</sup>.

ἀπεκρίθη δὲ Ἰησοῦς. The art. is omitted, according to Jn.'s usual habit when using this phrase (see on 1<sup>30</sup>, 8<sup>12</sup>), by LWTA; but it must be retained here, being read by NABD<sup>1909</sup>N.

Σὺ λέγεις ὅτι βασιλεὺς εἶμι. Westcott-Hort note in the margin that this might be taken as a question: "Do you say that I am a king?" But the Synoptists agree in giving as the reply of Jesus to the question "Art thou the King of the Jews?" the words σὺ λέγεις (Mk. 15<sup>2</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>11</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>2</sup>), which is neither a clear affirmation nor a denial, but an assent given as a concession. But cf. the answer ἡμεῖς λέγομεν ὅτι ἐγὼ εἶμι to the question of the priests, "Art thou the Son of God?" in Lk. 22<sup>70</sup>. Here, in like manner, we must translate, "Thou sayest that I am a king." This is the point on which Pilate has been insisting, that Jesus' claim seemed to be one of kingship, and Jesus admits it again (cf. v. 36), but adds some explanatory words.

The R.V. margin offers the alternative rendering, "Thou sayest it, because I am a king," but the Synoptic parallels do not support this.

It has been alleged that σὺ λέγεις or σὺ εἶπας was a Rabbinic formula of solemn affirmation (Schöttgen on Mt. 26<sup>63</sup>), but Dalman has shown that this cannot be sustained. Where "thou hast said" appears in the Talmud, it is merely equivalent to "you are right."<sup>1</sup> In any case, we have here not an ellipse such as σὺ λέγεις, with nothing added, but a complete sentence, "Thou sayest that I am a king."

After εἶμι the rec. adds ἐγὼ (repeating it again in the next sentence, ἐγὼ ἐκ τούτου κτλ.) with AFDANE, but NBD<sup>1909</sup>I. omit the first ἐγὼ. If it were genuine, it might carry a reference είμι. ἐγὼ εἰς τοῦτο γενήθηκα καὶ εἰς τοῦτο ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον, ἵνα μαρτυρήσω τῇ ἀληθείᾳ· πᾶς ὃ ἐν ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας ἀκούει μου τῆς φωνῆς.

38. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Πιλάτος τί ἴσθαι ἀλήθεια; Καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν πάλιν ἐξῆλθεν πρὸς τοὺς Ἰουδαίους, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς Ἐγὼ οὐδὲμίαν to the contemptuous σύ in Pilate's question; but the answer is more dignified, without any emphasis on the "I": "I say that I am a king."

Ἐγὼ εἰς τοῦτο γενήθηκα. Here the ἐγὼ is impressive: "To this end I have been born."<sup>1</sup> See note on 1<sup>23</sup>; and cf. Lk. 1<sup>26</sup> τὸ γονατισμένον ἔγωγε, Jn. 16<sup>24</sup> ἐγενήθη. The reference is to the Nativity, not to the Incarnation; cf. also Rom. 14<sup>6</sup>.

καὶ εἰς τοῦτο ἐλήλυθα εἰς τὸν κόσμον, a favourite Johannine phrase, e.g. 9<sup>39</sup> 16<sup>33</sup>; see on 11<sup>27</sup>.

ἵνα μαρτυρήσω τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. Truth is one of the keywords of the Fourth Gospel (see on 1<sup>14</sup>). It was John the Baptist's privilege to bear witness to the truth (5<sup>20</sup>), but in a deeper and fuller measure was this the purpose of Jesus' mission. His witness to the truth was not confined to this "good confession" before Pilate (1 Tim. 6<sup>12</sup>), but was continuous throughout His ministry (3<sup>11</sup>. 33 7<sup>814</sup>). Cf. Rev. 1<sup>6</sup>.

πᾶς ὃ ἐν ἐκ τῆς ἀληθείας (for this description of a candid mind, cf. 1 Jn. 3<sup>19</sup> ἀκούει μου τῆς φωνῆς, "heareth my voice," i.e. hears with appreciation and obedience, for such is the force of ἀκούειν followed by the gen. (see on 3<sup>9</sup>). The sheep hear the voice of the Shepherd (10<sup>26</sup>. 27); and the spiritual deafness which does not hear it is blameworthy (see on 8<sup>27</sup>, and cf. 1 Jn. 4<sup>9</sup>). No such claim on man's allegiance was ever made by any other master: "Every one who is of the truth heareth my voice."

Pilate suggests to the Jews, unavailingly, that Jesus should be released (vv. 38-40)

38. Pilate is now convinced that Jesus' "kingdom" is not a temporal one, and that He is innocent of revolutionary designs. His rejoinder is perhaps wistful rather than cynical or careless: "What is truth?" But to this, the greatest of questions, he does not wait for an answer. He goes outside again (πάλιν, see v. 29) to the Jews assembled in the courtyard, and roundly tells them that he can find no reason why Jesus should be put to death.

ἐγὼ οὐδὲμίαν εἰρήσκω ἐν αὐτῷ αἰτίαν. This is the order of

εἰρήσκω ἐν αὐτῷ αἰτίαν. 39. ἴσθαι δὲ συνέθετα ἑμῶν ἵνα ἕνα ἀπολέσω ἑμῶν ἐν τῷ πιάσκῳ· βούλοσθε οὖν ἀπολύσω ἑμῶν τὸν βασιλεῖα words in BL, but the rec., with ΜΑΝΩΤΑΘ, puts αἰτίαν after οὐδὲμίαν. According to Jn., Pilate says this three times to the Jewish accusers (19<sup>4-9</sup>); as also does Lk. 23<sup>34</sup>. 38, who has αἰτίαν for αἰτίαν. The αἰτία is the crimen, the thing charged against the prisoner; cf. Mk. 15<sup>26</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>27</sup>, and see on 19<sup>19</sup>. For this use of αἰτία, cf. Gen. 4<sup>23</sup>, Prov. 23<sup>17</sup>.

At this point in the narrative, Luke gives an incident unrecorded by the other evangelists (Lk. 23<sup>29-32</sup>). He says that Pilate caught at the word "Galilæan" which had been used by the accusers of Jesus, and, anxious to evade responsibility, sent Jesus to Herod, the tetrarch of Galilee, who was then at Jerusalem. According to this story, which has every mark of genuineness and which no one was likely to invent, Jesus kept silence before Herod, and having been mocked by the soldiers was sent back to Pilate. Herod was not anxious to involve himself in any question of treason against the imperial authority.

Pilate's next effort to save Jesus, or to save himself from the shame of condemning one whom he believed to be innocent, was to appeal to a Passover custom of releasing a prisoner from custody. Of this custom we know nothing beyond what is told in the Gospels, but there is nothing improbable in the statement that it prevailed at Jerusalem. Livy tells of something similar at the Roman Leclitisterna (Livy, v. xiii. 8), and there is an allusion to it in Dion. Halicarn. (xii. 9).<sup>2</sup> βούλοσθε οὖν ἀπολύσω ἑμῶν τὸν βασιλεῖα τῶν Ἰουδαίων; Mk. 15<sup>6</sup> has the question in the same words, Jesus being described as "the King of the Jews" by Pilate, with a contemptuous allusion to the charge made against Him by the chief priests.

At this stage in the narrative, Mt. 27<sup>19</sup> tells that a dream of Pilate's wife was reported to him, warning him not to condemn Jesus. There is nothing of this in the other Gospels, but the incident, if genuine, would fully account for Pilate's hesitancy in signing the death warrant.

40. ἐπράξατε (see on 11<sup>28</sup> for this verb) οὖν πάλιν πάλιν, "Then they yelled again, etc." Jn. condenses the story; he has not told before of the wild shouts of the crowd. After πάλιν, the rec. inserts πάντες, but om. RBLW. For πάλιν, N substitutes πάντες.

τῶν Ἰουδαίων; 40. ἐκράνυσαν αὐτὸν πάλιν λέγοντες Μὴ τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ τὸν Βαραββᾶν. ἦν δὲ ὁ Βαραββᾶς ληστής.

XIX. 1. Τότε αὐτὸν ἔλαβεν ὁ Πιλάτος τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ ἡμοσίωσεν. 2. καὶ οἱ στρατιῶται πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν

Μὴ τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ τὸν Βαραββᾶν. Mk. 15<sup>11</sup> (followed by Mt. 27<sup>20</sup>) tells that the priests had suggested this to the mob. Mt. alone says that Pilate had offered the alternative "Jesus, or Barabbas" (Mt. 27<sup>17</sup>, where a famous variant gives Jesus as the name also of the robber, whose patronymic was Barabbas). Lk. 23<sup>18</sup>.<sup>20</sup> says that Barabbas was an insurgent and a murderer (cf. Acts 3<sup>16</sup>); Mk. 15<sup>7</sup> saying that he was an associate of such. Mt. 27<sup>16</sup> only says that he was a "notable" prisoner (ὄσσημον ἐπίσημος), and the article here, τὸν Βαρ., would agree with this, "the well-known Barabbas."

ἦν δὲ ὁ Βαραββᾶς ληστής. Jn.'s description of him is powerful in its brevity, and provides a good illustration of his "irony" (see on 1<sup>46</sup>). For ληστής, cf. 10<sup>1-8</sup>.

The release of Barabbas, which must have followed here, is not explicitly related. Probably Pilate ascended his βῆμα (cf. 10<sup>19</sup>) to pronounce the formal sentence which would free the prisoner.

Jesus is scourged and mocked by the soldiers (XIX. 1-5). Pilate makes another unavailing attempt to save Him (vv. 6, 7)

XIX. 1. Pilate went back into the palace, where Jesus was, and ordered Him to be scourged, in the hope (apparently) that this sufficiently terrible punishment would satisfy the chief priests (cf. Lk. 23<sup>19</sup>). Mk. 15<sup>16</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>26</sup> connect the scourging and the mock coronation with the death sentence (see on v. 16 below), but Jn.'s narrative is very explicit and is to be followed here. The "Pillar of the Scourging" is now shown in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, but in the fourth century it was shown to the Bordeaux Pilgrim in the traditional house of Caiaphas. The original pillar to which the Lord was bound was, no doubt, inside the Prætorium. Cf. Mt. 20<sup>19</sup>, Lk. 18<sup>28</sup>.

2. In the account of the mockery of Jesus by the soldiers of Pilate, Jn. follows Mk. 15<sup>17</sup>, or, at any rate, uses phrases which recall Mk. There is no probability that he uses Mt. Lk. 23<sup>21</sup> ascribes this cruel indignity to the soldiers of Herod. The soldiers were amused by the idea that the poor prisoner claimed to be a king, and their rough jests were directed rather against the Jews than against Jesus personally. "This, then, is the King of the Jews!"

πλέξαντες στέφανον ἐξ ἀκανθῶν. Verbally identical with Mt.

ἐπέθηκεν αὐτοῦ τῇ κεφαλῇ, καὶ ἱμάτιον πορφύρεον περιέβαλον αὐτόν, 3. καὶ ἤρχοντο πρὸς αὐτὸν καὶ ἔλεγον Χαίρε, ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων· καὶ ἐβίβωσαν αὐτῷ βασιγίαια. 4. Καὶ ἐξῆλθεν πάλιν ἔξω

27<sup>20</sup>; Mk. 15<sup>17</sup> has πλέξαντες ἀκανθῶν στέφανον. Lk. does not mention the mock coronation. Pseudo-Peter (§ 3) attributes the jest to an individual; in αὐτῶν ἐνεργον στέφανον ἀκάνθινον ἔθηκεν ἐπὶ τῇ κεφαλῇ τοῦ κυρίου.

The soldiers plaited the twigs of some thorny plant into a crown or wreath (cf. ὁ στέφανος . . . ὁ πλεκτός, Isa. 28<sup>9</sup>).

ἐπέθηκεν αὐτοῦ τῇ κεφαλῇ. This phrase, too, might be thought to come from Mt. 27<sup>20</sup> ἐπέθηκεν ἐπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ, for Mk. 15<sup>17</sup> has only περιέθεισαν αὐτῷ. But Jn. says nothing of the mock sceptre which Mt. mentions, a detail which is not in Mk. It would be precarious to infer that Jn. is using Mt.'s narrative.

καὶ ἱμάτιον πορφύρεον περιέβαλον αὐτόν. This is reminiscent of Mk. 15<sup>17</sup> ἐπόθουν αὐτὸν πορφυράν, rather than of Mt. 27<sup>20</sup> or Lk. 23<sup>11</sup> (where, however, we find περιβαλὼν αὐτὸν ἰσθῆτα λαμπρῶν).<sup>1</sup> The substitute for the regal purple (cf. 1 Macc. 8<sup>14</sup>, etc.) may have been the scarlet cloak of one of the legionaries (χλαμύδα κοκκίνη, Mt. 27<sup>20</sup>). Jesus had first been stripped of His own outer clothing (ἐδύσαντες αὐτόν, Mt. 27<sup>20</sup>). For ἱμάτιον, see on v. 23.

8. καὶ ἤρχοντο πρὸς αὐτόν. This clause is omitted in the rec. text, following AD<sup>2099</sup>ΓΔ, but is retained in κBLNWΘ. It is descriptive of the soldiers approaching Jesus with mock reverence. Philo has a story of the mock coronation of a half-witted man called Carabas by the mob at Alexandria, which illustrates this. "They approached, some as if to salute him, others as if pleading a cause, others as though making petition about public matters" (in Flacc. 6).

καὶ ἔλεγον Χαίρε, ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων. This is verbally identical with the pretended salutation as given in Mt. 27<sup>20</sup>. The soldiers cried Ave! as they would to Cæsar. The art. ὁ before βασιλεὺς τ. ἰ. suggests their derision.

καὶ ἐβίβωσαν αὐτῷ βασιγίαια. "They slapped Him" with the palms of their hands. See on 18<sup>22</sup> for μάστιγμα. ἔβίβωσαν (κBLNW) is to be preferred to the rec. ἐβίβωσαν (AD<sup>2099</sup>ΓΔΘ). They gave Him some slaps in the face, during their cruel horse-play, but this was not a continuous form of insult, like the shouting of Ave.

4. Pilate had gone into the Prætorium to order the scourging, and he now comes out again to make another appeal to the pity of the Jews. The exact reading is not certain. ABL give

ὁ Παλάτος καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς Ἴδε ἄγω ὑμῖν αὐτὸν ἔξω, ἵνα γινῶτε ὅτι οὐδέμιαν αἰτίαν εἰρήσκω ἐν αὐτῷ. 5. ἐξήλθεν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἔξω, φορῶν τὸν ἀκαθάρτου στέφανου καὶ τὸ πορφύρεον ἱμάτιον. καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς Ἰδοὺ ὁ ἄνθρωπος. 6. ὅτε οἱ οὖν ἴδον αὐτὸν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς καὶ οἱ καὶ ἐξήλθεν, κD<sup>1097</sup> omit καί; and NWΘ have ἐξήλθεν οὖν (as at 18<sup>36</sup>; see 18<sup>36</sup> and cf. v. 5).

Pilate says to the Jews that He is bringing Jesus out to them, that they may understand that, as he said before (18<sup>36</sup>), he can find no fault in Him. Up to this Jesus had been inside the Prætorium, and the scourging and mockery were probably not visible to the waiting Jews.

Ἰδε, a favourite word in Jn.; see on 1<sup>38</sup>.
ὅτι οὐδέμιαν αἰτίαν εἰρήσκω ἐν αὐτῷ. κ<sup>36</sup> has the shorter form ὅτι αἰτίαν οὐκ εἰρήσκω. The phrase has occurred 18<sup>36</sup>, and appears again 19<sup>5</sup>, in slightly different forms.

8. Jesus was brought out, no doubt weak and faint after the scourging, still wearing the mocking insignia of royalty. These He probably continued to wear until He was brought out for the last time for formal sentence (v. 15; cf. Mt. 27<sup>31</sup>).

φορῶν. This is the regular word for "wearing" clothes; cf. Mt. 11<sup>18</sup>, Jas. 2<sup>8</sup>.

καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς (sc. Pilate) Ἰδοὺ ὁ ἄνθρωπος. For Ἰδοὺ (κBL), the rec. has Jn.'s favourite ἴδε (cf. vv. 4, 14). In this verse B omits ὁ before Ἰησοῦς (see on 1<sup>36</sup>), and also before ἄνθρωπος (cf. Zech. 6<sup>13</sup> Ἰδοὺ ἄνθρωπος, referring to "the Man whose name is the Branch," the future Builder of the Temple). For Ἰησοῦς N has Παλάτος by mistake.

Ἰδοὺ ὁ ἄνθρωπος, Eccle homo! This, on Pilate's lips, meant, "See the poor fellow!" ὁ ἄνθρωπος, expressing pity. This is a classical use (cf. Dem. de falsa leg. 402, § 198, and Meid. 543, § 91); see also Mt. 26<sup>38</sup>. Pilate thought to move the priests to compassion by exhibiting Jesus to them, who had been scourged by his orders, and whom the soldiers had treated as an object of mockery and rude jesting.

Jn. may mean to represent Pilate, like Caiaphas (11<sup>48</sup>), as an unconscious prophet, his words, "Behold the Man!" pointing to the Ideal Man of all succeeding Christian generations. Abbott (Diat. 1966c) recalls some passages from Epictetus, in which ὁ ἄνθρωπος is thus used of the ideal of humanity. But such an interpretation of Pilate's famous words is probably a Christian afterthought.

The whole clause λέγει . . . ἄνθρωπος is omitted in the O.L. texts a e ff<sup>3</sup> r, and also by the Coptic Q, an interesting combination.

6. ὅτε οἱ οὖν ἴδον αὐτὸν οἱ ἀρχιερεῖς κτλ. The common people ἐπιπράει, κραύζοντας λέγοντες Σταύρωσον σταύρωσον. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Παλάτος Λάβετε αὐτὸν ἑμεῖς καὶ σταυρώσατε ἑγὼ γὰρ οὐκ εἰρήσκω ἐν αὐτῷ αἰτίαν. 7. ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι Ἡμεῖς νόμον ἔχομεν, καὶ κατὰ τὸν νόμον ὀφείλει ἀποθάνειν, ὅτι ὕψιν Θεοῦ ἑαυτὸν ἐποίηρον.

are not mentioned; the chief priests were the important persons whom Pilate wished to move from their purpose. But the sight of Jesus only angered them; and they, with their satellites (or υπαφίται), raised the shout of "Crucify!" It has been implied throughout that this was the death which they had designed for Jesus, but the word σταύρωσον is used now for the first time. Cf. Mt. 27<sup>32</sup>.

Λάβετε αὐτὸν ἑμεῖς καὶ κτλ. "Take Him yourselves, etc." Pilate repeats this suggestion, which had disconcerted the priests when he made it before (18<sup>31</sup>, where see note). He now adds "and crucify Him," although he and they both knew that the Sanhedrim could not legally do this. He also says for the third time that he can find no just cause for a death sentence (cf. 18<sup>36</sup> and v. 4). Jn., like Lk. (24<sup>34, 34, 35</sup>), is careful to record that Pilate three times affirmed his conviction of Jesus' innocence.

7. The chief priests, however, make an unexpected rejoinder. They tell Pilate that, according to Jewish law, Jesus ought to be put to death as a blasphemer, and they warn him by implication that he must not set aside their law in such a matter. It was the Roman practice to respect the laws and customs of Judæa, as of other distant provinces of the empire; and of this the accusers of Jesus remind Pilate.

Ἡμεῖς νόμον ἔχομεν, viz. Lev. 24<sup>16</sup>, which enacted that a blasphemer should be stoned to death. The chief priests knew that this could not be put into operation (see on 18<sup>31</sup>). In any case, the witnesses had to cast the first stone (Deut. 17<sup>7</sup>), and those who bore witness as to the blasphemy of Jesus were not in agreement with each other (Mk. 14<sup>49</sup>). The Sanhedrim, therefore, were content, in this particular case, that the responsibility lay with Pilate.

κατὰ τὸν νόμον (the rec. adds ἡμῶν with AΓΔΘ, but om. κBD<sup>1097</sup>LNWΔ) ὀφείλει ἀποθάνειν. For the verb ὀφείλει, see on 13<sup>34</sup>.

ὅτι ὕψιν Θεοῦ ἑαυτὸν ἐποίηρον. This charge was better founded than the charge of treason, alleged to be inherent in

8. Ὅτι οὐδὲν ἤκουσεν ὁ Πειλάτος τοῦτον τὸν λόγον, μᾶλλον ἐφοβήθη, 9. καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν καὶ λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ

Jesus' claim to be a king. "Son of God" was a recognised title of Messiah (see on 1st); and in his examination before the chief priests Jesus had admitted that He was the Messiah (Mk. 14<sup>61</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>64</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>70</sup>; in the last passage the phrase ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ being explicitly used). But He had been suspected of, and charged with, blasphemy on several occasions before this, according to Jn. See 5<sup>18</sup>, 10<sup>33</sup>, 10<sup>36</sup>. To the question τίνα σεαυτὸν σὺ ποιεῖς; (8th), the Jews had good ground for believing that υἱὸς θεοῦ would be His answer.

The omission of the def. articles in υἱὸς θεοῦ is probably due to the tendency to drop the article before familiar titles rather than to the phrase being used in any sense less exalted than the highest, as may be the case at Mt. 14<sup>33</sup>. But in this, the Messianic sense, Pilate could not have understood it, any more than the centurion at the Cross (Mt. 27<sup>44</sup>). It must have suggested to Pilate a vague, mysterious claim on the part of Jesus to be more than human; and hearing of it awakened in his mind a superstitious fear. υἱὸς θεοῦ is frequently used in inscriptions as a title of the Emperor.<sup>1</sup>

The second examination of Jesus by Pilate (vv. 8-11)

8. ὅτι οὐδὲν ἤκουσεν ὁ Πειλάτος τοῦτον τὸν λόγον κτλ. Observe that ἀκούειν followed by the acc. does not connote an intelligent hearing (see on 3<sup>d</sup>); as Abbott says (Diat. 2586), "the hearing does not produce (upon Pilate) any result beyond emotion."

μᾶλλον ἐφοβήθη, "he was more alarmed than he had been before" (see on 18th).

9. The first questioning of Jesus by Pilate has been described, 18th-20th.

καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ πραιτώριον πάλιν : cf. 18<sup>20</sup>.

Pilate's question, Πόθεν εἶ σὺ; is no formal interrogatory as to the birthplace or domicile of Jesus. He had learnt already that He was of Galilee (Lk. 23<sup>6, 7</sup>). But Pilate has been moved by the dignified bearing of the prisoner, and is uneasy because of the strange claim which He was said to have made for Himself, that He was υἱὸς θεοῦ (v. 7). The question recalls the similar question τίς υἱὸς εἶ; which was put by the Jews who were impressed, despite their incerdulity, by His words (8th).

Πόθεν εἶ σὺ; ὁ δὲ Ἰησοῦς ἀπέκρινεν οὐκ ἔβουλεν ἀπεθῆναι. 10. λέγει οὐδὲν ἀπεθῆναι ὁ Πειλάτος ἕρμαι σὺ λαλεῖς; οὐκ οἶδας ὅτι ἕρμαισιν ἔχου ἀπολοῦσθαί σε καὶ ἕρμαισιν ἔχου σταυρώσασθαι σε; 11. ἀπεκρίθη αὐτῷ

The silence of Jesus under cross-examination is mentioned in all the Gospels. Mk. 14<sup>61</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>68</sup> note His silence before the high priest; Lk. 23<sup>9</sup> says that He did not answer Herod at all; Mk. 15<sup>5</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>14</sup> state that He would not reply to the accusations which the Sanhedrim put before Pilate; and in the present passage His silence is irritating to the dignity of Pilate, who in this repeated inquiry was trying to elicit something that would save Him. Salmon suggested<sup>1</sup> that the silence of Jesus is sufficiently explained by bodily fatigue and exhaustion; and so far as this last examination by Pilate is concerned, it may well be that His exhaustion after being scourged was such that speech was difficult for Him. After the scourging Jn. ascribes only one sentence to Jesus (v. 11) before He was crucified. But bodily fatigue would not, by itself, explain His silence when cross-examined by the high priest (Mk. 14<sup>61</sup>) or before Herod (Lk. 23<sup>9</sup>); and His refusal to answer questions which were not asked in sincerity, but out of mere curiosity or with intent to betray Him into some dangerous admission, is explicable on moral grounds. Indeed, the dignity of His silence before His accusers does not need exposition. He was moving to a pre-determined end, and He knew it.

Many commentators, following Chrysostom and Augustine, find in the silence of Jesus before His judges a fulfilment of Isa. 53<sup>7</sup>.

10. Pilate's dignity is offended by receiving no answer to his question. The silence of Jesus amounts to contempt of court. Ἐμοὶ εὐ λαλεῖς; "Do you not speak to me?" ἔμοι being placed first for emphasis. "I have power (ἐξουσία) to release you, and I have power to crucify you" (the rec. text interchanges the order of these clauses).

ἐξουσία (see on 1st) is "authority," rather than "power." Pilate had both, but he is reminded by Jesus that his authority, like all human authority, is delegated; its source is Divine, and therefore it is not arbitrary power which can be exercised capriciously without moral blame.

11. ἀπεκρ. αὐτῷ ἰησοῦς. ΑΝΤΔΘ om. αὐτῷ, which is retained by κBD<sup>ms</sup>W; and κALNW<sup>ms</sup> ins. ὁ before ἰησ., but om. BD<sup>ms</sup>W. Cf. for similar variants, 18<sup>24</sup>.

εἰ μὴ ἦν δεδομένος σοι ἀνοθεῖ. This doctrine of authority is expressed by Paul in other words (Rom. 13<sup>1-5</sup>). For ἀνοθεῖ, see on 3<sup>5</sup>. It must mean "from God"; the suggestion that it means "from the ecclesiastical authority" is untenable. Pilate's ἐξουσία was not, in fact, delegated to him by the Sanhedrim.

ὁ παραδούς με σοι κτλ. So κΒΔΘ; and the rec., with AD<sup>809</sup>LNW, has παραδούς. Judas is repeatedly described in Jn. as the person who was to deliver Jesus up (cf. 6<sup>64, 71</sup> 12<sup>4</sup> 13<sup>1, 2</sup> 18<sup>3, 6</sup>), but he is not indicated in this passage. He did not deliver Jesus up to Pilate; and he disappears from the Johannine narrative after the scene of the betrayal in the garden (18<sup>30</sup>). In Mt. 27<sup>31</sup> he is represented as repenting, after the priests brought Jesus before Pilate; but the other evangelists say nothing as to this. It is remarkable that it is not told anywhere that Judas bore "witness" to what Jesus had said or done. His part was finished when he identified Jesus at Gethsemane.

Those who delivered Jesus to Pilate were the members of the Sanhedrim (18<sup>30, 31</sup>; cf. Mt. 27<sup>3</sup>, Acts 3<sup>13</sup>), with Caiaphas as their official chief. ὁ παραδούς με σοι is Caiaphas, as representing those who were ultimately responsible for the guilt of putting Jesus to death.

μείζονα ἁμαρτίαν ἔχει. These words are commonly taken to mean "has greater sin" than you; i.e. that Caiaphas was more guilty than Pilate; and this was, no doubt, true. But such an interpretation will not suit the context, or explain διὰ τοῦτο at the beginning of the sentence. "Your power and authority are delegated to you from God, therefore Caiaphas, who brought me before you for sentence, is more guilty than you." That is not easy to understand; for the ἐξουσία of Caiaphas was a trust from God, equally with that of Pilate. Wetstein suggested a better explanation: "Your power and authority are delegated to you from God, therefore Caiaphas is more guilty than he would be if you were only an irresponsible executioner, for he has used this God-given authority of yours to further his own wicked projects." μείζονα ἁμαρτίαν ἔχει, "he has greater sin," not than you (which is not in question), but than he would have had if Pilate had not been a power ordained of God. "Therefore his sin is the greater" is the meaning.

For the Johannine phrase ἔχειν ἁμαρτίαν, cf. 9<sup>4</sup>.

12. Ἐκ τούτων δὲ Παῦλος ἐξήτει ἀπολοῖσαι αὐτόν· οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι ἐκράγαζον λέγοντες Ἐάν τοῦτον ἀπολύσῃς, σὺ εἰ φίλος τοῦ Καίσαρος· πᾶς δὲ βασιλεὺς τῶν ἡμετέρων τῷ Καίσαρι.

Pilate again fails to obtain the consent of the Jews to acquit Jesus; and pronounces the formal sentence of death by crucifixion (vv. 12-16).

12. ἐκ τούτων, "thenceforth." See on 6<sup>4</sup>.

οἱ δὲ Ἰουδαῖοι ἐκράγαζον λέγοντες κτλ. ἐκράγαζον (BD<sup>809</sup>) represents the yell of fury with which the Jews received Pilate's last attempt to set Jesus free. The rec., with κ, has ἐκραζον, and ALNΘ have ἐκράγαζον, but the impf. does not represent the meaning so well as the aor. does. Mt. 27<sup>31</sup> relates that after Pilate's failure to persuade the Jews he ostentatiously washed his hands, thereby endeavouring to shift his responsibility.

The last argument which the chief priests used, and which was effective, although their former overtures to Pilate (18<sup>30</sup> 19<sup>9</sup>) had failed, was an appeal to his fears. "If you release Him, you are no friend of Cæsar." There is no need to limit the term φίλος τοῦ Καίσαρος, as if it were an official title (cf. 15<sup>30</sup>); the expression is used generally. The official title is probably not found before Vespasian.

πᾶς δὲ βασιλεὺς τῶν ἡμετέρων κτλ., "every one who makes himself a king," which was the charge brought in the first instance against Jesus (see on 18<sup>30</sup>), ἀπὸ τίτου (only here in Jn.), "opposes Cæsar." Here was a veiled threat. If Pilate were reported at Rome to have set free a man making pretension to the title "King of the Jews," it might go badly with him. Treason to the emperor was the cardinal offence for a viceroys or procurator.

13. We must read τῶν λόγων τούτων, with κΑΒW, rather than τούτων τῶν λόγων of the rec. text, which has come in from v. 8. Pilate not only heard what the Jews said, but he appreciated its force (see on 3<sup>5</sup> for ἀκούσας followed by the gen.). The reference is to the threat of v. 12. Pilate could not afford to have it reported to the emperor that he had acquitted a prisoner who was accused of setting himself up as a king. His position would be safe only if the Jews asked for an acquittal; for then he could always say that the charge had broken down.

ἤγαγεν ἔξω τὸν ἦν, "he led Jesus out," sc. from the Prætorium, where He had been under examination (v. 9).

ἐκάθισεν ἐνὶ θρόνῳ must be rendered "he sat down on Ἰησοῦν, καὶ ἐκάθισεν ἐπὶ βήματος εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον Λιθόστρωτον, the judgment seat," i.e. Pilate sat down, the examination being over, intending now to give judgment with full dignity. Before he finally passed sentence, he gave the priests another opportunity of claiming, or acquiescing in, the release of Jesus. This (intransitive) rendering of ἐκάθισεν agrees with Mt.'s report καθήμενος δὲ αἰνοῦ ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος (Mt. 27<sup>19</sup>), as well as with the only other place where ἐκάθισεν occurs in Jn. (12<sup>34</sup>). We have καθίσαι ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος used of Herod and of Festus in Acts 12<sup>21</sup> 25<sup>6, 17</sup>.

καθίζεν, however, is used transitively in 1 Cor. 6<sup>4</sup>, Eph. 1<sup>30</sup> (cf. Hermas, Vit. III. II. 4), and Archbishop Whately maintained<sup>1</sup> that ἐκάθισεν should be rendered transitively here, the meaning being that Pilate did not sit on the βήμα himself, but set Jesus on it in derision. It is worthy of note that there was a tradition current in the second century that Jesus had thus been placed by the Jews on the judgment seat. It appears in the Gospel of Peter (§ 3): ἐκάθισαν αὐτὸν ἐπὶ καθέδραν κτίσεως, λέγοντες, Δυναίως κτίσει, βασιλεὶ τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ. Justin (whencesoever he obtained the tradition) has it also: διαστρόφοντες αὐτὸν (referring to Isa. 53<sup>9</sup>) ἐκάθισαν ἐπὶ βήματος, καὶ ἔτιον Κρίνον ἡμῶν (Apol. I. 35). Perhaps it came from a misunderstanding of Jn. 19<sup>13</sup>, attributing this derisive action to Pilate, not to the Jews. But a misunderstanding it must be, for, apart from the intransitive use of καθίζεν being always found elsewhere in the Gospels, it is inconceivable that a Roman procurator should be so regardless of his dignity, when about to pronounce sentence of death, as to make a jest of the matter.<sup>2</sup>

ἐπὶ βήματος, "upon a judgment seat," sc. perhaps upon one improvised for the occasion, as the Jews would not enter the Prætorium, and judgment had to be given in public.

The rec. text has ἐπὶ τοῦ βήματος, but τοῦ is omitted by MABD<sup>3</sup>FLN, and it probably came in from such passages as Acts 12<sup>21</sup> 25<sup>6, 17</sup>.

Josephus (Bell. Jud. II. ix. 3), when telling of another sentence pronounced by Pilate, has ὁ Πιλάτος καθίσας ἐπὶ βήματος ἐν τῷ μεγάλῳ σταδίῳ, judgment in this case also being delivered in the open air. Here we have ἐπὶ βήματος εἰς τόπον κτλ., instead of ἐν τόπῳ. Perhaps εἰς is used because of the verb at the beginning of the sentence (see on 9<sup>7</sup>); but it is possible that it is used for ἐν here, as it often is in Mk.<sup>4</sup> and in Lk. and Acts. See on 1<sup>30</sup> 9<sup>7</sup>.

Ἐβραϊστὶ δὲ Γαββαθαί. 14. ἦν δὲ Παρασκευή τοῦ πάσχα, ὅρα ἦν εἰς τόπον λεγόμενον Λιθόστρωτον, Ἐβραϊστὶ (see on 5<sup>9</sup>) δὲ Γαββαθαί. Λιθόστρωτον is not the interpretation of the name Gabbatha (see on 4<sup>20</sup>); Jn. gives the two names, Greek and Aramaic, of distinct derivation, by which the place was known. The word Λιθόστρωτον does not occur again in the N.T., and in the LXX it is found only at Esth. 1<sup>4</sup>, Cant. 3<sup>16</sup>, a Chron. 7<sup>8</sup>; in the last-mentioned passage being applied to the pavement of Solomon's temple. (cf. Josephus, Antt. VIII. iii. 2).

The situation of the Prætorium has been already discussed (see on 18<sup>20</sup>), and we have identified it with Herod's Palace, which was to the south of the Temple area. But the name Gabbatha is not known elsewhere. Its derivation is probably from the root גבא "to be high," so that גבא would mean "an elevated place."<sup>1</sup> G. A. Smith (Jerusalem, II. 575) suggests that it is derived from גבב, "to pack closely," so that Gabbatha would be equivalent to "a mosaic."

It was customary to place the βήμα or judgment seat on a dais of tessellated or mosaic pavement, in order that the judge might be seen and heard conveniently; and Julius Cæsar is said to have carried about with him tessellata et scythia pavimenta, to be laid down wherever he encamped (Suet. Jul. 46). A portable dais of this kind could not, however, have given its name to a locality; Λιθόστρωτον was probably one of the names by which the elevated place of judgment came to be known, because of the mosaic pavement which was laid down for the sake of dignity.

In the year of the Passion, the Passover, i.e. Nisan 14, fell on a Friday (v. 31). Had the meaning of παρασκευῆ τοῦ πάσχα here meant "It was the Preparation day of the Passover," i.e. the day before the Passover, we should have had ἢ παρασκευῆ with the def. article. See on v. 42.

ὅρα ἦν ὡς ἔσπευ. So MABNW and vs. For ἔσπευ, M<sup>2</sup>D<sup>2</sup>FLN read ἔσπευ, thus harmonising the text with Mk. 15<sup>42</sup>. Eusebius (as quoted by Severus) explains the variant by ascribing it to the confusion between Γ (γ) and Φ (φ).<sup>1</sup> But the textual evidence for ἔργη is overwhelming.

In Mk. 15<sup>25</sup> Jesus is said to have been crucified at "the third hour," the darkness beginning at "the sixth hour" and continuing until "the ninth hour," when He died. This is corrected by Jn.,<sup>3</sup> who tells that the Crucifixion did not begin until after "the sixth hour," i.e. after noon. The hypothesis that Jn.'s method of reckoning time was different from that of the Synoptists is inadmissible (see on 1<sup>20</sup>). That a discrepancy should exist as to the actual hour will not surprise any one who reflects on the loose way in which time intervals are often reported by quite honest witnesses.<sup>4</sup> Jn. is specially careful to fix the time at which things happened, and he is here followed by the Acts of John (§ 97), in which it is distinctly said "at the sixth hour." Indeed it is difficult to believe that all that happened on the day of the Passion before Jesus was actually crucified was over by 9 a.m., as Mk.'s report indicates.

For Ἰβῆ "behold," a favourite word with Jn., see on 1<sup>20</sup>; and cf. v. 14 above for the derisive Ἰβῆ, ὁ βασιλεὺς ἡμῶν. The sarcasm of Pilate is directed against the Jews, not against Jesus.

15. ἐκράγασαν οὖν ἐκεῖνοι. So W<sup>BL</sup>, ἐκεῖνοι being emphatic: the rec. text has οἱ οὗτοι ἐκράγασαν. W has ἔλεγον. For κρᾶνάζειν, see on 11<sup>42</sup> (cf. v. 6).

τὸν βασιλέα ἡμῶν στανύρωσον; Pilate's ironical question is made specially incisive by the prominence in the sentence of τ. βασιλέα ἡμῶν.

οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς, who have been the prime movers throughout (cf. vv. 6, 27, and 12<sup>10</sup>), in their eagerness to answer Pilate, not only deny that Jesus was their King, but repudiate the idea that they have any king but Caesar, thus formally denying the first principle of the Jewish theocracy that "Yahweh was their King" (1 Sam. 12<sup>12</sup>). Implicitly, they denied the ideal of the Messianic King, in order to conciliate a heathen power; and thus, by saying "We have no king but Caesar," they abandoned that which was most distinctive of the religion of Judaism. In words, they not only rejected Jesus; they repuated the claims of the Christ, to whose Advent they professed to look forward. So, at least, the Johannine narrative implies.

To be sure, they did not mean as much as this; they were so anxious to gain their point that they did not measure their words. By the time the Fourth Gospel was written, the Jewish state had been overthrown by Titus; and some of those who had avowed before Pilate their unreserved loyalty to Caesar had doubtless fallen, fighting against Caesar's legions.

16. τότε οὖν παρέδωκεν κτλ. Pilate's efforts to save Jesus had failed. The people had taken up the cry, "Crucify Him!" The priests had just announced their loyalty to Caesar in extravagant terms, and Pilate was afraid of their inuendo (v. 12) that he was not overzealous in Caesar's cause. Therefore, afraid of the popular clamour, and not specially interested in the fate of an unpopular fanatic (as he deemed Jesus to be), "he delivered Him to them," i.e. to the Jews (cf. 18<sup>30</sup> ἵνα μὴ παραδοθῇ τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις); "that He might be crucified."

The usual form of sentence in such cases was "ibis ad crucem," but the Gospels do not record that it was formally pronounced. This may have been done, but in any case Pilate's attitude was rather that he acquiesced in the capital penalty being inflicted than that he approved it. According to Roman custom, after the death sentence was pronounced, the criminal was first scourged, and then led off to execution without delay. So Josephus says of crucifixions under the procurator Florus: μαστιγώσῃ τε πρὸ τοῦ βήματος καὶ στανυρῶσῃ (Bell. Jud. ii. 14. 9). Mk. (followed by Mt.) represents the scourging of Jesus as taking place at this point, that is, after His sentence. According to Jn. (19), He had already been scourged by Pilate's order, in the hope that the Jews would be satisfied with this sufficiently terrible punishment (cf. Lk. 23<sup>25</sup>). It is probable that Jn.'s report is the more accurate here; and it is not likely that Pilate would have permitted a second scourging.

The Crucifixion and the title on the Cross (vv. 17-22)

17. παρέλαβον οὖν τὸν ἦν, "So they received Jesus," i.e. at the hands of Pilate (cf. 1<sup>14</sup>, 14<sup>6</sup>, the only other places where Jn. used παραλαμβάνειν).

17. Παράβητον σὺν τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ βασιλεύον ἐαυτῷ τὸν σταυρὸν ἐξῆλθεν εἰς τὸν λεγόμενον Κρανίου τόπον, ὃ λέγεται Lk. 23<sup>32</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>32</sup>, from a reminiscence of which passages ἐπὶ σταυρῶν has crept into the Johannine text.

Βασιλεύον ἐαυτῷ τὸν σταυρὸν. So K; the rec. has βασιλεύον τὸν στ. αὐτοῦ. B has αὐτῷ. For βασιλεύον, see on 12<sup>2</sup>.

A criminal condemned to be crucified was required to carry his own cross; cf. Plutarch (de sera numinis vindicta, 9), ἰσχυρὸς κακοῦργος ἐκφέρει τὸν αὐτοῦ σταυρὸν, and Artemidorus (Oneiroi. ii. 56), ὃ μέλλον σταυρῷ προσελθόντι πρότερον αὐτὸν βασιλεύει, a custom which gives special point to the exhortation, Mk. 8<sup>34</sup>. The Synoptists speak of the Cross being borne by Simon of Cyrene, and do not mention that Jesus carried it Himself; however, the ancient explanation is sufficient, viz. that Jesus carried it as they were leaving the Prætorium, but that when He was found to be overcome by its weight, Simon was compelled to carry it for Him. The patristic idea that Jesus bearing His Cross was typified by Isaac, upon whom τὰ ξίδια (Gen. 22<sup>9</sup>) were laid, as he went to the place of sacrifice, goes back to Melito<sup>1</sup> and Tertullian.<sup>2</sup> See on 18<sup>11</sup>.

ἔξῆλθε, "He went out," for executions were not allowed within the city walls. See on v. 20.

εἰς τὸν λεγ. Κρανίου τόπον κτλ. Γολγοθᾶ is the translation of the Aramaic קרנא, Hebrew קרנא which is transl. by κρανίον in Judg. 9<sup>53</sup>, 2 Kings 9<sup>35</sup>. For Ἐβραίωνεῖ, see on 5<sup>1</sup>; and for Jn.'s habit of giving Aramaic names with their Greek equivalents, see on 1<sup>38</sup>. Mk. 15<sup>22</sup> and Mt. 27<sup>32</sup> give the Greek name as Κρανίου, Lk. 23<sup>32</sup> giving Κρανίον, while Mt. and Mk. as well as Jn. supply also the Aramaic designation.

We do not know why this place was called "the Place of a Skull" (Calvaria). Origen is the first to mention a tradition, afterwards widely prevalent, that Adam was believed to be buried on this site (Comm. in Mt. 27<sup>32</sup>); but no evidence has been found to show that this was a pre-Christian tradition, and the idea may have grown out of a passage like 1 Cor. 15<sup>52</sup>. It has been suggested in modern times that this place-name was given because of the shape of the knoll or little hill where the Crucifixion was carried out. But there is no tradition whatever in favour of this, nor is there any evidence in the Gospel narratives to support the popular idea that Calvary was on a hill or rising ground. Yet another explanation of the name "Golgotha" is that it means "the place of skulls," i.e. a public place of execution, where the bodies of the victims were

Ἐβραϊστί Γολγοθᾶ, 18. ὅπου αὐτὸν ἐσταύρωσαν, καὶ μετ' αὐτοῦ ἔλλοντες δύο ἑτεροῦτες καὶ ἑτεροῦτες, μέσον δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν. 19. ἔγραψεν left. This would require κρανίον not κρανίον, not to speak of the facts that bodies were never left unburied in this way near a town, and that Joseph of Arimathea's "new tomb" (19<sup>12</sup>) would certainly not have been built near a place so abhorrent to a Jew. The tradition reproduced by Origen may be pre-Christian; and if so it gives an explanation of the name Golgotha, but no other explanation is, in any case, forthcoming. See on v. 20.

18. ὅπου αὐτὸν ἐσταύρωσαν, "where they crucified Him," i.e. the soldiers<sup>1</sup> (see v. 23), who were told off for the purpose.

μετ' αὐτοῦ ἄλλους δύο. Mt. and Mk. call them λογισταῖ (such as Barabbas was, 18<sup>40</sup>); Lk. says κακοῦργους; Jn. does not apply any epithet to them. All the evangelists note that the Cross of Jesus was placed between the other two. Mediaeval fancy gave names to the robbers, Dismas or Titus or πικρὸς to the penitent (who is generally represented as on the right side of the Cross of Jesus), Gestas or Dumachus or θεομαχὸς being the impatient one.

ἑτεροῦτες καὶ ἑτεροῦτες. Cf. Dan. 12<sup>5</sup> (Theodotion); the LXX has the more usual ἑθερὸν καὶ ἑθερὸν: cf. 1 Mac. 6<sup>28</sup> 9<sup>6</sup>.

19. τίθλον. The title or titulus, the technical name for the board bearing the name of the condemned or his crime or both, is only so called by Jn. In Mk. it is called ἡ ἐπιγραφή. Also it is only Jn. who tells that Pilate wrote it. As it appears in Jn. it included both the Name (Ἰησοῦς ὁ Ναζωραῖος; see 18<sup>7</sup>) and an indication of the crime, conveyed in words of mockery (ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων). In Mk. and Lk. only the αἰτία is given, the name being absent, while Mt. has οὐδὲς ἔστη Ἰησοῦς ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων.<sup>2</sup> It is not possible to determine which form is verbally correct, but probably it was considered sufficient to give the αἰτία only. In Suetonius (Domsis. 10) the terms of a similar titulus are preserved: "impic locutus parmlularius" i.e. "a parmlularian (the name by which the adherents of a gladiatorial party were known) who has spoken impiously."

<sup>1</sup> Le Blant argued that soldiers would not have been put to work of this kind, and that executions were entrusted not to the legionaries, but to civil police or apparitors attached to the court of the procurator. But his arguments are taken from the conditions of a later age. See the art. "Bourreaux" in Cabrol's Dict. d'archéologie chrétienne for a full discussion. Cf. Acts 22<sup>30-32</sup>; the scourging of Paul was about to be entrusted to soldiers under the command of a centurion.

ἐπὶ καὶ τίτλου ὁ Πιλάτος καὶ ἔθηκεν ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ ἦν δὲ γεγραμμένων ΠΙΣΟΥΣ Ὁ ΝΑΖΩΡΑΙΟΣ Ὁ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ ΤΩΝ ΙΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ. 20. τοῦτον οὖν τὸν τίτλου πολλοὶ ἀπέγραψαν τῶν Ἰουδαίων, οἱ ἄλλοι ἦν δὲ τόπος τῆς πόλεως ἔσπου Ἰστανράθ ὁ Ἰσραὴλ καὶ ἦν γεγραμμένων Ἑβραϊστί, Ῥωμαιστί, Ἑλληνιστί. 21. ἔλεγον οὖν τὸν τίτλου οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων Μὴ γράψῃς Ὁ βασιλεὺς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐκεῖνος ἐστὶν βασιλεὺς ἐμὲ τῶν Ἰουδαίων. 22. ἀπεκρίθη ὁ Πιλάτος Ὁ γέγραφα γέγραφα.

Ἦσαν ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ: in Mt. 27<sup>37</sup> we have ἐτίθησαν ἐπάνω τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ, which suggests that the cross was of the shape called crux immissa, with a cross-bar for the arms, as painters have generally represented it to be.

20. τοῦτον οὖν τὸν τίτλου κτλ. "This title, then (οὖν being a favourite conjunction with Jn.; see on 1st), many of the Jews read," as they would have opportunity of doing, the place being near the city, and as they would be able to do, because it was written in Aramaic as well as in Latin (the official language) and Greek (a detail peculiar to Jn.). That "many of the Jews" read the title placed in mockery above the cross, "the King of the Jews," is not explicitly stated by any other evangelist, and Jn. makes no comment on it. But the irony of the statement is plain enough, and it is probably intentional. See on 1st.

ἐγγὺς ἦν κτλ. We may translate this either by "the place where Jesus was crucified was near to the city," or "the place of the city where Jesus was crucified was near"; but the former rendering is to be preferred. He suffered, not within the city walls, but "without the gate" (Heb. 13<sup>12</sup>); cf. Mt. 27<sup>33</sup>, Num. 15<sup>35</sup>, Acts 7<sup>6</sup>. The traditional site of Golgotha may not be the true one, but it has better claims to recognition than any other.<sup>1</sup> Although within the present walls of Jerusalem, it may have been outside the walls as they existed in the first century.

21. οἱ ἄρχιερεῖς τῶν Ἰουδαίων. That the "chief priests" were "of the Jews" seems superfluous to mention, but Jn. writes for Greek readers. See on 2<sup>d</sup>, and cf. 6<sup>d</sup>.

They were wroth about the title, lest any should fail to understand that it was written in mockery, and so they appealed to Pilate to change it. None of this is told by the Synoptists.

ἐκεῖνος, ἦν τε, is used for clearness. See on 1st.

22. ὁ γέγραφα γέγραφα. Pilate was a true Roman in his respect for an official document. He was himself responsible for the phrasing of the titulus; and, once written and affixed

23. Οἱ οὖν στρατιῶται, οἱ ἐσταύρωσαν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἔλαβον τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ καὶ ἔκτισαν τέσσαρα μέρη, ἐκάστην στρατιῶτη μέρη, καὶ τὸν χιτῶνα. ἦν δὲ ὁ χιτῶν ἀραφας, ἑξ τῶν ἀνωθεν ὀφεισθῆς δι' to the cross, it was the expression of a legal decision. From the legal point of view he was right in refusing to alter its terms. Littera scripta manet

To the form of expression, "What I have written, I have written," Lightfoot (Hor. Heb. iii. 433) gives some Rabbinic parallels (cf. also Gen. 43<sup>14</sup>, Esth. 4<sup>19</sup>); but they are hardly apposite, as Pilate was not a Jew. Cf., however, οἱ ἐστῆσαν πρὸς ἐμὰς ἰσχυρας (1 Macc. 13<sup>30</sup>). The perf. tense γέγραφα marks the permanence and abiding character of his act. Jn. uses the perfect as distinct from the aorist, with strict linguistic propriety.

(vv. 23, 24)

23. ἔλαβον τὰ ἱμάτια αὐτοῦ. Nothing is said of the clothes of the crucified robbers. It was customary to remove the clothes before a condemned person was nailed to the cross, and by Roman law they were the perquisites of the soldiers who acted as executioners.<sup>1</sup> But, presumably, the clothes of the malefactors were not worth anything, and so are not mentioned.

Of the soldiers there was the usual quaternion (τετραθίων, Acts 12<sup>4</sup>); and according to the Synoptists (Mk. 15<sup>39</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>34</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>47</sup>) a centurion was also present. The Synoptists do not give any detailed account of the doings of the soldiers; they merely say, paraphrasing the words of Ps. 22<sup>18</sup> (which was no doubt in their minds), that the soldiers divided the clothes, casting lots. But throughout the Johannine account of the Crucifixion (vv. 23-37), the fuller testimony of an eye-witness (see v. 35) reveals itself. This account is due to one who was near the Cross all the time. And so Jn. tells that it was for the χιτῶν or long cassock-shaped coat (as distinguished from the ἱμάτιον or outer cloak: cf. v. 2 and Mt. 5<sup>26</sup>, Lk. 6<sup>29</sup>), which was woven in one piece, that lots were cast; and he adds that this was ὡς ἡ γραφή πληροῦθη, quoting Ps. 22<sup>18</sup> from the LXX:

καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἱματισμῶν μου ἔβαλον κλήρον.<sup>2</sup>

In this verse ἱμάτια and ἱματισμοί represent distinct Hebrew

ἔλεν. 24. εἶπεν οὖν πρὸς ἀλλήλους Μὴ σχίσωμεν αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ λάξωμεν περὶ αὐτοῦ τῖνος ἔσται ἕνα ἢ γραφῆ πλεηρωθῆ ἁμειψίσαντο words, ἡμ and ἑἷς, but it is not always possible to distinguish the meanings of these. In the original context, we have the ordinary parallelism of Hebrew poetry; but Jn. finds in the words an inspired forecast of that which was witnessed at the Crucifixion, viz. the division of some garments, and the drawing of lots for one in particular. "These things, therefore, the soldiers did." Jn. sees in all the incidents of the Passion the fulfilment of the Divine purpose disclosed in the O.T., and so he says that these things happened ἕνα ἢ γραφῆ πλεηρωθῆ.<sup>1</sup>

The χίτων was ἄραφος (this word does not occur elsewhere in the Greek Bible), "without seam," as was the robe of the high priest's ephod (a long garment, ὑπόδησις τοῦ ἱεροῦ, Ex. 28<sup>30</sup>). Josephus (Ant. III. vii. 4) calls this robe of the high priest a χίτων, and (following the directions given in Exodus) he explains elaborately that it was woven in one piece.<sup>2</sup> But this is only a verbal coincidence; the idea of a high-priestly robe does not enter here.<sup>3</sup> χίτων is the ordinary word for the long coat worn in the East under the cloak. It was of some value, and Jn. records that the soldiers said (the witness was near enough to hear the words) Μὴ σχίσωμεν αὐτόν, ἀλλὰ λάξωμεν περὶ αὐτοῦ τῖνος ἔσται.

Field (in loc.) urges that λαγύσανεν is unprecedented in the sense of "to cast lots," its usual meaning being "to obtain by lot."<sup>4</sup> But Symmachus translated ἁπὸ τῆς in Ps. 22<sup>18</sup> by ἀλάγχανον.

The account of this incident in the second-century Gospel of Peter is as follows: τῶν ἁγίων τὰ ἰδιώματα ἡμειρωθέντα αὐτοῦ ἁμειψίσαντο, καὶ λαχῶν ἔβαλον ἐν αὐτοῦ, "having set His garments before Him, they parted them among them and cast a lot for them." It is not stated by Pseudo-Peter that this was the act of the soldiers, who appear a little later as a body of eight men, with a centurion, guarding the tomb, while Jn.
 is explicit that there were only four: τέσσαρα μέρη, ἑκάστη στρατιώτη μέρος. The unusual word λαχῶν, for αἵρεσις, in Pseudo-Peter may have been suggested by Jn.'s λάξωμεν. It is reproduced by Justin (Tryph. 97), who quotes Ps. 22<sup>18-20</sup> from

 the Divine Word, and that he is forbidden to "rend his clothes" (Lev. 21<sup>10</sup>), because the Word is the bond of all things. But this has no bearing on the text here.

<sup>3</sup> Ingenious computers have discovered that by applying Gomatria, χίτων = 87 = ἱεροῦσι. Cyprian (de unit. 7) found in the seamless robe a symbol of the Unity of the Church.

 also it is followed by a corresponding οἱ.

Three sayings of Jesus from the Cross, before His death
 (pp. 25-30)

26. εἰστήκειον δὲ παρὰ τῷ σταυρῷ κτλ. From the Synoptic parallels (Mk. 15<sup>40</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>55</sup>; cf. Lk. 24<sup>10</sup>) we gather that Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joseph, and Salome the wife of Zebedee and mother of the apostles
 James and John, were present at the Cross. Jn. enumerates Mary the mother of Jesus (whose presence the Synoptists do not mention), her sister, Mary the wife of Clopas, and Mary Magdalene, i.e. four persons and not three as one reading of the text might suggest. Not only does the Peshitta make this clear by putting "and" before "Mary the wife of Clopas";
 but the balance of the sentence, if four persons are indicated, is thoroughly Johannine. If we compare this with the Synoptic parallels we reach two important conclusions: (1) Salome was the sister of Mary the mother of Jesus, and therefore John the son of Zebedee and Salome was a maternal cousin of Jesus.
 (2) Mary the wife of Clopas is the same person as Mary the mother of James and Joseph (cf. Mt. 27<sup>56</sup>, Mk. 15<sup>40-41</sup>, 16<sup>1</sup>, Lk. 24<sup>10</sup>). It would be impossible to equate the Synoptic
 "Mary, the mother of James and Joseph" with the Lord's mother, for no one can suppose that the Synoptists, when telling the names of the women at the Cross, would have described the mother of Jesus in so circuitous a manner. This James is called by Mk. δ' ἰακώβου δ' μαρκῶς or "James the Little," the adjective not relating to his dignity, but to his stature. Of him we know nothing more.

Attempts have been made to identify Clopas with Alphæus, who was father of one of the Twelve (James the son of
 logical considerations will not permit us to reduce Clopas and

ἡ Μαγδαληνῆ. 26. Ἰησοῦς οὖν ἰδὼν τὴν μητέρα καὶ τὸν μαθητὴν παρεστῶτα ἐν ἧμέρα, λέγει τῇ μητρὶ Γέννα, ἴδε ὁ υἱός σου. 27. εἶτα

Alpharus to the same Hebrew original.<sup>1</sup> The N.T. tells us no more of Clopas (Cleopas of Lk. 24<sup>12</sup> is a different name); but Hegesippus<sup>2</sup> (fl. circa 150 A.D.), states that he was the brother of Joseph, the Lord's foster-father, and so "the Lord's uncle." Hegesippus also says that he had a son, Symeon or Simon, who became second bishop of Jerusalem, "being a cousin of the Lord," succeeding James the Just, "the Lord's brother," who was the first bishop. See, further, Additional Note on 2<sup>12</sup>.

The MSS. vary as to the spelling of Mary Magdalene's name (Μαριάμ or Μαρία), but Mary of Clopas seems to be always Μαρία. As we have seen (on 11<sup>2</sup>, 20), B 33 always describe Mary of Bethany as Μαριάμ, while K always has Μαρία. But when Mary Magdalene (whom we take to be the same person) is mentioned the usage is different. In 19<sup>36</sup> 20<sup>1</sup>, 22 B gives Μαρία, and K 33 give Μαριάμ. At 20<sup>14</sup>, 22 MB 33 agree in reading Μαριάμ. Probably the Hebrew form Μαριάμ should be adopted throughout (this is the spelling in Pseudo-Peter).<sup>3</sup> τῇ μητρὶ. So  $\kappa$ BL. AD<sup>200</sup>NLTΔΘ, some O.L. texts, and the Coptic Q add ἀδελφῆ, as in the rec. text.

The true reading, both here and in v. 27, seems to be  $\tilde{\omega}$ e (a favourite word with Jn.; see on 1<sup>29</sup>), and not ἰδῶν which occurs only 16<sup>22</sup> 19<sup>2</sup>. In v. 26  $\kappa$ AΘ give ἰδῶν, but BD<sup>200</sup>N have  $\tilde{\omega}$ e. In v. 27 ἰδῶν is read by AD<sup>200</sup>,  $\tilde{\omega}$ e being read by  $\kappa$ BLNΘ.

The Coptic Q and the O.L.  $\epsilon$  omit the introductory γίνεαι, perhaps feeling it to be harsh.

The reasons for identifying "the disciple whom Jesus loved" with John the son of Zebedee and Salome, the maternal cousin of Jesus, have been given in the Introduction, p. xxxvif. We now find John at the Cross, with the women, including the Virgin Mother and his own mother Salome.

It was natural that the Virgin should be commended to his care, rather than to the care of "the brethren," James and Simon and Joseph and Jude, with whom she had been so intimately associated in the past, and whose home she had probably shared (see on 2<sup>12</sup>), because they were not yet disciples; they had not accepted the claims of Jesus or believed in His mission. As we have seen, John was nephew to Mary, and in sympathy he was nearer to her than these stepsons. And so Jesus bade His mother look to John, His beloved friend and cousin, to be her "son." He is going from her, but John will take His place in such measure as is possible.

The words "Woman, behold thy son . . . behold thy mother" are more than a mere commendation<sup>1</sup> or suggestion from a dying friend. They convey a command from Him who was, to Mary, as well as to John, Master and Lord. He did not address her as "Mother," even while He shows tender solicitude for her future. "Mother," as a title of address by Jesus, was abandoned long since, and for it "Woman," a usual title of respect, has been substituted. See on 2<sup>4</sup>.

When Jesus said to John "Behold thy mother," John's own mother, Salome, was present and may have overheard the words. But the Virgin was her sister, broken-hearted and desolate, with whom she was in complete sympathy, for she too had accepted Jesus as Master. She was not necessarily set aside or superseded by the charge to her son to regard her sister Mary as a second mother, and treat her with filial care.

The place which this farewell charge occupies among the Words from the Cross is noteworthy, as will be seen if they are read in their probable sequence.

ADDITIONAL NOTE ON THE WORDS FROM THE CROSS

The evangelical narratives of the Passion reflect at least three distinct lines of tradition. The Marcan tradition (which according to Papias goes back to Peter, whose disciple Mark was) is followed with amplifications of a later date by Matthew. It is also followed by Luke, who seems, however, to have had some additional source of information. His account of the trial before Herod (23<sup>6-10</sup>), e.g., has no parallel in the other Gospels; and it has been often observed that Luke alone mentions Joanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, as one of the women who accompanied Jesus in His public ministry (Lk. 8<sup>9</sup>) and were present at the Crucifixion (Lk. 23<sup>49</sup>) and heralds of the Resurrection (Lk. 24<sup>10</sup>). To this Joanna, Luke's special information as to the Passion may possibly be due. The third distinct tradition of the Passion is that of Jn., which goes back for details to the personal witness of the Beloved Disciple (19<sup>26</sup>).

The Marcan tradition reports one Word from the Cross, the Lucan tradition three, and the Johannine tradition yet another three. There is nothing surprising in this variation. Independent witnesses may honestly and truthfully give different, although not inconsistent, reports of the same events. They report only what they have personally observed, and only such part of that as has specially impressed them or is suitable for the purposes of their narrative, if they are writing one. It may not be possible to harmonise precisely the various accounts of the Passion, or to place the Words from the Cross in exact chronological sequence. But there is no critical objection to the order which has generally commended itself to students of the Gospels, as being suggested by the sacred text. It may be set out as follows:

1. Πάντερ, ἄφες αὐτοῖς: οὐ γὰρ οἴσταν τί ποιούσιν (Lk. 23<sup>34</sup>). This comes in the Lucan narrative, according to the received text, immediately after the statement that Jesus had been crucified between the two thieves. But that it is part of the original text of Lk. is uncertain; it is omitted by <sup>10</sup>BD* and other authorities, and Westcott-Hort "cannot doubt that it comes from an extraneous source."<sup>1</sup> Wherever it comes from, whether the knowledge of it came to Lk. from some eye-witness, such as Joanna, or whether it found its way into the text of Lk., after his narrative was completed, it has an unmistakable note of genuineness.

2. Ἀπὸν λέγω σοι, σήμερον μετ' ἐμοῦ ἔσθι ἐν τῇ παραδείσῳ (Lk. 23<sup>42</sup>). This was addressed to the penitent thief, and, like the First Word, must have been said at the beginning of the awful scene. "It was now about the sixth hour," is Lk.'s comment (Lk. 23<sup>46</sup>); i.e. it was about noon. See on Jn. 19<sup>14</sup>. The report of this saying must have come from some one who stood near the Cross, and so was able to hear what was said.

3. Γυναίκα, ἴδε τὸ υἱόν σου . . . Ἴδε ἡ μήτηρ σου (Jn. 19<sup>26-27</sup>). There is no difficulty in understanding why this saying should have been specially treasured in memory by the Beloved Disciple, and thus recorded at last in the Fourth Gospel. It was specially addressed to him, and to her whom he was to cherish henceforth as a mother; there is no reason to suppose that other bystanders were unable to hear the words.

If we examine the sequence of these first three Words from the Cross, in the order seemingly suggested in the Gospel texts, we cannot fail to notice the narrowing of the circle of interest, as death draws near. That always happens. When death is at a distance, men are still concerned with the wider interests of life; then it draws closer, and it is only the nearer and more intimate interests that appeal; and the time comes when the energies of thought are taxed to the full by the messages of farewell to those who have been best beloved. So it was with the Son of Man. In the hour of death, the first movement of the heart of Jesus is towards those who had brought Him to the Cross. "Father, forgive them." His mission of Redemption is still in His thoughts. Then, as strength ebbs away, the cry of the penitent thief by His side reaches Him, and the response to the individual pleading does not fail. "This day shalt thou be with me." But the circle is narrowing fast. His dying eyes are fixed upon those who have been dearest. The forgiveness of enemies; the consolation of the fellow-sufferer; these give place to the thought of mother and of friend. "Behold thy son . . . behold thy mother." These are the stages of the approach of death, for the Perfect Man.

4. EH, EH, lama sabachthani? θεὸς μου, θεὸς μου, ἰστέρι με ἐγκαταλείπεις; (Mt. 27<sup>46</sup>, Mk. 15<sup>34</sup>). This is the only Word from the Cross which rests upon the Marcan tradition, and may be taken as due to Peter. It was uttered "with a loud voice," and so could be heard even by those standing at a distance, as Peter probably was. (Cf. Mt. 27<sup>46</sup>, ἦσαν δὲ ἑσθὶ γυναικες πολλὰὶ ἀπὸ μακρόθεν θεωροῦσαι.) There is no hint in any Gospel that he was one of the little circle who stood near the cross. This cry was misunderstood by the crowd, who thought that Jesus was calling for succour upon Elijah the prophet, an observation (Mk. 15<sup>35</sup>) which shows that we have here to do with words actually used, and not with words afterwards placed in the mouth of Jesus, being thought appropriate as the opening phrase of a Messianic Psalm (Ps. 22<sup>1</sup>). Indeed, the difficulty that interpreters have always felt in explaining these words of seeming despair as spoken by One who was Himself Divine, proves that they are not likely to have been the invention of pious fancy dwelling afterwards on the Agony of Calvary. They were reproduced later in a Docetic form in the apocryphal Gospel of Peter: Ἡ δόξα μου, ἡ δόξα μου, κατέλειψάς με. Why they are not recorded by Lk. or Jn. it is idle to conjecture.

5. Δὲψῶ (Jn. 19<sup>30</sup>). This was spoken near the end. Although the actual word δὲψῶ is recorded only by Jn., yet the incident of the Lord's thirst being assuaged is given in Mk. 15<sup>36</sup> (Mt. 27<sup>49</sup>). "I thirst" would naturally have been said in a low voice, so that it could be heard only by those near the Cross.

That Jn. should have specially recorded this word is in keeping with the emphasis laid, throughout the Fourth Gospel, on the humanity of Jesus. As He asked the Samaritan woman for water when He was thirsty (4<sup>7</sup>), so now. Jn. is anxious to expel Docetic doctrine (1 Jn. 4<sup>b</sup>), and both here and at 19<sup>44</sup> he brings out recollections of the Beloved Disciple which forbid any theory of Christ's Person that does not recognise His manhood. Jesus was thirsty at the Cross.

7. Πάτερ, εἰς χεῖράς σου παρατίθειαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου (Lk. 23<sup>46</sup>). Lk. specially notes that this was after the Great Cry (φωνήσας φωνῇ μεγάλῃ), and that this was the last word spoken. To the utterance of faithful confidence from the ancient Psalm (31<sup>5</sup>), the one word "Father" was prefixed, which charged it for future generations with a deeper meaning. In the Psalm, it is the trustful prayer of life; on the lips of Jesus (and thereafter; cf. Acts 7<sup>59</sup>), it became a prayer of the dying. It is noteworthy that the two personal cries of Jesus from the Cross (Nos. 4 and 7) are old and familiar verses from the Psalter.

Jn. does not record this, but we cannot know his reason. If it was indeed the last word spoken, the Beloved Disciple must have heard it, as well as the witness, Joanna or another, from whom it was transmitted to Lk. It is just possible that the words of Jn. 19<sup>30</sup>, παρέδωκεν τὸ πνεῦμα, contain a reminiscence of Lk.'s παρατίθειαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου. But in any case Jn. never attempts to tell all that had happened, or all that he knew; his method is to select and arrange the sayings and acts of Jesus which best bring out the main thesis of his Gospel (20<sup>31</sup>). And τετελειωται is, in his scheme, the final word of the Cross.

Of other arrangements of the Seven Words, that of Tatian, our earliest harmonist, is the most noteworthy. It differs in one particular only from that which has been set out here. Tatian in his Diatessaron puts "Father, forgive them . . ." immediately before "Father, into thy hands . . ."; thus contradicting the order in which Lk. (who alone records them both) places the two sayings, "Father, forgive them" and "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Bishop Andrewes in his Litania places our No. 3 before our No. 2, an arrangement adopted also in some German hymns. Certainty

cannot be reached, but a clearer insight into the significance of these Words is gained by any honest attempt to reach the order in which they were spoken.

27. Ἄρ' ἐκείνης ἤγει ἄρας, "from that hour." It has been thought that this implies that Mary did not wait for the end, but that John led her away at once. It may have been so, but in that case John returned soon, for he is present at the Cross later (vv. 28-35). Cf. 12<sup>38</sup>.

That Jn. does not mention the cry Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? which is reported by Mk. (15<sup>34</sup>) followed by Mt. (27<sup>46</sup>) has explained been uttered "with a loud voice," may perhaps be explained as due to the absence of the eye-witness at this point. The aged disciple recalls only his own personal experiences. Another possible explanation is that Jn. has omitted this saying, because he wishes to emphasise the voluntary character of Christ's death. See on v. 30.

εἰς τὸ ἴδιον, "to his own home." The phrase is used thus Esth. 5<sup>16</sup>, 3 Mac. 6<sup>27</sup>, 7<sup>7</sup>, Acts 21<sup>8</sup>, and it is the most natural meaning. It occurs twice elsewhere in Jn. (11<sup>11</sup> 16<sup>29</sup>), where the sense is probably the same, but is not quite so clear as it is here (see note on 11<sup>11</sup>). John brought the Virgin Mother to his own lodging<sup>1</sup> (see on 20<sup>29</sup>), and she lived with him thereafter; but we cannot build on the phrase εἰς τὸ ἴδιον a theory which would give him a house of residence at Jerusalem (see on 18<sup>20</sup>).

28. μετὰ τοῦτο. The phrase does not convey that the incident of vv. 28-30 immediately followed on that of vv. 25-27. In fact, there was interposed the long interval of darkness and of silence, of which all the Synoptists speak as lasting for some three hours (Mk. 15<sup>33</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>45</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>44</sup>). But it means, as it does elsewhere in Jn.<sup>2</sup> that the second incident was later than the first; whereas the phrase μετὰ ταῦτα does not carry the sense of strict chronological sequence so explicitly. εἶπεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς κτλ. The same phrase occurs in 13<sup>1</sup>, where in like manner it leads up to the statement that the appointed hour had come. He knew that "all things had now been finished," ἤδη πάντα τετελειωται. Jn. never allows his readers to forget that events which he records were eternally fore-ordained, and that Jesus was conscious of this. Primarily ἦδη πάντα τετέλεσται may have reference to the details of the Passion, and the Lord's word τετέλεσται may be taken to mean that the Passion with its anguish and its sordid accompaniments was now over. And so "that the Scripture might be accomplished, Jesus said, I thirst."

28, 29, 30. ἵνα τελευτήῃ ἡ γραφή. So ABLNWF. ἠδ' ὁμοῦ and Jam. 23 have the more usual πληρωθῆ. Some have found a more complete consummation expressed by τελευτήῃ than πληρωθῆ would convey, but this is over subtle. If a reason is sought for the choice of the word τελευτήῃ, it may be found in the preceding τετέλεσται; τελείω suggesting τελειών.

ἵνα τελ. ἡ γρ. probably refers to what follows, not to what precedes.<sup>1</sup> Jn. held that every incident of the Crucifixion took place as foreshadowed in the O.T. Scriptures, and that the Divine purpose as expressed therein might be accomplished. For him, the thirst of Jesus and its relief were fore-told and fore-ordained in Ps. 69<sup>21</sup>: εἰς τὴν ἕλκυν μου ἐπότισέν με ἕξος. That this is the passage in Jn.'s mind appears from the mention of ἕξος after the word διψῶ. The phrasing of the parallel narrative (Mk. 15<sup>36</sup>), σπύγγον ἕξος περιθεὶς κλάμῳ ἐτίθειεν αὐτῷ, shows that Mk. (followed by Mt. 27<sup>48</sup>) had the same passage from the Psalter in his thought. The ἕξος, or posca, was the sour wine which was the usual drink of the legionaries, some of which, according to Lk. (23<sup>36</sup>), had already been offered by the soldiers to Jesus in mockery, as if it were a coronation cup.

It is not doubtful, however, that Jn. intends τετέλεσται to have a deeper significance than that the various incidents of the Passion were now finished. τετέλεσται is not a cry of relief that all is over; it is a shout of Victory. The mission of Redemption has now been perfected. See on 4<sup>41</sup> According to the Synoptists (see Additional Note on v. 26) τετέλεσται was cried "with a loud voice." This may have some bearing on the request suggested in the preceding word διψῶ. Jesus may have desired that those who were present, the idle spectators and the soldiers as well as the faithful disciples, should understand that He counted His Death as a Victory. He may have wished to announce this publicly, so that all could hear. But if He was to speak now, after the long torture of the Cross, "with a loud voice." His parched throat must be cooled. It was necessary that He should ask for drink. And so, ὅτι ἦδη πάντα τετέλεσται, that all might know that great fact of which He was Himself assured, ἦδη πάντα τετέλεσται. It was this majestic word which seems specially to have impressed the centurion who was there. "When the centurion, which stood by over against Him, saw that He so gave up the ghost, he said, Truly this man was a Son of God" (Mk. 15<sup>39</sup>). "Certainly this was a righteous man" (Lk. 23<sup>47</sup>). At any rate, Jn. regards it as the Final Word, and will add nothing to it.

But whether this connexion between the two words διψῶ and τετέλεσται be suggested by Jn. or no (and it may be thought over subtle), διψῶ must be taken in its plain meaning of physical thirst. This Jesus felt, and a merciful bystander relieved Him.

We are not to confuse this incident with the refusal by Jesus, before He was crucified, of the drugged wine which it was customary to offer criminals who were condemned to the Cross (Mk. 15<sup>23</sup>, Mt. 27<sup>34</sup>). The Talmudists say of this kindly custom "they gave them to drink a little frankincense in a cup of wine . . . that their understanding might be disordered."<sup>1</sup> This Jesus refused because He willed to endure the Cross with full and unimpaired consciousness. But now all is finished. The work of redemption has been completed. It is no part of Christ's revelation that the enduring of superfluous pain is meritorious. The pains of thirst were terrible to one exposed to the scorching heat of midday, while hanging naked on the Cross. And so Jesus said, "I thirst," in His death-agony.

It would seem that some provision had been made for relieving the thirst of the dying men.

σκεῦος ἕκαστο ἕξος μιστόν, "a vessel full of vinegar was set there"; it was quite ready. Some have imagined that this also was a drugged potion, such as that of Mt. 27<sup>34</sup> (ὄϊνον μετὰ χολῆς), given with the view of hastening the death of the sufferers. But there is no ground for this in the evangelical narratives. Mt., who follows the words of Ps. 69<sup>21</sup>, takes the word χολή from thence, this being the only place where χολή is mentioned in the Gospels, viz. in connexion with the draught offered to Jesus before He was crucified. Neither Mt. (see 27<sup>34</sup>) nor any other evangelist mentions χολή in connexion with the final draught accepted by Jesus at the end. Barnabas (§ 7) says, indeed, στανυρῶντις ἐπιτίερο ἕξος καὶ χολή, but he probably had Mt. 27<sup>46</sup> rather than Mt. 27<sup>48</sup> in his mind. In any case, he is a confused writer, as is also the author of the Gospel of Peter who writes thus (§ 5): καὶ τὸ αὐτῶν εἶπον Ἡρίσται αὐτῶν χαλῆν μετὰ ἔξου· καὶ περιβήντες ἰούωμαυ. καὶ ἐπέλασαν πύνα, καὶ ἐπέλασαν κατὰ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτῶν ἐν ἡμυρήματι. Nonnus (fifth cent.) suggests that Jesus asked for the draught in order that the end might come more quickly: νοήσας ἵ ὅτι θοῖς τεταλειο, θούερον ἤθελεν εἶνα. But there is no hint of such a motive in the canonical Gospels.

29. σκεῖος ἑκείνο ἔξου μιστόν σπάγγον ὅν μιστόν τοῦ ἔξου ἰουώμαυ περιβήντες προσήγγισαν αὐτοῦ πρὸ στόματι. 30. ὅτε ὅν

ἰουώμαυ περιβήντες. This would mean that the sponge filled with vinegar or sour wine was placed "on hyssop" and so conveyed to the mouth of Jesus as He hung on the Cross. But hyssop is not a plant which commonly provides sticks or reeds (if at all); bunches of it were used for sprinkling purposes (Ex. 12<sup>18</sup>, Heb. 9<sup>19</sup>), but while a sponge could be attached to a bunch of hyssop, some rod or stick would yet be needed to raise it up to the Cross. The Synoptists say nothing about hyssop, but both in Mt. 27<sup>48</sup> and Mk. 15<sup>36</sup> (cf. Lk. 23<sup>46</sup>) we read σπάγγον ἔξου περιβῆν καλέμαυ, i.e. they say that a bystander put the sponge on a reed or cane or stick, as it was natural to do.

Now in the eleventh century cursive No. 476 we find ἰουώμαυ περιβήντες, the corruption of ἰουώμαυ περιβήντες into ἰουώμαυ περιβήντες being due to the repetition by the scribe of two letters ωπ. ἰουώμαυ is the Latin bilium, of which each Roman soldier carried two; and the meaning of ἰουώμαυ περιβήντες is that the bystanders put the sponge on the end of a soldier's javelin or bilium, several of which were ready to hand (see on v. 34). This not only brings Jn. into correspondence with the περιβῆντες καλέμαυ of the Synoptists, but it reveals the personal observer. The man behind the story knew, for he had seen, to what kind of a stick the sponge was fastened; it was a ἰουώμαυ, a soldier's javelin.<sup>1</sup>

30. κλίνας τὴν κεφαλὴν. "having bowed His head." This detail is given only by Jn., and suggests that the account depends on the testimony of an eye-witness. κλίνας τὴν κεφαλὴν occurs again in N. T. only at Mt. 8<sup>8</sup>, Lk. 9<sup>8</sup>. "The King of Man hath not where to lay His head." The only resting-place for Him was the Cross. Abbott<sup>1</sup> argues that Jn. means here to imply that Jesus in death rested His head on the bosom of the Father. But this is to apply the allegorical method of Origen, and is quite unnecessary here.

παρέδωκεν τὸ πνεῦμα. "He gave up His spirit." Mk. 15<sup>37</sup> and Lk. 23<sup>46</sup> have simply ἐξέπνευσε, while Mt. 27<sup>50</sup> has ἀθήκεν τὸ πνεῦμα. παραδόναι is "to give up voluntarily" (see note on 6<sup>4</sup>), and it may be that the verb is chosen deliberately, to emphasize the unique manner of the Lord's death; cf. 10<sup>18</sup>, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up."

Or, the expression παρέδωκεν τὸ πνεῦμα may carry a reminiscence of the Lord's last words according to Lk. 23<sup>46</sup> παρατίθεμαι τὸ πνεῦμά μου. See Additional Note on p. 636.

Or, we may have here a covert allusion to Isa. 53<sup>12</sup>: "He poured out His soul unto death," which the LXX turns into the passive form παρεδόθη εἰς θάνατον ἡ ψυχὴ αὐτοῦ, but which would more literally be rendered παρέδωκεν εἰς θάνατον τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ. When it is remembered that the next clause of Isa. 53<sup>12</sup> is "and He was numbered among the transgressors" (which is quoted as predictive of the Passion in Lk. 22<sup>37</sup>), it is not improbable that Jn. is here translating directly from the Hebrew of Isa. 53<sup>12</sup>, and that his intention is to describe the death of Jesus in the same words as those used by the prophet of the death of the Servant of Yahweh.<sup>2</sup> Isa. 53 is for Jn. a Messianic prophecy. See on 12<sup>37</sup>.

In any case, the verb παραδόναι expresses a voluntary act, and is thus in contrast with the ἐξέπνευσε of Mk. and Lk.

For the use of πνεῦμα, see on 11<sup>26</sup>. It is not legitimate to lay any special emphasis on the employment here of πνεῦμα, as distinct from ψυχὴ, even if the suggestion made above that Isaiah's "poured out His soul" suggested Jn.'s παρέδωκεν τὸ πνεῦμα be not adopted. Indeed in the second century Acts of John (§ 115) παρέδωκεν τὸ πνεῦμα is used of Jn.'s own death.

So of the death of Agathonice by martyrdom it is said οὕτως ἀπέθανεν τὸ πνεῦμα καὶ ἐτελειώθη σὺν τοῖς ἁγίοις; <sup>1</sup> and the same phrase is used of the martyrdom of Peter.<sup>2</sup>

31. The statement that the "Jews," i.e. the Sanhedrists who had brought about the condemnation of Jesus, approached Pilate with the request that the death of those who had been crucified should be hastened, and their bodies removed, is peculiar to Jn. (see on v. 38). It has every mark of truth. Criminals crucified on a Friday might linger until the Sabbath, when they could not be buried, so that they would remain hanging on the Cross. But it was contrary to the Deuteronomic law that the dead bodies of criminals should remain on the cross after sunset (cf. Deut. 21<sup>22</sup>, Josh. 8<sup>29</sup> 10<sup>27</sup>). Accordingly, Josephus (B.J. iv. v. 2) tells us that the Jews of his time were careful to bury before sundown the bodies of those who had been crucified. Thus it was urgent, from the Sanhedrist's point of view, that those crucified on a Friday should die on that day, and that their bodies should be removed forthwith. But this could be arranged only by an order from the Roman governor.

Now the usual Roman practice was to leave a corpse on its cross (cf. Horace, Epistles, l. xvi. 48), as in England the bodies of criminals used to be left hanging in chains. But there was no Roman law forbidding burial. Wetstein quotes Quintilian, Declam. vi., "omnes succidentur, percussos sepeliri carnis non utat." And Philo mentions, as it had known of bodies being taken down from the cross and handed over to the relatives of the condemned for burial, on the occasion of the emperor's birthday or the like (in Flacc. 10). Hence, although Pilate, in ordinary circumstances, might have refused the request of the Sanhedrists, there was nothing to prevent him from granting it if he wished. And, in this case, apart from his evident unwillingness to condemn Jesus, there was the further consideration that Jerusalem, at the moment, was crowded with pilgrims who had come for the Passover, and that it was desirable to avoid a conflict between the Jews and the Roman authorities.<sup>3</sup>

31. Οἱ οὖν Ἰουδαῖοι, ἐπεὶ Παρασκευή ἦν, ἵνα μὴ μείνη ἐπὶ τοῦ σταυροῦ τὰ σώματα ἐν τῇ σαββάτῃ, ἦν γὰρ μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα ἐπειὸν τοῦ σαββάτου, ἤρτησαν τὸν Πιλάτῳ ἵνα καταργήσῃ αὐτῶν τὰ σκέλη καὶ ἀρθῶσιν. 32. ἦλθον οὖν οἱ στρατιῶται, καὶ τοῦ μὲν πρώτου καταβὰν τὰ σκέλη καὶ τοῦ ἄλλου τοῦ συνσταυρωθέντος ἀπέψα. 33. εἰ δὲ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἰδόντες, ὡς εἶδον ἤδη αὐτὸν νεκρῶτα, οὐ or "Friday," doubly a day of preparation this year, because the Sabbath day following synchronised with "the first day of unleavened bread," which was a "great" day. It is called a "holy" day in the LXX of Ex. 12<sup>16</sup>, ἡ ἡμέρα ἡ πρώτη κληθήσεται ἁγία.

ἦν γὰρ μεγ. κτλ., "for the day of that sabbath was a great day," ἐπειὸν being emphatic. AD<sup>1990</sup> transfer the words ἐπεὶ παρασκευή ἦν to a position after σαββάτῃ, but NBLW fam. 13 support their more natural place at the beginning of the sentence after Ἰουδαῖοι. The Peshitta gives the paraphrase: "Because it was Preparation, they say, these bodies shall not remain on the Cross, because the sabbath dawneth." ἐπεὶ is "because," exactly as in the parallel passage Mk. 15<sup>42</sup> ἐπεὶ ἦν παρασκευή.

The crurifragium, or breaking of the limbs, was done by a heavy mallet; and terrible as such blows would be, if inflicted on a man in health and strength, they were merciful if they ended quickly the torture of a lingering death by crucifixion.

32. ἦλθον οὖν οἱ στρ. "Therefore," sc. in obedience to the orders they received, "the soldiers came," and broke the legs of the two robbers, who were not yet dead. The Gospel of Peter (which betrays knowledge of the Johannine narrative of the Passion) gives a curious turn to this incident. It represents the Jews as indignant with the penitent thief, because of his defence of Jesus' innocence (cf. Lk. 23<sup>31</sup>), and as commanding "that his bones should not be broken to the end that he might die in torment" (§ 4). This is inconsistent with what Pseudo-Peter says in § 3 about the illegality of allowing the bodies to remain on the crosses after sundown; but its interest is that it shows the freedom with which this apocryphal writer treats the Gospel narrative.

33. ὡς εἶδον ἤδη αὐτὸν νεκρῶτα. Jesus died before the robbers did. According to Mk. 15<sup>44</sup>, Pilate was surprised that He had died so soon; for in the case of a crucified person, death sometimes did not ensue for two or three days. A highly strung nature is less able to endure physical agony than one of coarser fibre; and Jesus was the Perfect Man. See above on v. 10.

84. This verse was introduced into St. Matthew's Gospel at an early period. NBCLT, with some cursives, the Ethiopic vs., and several "mixed" Latin texts of the British and Irish type, supply at the end of Mt. 27<sup>40</sup> the words ἄλλος δὲ λαβὼν λόγχην ἔθηκε αὐτοῦ τὴν πλευρῶν, καὶ ἐξῆλθεν ὕδωρ καὶ αἷμα. Mt. represents one of the bystanders (εἰς ἑξ ἀνῶν) as offering Jesus the sponge of vinegar, while others were for waiting to see if Elijah would come to save Him. Then he adds the incident about the piercing of the Lord's side, the apparent inference being that it was to render fruitless any intervention on the part of Elijah. As the verse occurs in Mt., it represents Jesus as alive, His death following with a loud cry immediately after the piercing. It has been held that Chrysostom supports this view; but an examination of his homily on Mt. 27<sup>40</sup> will show that it is not so, despite some confusion in the order of his comments. For although he mentions the piercing immediately after the giving of the vinegar, he adds: "What could be more brutal than these men, who carried their madness so far as to insult a dead body"; a comment which he briefly repeats on Jn. 19<sup>34</sup>. Tatian has also been cited in support of the interpolation at Mt. 27<sup>40</sup>, but there is no trace of it in the Diatessaron. The probability is that εἰς ἑξ ἀνῶν of Mt. 27<sup>40</sup> recalled to a copyist εἰς τῶν στρατιωτῶν of Jn. 19<sup>34</sup> and suggested the interpolation. Perhaps Jn.'s ἄλλ' εἰς was read as ἄλλος by the scribe of Mt. The theory that the passage was part of the original Mt.<sup>1</sup> (being omitted by the Syriac and O.L. vs. because of its inconsistency with Jn.), and that Jn. here silently corrects Mt. by placing the incident in its true context, is improbable, for there is no evidence to prove that Jn. knew Mt. at all.<sup>2</sup>

The rendering of the Latin Vulgate aperuit in this verse depends on a corruption of the Greek text. The true Greek reading is ἔθηκεν "pricked," which is the basis of most of the O.L. vs., perforavit, perforavit, insevit, etc. But the O.L. codices f and r have aperuit, which presumably indicates a Greek variant ἠνοῖκεν "opened." This was adopted by Jerome, and is supported by the Peshitta and the Jerusalem Syriac. But for the Greek ἠνοῖκεν there is no MS. authority. Cod. 56 has ἠνοῖκε; Cod. 58 has ἔμαξε (corr. to ἔθηκε by a second hand); Cod. 68, the Evangelisteria 357, 259, and (according to Tischendorf) Cod. 225 have ἔθηκε, all of which are natural corruptions of ἔθηκε, and it is plain that ἠνοῖκεν was another corruption of the same kind.<sup>3</sup>

εἰς τῶν στρατιωτῶν. Jn.'s general usage is to write εἰς ἐκ τῶν . . . (see on 1<sup>49</sup>), but at 14<sup>18</sup> as well as here ἐκ is omitted. Tradition gives the name Longinus to this soldier, probably because of the λόγχῃ (ἀν. λεγ. in N.T.) or lancea which he carried.

ἠνοῖκεν (ἀν. λεγ. in N.T.) is "to prod," and is generally used of a light touch (e.g. Eccles. 22<sup>10</sup> of pricking the eye, and 3 Macc. 2<sup>14</sup> of "prodding" a sleeping person to awake him). Field quotes a passage from Plutarch (Cleom. 37) where it is used of touching a man with a dagger to ascertain if he were dead, and he suggests that it is used similarly here.

On the other hand, ἠνοῖκεν is used of a spear wound which kills a man (e.g. Josephus, Bell. Jud. III. vii. 35; cf. Acta Thoma, § 165), and 20<sup>35</sup> indicates that the wound made in Jesus' side was a large one. Origen (in Mt. 27<sup>40</sup>) seems to say that a lance thrust was sometimes given as a coup de grâce to hasten the death of those who had been crucified. The language of the text suggests that the soldier was determined to make sure that Jesus was dead.

The λόγχῃ was a long slender spear, not so heavy as the ἵστος (see v. 29) or pilum which was the usual weapon of the Roman legionaries. The ἵστος had a barbed iron head, which would inflict a wide and deep wound. If we are to press the use of λόγχῃ here, it would fall in with the idea, which has been put forward, that the soldier's act was a mere gesture as he passed; that he perceived Jesus to be dead, and so, without any special purpose, prodded the Body with his lance, the touch being possibly a light one.

The Ethiopic version (see vi.) says that it was the right side of the Body that was pierced. This was widely accepted in ancient times (see e.g. Acta Pilati, B. xi.), and the incident is frequently represented thus in art, e.g. in the sixth-century Syriac Evangeliarium of Rabula at Florence.<sup>4</sup> The verse Jn. 19<sup>34</sup> is recited at the mixing of the chalice in several Eastern liturgies; and in the Liturgy of St. Chrysostom the rubric preceding its recitation has the words, τίττω δὲ αἰὼν ἐν τῷ θεῷ μετὰ τῆς λόγχῃς πλ.<sup>5</sup>

ἐξῆλθεν εἶδος. So MBLNW (cf. 13<sup>30</sup>); the rec. has εἶδος ἐξῆλθεν. There is emphasis on εἶδος; the "blood and water" flowed immediately. See on 8<sup>8</sup>, and on 1<sup>32</sup>.

That there should be a flow of blood from a dead body, when pierced with a spear, is abnormal; and various physical explanations have been offered. W. Stroud<sup>1</sup> suggested that the death of Jesus had been caused by rupture of the heart (which explains why it came so soon after His Crucifixion), and that the "blood and water" were the separated clot and serum of the escaped blood in the pericardial sac, which the lance had pierced. This assumes that the wound was on the left side, of which there is no evidence, tradition (whatever it be worth) indicating the right side.

Stroud's arguments have not approved themselves to all physicians. It is objected, e.g. by Dr. C. Creighton,<sup>2</sup> that "the blood escaping into a serum cavity from rupture of a great organ" does not show any tendency to separate into clot and serum, "but remains thick dark-red blood." Creighton suggests that the stroke of the spear may have been only a light touch (see above), directed to "something on the surface of the body, perhaps a discoloured wheal or exudation, such as the scourging might have left"; and that it "was a thoughtless rather than a brutal act." Jesus already being dead. "Water not un-mixed with blood from some such superficial source is conceivable, but blood and water from an internal source are a mystery."

We have hardly sufficient data to reach an exact conclusion as to the cause of the gushing forth of blood and water from the wound; or as to the time—possibly a very short interval—which had elapsed since the Death of Jesus; but that blood and water were observed to flow is not doubtful.

It has, however, been frequently urged (e.g. by Westcott and Godet) that we must not expect a complete physical explanation of this incident; inasmuch as, according to the apostolic teaching, the Body of Christ did not suffer corruption after His Death (cf. Acts 2<sup>31</sup>). He truly died (see on v. 30), but the physical changes which succeed death in our experience did not necessarily follow in His case. We may not assume that the Death of Christ was exactly like the death of an ordinary human being. This view of the matter was put forward by Origen. In dead bodies, he says, blood is clotted and water does not flow; but from the dead Body of Christ blood and water issued, and here was a miracle.<sup>3</sup>

The language of Jn. is compatible with this interpretation. In that case, the solemn attestation of v. 35 was added because Jn. regarded the incident as so extraordinary as to be difficult of credence. It had not been narrated by earlier evangelists, and exceptionally good testimony would be necessary if it were to be believed.

But it is more probable that Jn. regards the flow of blood and water from the pierced side of Jesus as a natural phenomenon, which he specially notes because he wishes to refute the Docetic doctrines prevalent when the Gospel was composed.<sup>1</sup> Alike in the Gospel and in the First Epistle he is anxious to lay stress on the true humanity of Christ (see on 1<sup>14</sup>); and when telling of the Passion he would guard against the Docetism which treated the Body of Jesus as a mere phantom. We know from the second-century Acts of John, as well as from other sources, something of the curious teaching which denied humanity to Christ and explained His Crucifixion as an illusion. In this Docetic work (§ 101), Jesus is actually represented as saying that there was no real flow of blood from His Body; αἷμα ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ βεβαιῶνται και οὐκ ἕρπονται. In opposition to teaching of this kind, which goes back to the first century, Jn. is earnest in explaining that the Death of Jesus was a human death; His Body bled when it was pierced; it was no phantom.

In like manner, the language of the First Epistle is strongly anti-Docetic. "Every spirit which confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God," the spirit which denies this being the spirit of antichrist (1 Jn. 4<sup>2-3</sup>). That the language of 1 Jn. 5<sup>6</sup>, "This is He who came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not with the water only, but with the water and the blood," carries a direct allusion to Jn. 19<sup>34</sup> is doubtful. Perhaps the words are sufficiently explained of the historic Baptism of Jesus and of His historic Crucifixion. But the whole passage is strikingly similar to Jn. 19<sup>34</sup>,<sup>2</sup> in its insistence on the true humanity of Christ in the circumstances, alike, of His Life and His Death. This was what Jn. was most anxious to teach, viz. that the Man Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God (20<sup>31</sup>); and the incident recorded in Jn. 19<sup>34</sup> is so apposite in this connexion, as opposed to Docetic mysticism, that he calls attention to it by an emphatic and special attestation (v. 35).

lastly to the piercing of His side, when blood and water flowed forth. He concludes ταῦτα γὰρ πάντα σύμβολα σαρκός, τῆς ἐπιγῆς ἀλλαγμένης (c. Har. III. xxii. 2; cf. IV. xxxiii. 2). It will be observed that Irenæus has no thought of a miracle here, nor does he proceed to find any mystical meaning in the incident.

All later fathers are concerned with the symbolism. Among them may be named Claudius Apollinaris, bishop of Hierapolis about 172, a contemporary of Irenæus. A fragment ascribed to him runs as follows: ὁ τῆν ἁγίαν Πλευρὴν ἐκένθησε (cf. v. 37), ὁ ἐσχάτος ἐκ τῆς Πλευρᾶς αὐτοῦ τὸ δὴν πάλιν καθάρσιον, ὕδωρ καὶ αἷμα, λόγον καὶ πνεῦμα. Here the Water and the Blood seem to correspond respectively to the Word and the Spirit (for it is arbitrary to suppose that the order is to be reversed), as they do in the famous Comma Johanneum about the Three Heavenly Witnesses; and this suggests a doubt as to the genuineness of the alleged quotation from Claudius Apollinaris. In any case, the writer holds that the Water and the Blood at the Crucifixion are "the two things that again purify,"<sup>2</sup> πάλιν probably referring to the purifications under the Old Covenant. He may have had in mind the dedication of the Covenant with Israel (Ex. 24<sup>6c</sup>), which in Heb. 9<sup>19</sup> is said to have been with the blood of the victims and with water (water is not mentioned in Ex. 24). The elder Lightfoot<sup>3</sup> suggested that this was in the thought of the evangelist here, but there is no hint of anything of the kind in his words.

Tertullian finds in the water and the blood, symbols of the two kinds of baptism, that of the martyr being a baptism with blood (de Pud. 22). In another place, he suggests that there is a prefiguration of the two sacraments, which is the favourite comment of later theologians. The passage (de Bapt. 16) is the first which indicates a connexion with I Jn. 5<sup>8</sup>, and must therefore be quoted in full: "Venerat enim per aquam et sanguinem, sicut Joannes scripsit, ut aqua tingeretur, sanguine glorificarentur, proinde nos faceret aqua vocatos, sanguine electos. Hos duos baptismos de vulnere perfossi lateris emisit, quatenus qui in sanguinem eius crederent, aqua lavarentur, qui aqua lavissent, etiam sanguinem potarent."<sup>4</sup>

"Let the water and the blood,
From Thy riven side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure,
Cleanse me from its guilt and power."

δ ἑσπάρως μαμαρτήρησεν, καὶ ἀληθινὴ αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν ἡ μαρτυρία, καὶ

We need not pursue the patristic interpretations further.

86. This verse is omitted in ε (Cod. Palatinus of the fifth century), nor does it appear in the rearrangement of the Gospel texts called β<sub>1</sub> (Cod. Fuldensis of the sixth century). From this slender evidence Blass<sup>1</sup> concluded that the verse was of doubtful genuineness, and must be treated as a later gloss. But such a conclusion is perverse in the face of the overwhelming mass of MSS and vs. which contain the passage, not to speak of its characteristically Johannine style.

ὁ ἑσπάρως μαμαρτήρησεν. Jn. lays much stress on "witness" (see Intro., pp. xc-xciii); and here the witness of the incident that has just been recorded is John the Beloved Disciple, who has been mentioned in v. 26 as having been present at the Cross. This is strictly parallel to 21<sup>24</sup>, οὗτος ἔσται ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ τούτων, where also the Beloved Disciple is the witness to whom appeal is made.

καὶ ἐκείνος οὐδὲν ὅτι ἀληθὴς λέγει. Here, once more, we have a parallel at 21<sup>24</sup>, οὐδὲν ὅτι ἀληθὴς αὐτοῦ ἡ μαρτυρία ἐστίν. Nonnus is so certain of the parallelism that he alters οὐδὲν into ὕμνον, i.e. οὐδὲν as at 21<sup>24</sup>. But the reference of ἐκείνος must be more closely examined.

It has been thought that ἐκείνος here designates the actual writer of the Gospel,<sup>2</sup> including this verse. ἐκείνος is used at Jn. 9<sup>27</sup> by the Speaker of Himself. A closer parallel is provided by Josephus. He writes of his doings in the third person, and says that once he had thoughts of escaping from the city, but that the people begged him to remain: οὐ φρόνη τῆς ἐκείνου σωτηρίας, ἐμοίγε δοκεῖν, ἀλλ' ἑλπίδι τῆς ἐταῶν· οὐδὲν γὰρ ἤξιόν περὶσσεῖσθαι διενεῖν Ἰσραήλου μένοντος (Bell. Jud. III. 7, 16). Here ἐκείνος is the author; and to those who accept the view that the Beloved Disciple was the writer of the Fourth Gospel as well as the witness to whom he appeals, the language of Josephus helps to justify the use of ἐκείνος in Jn. 19<sup>35</sup>, although in Josephus it is markedly contrasted with ἐταῶν. Nevertheless, such a way of speaking would be curiously indirect here. If the writer is the eye-witness, he has already said of himself that his witness is trustworthy, and he does not strengthen his affirmation by repeating it in so awkward a fashion.

Grammatically, ἐκείνος is, indeed, resumptive of αὐτοῦ in the preceding clause, being used for the sake of emphasis; cf. 7<sup>30</sup> ἐγὼ οὐδα αὐτὸν, ὅτι παρ' αὐτοῦ εἶμι, ἐκείνους μὲ ἀνεστειλεν (see also 10<sup>1-9</sup>). As we take the words καὶ ἐκείνος ὁδεν ὅτι ἀληθὴ λέγει, they are the words of the evangelist, but not of the witness; and the repetition is not meaningless. "He," sc. the Beloved Disciple himself, "knows," for he is yet alive, "that he is telling true things." The evangelist's tribute is his own, and so is not exactly like the certificate of 21<sup>26</sup> which is that of the elders of the Church. Jn. assures his readers that the aged apostle knows exactly what he is saying: ἐκείνος ὁδεν. The alteration by Nonnus of ὁδεν into ἴδμεν is a paraphrase which alters the sense.

A quite different explanation of ἐκείνος has been held by some critics<sup>1</sup> since the days of Erasmus. It is said to apply to Christ Himself, who may be appealed to as the Witness here, ἐκείνος being used absolutely of Him as it is in 1 Jn. 5<sup>8, 12</sup>, where He has not been named in the immediate context. In 19<sup>35</sup>, on this showing, ἐκείνος ὁδεν ὅτι ἀληθὴ λέγει is a parenthetical observation, claiming the support of Christ for the testimony borne by the Beloved Disciple: "Jesus knows that he is telling the truth." This is very unlike the manner of the author of the Fourth Gospel (although Paul has a similar asseveration, 2 Cor. 11<sup>31</sup>). The same may be said of the attempt to refer ἐκείνος here to God the Father, as at 1<sup>30</sup> 5<sup>18, 27</sup> 6<sup>38</sup> 8<sup>48</sup>, where ἐκείνος is undoubtedly used of Him. It might be thought more plausible to hold that ἐκείνος ὁδεν was an allusion here to the witness of the Paraclete (of whom ἐκείνος is used 14<sup>26</sup> 15<sup>26</sup> 16<sup>13, 14</sup>); the words ἀληθῆτα, μαρτυρεῖν, ὄσωρα, εἶμα being associated with the witness of the Spirit in 1 Jn. 5<sup>4, 7</sup>. But we have seen already that the exegesis which refers 1 Jn. 5<sup>4, 7</sup> to Jn. 19<sup>35</sup> is improbable.

The fact is that there is nothing distinctive of Deity in the use of ἐκείνος by Jn. (see on 1<sup>9</sup>). In the Fourth Gospel ἐκείνος stands in the same way for John the Baptist (5<sup>36</sup>), or Moses (5<sup>40</sup>), or the blind man (9<sup>19</sup>), or Mary of Bethany (11<sup>30</sup> 20<sup>14, 16</sup>), or Peter (18<sup>17, 20</sup>), or the Beloved Disciple himself (13<sup>26</sup> 21<sup>7, 20</sup>). The pronoun is a favourite one with Jn., and he uses it to express emphasis or for clearness irrespectively of the person to whom it is applied. Here we hold it to refer

36. ἵνα ἡ γρ. πληρωθῇ . . . See Intro., pp. cxlix ff., for the significance of this formula, introducing a testimonium from the O.T. Here there is a free quotation of Ex. 12<sup>46</sup>, "neither shall ye break a bone thereof," sc. of the Passover lamb. Cf. also Num. 9<sup>12</sup>. The passage Ps. 34<sup>20</sup>, "He keepeth all his bones: not one of them is broken," although there are verbal similarities, is not apposite to the context.

The Passover lamb of the ancient ritual was not only slain to provide a commemorative meal; it was an "oblation" (Num. 9<sup>12</sup>), and it was not fitting that it should be mutilated. The offering must be perfect. This, to Jn., was a prophetic ordinance, and pointed forward to the manner of the death of Him who was the true Paschal Lamb. In this identification of Jesus with the Paschal Lamb, Paul is in agreement with Jn. "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us" (1 Cor. 5<sup>7</sup>).

37. καὶ πάλιν ἑτέρα γραφὴ λέγει. ἑτέρος "different" does not appear again in Jn.

The manner of the Lord's death was, according to Jn., in fulfilment both of type and prophecy; negatively, because His legs were not broken as the usual custom was in the case of crucified persons, so that the type of the Paschal Lamb might be fulfilled in Him; and positively, by the piercing of His side, as had been prophesied in Zech. 12<sup>10</sup> ὄφρατι εἰς ἡν ἐξεκέντησαν, ἵνα ἡμεῖς πιστεύωμεν, "they shall look on Him whom they pierced."

The LXX, reading ἦν ἡν for ἦν, by an erroneous transposition of η and ν, has the curious κατωρχήσαντο, "they danced insultingly," instead of ἐξεκέντησαν, "they pierced," which is the natural rendering of the Hebrew and is followed by Theodotus and Aquila. Symmachus having ἐξεκέντησαν. The same rendering is found in Rev. 1<sup>7</sup>, where the prophecy is given a different turn and referred to the Second Advent, ὄφρατι αὐτὸν πᾶς ὀφθαλμὸς, καὶ οὐδὲν αὐτὸν ἐξεκέντησαν. Justin uses similar words (with ἐκέντησεν) of the Second Advent

38. Μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ἤρώτησεν τὸν Πιλάτῳ Ἰωσήφ ἀπὸ Ἀριμαθαίας, ὃν μαθητὴς τοῦ Ἰησοῦ κεκοιμημένος ἐστὶν διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν

(Apoc. i. 52, Τργρδ. 64), and in Τργρδ. 32 distinguishes the two Advents, thus: διὰ παρουσίας αἰσίου γοηφιστοῦ ἐξηγησάμεν, μὴδὲ μὲν ἐν ᾧ ἐξεκτελεῖται ὑφ' ἡμῶν, δευτέρου δὲ ἐν ἐπιγενομένῳ εἰς τὸν ἐξεκτελεστέον.

It is clear that Jn. did not use the LXX here, and while he may have translated independently from the Hebrew, it is more probable that he has adopted a version current in his time.

Abbott (Diat. 2318) suggests that Jn. means the prophecy to apply to the four soldiers (whom he fantastically supposes to represent the four quarters of the globe): "they shall look on Him whom they pierced." But Zech. 12<sup>10</sup> refers in its original context to "the inhabitants of Jerusalem"; and it is more natural to take the Jews for the subject of "they shall look." It was to the Jews that Jesus was delivered to be crucified (v. 16), and the "piercing" was, indirectly, their act.

The burial of the Body of Jesus (vv. 38-42)

38. μετὰ ταῦτα is the phrase by which Jn. introduces new sections of the narrative. See Introd., p. cviii.

Ἰωσήφ ἀπὸ Ἀριμαθαίας. Arimathea is probably to be identified with the O.T. Ramat-haim-Zophim (1 Sam. 1<sup>1</sup>; cf. 1 Macc. 11<sup>34</sup>), a place about 13 miles E.N.E. of Lydda, and about 60 miles from Jerusalem. Joseph was a member of the Sanhedrim, εὐσεβήμων βουλευτῆς (Mk. 15<sup>43</sup>), and rich (according to Mt. 27<sup>67</sup>), Lk. 23<sup>50</sup> adding the information that he was a good and just man, who had not consented to the proceedings of his colleagues in the condemnation of Jesus. He was a disciple of Jesus, in the wider sense of μαθητῆς (cf. Mt. 27<sup>67</sup>), although a secret one, κεκοιμημένος ἐστὶν διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων (cf. 7<sup>13, 9<sup>28</sup></sup>). Mk. only says of him that he was "looking for the kingdom of God." Pseudo-Peter alleges that he was "a friend of Pilate and of the Lord." But he was not a familiar figure among the disciples of Jesus, for the Galilean women do not seem to have been acquainted with him: they only watched what he and his servants did at the tomb (Mk. 15<sup>43</sup>). It was only after the Crucifixion that Joseph and Nicodemus avowed their discipleship by their solicitude for reverent treatment of the body of Jesus. Mk. notes that Joseph went to make his request to Pilate, τολμήσας "having plucked up his courage" (Mk. 15<sup>43</sup>).

Joseph's request and his subsequent action are narrated in all the Gospels (Mt. 27<sup>67</sup>, Mk. 15<sup>43</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>50</sup>); in Pseudo-Peter (§ 2) the request is made in advance before the Crucifixion, and is referred to Herod before it is granted.

Turner has suggested<sup>1</sup> that Joseph's petition to Pilate was made at the time when the deputation from the Sanhedrim asked that the death of the crucified persons should be hastened (see above on v. 31); and, although Jn. introduces v. 38 with μετὰ ταῦτα, this is more probable than the alternative that Pilate gave two separate audiences on the subject of the death of Jesus and the subsequent disposal of His body.

At any rate, Pilate acceded to the request of Joseph that the body of Jesus should be given him for burial, and made no difficulty about it. ἐσπούρησεν τὸ σῶμα is Mk.'s phrase (Mk. 15<sup>44</sup>): he gave the corpse freely. (Cf. Mk. 6<sup>26</sup>, Mt. 12<sup>12</sup>.)

39. Γρὰς ἀπὸν (ABL) the rec. has the explanatory πρὸς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, with κ<sup>1</sup>D<sup>1000</sup>NTA<sup>26</sup>.

For Nicodemus see on 3<sup>1</sup>: he is described here as ὁ ἔλαβεν πρὸς αὐτὸν νεκρὸς τὸ πρῶτον, recalling his former interview with Jesus (see on 7<sup>50</sup>). It has been suggested that he is to be identified with Joseph of Arimathea,<sup>2</sup> which has no more probability than the fancy that he is only an ideal character invented by Jn. (see on 3<sup>1</sup>). In this passage he is represented as assisting Joseph of Arimathea in the preparation of the Body of Jesus for burial, after Pilate had given his permission; but with that timid caution which was a characteristic (see on 7<sup>50</sup>) he does not seem himself to have approached Pilate in the first instance. Nicodemus was probably a rich man, for a hundred pounds weight of spicery was a costly gift. It is not ἀλλήγ ὡς λίγρον ἑσπερίν. 40. ἄλαβον οὖν τὸ σῆμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ καὶ ἔθηκεν αὐτὸ θόρονος μετὰ τῶν ἀρωμάτων, καθὼς ἔθος ἐστὶν τοῖς said that Nicodemus bought the spices for this special purpose (there would have been little time for that); probably he brought them from his own house.

The myrrh was a sweet-smelling gum which was mixed with the powdered aromatic wood of aloes. Myrrh and aloes are mentioned together as forming a fragrant mixture or confection several times in the O.T. (Ps. 45<sup>8</sup>, Prov. 7<sup>12</sup>, Cant. 4<sup>14</sup>). The use of such spices, when a dead body was placed with honour in its sepulchre, is mentioned in connexion with the burial of King Asa (2 Chron. 16<sup>14</sup>). They appear also to have been used for embalming, but nothing is said of such an intention in this case.

There was little time before the Sabbath came on, and no final disposition of the Body in its resting-place was attempted. Pseudo-Peter says that it was washed, which may be only an imaginative addition to the narrative. It was not anointed; the anointing (cf. Mk. 14<sup>8</sup>, Mt. 26<sup>13</sup>) was postponed until the day after the Sabbath, when the women came to do it, having bought spices on their own account (Mk. 16<sup>1</sup>, Lk. 24<sup>1</sup>).

40. ἄλαβον οὖν κτλ. "Then they took the body of Jesus," i.e. Joseph and Nicodemus. Mk., followed by Mt., tells that Mary Magdalene and Mary the wife of Clopas were present at the burial; they had been at the Cross (as Jn. has told already, v. 25), and they waited until the end. Salome was also at the Cross (see on v. 25), but she may have accompanied her sister Mary the Mother of Jesus when she left the scene (v. 27); at any rate, she is not mentioned by name as having been at the burial (cf. Lk. 23<sup>56</sup>).

ἔθηκεν αὐτὸ θόρονος μετὰ τῶν ἀρωμάτων, "they bound it with strips of cloth, with the spices"; apparently the spices were scattered freely between the folds of the cloths, and the body was embedded in them.<sup>1</sup> It was the custom of the Jews (as distinct from that of the Egyptians) to bury (ἐταφιάζειν; cf. Gen. 50<sup>8</sup> where this word is used of the embalming of Jacob) in this way. Cf. Jn. 11<sup>36</sup> for the "swathes" (κερίαι) with which Lazarus had been bound.

The word θόρονος, "linen cloth," occurs again only 20<sup>6, 7</sup> and Lk. 24<sup>12</sup> (cf. Judg. 14<sup>13</sup>). The Synoptists in their accounts of the burial have the word σινδών. Milligan (s.v.) cites the use of θόρονος in papyri for burial linen, or for the wrappings of a mummy.

Ἰουδαίους ἐταφιάζειν. 41. ἦν δὲ ἐν τῷ τόπῳ οὗτος ἑστραυρῶθῃ κήφος, καὶ ἐν τῷ κήφῳ μνημείον καινόν, ἐν ᾧ οὐδέτις οὐδεὶς ἦν τεθειμένος. 42. ἔκει οὖν διὰ τῆς Παρασκευῆς τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ὅτι ἔγγυς ἦν τὸ μνημείον, ἔθηκεν τὸν Ἰησοῦν.

41. ἦν δὲ ἐν τῷ τόπῳ οὗτος ἑστραυρῶθῃ κήφος. None of the Synoptists mention a garden (see for κήφος on 18<sup>3</sup>) as the place of burial. This, with the detail that it was "in" the place of Crucifixion, is peculiar to Jn. (For the use of the impf. ἦν, see on 11<sup>10</sup>). There was no time to lose, and this garden was near Golgotha. Mt. 27<sup>60</sup> adds that the tomb in the garden belonged to Joseph of Arimathea, but this is not in Mk., Lk., or Jn., although it may have been the case. Pseudo-Peter explicitly says that the garden bore the name κήφος Ἰωσήφ. Two instances of royal tombs in gardens are given 2 Kings 21<sup>18, 20</sup>, and the LXX of Neh. 3<sup>18</sup> makes mention of κήφος τάφου Δαυὶδ. Milligan (s.v.) cites κτιστοτάφιον "a tomb in a garden," from a papyrus of 5 a.c.

ἐν τῷ κήφῳ μνημείον καινόν (D<sup>1000</sup>N 69 give καινόν), ἐν ᾧ οὐδέτις οὐδεὶς ἦν τεθειμένος. Mk. 15<sup>46</sup> has "a tomb which had been hewn out of a rock," which Mt. 27<sup>60</sup> follows: adding (as Jn. does) that the tomb was καινόν. Lk. also says (23<sup>56</sup>) that the tomb was λαξευμένον, adding ὅτι οὐκ ἦν οὐδεὶς οὐτὸς κείνου. Thus Jn. agrees with Lk. in saying that the tomb had not been used before, and he uses almost the same words, substituting οὐδέτις for οὐτός (cf. 20<sup>9</sup>).

42. ἔκει οὖν κτλ., "there then, because the tomb was near, they laid Him."

διὰ τῆς Παρασκευῆς τῶν Ἰουδαίων. This was the reason that made delay impossible. The "Preparation" was at hand. This may mean either "the Preparation for the Sabbath," i.e. Friday, or "the Preparation for the Passover." It has been pointed out on 19<sup>14</sup> that elsewhere in the N.T. παρασκευή always means Friday; and this gives a good sense here. But inasmuch as in this passage the words τῶν Ἰουδαίων follow, an addition which Jn. always makes when speaking of the Passover festivals (see 2<sup>13</sup> 6<sup>4</sup> 11<sup>55</sup>), it may be that we are to lay stress on τῆν which precedes παρασκευῆς (see on 19<sup>14</sup>) and understand him here to say "the Preparation of the Passover." The meaning of the passage is not altered in any case, for both on account of the impending Sabbath and of the impending Passover Feast, it was necessary that the burial should be hastened.

Field rightly calls attention to the solemn and stately cadences of the rendering of this verse in the R.V.: "There then because of the Jews' Preparation (for the tomb was nigh at hand) they laid Jesus."

XX. 1. Τῆ δὲ μὲτ' τῶν σαββάτων Μαριάμ ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἔρχεται πρῶτ', σκοτίας ἐν οὐραῖς, εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, καὶ βλάκει τὸν λίθον ἡμεῖς οὐκ

XX. 1<sup>a</sup>. The narrative in Jn. 20 of the appearances of Christ after His Resurrection, like the narrative in Lk. 24 and the Marcan Appendix, tells only of appearances in Jerusalem or its immediate neighbourhood. On the other hand, the narrative of Mt. 28<sup>1-6</sup> tells of an appearance in Galilee, and in this it probably follows the Lost Conclusion of Mk. The Appendix to Jn. (c. 21) also lays the scene of a manifestation of Christ in Galilee. There are thus two traditions as to the appearances of the Risen Lord: one which places them in Jerusalem, and another which places them in Galilee. It may be impossible, from the evidence at our disposal, to construct a complete table which shall indicate the order in which they occurred; but there is no inherent difficulty in the circumstance that they were not all observed in the same locality. If it be accepted that Jesus Christ rose from the dead, it was as easy for Him to manifest Himself to His disciples in Jerusalem and in Galilee, as in Jerusalem only or in Galilee only. The Jerusalem tradition is followed in c. 20, with the addition of particulars which no other authority gives, and which may plausibly be referred to the eye-witness whose testimony is behind the narrative. In c. 21 we have a version of the Galilean tradition (see p. 690f.).

1. τῆ δὲ μετ' τῶν σαββάτων . . . πρῶτ', σκοτίας ἐν οὐραῖς. Mk. 16<sup>1</sup> says in like manner, πρῶτ' τῆς μετ' σαββάτων. For πρῶτ', see on 18<sup>28</sup>. Lk. 24<sup>1</sup> and Mt. 28<sup>1</sup> agree in mentioning "the first day of the week," and in describing the visit to the tomb as being made in the half-light just before dawn.

Jn. names Mary Magdalene only as visiting the tomb, but the plur. οὐραῖς of v. 2 suggests that she was not alone, and that her perplexity as to how the Lord's body had been disposed of was shared by others. It is unlikely that a woman would have ventured by herself outside the city walls before daylight, and the Synoptists agree in telling that she was accompanied by others. Mk. 16<sup>1</sup> names as her companions Mary the mother of James (i.e. the wife of Clopas; see on 2<sup>14</sup>) and Salome, the Virgin's sister, who were also present at the Crucifixion with her (19<sup>25</sup>). Mt. 28<sup>1</sup> only names "Mary Magdalene and the other Mary." Lk. 24<sup>10</sup> mentions "Mary Magdalene and Joanna and Mary the mother of James and the other women."

Pseudo-Peter (§ 11) also notes that Mary Magdalene was accompanied by other women.

Jn. does not say what the purpose of this visit to the tomb was; and in this he is in agreement with Mt. 28<sup>1</sup>, where it is merely told that they went "to see the sepulchre." But Mk. 16<sup>1</sup> and Lk. 23<sup>56</sup> 24<sup>1</sup> explain that the purpose of the women was to anoint the body of Jesus. In Jn.'s narrative (see 19<sup>39</sup>) the body was hastily laid in spices on the Day of Crucifixion by Joseph and Nicodemus, but there was no time for any anointing then, or final disposition of the body. Nothing further could be done on the Sabbath, and the women came as early as possible the next morning, with the spices and unguents that they had provided for themselves (Mk. 16<sup>1</sup>, Lk. 23<sup>56</sup>).<sup>1</sup>

We hold that Mary Magdalene is the same person as Mary of Bethany (see Additional Note on 12<sup>2-9</sup>); and her desire to anoint the body of her Master is thus significant in connexion with His words to her when she anointed His feet at Bethany (12<sup>7</sup>). She had kept the ointment "against the day of His burying." Jn., however, does not introduce this point expressly. He narrates Mary's visit to the tomb briefly, because what he is anxious to describe is the subsequent visit of Peter and the Beloved Disciple, which was suggested by her report.

Both Mk. and Lk. agree with Jn. in the statement that Mary (and the other women) found the stone taken away from the tomb. For τὸν λίθον ἥρπασεν ἐκ τοῦ μνημείου, see on 11<sup>28, 29</sup>.

According to the Johannine narrative, Mary does not suspect as yet that anything out of the ordinary course of nature has happened. She sees that the stone which sealed the sepulchre has been removed, and (seemingly) she looks in to assure herself that the tomb is empty<sup>2</sup> (v. 2); but her inference is only that the body has been removed to some other resting-place.

2. τρέχει οὖν ἐπὶ. The haste with which the women ran back from the tomb is mentioned also Mk. 16<sup>7</sup>, Mt. 28<sup>8</sup>.

ἔρχεται πρὸς Σίμωνα Πέτρον. Peter was still, despite his denial of Jesus, reckoned as the leader, or at any rate as one of the leaders, of the disciples; and so it is naturally to him that the surprising news of the tomb being empty is carried first. He has not been mentioned since 18<sup>29</sup>; and so on his reappearance in the narrative, Jn., according to his habit (see on 13<sup>36</sup>), gives his full name Σίμων Πέτρος. The names of the πρὸς τὸν ἄλλον μαθητὴν ὃν ἠγάπη οὗ Ἰησοῦς, καὶ λέγει αὐτοῖς, Ἦσαν τὸν Κόριον ἐκ τοῦ μαθητῶν, καὶ οὐκ εἴδαμεν τοὺ ἔθνησαν αὐτῶν. 3. Ἐξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πέτρος καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι μαθηταί, καὶ ἦρχοντο εἰς τὸ μαγεῖον. 4. Ἐπρεχον δὲ οἱ δύο ἑαυτῶν· καὶ ὁ ἄλλος μαθητὴν προσδραμον τάχιστον τοῦ Πέτρον καὶ ἦλθεν πρῶτος εἰς τὸ μαγεῖον, 5. καὶ παρακίνας βλάπτεται κείμενα τὰ ὀνόματα, οὐ μόνον ἀσφάληθεν. 6. ἔρχεται disciples to whom the women brought the news are not specified in Mt. 28<sup>2</sup>; but cf. Lk. 24<sup>12</sup>.

καὶ πρὸς τὸν ἄλλον μαθητὴν κτλ. As Bengel observes, the repetition of πρὸς indicates that Peter and "the other disciple" were not lodging in the same house. The women had to visit them separately. Cf. πρὸς αὐτοῦς of v. 10, and see 19<sup>2</sup>.

ὃν ἠγάπη οὗ Ἰησοῦς. See 13<sup>34</sup>, and cf. 21<sup>12</sup>. This association of Peter and the "Beloved Disciple" is significant, in view of the identification of the Beloved Disciple with John, the son of Zebedee. See Introd., pp. xxxiv ff.

Ἦσαν τὸν κῆριον κτλ.,<sup>1</sup> they have taken away the Lord from the tomb, and we do not know where they have laid Him." The subject of ἦσαν is indefinite; Mary and her companions did not know who they were. For the designation of Jesus as "the Lord," see the note on 4<sup>1</sup>.

The plur. εἴδαμεν, as has been noted on v. 1, suggests that Mary was speaking for her companions as well as for herself.

3. Peter takes the lead, more suo. ἔξῆλθεν οὖν ὁ Πέτρος καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι μαθηταί. For the singular verb ἔξῆλθεν, see Mt. 28<sup>1</sup>. καὶ ἦρχοντο κτλ.,<sup>2</sup> and they set out for the tomb.<sup>3</sup>

In the Musée du Luxembourg at Paris there is a remarkable picture by E. Burnand of Peter and his young companion hastening to the sepulchre, which will repay examination.

4. Ἐπρεχον δὲ κτλ.,<sup>4</sup> "So they began to run, the two together, and the other disciple ran on in front more quickly than Peter." προπρεχέων occurs again in N.T. only at Lk. 19<sup>2</sup>. Cf. 1 Macc. 16<sup>2</sup>.

καὶ ἦλθεν πρῶτος κτλ. The Beloved Disciple was probably the younger man of the two.

6. καὶ παρακίνας βλάπτεται κείμενα τὰ ὀνόματα. This sentence invites comparison with the parallel passage Lk. 24<sup>12</sup> in the rec. text, viz.: ὁ δὲ Πέτρος ἀνωστής ἔδραμον ἐπὶ τὸ μαγεῖον καὶ παρακίνας βλάπτεται τὰ ὀνόματα κείμενα μόνον καὶ ἀπέλαθε πρὸς αὐτῶν, θαυμάζων τὸ γεγονός. With ἀπέλαθε πρὸς αὐτῶν cf. Jn. 20<sup>2</sup>, ἀπέλαθεν οὖν πάλιν πρὸς αὐτοῖς ὁ μαθητὴν.

The verse Lk. 24<sup>12</sup> is found in  $\kappa$ ABLF $\alpha$ G, the old and the Pesh. Syriac, and in cf  $\beta$   $\nu$ , a strong combination. It is omitted in D a b e f r ful etc., and on that account Westcott-Hort place it in double brackets, treating it as a "Western non-interpolation." They regard it as "condensed and simplified" from Jn. 20<sup>2-3</sup>; θαυμάζων τὸ γεγονός being added to the Johannine account. Yet Hort's view of what he calls "Western non-interpolations" is not universally accepted;<sup>1</sup> and, in this instance, it is hard to believe that a scribe would be bold enough to alter so materially a statement made in the Fourth Gospel after it had received general acceptance,<sup>2</sup> and thus to omit all mention of the Beloved Disciple as Peter's companion. On the contrary, the evidence for Lk. 24<sup>12</sup> being part of the original text of Lk. is too strong to be set aside by the authority of D, an admittedly eccentric manuscript; and the true inference from the verbal similarities between Lk. 24<sup>12</sup> and Jn. 20<sup>2</sup> seems to be that Jn., here as often elsewhere (see Introd., p. xcix), is using Lk.'s words for the purpose of correcting him. It was not Peter, he says, who peeped into the tomb and saw the linen wrappings lying on the ground, but it was the Beloved Disciple, who had arrived at the tomb before Peter did. He retains the words of Lk. so as to make it clear that he is dealing with the same incident, but he corrects the narrative of Lk. in so far as Peter is represented as being alone. Thus "he went home" in Lk. 24<sup>12</sup> becomes "the disciples went home" in Jn. 20<sup>10</sup>.

The difference between Lk. and Jn. is that between a man who is reproducing a generally accepted tradition, and that of an author relying on and reproducing what he has been told by an eye-witness of, and a participator in, the events narrated. Lk., indeed, implies at 24<sup>12</sup> that he had heard that more than one disciple had gone to the tomb to verify the women's report that it was empty; but there is no reason to think that he alludes there to the visit of Peter and John. Pseudo-Peter says there were many visitors to the sepulchre.

οὐκ καὶ Σίμων Πέτρος ἀκολουθῶν αὐτῷ, καὶ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον· καὶ θεωρεῖ τὰ ἄθωνα κείμενα, γ. καὶ τὸ σοῦδάριον, δ ᾧ ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς αὐτοῦ, οὐ μετὰ τῶν ἄθωνων κείμενον ἀλλὰ χωρὶς ἔτετυ-κείμενα τὰ ἄθωνα (see on 19th for ἄθωνα). The participle κείμενα is put first for emphasis. What startled the disciple was that he saw the grave-cloths lying on the ground. If the body had been removed to some other resting-place, as Mary had suggested, it would presumably have been removed as it had been originally prepared for burial. The cloths would also have disappeared.<sup>1</sup>

ὁ μόνος (for μόνος, see on 12th) εἰσῆλθεν. That the first disciple to note the presence of the grave-cloths in the tomb did not actually go into it first is not a matter that would seem worth noting, to any one except the man who himself refrained from entering. This strongly suggests that we are dealing with the narrative of an eye-witness. As to why John (for we believe the disciple to have been John) waited for Peter to go in first, we do not know. He may have been afraid, or overcome with emotion. Peter was a man of coarser fibre, more hasty, and more ready to put himself forward. That may be the whole explanation.

6. Peter's part in what happened is now resumed, and so he is given his full name Σίμων Πέτρος (cf. v. 2, and see on 18th). He did not hesitate, but entered the tomb at once.

καὶ θεωρεῖ τὰ ἄθωνα κείμενα, "and notices (he did not merely glance in: see on 2nd 9th for θεωρεῖν) the linen cloths lying." In the parallel passage, Lk. 24th, we have βλέπει τὰ ἄθωνα κείμενα μόνα. Jn. leaves out μόνα, but explains carefully in v. 7 what it means in this context.

7. τὸ σοῦδάριον. See on 11th. The napkin for the head was not lying with the grave-cloths for the body.

ἀλλὰ χωρὶς ἐτετυλιγμένον εἰς ἓνα τόσον. ἐτετυλίχεναι is a rare verb, not found in the LXX; and in the parallels Mt. 27th, Lk. 24th (not again in N.T.) it is used of wrapping the body of Jesus in a cloth, ἐτετυλίχεν αὐτὸ σινδῶνα. Here it is the head-covering itself or "napkin" that is "rolled up." Latham believes that the language in vv. 6, 7 implies that the body had withdrawn from the grave-cloths, the swatches, and the turban-like napkin; the body-cloths being thus not scattered about, but lying flat, and the napkin, retaining the shape into which it had been wound (so as to cover the head), lying where the head had been. This is reverently and suggestively worked out in The Risen Master (pp. 39, 89); but it cannot be regarded as certain.

Milligan (s.v. ἐτετυλίχεναι) cites a remarkable verbal parallel from a third-century magical papyrus, ἐτετυλίχεν τὰ φύλλα ἐν σοῦδαρίῳ κινῶ.

8. τότε οὐκ εἰσῆλθεν κτλ. Peter may have told John what he saw; at any rate, John no longer refrained from entering the tomb, "and he saw and believed" (εἶδεν καὶ ἐπίστευεν). He had no vision of the Risen Christ, but the sight of the abandoned grave-cloths was sufficient to assure him that Jesus had risen from the dead. Jn. (16th) and the Synoptists (Mk. 8th 9th, 21 10th with parallels) agree in telling that Jesus had, on one occasion or another, assured the disciples that He would rise from the grave, and that they would see Him again. They had not understood or appreciated what He meant. But when John, the Beloved Disciple, saw the grave-cloths and the napkin in the tomb, the meaning of the strange predictions to which he had listened came to him with a flash of insight. "He saw and believed." This was a moment in his inner life, which was so charged with consequence, that he could never forget it, and the incident is recorded here as explaining how and when it was that he reached the fullness of Christian faith. That he "believed" without "seeing" his Risen Lord was in marked contrast to the attitude of Thomas, to whom it was said, "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (v. 29).

ἐπίστευεν. Syr. sin. has "they believed," and 69, 124 give ἐπίστευεν, a mistaken correction due to a desire to include Peter as also "believing." For, although Peter "believed," it seems to have been after the Risen Christ had appeared to him (Lk. 24th, 1 Cor. 15th), and not after his first glance at the tomb. He went away, according to Lk. 24th, "wondering at that which was come to pass."

9. D<sup>ms</sup> has the eccentric reading οὐκ ἐπίστευεν, the scribe being misled by the words which follow.

For πιστεύειν used absolutely, without the object of belief being specified, see on 1st.

8. οὐδέτις (cf. 10th) γὰρ ᾔκουσεν τὴν γραφήν. γὰρ is often used by Jn. to introduce a comment on incidents or words which have been recorded (cf. s.g. 3rd and 5th). Here γὰρ does not introduce the reason for, or explanation of, the faith of John. Its meaning is, "You must remember that," etc. Jn. is thinking of his readers, who may be surprised that Peter and the Beloved Disciple were not more quick to recognise what had happened. "You must remember that they did not γὰρ ᾤδισαν τὴν γραφήν, ὅτι δὲ αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆναι.

10. ἀπήλθον οὖν πάλιν πρὸς αὐτοὺς οἱ μαθηταί.

11. Μαρίας δὲ εἰσῆλθε πρὸς τῇ μνημείῳ ἕως κλαίουσα. ὡς οὖν yet know (i.e. understand) the scripture which had foretold the Resurrection of Christ."

ᾤδισαν is used as in Mk. 12<sup>21</sup> μὴ εἰδότες τὰς γραφάς, "not appreciating the meaning of the scriptures."

The γραφή, or particular passage of Scripture in the evangelist's mind, was probably Ps. 16<sup>10</sup> (see on 2<sup>22</sup>).

ὅτι δὲ αὐτὸν ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆναι. The Divine necessity which determined the course of Christ's Ministry, Passion, and Resurrection has been often indicated by Jn.; see on 3<sup>14</sup> for Jn.'s use of δὲ in this connexion, and cf. 2<sup>4</sup>. That the Scriptures must be "fulfilled" is fundamental in Jn.'s thought; see Introd., pp. cxlix-clvi.

10. ἀπήλθον οὖν πάλιν κτλ. "Dans un trouble extrême" is Renan's description of their state of mind. But for this there is no evidence. Lk. 24<sup>18</sup> describes Peter as bewildered rather than troubled, while Jn. 20<sup>13</sup> records that the Beloved Disciple's faith in the Risen Christ was already assured.

πρὸς αὐτοῦς, i.e. ches eux, "to their lodgings." John had brought the Virgin Mother εἰς τὰ ἔξω (19<sup>20</sup>), and nothing could be more probable than that he should bring the wonderful news to her without any delay, as it is here recorded that he did.

πρὸς αὐτοὺς is used in a similar way by Josephus (Antt. VIII. iv. 6), πρὸς αὐτοὺς . . . ἀπέστειλαν, "they returned home." οἱ μαθηταί, sc. the disciples Peter and John. See on 2<sup>2</sup>.

The Appearance of Christ to Mary and her report to the disciples (vv. 11-18)

11. Μαρίας δὲ εἰσῆλθε κτλ. For the spelling Μαρίας (here supported by MO 1, 33), see on 10<sup>28</sup>; and for εἰσῆλθε, see on 1<sup>38</sup>.

Mary, according to Jn., had returned to the tomb, after she had told Peter and John that it had been found empty. She "was standing by the tomb outside, weeping," πρὸς τῷ μνημείῳ ἕως κλαίουσα is read by ABD<sup>10</sup>PLNW, as against πρὸς τὸ μνημαῖον κλαίουσα ἕως of the rec. text. M has ἐν τῷ μνημαίῳ, which is inconsistent with ἕως. Mary is not represented by Jn. as having entered the tomb at all.

For the introductory ὡς οὖν . . . see on 4<sup>60</sup>.

κλαίειν, παρέκθεεν εἰς τὸ μνημαῖον, 12. καὶ θεωρεῖ δύο ἀγγέλους ἐν

As she wept, she "peeped" into the tomb. For παρακίεσθαι see on v. 5.

12. καὶ θεωρεῖ δύο ἀγγέλους κτλ., "and she notices (see on 2<sup>22</sup> and esp. v. 14 below) two angels in white" (ἰσ λευκοῦς, ἱματίοις being understood, the Greek idiom being the same as the English) "sitting, one at the head, and one at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain."

All four Gospels agree in telling of an angelic appearance to the women at the tomb, but there are discrepancies in the various accounts. In Mk. 16<sup>8</sup> the women "entering into the tomb, saw a young man sitting on the right side, arrayed in a white robe"; in Mt. 28<sup>2</sup> the women (apparently) see an angel descending from heaven who rolls away the stone from the tomb and sits upon it. As in Mk., he tells the women that Jesus is risen, and has gone into Galilee. In Lk. 24<sup>4</sup>, after the women have entered the tomb and found it empty, "two men stood by them in dazzling apparel" who remind them that when Jesus "was yet in Galilee" He had predicted that He would rise on the third day. The Marcan saying about the risen Lord having gone to Galilee is thus altered by Lk., who mentions no Galilean appearance, and follows a Jerusalem tradition. It is noteworthy that "two men in white apparel" are mentioned again by Lk. in Acts 1<sup>10</sup>, as appearing to the apostles at the Ascension. In Jn. we have "two angels in white," who only ask Mary why she is weeping. They do not give any message or counsel, for Jesus Himself is immediately seen by Mary.

It was a common belief that angels or celestial visitants were clad in white. Cf. Dan. 10<sup>5</sup> εἰς ἐνδεδυμένοις βύσσινον, and Ezek. 9<sup>2</sup>; Rev. 1<sup>5</sup> ἄγγελοι . . . ἐνδεδυμένοι λίνον καθάρων καὶ λαμπερῶν. In Enoch lxxvii. a mention is made of beings coming forth from heaven "who were like white men." Mk. and Mt. only mention one angel, but Lk. and Jn. mention two. The appearance of a pair of angels seems to be a not unusual feature of what were believed to be heavenly visitations; e.g. in 2 Macc. 3<sup>20</sup> two young men appeared to Heliodorus, "splendid in their apparel" (διακρῆναι τὴν περιβολήν). So, too, in the Apocalypse of Peter (§ 3) two men suddenly appeared, καὶ φωνάζον ἦν ἀντὶν δῶκε τὸ ἔδωμα. The development of legend is well illustrated by the fanciful narrative which is found in the Gospel of Peter of the appearances at the sepulchre. First (§ 9) the soldiers saw "three men coming out of the tomb, two of them supporting the other," i.e. two angels supporting Christ. Then (§ 10) the heavens are opened and "a man descended and entered the sepulchre"; and (§ 11) when Mary and her companions look into the tomb "they see there a young man sitting in the midst of the tomb, fair and clothed with an exceeding bright robe," who speaks to them as in Mk.

λευκοῖς καθεζομένοις, ἕνα πρὸς τῆ κεφαλῇ καὶ ἕνα πρὸς τοὺς ποσίς, ὅπου ἕκαστο τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. 13. καὶ λέγουσιν αὐτῇ ἑαίνου ἴνους, τί κλάιεις; λέγει αὐτοῖς ὅτι Ἦραν τὸν Κύριόν μου, καὶ οὐκ οἶδα ποῦ ἔθηκαν αὐτόν. 14. ταῦτα εἰποῦσα ἐστράφη εἰς τὰ ὄπισθεν,

That Mary reported having seen and addressed two persons at the tomb, whom the evangelist calls "angels," is all that is involved in the Johannine narrative. Lk. also tells of two men, but Mk. of one man only. What really happened is not possible now to determine. That the women saw some person or persons at the tomb can hardly be doubted; and that they were heavenly or angelic visitants was evidently the belief of Mt. and, probably also, of Lk. and Jn. Latham supposes them to have been members of the Essene sect who were accustomed to wear white clothing, or "young men of the priestly school."<sup>1</sup> But there is no sufficient evidence of this.

ἕνα πρὸς τῆ κεφαλῇ καὶ ἕνα πρὸς τοὺς ποσίς. Wetstein observes that as the body of Jesus had hung between two thieves on the Cross, so the place where His body had lain was guarded between two angels; and he recalls the cherubim on the mercy-seat (Ex. 25<sup>22</sup>, 1 Sam. 4<sup>8</sup>, Ps. 80<sup>3</sup>, etc.). But there is no evidence of such thoughts being those of the evangelist.

13. καὶ (ὡς ἀδελφοὶ σαμ. καὶ) λέγουσιν αὐτῇ. All they say is "Woman, why are you weeping?"<sup>2</sup> There is nothing in the Johannine narrative of any counsel given by the watchers at the tomb, or (except the use of the word "angels") any hint that they were not ordinary men. In the other Gospels, the women are represented as being terrified when addressed by the angels at the tomb; but in Jn. Mary shows no fear, nor does she indicate by her demeanour that she has seen anything unusual. She answers her questioners quite simply, by telling them why she is in grief. The story, so far, has nothing of the miraculous about it; and it probably represents a tradition more primitive than that of the other Gospels, in that it may go back to Mary herself.

For ἴνους as a mode of address, see on 2<sup>d</sup>.

Ἦραν τὸν κῆρπον κτλ., repeated from v. 2 with the significant addition of μου after κῆρπον.

οὐκ οἶδα, not οἶδαμεν as in v. 2, for the other women were not with Mary on this, her second, visit to the tomb.

14. ταῦτα εἰποῦσα κτλ. So K<sup>ABDNW</sup>, but the rec. prefixes

καὶ. The absence of connecting particles in vv. 14-18 is noteworthy.

For εἰς τὰ ὄπισθεν cf. 6th 13<sup>d</sup>. Mary turned round, perhaps being half-conscious (as often happens) that some one was behind her.

καὶ θεωρεῖ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἑστῶτα, "and notices Jesus standing." The two watchers in the tomb had been seated. θεωρεῖν (cf. v. 12, and see on 2nd) is the verb used in the promise to the disciples ἵνα εἰς θεωρεῖτέ με (14th). Such "seeing" would be impossible for unbelievers; it was a vision possible only for faith.

καὶ οὐκ ᾔδει ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἐστίν. She did not recognise Him. A similar thing in like words is told of the disciples on the lake (21st); and of the two on the way to Emmaus (Lk. 24<sup>16</sup>). The Marcan Appendix says of this latter incident that He was "manifested in another form" (ὡς ἑτέρου μορφῆς, Mk. 16<sup>7</sup>). Cf. Mt. 28<sup>13</sup>, where "some doubted." See further on 21st.

This appearance of the Risen Lord to Mary is not mentioned by Lk., but the Marcan Appendix (Mk. 16<sup>9</sup>) agrees with the Fourth Gospel in mentioning it as the first manifestation of Jesus after His Resurrection. Cf. Mt. 28<sup>10</sup>.

An essential difference between the Gospel stories of visions of the Risen Lord, and the stories widespread in all countries and in all times of visions of departed friends after death, is that all the Gospels lay stress on the empty tomb.<sup>3</sup> It was the actual body that had been buried which was revived, although (as it seems) transfigured, and, so to speak, spiritualised. This must be borne in mind when the evangelical narratives of the Risen Jesus speaking, and eating (Lk. 24<sup>42</sup>; cf. Jn. 21<sup>13</sup> 23<sup>3</sup>), and being touchèd (Lk. 24<sup>39</sup>, and perhaps Jn. 20<sup>27</sup>) as well as seen, are examined critically. Such statements are difficult of credence, for no parallel cases are reported in ordinary human experience; but they must be taken in connexion with the repeated affirmations of the Gospels that the tomb of Jesus was empty, and that it was His Body and not only His Spirit which was manifested to the disciples. See also on v. 20.

The question has been asked, how did the evangelists believe the Risen Lord to have been clothed, not only when Mary saw Him in the garden, but when He manifested Himself to the assembled disciples (vv. 19, 26)? It is difficult to suppose (with Tholuck and others) that He appeared only in the form

15. λέγει αὐτῇ Ἰησοῦς Γίναται, τί κλάσεις; τίνα ζητεῖς; ἐπιγύρει δοκίμα ὅτι ὁ κηπουρὸς ἐστίν, λέγει αὐτῇ Κέριε, εἰ οὐ ἐβάστασας αὐτόν, εἰπέ μοι ποῦ ἔθηκες αὐτόν, κἀγὼ αὐτόν ἀρά. 16. λέγει αὐτῇ cloth in which He had been crucified and buried. His appearances after death were more intense, indeed, than the appearances of dead men to their friends (for which there is some evidence); but just as in the latter case the eye of love clothes the vision in familiar garments, so it may have been in the more objective and more significant manifestations of the risen body of Jesus.

16. λέγει αὐτῇ Ἰησοῦς.  $\mu$ BLW om. the rec.  $\delta$  before Ἰησοῦς (see on 1st, 10).

Γίναται, τί κλάσεις; This is a repetition of the question put to Mary (v. 13) by the watchers at the tomb. In like manner, in Mt. 28<sup>9-10</sup> the message given by the angel to the women is repeated by the risen Jesus, when they see Him. But, whether this be only a coincidence or no, in the Johannine story Jesus adds τίνα ζητεῖς. He knew whom she was seeking, and what was the cause of her grief, whereas there is nothing in vv. 11-13 to show that the watchers at the tomb understood her tears, or knew that she was a disciple of Jesus.

Mary does not recognise Jesus at once, nor do His first words tell her who He was. She thinks He may be the gardener, probably because at so early an hour the gardener was the most likely person to be met in the garden (see 19th). It is plain, however, that she does not find anything abnormal in the appearance or dress or voice of Him who speaks to her.

ὁ κηπουρὸς. The word does not occur again in the Greek Bible, but is common in the papyri (see Milligan i. v.).<sup>1</sup>

Κέριε (an ordinary title of respect), εἰ οὐ ἐβάστασας αὐτόν. "Sir, if you have stolen Him away." Her mind is so full of her quest, that she does not answer the question "For whom are you looking?" She assumes that every one must know who it is. For βαρράζευ in the sense of "to steal," see on 12th.

εἰπέ μοι ποῦ ἔθηκες αὐτόν κτλ., "tell me where you have laid Him, and I will take Him away." She does not stay to consider if she would have strength by herself to remove the body to a fitting resting-place.

<sup>1</sup> E. C. Hoskyns finds a mystical meaning in the whole story: "The risen Lord is ὁ κηπουρὸς, for He is the Lord of the Garden, and once more He walks in His garden in the cool of the day, the early morning, and converses not with the fallen, but with the redeemed." Cf. Gen. 3<sup>d</sup> (J. T. S., April 1920, p. 215). The idea is worthy of Origen, but is too subtle to be convincing.

Ἰησοῦς Μαρίας. σφραγίστα ἐπέγει λέγει αὐτῇ Ἐβραῖστὶ Ῥαββουαί (ὁ λέγεται Διδάσκαλε). 17. λέγει αὐτῇ Ἰησοῦς Μὴ μου ἴστυς, 16. λέγει αὐτῇ Ἰησοῦς. Here (see on v. 15) BD om.  $\delta$  before Ἰησοῦς, but ins.  $\kappa$ ANWTA.

Μαρίας. So  $\mu$ BNW 1 33; but the rec., with AD $\Gamma$ \Delta $\theta$ , has Μαρία. See on 19th for the spelling of the name.

Apparently Mary had turned her face away from Jesus towards the tomb, taking no interest in the gardener who gave her no help in her quest; for when she hears her name, she turns round again (σφραγίστα) in amazement. Who is this that calls her "Mary"? The personal name, addressed to her directly, in well remembered tones, reveals to her in a flash who the speaker is.

λέγει αὐτῇ Ἐβραῖστὶ. So  $\mu$ BDNW $\theta$ , although the rec., with A $\Gamma$ , om. Ἐβραῖστὶ. Mary addresses Jesus in the Aramaic dialect which they were accustomed to use. See on 5th for Ἐβραῖστὶ.

Ῥαββουαί (ὁ λέγεται Διδάσκαλε). The form Rabbōni, "my Teacher," is found in N.T. here only and at Mt. 10th, but it is hardly distinguishable in meaning from Rabbi, the pronominal affix having no special force.<sup>1</sup> Jn. interprets it here for his Greek readers, as he interprets "Rabbi" (see on 1st). It will be remembered that Martha and Mary were accustomed to speak of Jesus as the Rabbi ὁ διδάσκαλος (see 11th), when talking to each other.

An interpretative gloss is added here by  $\mu$ <sup>20</sup> $\theta$  and sam, 13, viz. καὶ προσέθραμεν ἀγαθὰ αὐτοῦ, which appears also in Syr. sin. in the form "and she ran forward unto Him that she might draw near to (or to touch) Him." So also the Jerusalem Syriac. The gloss "et occurrit ut tangeret eum" is found in several Latin texts with Irish affinities; e.g. in the Book of Armagh, the Egerton MS. (omm), Cant., Stowe, and Rawl. G. 167. The idea behind the gloss is probably that Mary approached to clasp the Lord's feet in respect and homage; cf. Mt. 28<sup>9</sup> where it is said of the women that "they took hold of His feet, and worshipped Him."

17. This verse must be compared with Mt. 28<sup>9-10</sup> where, again, the Risen Lord is seen by Mary Magdalene and speaks to her and her companion. In that passage the women, returning from the tomb to tell the disciples of the angel's message, are at once in fear and joy. Jesus greets them by saying Χαίρετε. They clasp His feet in worship. He then tells them not to fear, Μὴ φοβείσθε, and adds ὡσαύτε ἀπογγέλατε τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς μου ἵνα ἀπέλθουν εἰς τὴν Γαλιλαίαν, ἀκεῖ με ἴψονται. This almost reproduces the words of the angel in v. 7, with the significant change of μαθηταῖς into ἀδελφοῖς. Only here in the Gospels (Jn. 20<sup>17</sup>, Mt. 28<sup>10</sup>) is Jesus represented as speaking of His disciples as "my brethren." Cf. Heb. 2<sup>11</sup>, 12 (quoting Ps. 22<sup>29</sup>).

It is likely that the account in Mt. 28<sup>10</sup> of the appearance of Jesus to the Maries was based on the lost conclusion of Mk.; for Mt. 28<sup>10</sup> is plainly an amplified version of the simpler Mk. 16<sup>1-8</sup>. The phrase "tell to my brethren" was probably in Mk.'s story, and we have already seen that Jn. knew Mk.'s, whose narrative he corrects, when he thinks it necessary. In this instance, the message sent to the disciples is not, as in Mk and Mt., that they should go to Galilee, where they would see their Risen Master. Jn. represents the message quite differently. It is: "Say to them, I go up to my Father."

This expression ἀναβαίω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου is only another form of the words spoken so often by Jesus, ἵνα γὰρ πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (16<sup>26</sup>; cf. 28<sup>19</sup> 16<sup>26</sup>), ὁς πορεύομαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα (14<sup>12</sup>, 16<sup>28</sup>). He had warned the disciples repeatedly that He would return to the Father who had sent Him. The time for this had not been reached on the day of the Resurrection, ὅτεως γὰρ ἀναβήσθαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, but it was near. ἀναβαίω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα. It is said for the last time.

The term "Ascension" for us indicates the climax of the earthly life of Christ, but ἀναβαίω, ἀνάβαινε, are common Greek words, which at first were not always used of the Ascension of Christ, still less appropriated to it. They are not used of the Ascension in the Synoptists (Lk. 24<sup>48</sup> has ἀνεβήκετο, while [Mk.] 16<sup>19</sup> has ἀνεβήθη). ἀναβαίω is thus used in Eph. 4, which is a quotation from Ps. 68<sup>18</sup>, but Paul does not use the verb again of the ascending Christ. In Acts 2<sup>34</sup> we have ὅτι γὰρ Δαβὶδ ἀνέβη εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, which contains an allusion to the fact that Christ did thus "go up." But, apart from these, the only other places in N.T. where ἀναβαίω is thus used, are Jn. 6<sup>28</sup> (see note, in loc.) and the present passage. Barnabas (§ 15) employs the verb thus, and so does Justin (Τρηπ. 38); but Justin also uses ἀνέλιουσι (Apol. 1, 26) and ἀνόδοι (Τρηπ. 82) of the Ascension of Christ. It was not until the days of Creed-making that the Church settled down to ἀναβαίω, ἀνάβαινε, as the technical terms for Christ's ascending. We miss the point of the employment of ἀναβαίω in the present verse if we do not treat it as an ordinary verb for "going up," which would be recognised by the disciples as practically equivalent to ἵνα γὰρ ὁ πορεύομαι often used by Jesus when predicting His departure.<sup>1</sup>

Thus the message which Mary was bidden to give to the disciples would recall to them words such as those of 14<sup>2</sup>. Jesus was going to the Father's house, where He would prepare a place for them. It is remarkable that the form of the message is like that of Mt. 28<sup>10</sup> (probably based on the lost conclusion of Mk.), although there the place where He is to see His disciples again is not heaven but Galilee (cf. Mk. 14<sup>28</sup>). Lk. 24<sup>48</sup>, as has been already said, alters the Marcan and Matthean tradition here, by substituting for the promise of a meeting in Galilee, the words μη φοβητε ὡς ἐλάλησεν ὑμῖν ὅτι ὡν ἐν τῇ Γαλιλαίᾳ, λέγων, that the Son of Man must die and rise again, etc. Abbott's inference from this comparison is that "an expression misunderstood by Mk. and Mt. as meaning Galilee, and omitted by Lk. because he could not understand it at all, was understood by Jn. to mean My Father's place, i. e. Paradise."<sup>2</sup> This is precarious reasoning, but at any rate it is certain that Jn. (a) was aware of the Matthean (? Marcan) tradition and (b) that he corrected it, bringing the message into correspondence with a saying of Jesus which he has previously recorded more than once.

Attention must now be directed to the words Μὴ μου ἅπτου, which (according to all extant texts) Jesus addressed to Mary, His reason being "for I have not yet ascended to My Father." It is not said explicitly in this chapter that Jesus was ever touched by His disciples after He was risen, although it is suggested both in v. 22 and in v. 27. In the latter passage, Thomas is actually invited to touch the Lord's wounded side (although it is not said that he did so), just as in Lk. 24<sup>40</sup>, Jesus says ψηλαφήσατέ με to the assembled disciples. The only explicit statement in the Gospels of the Risen Christ being touched is Mt. 28<sup>9</sup>. Nevertheless Lk. 24<sup>39</sup> and Jn. 20<sup>27</sup> sufficiently indicate that, in the judgment of the evangelists, it was possible to touch Him, and that He invited such experiment to be made. (See further on v. 20.)

Hence "Touch me not, for I have not yet ascended," is difficult of interpretation, inasmuch as within a week at any rate, and before His final manifestation at His departure, Jesus had challenged the test of touch. We can hardly suppose that Jn. means us to believe that in the interval between v. 17 and v. 27 the conditions of the Risen Life of Jesus had so changed that what was unsuitable on the first occasion became suitable on the second. And there is the further difficulty, that as the words μή μου ἄπτον οὐτω γὰρ κτλ. stand, it is implied that to "touch" Jesus would be easier after His Ascension than before. The gloss et occurrit ut tangeret eum, which is inserted before noli me tangere in some texts (see on v. 16), shows that the primitive interpretation of the words implied a physical touching, and not merely a spiritual draining near. The parallel Mt. 28<sup>10</sup> confirms this. Accordingly, to give to the repulse, "Touch me not," a spiritual meaning, as if it meant that freedom of access between the disciple and the Master would not be complete until the Resurrection had been consummated in the Ascension and the Holy Spirit had been sent, seems over-subtle. Yet this is what the words must mean if μή μου ἄπτον is part of the genuine text of Jn.

Meyer cited a conjectural emendation of these words (by Gersdorf and Schultheis) which he dismissed without discussion, but for which nevertheless there is a good deal to be said. We have drawn attention already to the parallel passage, Mt. 28<sup>10</sup>, but there is yet another point to be noted. By all the Synoptists the fear of the women at the tomb is emphasised. ἠφοβήθητο γὰρ (Mk. 16<sup>8</sup>), although the νεάνισκος had said μή ἰεραμειδέσθε (Mk. 16<sup>7</sup>). They were ἐφοβήθη (Lk. 24<sup>4</sup>). And in Mt. 28<sup>8-10</sup> not only the angel, but Jesus Himself prefaced His message to the disciples by saying to the women (after they had clasped His feet) μή φοβείσθε. Now in our texts of Jn. there is no hint that Mary Magdalene (who is the only woman mentioned here by this evangelist) was frightened at all. She is without fear, apparently, when she recognises the Lord. The parallel passage, Mt. 28<sup>9</sup>, would suggest (as the gloss here does) that she cast herself at His feet in awestruck homage. We should expect here (as in Mk., Mt.) that Jesus would encourage her by forbidding her to be afraid. Instead of this, we find the enigmatic words μή μου ἄπτον. But if these words are a corruption of μή πτόου, as might very well be the case, "be not affrighted," all is clear. This is the verb used of the fright of the disciples in Lk. 24<sup>40</sup> (πτοηθέντες), caused as Lk. says by their idea that they saw a spirit. And μή πτόου would come exactly where μή φοβείσθε comes in Mt. 28<sup>9</sup>, viz. after the Lord's feet have been clasped in homage and fear. The sequence, then, is easy. "Be not affrighted, for I have not get gone up to my Father": I am still with you, as you knew me on earth; I have not yet resumed the awful majesty of heaven. Do not fear: carry my message to the disciples, as in the old days.

The best supported reading is μή μου ἄπτον, but B has μή ἄπτον μου, and two cursives (47<sup>xx</sup> and d<sup>xxx</sup>) omit μου altogether. If the text were originally μή πτόου, an easy corruption would be μή ἄπτον, and then μου would naturally be added either before or after ἄπτον to make the sense clear.

οὐτω γὰρ ἀναβίβηκα πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα· παρείου δὲ πρὸς τοὺς ἀδελφοῦς μου καὶ εἰπὲ ἀπὸ τοῦ Ἀναβαίνου πρὸς τὸν Πατέρα μου καὶ Πατέρα ἑμῶν καὶ Θεῶν μου καὶ Θεῶν ὑμῶν. 18. Ἐρχεται Μαριάμ ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ ἄγγελουσα τοῖς μαθηταῖς ὅτι· Ἐώρακα τὸν Κύριον, καὶ ταῦτα εἶπεν αὐτῇ.

οὐτω γὰρ ἀναβίβηκα, "for I have not yet gone up . . ." i. e. taken my final departure. For Jn., a week at the least (v. 27, and see on 21<sup>1</sup>) elapsed between the Resurrection and that last of the manifestations of the Risen Christ which we call the Ascension. He says nothing of the interval of forty days for which our only authority is Acts 1<sup>3</sup>. But Jn., nevertheless, uses language (6<sup>89</sup>) which implies not only that the final departure of Christ was a startling and wonderful incident, but that it was visible, in this agreeing with Lk. 24<sup>40-48</sup>, Acts 1<sup>3</sup>; cf. Appx. to Mk. (16<sup>7</sup>).

Ἀναβαίνου πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου. That was what He had said often before (in effect); but now He adds καὶ πατέρα ὑμῶν. His Father was their Father too, although there was a difference in the relation (see on 2<sup>16</sup>); and of this He would remind them now. Observe He does not say "Our Father."

καὶ Θεῶν μου. So He said "My God" on the Cross (Mk. 15<sup>34</sup>); cf. Rev. 3<sup>12</sup>. He is still Man, and so Paul repeatedly has the expression "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom. 1<sup>5</sup>, etc.). And His God is the God also of His disciples — the only God.

18. Ἐρχεται Μαριάμ ἡ Μαγδ. ἄγγελουσα κτλ. κΑΒ have ἄγγελουσα, as against the rec. ἀπαγγελουσα (NΘ). W has ἀναγγελουσα.

Lk. 24<sup>11</sup> and [Mk.] 16<sup>11</sup> say that the disciples did not believe the report of the women. Mt. does not tell whether the message to the disciples was delivered or no.

ὅτι (recitantis) Ἐώρακα τὸν κύριον. This was the first thing Mary said before she gave her message (cf. v. 25). κΒΝ α δ γ support ἰώρακα, as against the rec. ἰώρακε (with ADLαΘ).

For δ κύριον as a title used by Mary, see on 4<sup>1</sup>.

The appearance to Mary is not mentioned by Paul in his summary of the visions of the Risen Christ (1 Cor. 15<sup>5-7</sup>). It is the appearances to the leaders of the future Church (Peter and James), and to the assembled disciples, that were regarded as the basis for the Church's faith in the Resurrection.

19. Οἱσιν οὖν ἔδωκεν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ τῇ μετ' σαββάτων, καὶ τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων ὅπου ἦσαν οἱ μαθηταὶ διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν

First appearance of the Risen Christ to the disciples: their commission and their authority (vv. 19-23)

10. οὐσιν οὖν ἔδωκεν. This appearance is described also in Lk. 24<sup>36f.</sup> Lk. places it after the return of the two from Emmaus, who reported to the apostles their meeting with the Risen Jesus; this would necessarily be late in the evening (cf. Lk. 24<sup>36</sup>), probably about 8 p.m. (see for ἔδωκεν on G<sup>19</sup>). The Appendix to Mark (16<sup>14</sup>) states that He appeared to the Eleven "while they sat at meat." It is not improbable that they were assembled in the room where the Last Supper was eaten (cf. also Acts 1<sup>13</sup>), and where Jesus had spoken the discourses of farewell (Jn. 14-16).

It would appear from Lk. 24<sup>36</sup> that the two Emmaus disciples were present, as well as the apostles, and probably some others also (Lk. 24<sup>39</sup>). This is not necessarily inconsistent with Jn., although He speaks only of "the disciples," for μαθηταὶ often includes others besides the inner circle of apostles (see on 2<sup>2</sup>). But in the later chapters of Jn. οἱ μαθηταὶ generally stands for the Eleven, and the Lord's manifestation of Himself to them in particular, as had been promised (16<sup>19</sup>), is mentioned as fundamentally important in 1 Cor. 15<sup>5</sup>. Whether others were present or not, it is His appearance to the apostles on this occasion that is treated as of special significance; and the words of His commission in v. 21 are most naturally limited to those who were commissioned by Him as "apostles" at the beginning of His ministry.<sup>1</sup>

τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων. . . διὰ τὸν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδαίων. The rumour that the tomb was empty had spread (as is indicated in Mt. 28<sup>11</sup>), and the Jewish leaders were doubtless suspicious of any gathering of the disciples of Jesus. For the phrase τῶν φόβον τῶν Ἰουδ., cf. 7<sup>13</sup>. It is repeated at v. 26 that the doors of the room were shut at the time of the meeting a week later.

ὅπου ἦσαν οἱ μαθηταί. Only ten of the original Twelve were present (v. 24); Lk. 24<sup>33</sup> has οἱ ἑδέκα. See on 2<sup>4</sup> for οἱ μαθηταί used absolutely.

Ἰουδαίων, ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς καὶ ἔστη εἰς τὸ μέσον, καὶ λέγει ἀπὸ τοῦ ἦλθεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς. No attempt is made to explain how He came.

The rec. adds συναγγεμένους (N<sup>20</sup>), but NABDW om. Perhaps it was inserted by scribes because of its occurrence in the words of the promise, Mt. 18<sup>20</sup>.

καὶ ἔστη εἰς τὸ μέσον (repeated v. 26). Lk. 24<sup>36</sup> has the more usual ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν; but εἰς τὸ μέσον after a verb of motion is quite correct (cf. Mk. 3<sup>2</sup>, Lk. 6<sup>9</sup>), and has classical authority (e.g. Xenophon, Cyropæd. iv i. 1, στήσιν εἰς τὸ μέσον).

Justin (Τὴν γράφ. 106) finds in Jesus standing in the midst of His brethren (cf. v. 17) a fulfilment of Ps. 22<sup>22</sup> (quoted Heb. 2<sup>12</sup>), ἐπιγέσθαι τὸ ὄνομα σου τοῖς ἀδελφοῖς μου, ἐν μέσῳ ἐκκλησίας ἡμῶν σκ.

καὶ λέγει ἀπὸ τοῦ Εἰρήνη ἡμῖν. These words are found also in most texts of Lk. 24<sup>36</sup>, but being omitted there by D ab eff. l. r. are described by Hort as a "Western non-interpolation" in that place. If that judgment is correct, scribes have brought the words into Lk.'s text from Jn., where there is no doubt of their genuineness. It is, however, possible that the words are part of the original text of Lk.; and in that case they furnish an additional illustration of the use of Lk.'s tradition by Jn. at this point (see v. 26). Throughout their accounts of the appearance of the Risen Jesus to the apostles, it is clear that Jn. and Lk. are following the same tradition, while Jn. does not hesitate to correct and amplify or reduce the current version of it (as found in Lk.) at several points.

Εἰρήνη ἡμῖν is the ordinary Eastern salutation on entering a room, and is so used (Lk. 24<sup>36</sup>, Jn. 20<sup>19, 26</sup>). But in v. 21 εἰρήνη ἡμῖν is solemnly repeated before the apostles receive their commission, and may carry an allusion to the parting gift of peace in 14<sup>27</sup>.

20. Here, again, we must compare Lk. 24<sup>40</sup> καὶ τοῦτο εἶδόν ἐδειξεν ἀπὸ τοῦ τῆς χειρὸς καὶ τοῦς πόδας, which also Hort regards as a "Western non-interpolation," for these words in Lk. are omitted by D ab eff. l. r. Syr. cur. They are identical with the words in Jn. 20<sup>20</sup>, except that in Jn. we have τὴν πλευράν, while in Lk. we have τοὺς πόδας. Jn. being the only evangelist who mentions the piercing of the Lord's side (19<sup>34</sup>), it is natural that τὴν πλευράν should not appear in Lk.; but if (as Hort supposes) the scribes of Lk. took over the words in question from Jn., they must have deliberately substituted τοὺς πόδας for τὴν πλευράν.

Εἰρήνη ὑμῶν. 20. καὶ τοῦτο εἶπὼν ἔδειξεν καὶ τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν

Biblical evidence for the belief that the Lord's feet as well as His hands were nailed to the Cross. In the narratives of the Crucifixion all that is said is "they crucified Him"; but it is not specified whether His hands and feet were tied or nailed to the Cross (both methods being common). Both Lk. and Jn. agree that His hands were marked, and Jn. speaks of "the print of the nails" in them (v. 23); but Jn. says nothing of the feet having been nailed. Pseudo-Peter, in like manner, speaks of drawing out the nails from the hands of Jesus, after He had died (§ 6), but does not mention the feet. So also Cyril of Jerusalem says nothing of the nailing of the feet, while he finds a symbolic meaning in the nailing of the hands (Cat. xiii. 38). The earliest reference (excepting Lk. 24<sup>40, 49</sup>) to the piercing of the feet is in Justin's Trypho (§ 97), who claims Ps. 22<sup>16-18</sup> as a literal prophecy of the Crucifixion. Having regard to the language of Jn. 20<sup>26, 27</sup>, as well as to the second-century tradition of Pseudo-Peter, it would seem as if the tradition of Lk. 24<sup>40</sup> [49] rests on the early application of "they pierced my hands and my feet" (Ps. 22<sup>16</sup>) to the Crucifixion of Jesus rather than on the testimony of an eye-witness. Such testimony we believe to lie behind the narrative of the Fourth Gospel (cf. 19<sup>36</sup>); and hence it is probable that the Lord's feet were not marked by the print of nails. Jn. in 20<sup>26</sup> is (in our view) deliberately correcting the account given in Lk. 24<sup>40, 49</sup> (for we take Lk. 24<sup>40</sup> to be as original as Lk. 24<sup>49</sup>), so as to bring it into correspondence with the facts.

τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ is the best attested reading (MABD) as against the rec. αὐτοῦ τὰς χεῖρας καὶ τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ.

Jn. says only that Jesus showed them His hands and His side; Lk. goes further and says that He invited them to dispel their doubts by handling and touching Him (ψηλαφησάτε με, Lk. 24<sup>40</sup>); representing the disciples as disturbed and terrified by His sudden appearance. Jn. does not say that they touched Him, or that they were asked to do so; this omission being probably designed, so as to correct an over-statement in Lk.

A later tradition as to this incident, preserved in Ignatius (Smyrna. 3) must now be cited. Ignatius writes: "I know and believe that He was in the flesh even after the Resurrection, and when He came to Peter and his company (πρὸς τοὺς περὶ Πέτρον), He said to them, Take, handle me, and see that I am not a bodiless demon (λάβετε ψηλαφήσατέ με, καὶ ἴδετε ὅτι οὐκ εἰμι δαιμόνιον ἀσώματον). And straightaway they touched Him (αὐτὸν ἤψαντο), and they believed, being mixed with πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ. ἔχρησαν οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ ἰδόντες τὸν Κύριον. 21. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς πάλιν Εἰρήνη ὑμῶν καθὼς ἀπέσταλας

(κραθόντες) His flesh and blood. . . . And after His Resurrection, He ate and drank with them as one in the flesh, although spiritually He was united with the Father." Jerome states that this version of the story of the appearance of Jesus comes from the apocryphal Gospel to the Hebrews (see Catal. Script. Eccl. § 16), and it may be so (see Lightfoot on Ignat. Smyrna. 3). In any case, it is dependent on Lk. 24<sup>40-49</sup>, and amplifies Lk.'s account in particular by stating explicitly that Jesus was touchèd (see on v. 17 above), and by adding that He drank as well as ate with the disciples.

The simplicity and restraint of Jn.'s account of this incident are not only in marked contrast with the story as Ignatius has it, but are also a feature of Jn.'s narrative as compared with Lk.'s. Jn. does not speak in the Gospel itself of the Risen Lord eating (but cf. the Appendix 21<sup>18</sup> and the note there), or explicitly of His being touched (see above on vv. 14, 17).

ἔχρησαν οὖν οἱ μαθηταὶ ἰδόντες τὸν κύριον. This was the fulfilment of the promise to the apostles, πάλιν δι' ἔφομαι ὑμῶν καὶ χαρῆσεται ὑμῶν ἡ καρδία (16<sup>22</sup>). Lk. 24<sup>41</sup> says that the disciples "disbelieved for joy," but he states at v. 37 that they were terrified when they saw Jesus standing in their midst. Of their fear, there is no hint in Jn. This is the first occurrence in Jn. of ἔκφομος being used of Jesus in the direct narrative (see on 4<sup>1</sup>, where the apparent exceptions are mentioned). The evangelist is thinking of his Master, not as He moved about in the days of His earthly ministry, but as risen and about to ascend to His glory, i.e. as "the Lord."

21. εἶπεν οὖν αὐτοῖς. The rec. adds ὁ Ἰησοῦς with ABNTΔΘ, but om. αὐτοῖς.

For πάλιν, see on 1<sup>16</sup>. For the repeated εἰρήνη ὑμῶν, see on v. 19.

καθὼς . . . ἀπέσταλας. For this constr., see on 6<sup>27</sup> (cf. 10<sup>25</sup>). Here there can be no doubt that the sentence means "As the Father hath sent me, so I send you." When He commissioned His disciples for their ministry before His final departure, He reproduced the words of the great Prayer which had been said in their hearing: καθὼς ἐμὲ ἀπέσταλας εἰς τὸν κόσμον, καὶ ἄλλοι ἀπέσταλας αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸν κόσμον (17<sup>18</sup>). These words primarily had reference to the original choice of the twelve "apostles" (see note on 17<sup>18</sup>), viz. ἐκώσθησαν ὁδοῦκα . . . ἵνα ἀποστείλλω αὐτοὺς κηρύσσοντες ἐντὸς (Mk. 3<sup>14</sup>), but they had a far more reference also to their final commission.

The constr. καθὼς . . . ἀπέσταλας at 15<sup>6</sup> and 17<sup>18</sup> (which are parallel in form to the present passage) has to do in both cases with a comparison of the Father's relation to Christ and Christ's relation to the apostles, not to the general body of disciples. It is natural to interpret the καὶ . . . καὶ here as involving the same comparison, and therefore to take the commission here as entrusted to the apostles. Others may have been present (see on v. 19), but the final commission was not specifically given to any but the inner circle, who had been long since selected as those who were to be "sent forth."

καὶ οὗς ἀπέστειλεν με ὁ πατήρ. This is the constant theme of the Johannine Christ when speaking of His authority. He is, pre-eminently, ὁ ἀποστόλος (Heb. 3<sup>1</sup>); for God the Father has sent Him (cf. 3<sup>17</sup>).

καὶ οὗς πέμψω ὑμᾶς. So  $\aleph^b \text{ABD}^2 \text{NTA} \Theta$  against  $\aleph^a \text{D}^* \text{L} 33$  ἀποστέλλω, but no distinction can be drawn between πέμψω and ἀποστέλλω (see on 3<sup>17</sup> above).

The sending of the apostles by Christ was (in a deep sense, although not with exact correspondence; see on 6<sup>57</sup>) like the sending of Christ by the Father. He had told them at the Last Supper that whoever received those whom He sent received Him, while those who received Him received the Father that sent Him (13<sup>20</sup>). Language of this kind is addressed in the Fourth Gospel to the apostles alone; and it is difficult, in the face of the parallel passages that have been cited, to suppose that in this verse, and here only, the evangelist means us to understand that the great commission was given to all the disciples who were present, alike and in the same degree. It is quite just to describe this verse as "the Charter of the Christian Church" (Westcott), but the Charter was addressed in the first instance to the leaders of the Church, and not to all its members, present and future, without discrimination.

The question as to who were the first recipients of the gift and the authority conferred by Jesus in vv. 22, 23, has been much debated in connexion with modern controversies as to Confession and Absolution;<sup>1</sup> but the exegete must ask one question only, viz., "What did the evangelist intend his readers to believe?" We must not assume, because Lk. 24<sup>48</sup> tells that others were with the Eleven on the evening of the Resurrection just before the Lord manifested Himself, that therefore Jn. in his report of the same incident implies either (a) that others beside the apostles were present when Jesus began to speak, or (b) that His commission was not addressed exclusively to the apostles even if others were there. On the contrary, the με ὁ Πατήρ, καὶ οὗς πέμψω ὑμᾶς. 22. καὶ τούτο εἶπεν ἐνεφύσησεν language used by Jn. seems, as has been said, distinctly to imply that the commission was given to apostles alone.

This was the interpretation put upon Jn. 20<sup>22-23</sup> by the earliest Christian writers who allude to these verses. Justin (Tryph. 106) ignores the presence of any but apostles. Origen (de princ. 1. iii. 2 and Comm. in Jn. 388) and Cyprian (de unit. 4, Epist. lxxiii. 6) say explicitly that Accipe spiritum sanctum, etc., was addressed to the apostles. The Liturgy of St. Mark (which may be as early as the second century) is equally explicit.<sup>1</sup> I do not know, indeed, of any early writer who takes a different view. The words of Cyprian (Epist. lxxv. 16) in solos apostolos insufflauit Christus, etc., express the accepted view as to the persons to whom the Lord said "Take the Holy Spirit." It would be going much further to claim that Cyprian's subsequent inference was justified, for he proceeds to say: "potestas ergo peccatorum remittendorum apostolis data est, et ecclesiis quas illi a Christo missi constituerunt, et episcopis qui eis ordinatione uicaria successerunt." The words which are italicised need not necessarily be accepted by those who recognise that Jn.'s narrative is a narrative of a commission given in the first instance to the apostles alone.

22. καὶ τούτο εἶπεν ἐνεφύσησεν αὐτὸν. "He breathed upon them." ἐνεφύσασθαι does not occur again in N.T., but it is the verb used Gen. 2<sup>d</sup> (cf. Wisd. 15<sup>11</sup>) of God "breathing" into Adam's nostrils the breath of life. So in Ezek. 37<sup>9</sup> "breathe on these slain that they may live" is addressed to the life-giving Spirit. Milligan quotes a parallel from a second or third-century papyrus, ὁ θεοφύλακτος πνεῦμα ἀθρόωτος εἰς ζωῆν.

The language of this verse goes back to Gen. 2<sup>d</sup>, it being implied that as the life of Adam was due to the "breath" of God, so the gift of spiritual life to the apostles was imparted by the "breath" of Christ. (Cf. 1 Cor. 15<sup>45</sup>.) The Johannine doctrine is that this quickening power of His spirit could not be released until the "glorification," i.e. the death, of Jesus (see on 7<sup>39-40</sup>); and in strict accordance with this, Jn. represents the Spirit as given and received on the day of His Resurrection. It is not that we have here a foretaste, as it were, of a fuller outpouring of the Spirit which was manifested at Pentecost (arrha Pentecostes, as Bengel calls it); but that, for Jn., the action and the words of Jesus here are a complete fulfilment of the promise of the Paraclete. As has been said on 16<sup>23</sup> (where see note), there is nothing in the Fourth Gospel inconsistent with the story of the Pentecostal effusion (Acts 2<sup>14</sup>);

but for Jn. the critical day, when the Spirit was not only promised, but given, is not Pentecost (as with Lk.) but the day of the Resurrection. We cannot distinguish here, any more than at 7th, between πνεῦμα and τὸ πνεῦμα.

Ἀδελφεὶ πνεῦμα ἄγιον. The gift is freely offered, but that it may be "received" demands a responsive effort on the part of him to whom it is offered. Cf. τὸ πνεῦμα . . . ἃ δὲ κτίσματος οὐ δόναται λαβῆναι (14th). An unspiritual man could not assimilate the gift. Ἀδελφεὶ, τοῦτό ἐστιν τὸ σῶμα μου (Mk. 14th) does not mean that the sacramental gift can operate automatically, but that it is offered freely. So in the Acts (8th, 17, 19, 20th) λαμβάνειν πνεῦμα ἄγιον occurs several times, but always the "taking" implies a certain disposition on the part of him who takes.

For πνεῦμα ἄγιον, see on 14th.
28. ἂν τινος ἀφῆτε τὰς ἁμαρτίας ἀφέονται αὐτοῖς. ἂν is used, as often, for ἰάν. ἀφέονται is the reading of κ<sup>AD</sup>L, as against the rec. ἀφίονται. B* has ἀφέονται. ἀφέναι in the sense of "forgive" (sin) does not appear elsewhere in the Fourth Gospel, but cf. 1 Jn. 2nd ἀφένται ἕναι ἁμαρτίας. In the Synoptists, Jesus declares to individuals "thy sins are forgiven" (Mk. 2nd and parallels, Lk. 7th); but here He seemingly commits, to those to whom He had imparted His Spirit, authority to use the like words.

"Whose soever sins you forgive, they are forgiven unto them." The meaning of this passage in its context must be sought quite apart from the inferences that have been drawn from it in later ages. As it stands, it is the parting commission of Jesus to the apostles, to whom He had previously promised the Holy Spirit, and to whom He had now imparted that Divine gift. Jn. says nothing about the authority of those who received it to impart the Spirit in their turn to others. That may be a legitimate inference, but it is an inference for the validity of which we must seek evidence elsewhere.

That the apostles interpreted their evangelical mission as giving them authority to hand it on, is, indeed, not doubtful. The terms of their commission as described in Mt. 28th, 19, 20 (cf. [Mk.] 16th) imply that it was to last "to the end of the world," the apostolate being established in permanence. Clement of Rome, whose Epistle is contemporary with the Fourth Gospel, expresses the accepted view: "Jesus Christ was sent forth from God . . . the apostles are from Christ . . . preaching everywhere, they appointed their firstfruits, when they had proved them by the Spirit, to be bishops and deacons to them that should believe" (Clem. Rom. 42). And it would appear in like manner that, as early as the time of Origen<sup>1</sup> at any rate, the bishops were regarded as having succeeded to the powers of binding and loosing committed to the apostles in Mt. 18th.

But, whether these developments were legitimate or not, we are here concerned only with the meaning of the commission to the apostles as recorded in vv. 21, 23; and confining ourselves strictly to this, we start from the presupposition—common to Jews and Christians—that no one can "forgive" sin but God (Mk. 2nd). But God is always ready to forgive (1 Jn. 1st); and the assurance of God's forgiveness can always be given confidently to repentant sinners. This assurance may be given by any one; it needs no authority to give it, for it is a fundamental principle of the Gospel. But, then, no one can give this assurance in an individual case, without being certain that this individual sinner is, indeed, repentant in his heart. And to be sure of this, he who says "thy sins are forgiven" must be able to read men's hearts. Jesus claimed that He could do this: "the Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins" (Mk. 2nd). Of this the explanation is found in Jn. 3rd, "He whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God, for He giveth not the Spirit by measure." To Jesus, and to Him alone, was the Spirit given in its fulness, and so He alone could infallibly discern the secrets of the human heart (Jn. 2nd). He could say, therefore, "thy sins are forgiven thee" (Mk. 2nd) with a complete authority.

Now a main theme of the Fourth Gospel is that Jesus promised that He would send (14th, 16th-20th), and did in fact impart (20th), the Spirit to the apostles. It was not confined to them, but was for every believing disciple (7th). But it was more largely promised, and more explicitly bestowed, on them than on any one else. And it was in the power of this Spirit of God that they were authorised not only to proclaim universally the message of God's forgiveness (Acts 10th), but to say in individual cases "thy sins are forgiven."<sup>2</sup> Among the gifts of the Spirit was the gift of insight (cf. διακρίσεις πνευμάτων, 1 Cor. 12th and see Jn. 16th). Hence the words λαβετε πνεῦμα ἄγιον govern the words giving the apostles authority to forgive or not to forgive. In so far as the Spirit was theirs, so far was their judgment of men's hearts a true judgment.

Lk. does not tell of so explicit an authority being conferred upon the apostles; but the parting commission for him too is "that repentance and remission of sins should be preached to all the nations"; and the authority is described as "the promise of the Father" which is presently to be granted (Lk. 24<sup>47, 49</sup>). The parting commission to the Eleven in Mt. 28<sup>18</sup> has one point of similarity with Jn. 20<sup>29</sup>, viz. that it rests the command to make disciples upon the universal authority of Christ. "All authority hath been given to me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore," etc. Their power as evangelists would rest upon their being His disciples; just as in Jn. 22<sup>28</sup> their power of absolving is made dependent upon their assimilation of His Spirit. It is to be observed that Jn. makes no mention of any commission to discipulis.

The passages in Mt., however, which are specially recalled by Jn. 22<sup>28</sup> are Mt. 16<sup>19</sup> 18<sup>18</sup>, in both of which we find "What things soever you shall bind (δὲσθητε) on earth shall be bound in heaven; and what things soever you shall loose (λύσητε) on earth shall be loosed in heaven." In Mt. 16<sup>19</sup> these words are addressed to Peter, as having the keys of the kingdom of heaven; in Mt. 18<sup>18</sup> they are (seemingly) addressed to the Twelve. To "bind" and to "loose" are Rabbinical expressions signifying to "prohibit" and to "permit" (many illustrations are given in Lightfoot's Hor. Hebr. on Mt. 16<sup>19</sup>); and the use of these verbs would suggest to Jews a form of ecclesiastical discipline (cf. 1 Cor. 5<sup>4</sup>, and esp. Acts 15<sup>20</sup> 16<sup>6</sup>). In Mt. 18<sup>18</sup> the context shows that something of this sort is indicated; the Divine ratification being promised of the Church's action. The words refer to the "loosing" of "sin," and may imply forgiveness as well as discipline. To forgive sins is to loose; cf. τῆ λύσαντε ἡμᾶς ἐκ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν (Rev. 1<sup>5</sup>; see also Job 42<sup>7</sup>, LXX).

Mt. 16<sup>19</sup> and Mt. 18<sup>18</sup> are passages which have marks of lateness; they are, e.g., the only two passages in the Gospels where the word "Church" is found; and the tradition preserved in them of the Lord's commission to the Apostles is more likely to be dependent on that of Jn. 22<sup>28</sup> than vice versa. Indeed Jn.'s brief narrative here is clearly an original statement, and does not betray any acquaintance with Mt. 16<sup>19</sup> 18<sup>18</sup>.

ὁν τινων κρατητε κερτατηνται. The Sinai Syriac renders "whom ye shall shut your door against, it shall be shut"; i.e. it takes κρατητε as governing τινων, rather than τας ἁμαρτιας. κρατειν does not occur elsewhere in Jn., but it generally takes the accusative, and the parallelism of the sentence would suggest that ἀφητε and κρατητε both govern τας ἁμαρτιας here. The two verbs are contrasted similarly in Mk. 9<sup>1</sup>, ἀφόντες τὴν ἐντολὴν τοῦ θεοῦ, κρατεῖτε τὴν παράδοσιν τῶν ἀνθρώπων.

The broad, unqualified form of this great assurance to the

24. Θωμαῖς δὲ ἐκ ἐκ τῶν δώδεκα, ὁ λεγόμενος Διδυμος, οὐκ ἦν μετ' αὐτῶν ὅτε ἦλθεν Ἰησοῦς. 25. Πλεγον αὐτὸν οἱ ἄλλοι μαθηταὶ Ἐυρέκαμεν τὸν Κύριον. ὁ δὲ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς Ἐδὼ μὴ τῶν ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτοῦ τῶν ἴστων τῶν ἡλίων καὶ βάλλω τὸν δάκτυλόν μου ἐπὶ τὴν ἴστων τῶν ἡλίων καὶ βάλλω μου τὴν χεῖρα ἐπὶ τὴν πλευρὰν αὐτοῦ, οὐ apostles is characteristic of many of the sayings of Jesus as recorded in the Gospels, e.g. "Whatsoever you shall ask of the Father in my name, He will give it you" (15<sup>16</sup>). He did not stay to explain the limitations or conditions of such a promise. It is a mark of every great teacher, confident in himself, that he does not weaken the force of his teaching by pointing out, at every stage, possible exceptions to the maxims which he has enunciated; and it was a mark of the greatest Teacher of all.

The incredulity of Thomas (vv. 24, 25) and its removal
(vv. 26-29)

24. This section is peculiar to Jn., who is specially interested in Thomas (11<sup>16</sup> 14<sup>6</sup>). See on v. 28.

Θωμαῖς . . . ὁ λεγόμενος Διδυμος. See on 11<sup>16</sup> for this expression. As has been noted there, Thomas was the pessimist of the apostolic band. We can imagine his saying "I told you so," when the Cross seemed to be the end of all their hopes. His absence from the meeting of the disciples on the Resurrection day may have been due to a feeling that such gatherings were futile, henceforth. But he came to the second meeting a week later, although unconvinced by what the others had told him, just as Lk. tells that the others were unconvinced by the report of the women (Lk. 24<sup>11</sup>).

ἐκ τῶν δώδεκα. See on 6<sup>7</sup> for this phrase. The apostolic company are still described as "the Twelve" (cf. 6<sup>7</sup>), although one had failed in his allegiance and was now separated from them. "The Twelve" remained a convenient title for the inner circle of disciples; cf. 1 Cor. 15<sup>5</sup>, Pseudo-Peter, § 12, and Acta Thaddæi, 6.

25. Ἐυρέκαμεν τὸν κύριον. So Mary had said (v. 18). But Thomas was not satisfied. He claimed that he must test the matter by his sense of touch (a test which according to Jn. had not been offered to the other disciples, see v. 20), and not by sight only.

τῶν ἴστων. AΘ have τὸν ἴστων at the second occurrence of this word, a very natural mistake. The Vulgate has fixuram claurorum, followed by in locum claurorum: fixuram is the rendering of ἴστων by g, but δ ε δ ε give figuram.

μή πιστεύσω. 26. Καὶ μεθ' ἡμέρας ἐκεῖς πάλιν ἦσαν ἰσω οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ Θωμᾶς μετ' αὐτῶν. ἔρχεται δ' Ἰησοῦς τῶν θυρῶν κεκλιωμένος, καὶ ἰσθῆ εἰς τὸ μέσον, καὶ εἶπεν Εἰρήνη ᾠμῖν. 27. εἶτα λέγει τῷ Θωμᾷ Φέρε τὸν δάκτυλόν σου ὡς ἐκεῖ καὶ ἴδε τὰς χεῖρας μου, καὶ φέρε τὴν χεῖρά σου καὶ βάλε εἰς τὴν πλευράν μου, καὶ μὴ γίνω

Thomas is represented as knowing of the lance-thrust in Jesus' side, which suggests that he was a witness of the Crucifixion. As has been pointed out on v. 20, no mention is made of any nailing of the feet.

26 μεθ' ἡμέρας ἐκεῖς. The disciples seem to have remained in Jerusalem for the whole of Passover week, either because they had made arrangements to do so before the feast began, or (more probably) because they had some reason to believe that Jesus would manifest Himself to them again. This second manifestation was seemingly in the same room (ἰσω) where He had shown Himself to them on the evening of the Resurrection day; there is no evidence that any manifestation of the Risen Lord was granted during the week. Jn. follows his usual habit (see on 1st) of giving dates for the incidents of his narrative.

This time Thomas was with his ten comrades (οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ instead of οἱ μαθηταὶ as at v. 19; see on 2<sup>d</sup>), the doors again being shut, perhaps because they were still afraid of the Sanhedrim. Jn. writes here ἔρχεται δ' Ἰησοῦς, a solemn phrase which (unlike φάθεν δ' Ἰησοῦς of v. 19) may be intended to express that He was expected to come. The narrative proceeds exactly as in v. 19 (where see note) καὶ ἰσθῆ εἰς τὸ μέσον, καὶ εἶπεν Εἰρήνη ᾠμῖν, Jesus giving them the customary salutation of Peace, as before.

27. εἶτα λέγει τῷ Θωμᾷ. Jn. tells the story, as if Jesus immediately addressed Himself to Thomas, and as if it were on his account that He had come among them again.

Jesus offers to Thomas at once the test which he had declared would be essential if he were to credit the story that the Lord had risen, and suggests it in almost the same words that Thomas had used (v. 25). He thus shows to Thomas that He knows what has been in his mind and how he had expressed it. And His words, revealing that this was He who could read men's hearts (2nd), proved sufficient to sweep away all doubt from the mind of His incredulous disciple. There is no suggestion in the text that Thomas took advantage of the proffered test, or that he touched the body of the Risen Jesus at all (see on v. 20 above).

Βε τὰς χεῖρας μου, "look at my hands," which were probably uncovered. This is perhaps in contrast with . . . βάλε ἄπιστος ἀλλὰ πιστός. 28. ἀπεκρίθη Θωμᾶς καὶ εἶπεν ἀδὸν ὁ Κεῖρός

εἰς τὴν πλευράν μου. "put your hand into my side," as if the invitation were to put his hand under the garments of Jesus, to assure himself. But, perhaps, all that is implied is that the test of touch was offered to Thomas, while the other disciples had been content with seeing the Lord's hands and side (v. 20),<sup>1</sup> καὶ μὴ γίνω ἄπιστος ἀλλὰ πιστός, "and become not faithless, but believing." As Meyer points out, Thomas was not faithless, but he was on a way to such a state of mind. If the Lord's words to him are behind [Mk.] 16<sup>4</sup>, where it is said that "He upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen," the author of the Marcan Appendix must have regarded the quiet exhortation of Jesus as conveying a more severe rebuke than is suggested by Jn. See on v. 29.

28. ἀπεκρίθη Θωμᾶς. The rec. prefixes καί, but om. κBC<sup>2</sup>DWL<sup>3</sup>; it also has δ before Θωμᾶς, with κL 33, but om. ABCDWΓΘ.

καὶ εἶπεν ἀδὸν κτλ. Thomas did not apply the test which he had said was essential. Once he had seen and heard his Master, it seemed to him unnecessary. He breaks out into joyful words of recognition and adoration, ὁ κύριός μου καὶ ὁ θεός μου. Like Mary, who exclaimed Καθόσθη, when she recognised Jesus (v. 16), Thomas exclaims "my Lord" (see on 4th for κύριος). But he goes beyond this, for he now, in a flash, perceives that Jesus was his Lord in a deeper sense than he had understood before; he may henceforth be called ὁ θεός μου. This, indeed (as the Jewish ecclesiastics had vaguely suspected, 5th), was involved in the claims that Jesus had made for Himself, but He had not expressed them so explicitly.

The Confession of Thomas goes far beyond the Confession of Nathanael (1st), which had drawn forth the praise of Jesus at the beginning of His ministry. It expresses the deepest of Christian truths, which Jn. had placed in the forefront of his Gospel as governing and explaining all that he is about to narrate, Θεός ἦν ὁ Λόγος (1st). But Jn. does not represent any disciple as having recognised its truth before the eager and enthusiastic Thomas perceived it at this moment of spiritual exaltation.

μου καὶ ὁ θεὸς μου. 29. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ὅτι ἰσχυραῖς με, πενιθέτερας; μακάριοι οἱ μὴ ἰδόντες καὶ πιστεύσαντες.

καὶ ὁ κύριός μου. Milligan (s.v. κύριος) cites for the combination of θεός and κύριος, a Fayûm inscription of B.C. 34 at a building at Socnopriai, τῷ θεῷ καὶ κυρίῳ Σοκνοπριαί. Cf. Abbott, Diat. 2682.

30. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησ. B omits ὁ, as usual (see on 1<sup>30</sup>). ὅτι ἰσχυραῖς με. The rec. adds ἠρωτᾷ, but om. ABCDWΘ. πενιθέτερας; We should probably treat this as interrogative, "Hast thou believed, because thou hast seen Me?" (cf. 16<sup>27</sup>). It was sigñis, not touchis, that convinced Thomas. Jesus does not say, "Hast thou believed, because thou hast touched Me?" Thomas was convinced, just as the other disciples were, by seeing the Lord (v. 20). The faith which is generated thus is precious (cf. on 2<sup>11</sup> for the faith which rests on "signs"); but it was possible for Jesus' contemporaries alone to see Him as the disciples saw Him. By the time the Fourth Gospel was written, the first generation of Christian believers had passed away, and the path to faith for all future disciples could not be the path of sight (cf. 2 Cor. 5<sup>7</sup>, 1 Pet. 1<sup>9</sup>). So Jn. adds here as the last word of Jesus in the Gospel as originally planned, "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."<sup>1</sup>

This Beatitude has been sometimes supposed to contain an implied rebuke to Thomas. But it can be no more a rebuke to him than to the other disciples ([Mk.] 16<sup>41</sup>), who, equally, saw before they believed. If Thomas is rebuked at all, it is in the words μὴ γίνου ἄπιστος (v. 27, where see note). It is never taught in the Gospel that a facile credulity is a Christian virtue; and Thomas was not wrong in wishing for some better proof of his Master's Resurrection than hearsay could give. Indeed, Jesus had warned His disciples not to give credence to every tale that they heard about Him: "If any man shall say, Lo, here is the Christ . . . believe it not" (Mk. 13<sup>21</sup>).<sup>2</sup> But cf. 4<sup>40</sup> for an illustration of the faith that does not require to "see."

30. Πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα σημεῖα ἐποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἐνώπιον τῶν μαθητῶν, δὲ οὐκ ἴσθιν γεγραμμένα ἐν τῷ βιβλίῳ τούτῳ. 31. ταῦτα δὲ γέγραπται ἵνα πιστεύσῃτε ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἴσθιν ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ Υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ἵνα πιστεύσωτε ζωὴν ἔχητε ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ.

Scope and purpose of the Gospel (ev. 30, 31)

30. These verses form the conclusion (clausula, as Tertullian calls v. 31, adv. Prax. 25) of the Gospel as originally planned, c. 21 being a supplement added before the book was issued (see p. 687).

πολλὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ ἄλλα σημεῖα . . . For μὲν οὖν, cf. 19<sup>38</sup>. Jn. explains that it was not his purpose to write a complete narrative of Jesus' ministry. Other "signs" were done by Him (cf. 2<sup>18</sup> 4<sup>46</sup> 12<sup>37</sup>) which he does not stay to record, although they were done in the presence of the disciples, who were the witnesses of His wonderful works, chosen by Jesus Himself (15<sup>27</sup>; cf. Acts 1<sup>21</sup> 10<sup>41</sup>). Such were, e.g., the healings of lepers and demoniacs, of which none is described in the Fourth Gospel. They were not written "in this book," although some of them were written in other books, such as the Synoptic Gospels, of which Jn. knew Mk. and probably Lk. also.

After μαθητῶν the rec. with κCDLWΘ adds αὐτοῦ, but om. ABA. The witnesses of the "signs" were not only the Twelve, but disciples generally. See on 2<sup>1</sup> for the omission of αὐτοῦ.

ἐνώπιον. This prep. occurs only once again in Jn. (1 Jn. 3<sup>22</sup>). It is frequent in Lk., but is not found in Mk. Mt. (see Abbott, Diat. 2335).

31. ταῦτα δὲ γέγραπται, δὲ corresponding to μὲν of v. 30. But the signs which have been chosen by Jn. for record were recorded with the aim of inspiring in his readers the conviction that Jesus is divine, so that with this belief they may have life in His name. The Gospel, like the First Epistle, was written with a definite purpose. Cf. ταῦτα ἔγραψα ἕμις, ἵνα εἰσέητε ὅτι ζωὴν ἔχετε ἀθάνατον, τοῖς πιστεύουσιν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ θεοῦ (1 Jn. 5<sup>13</sup>).

ἵνα πιστεύσῃτε. So κ<sup>3</sup>BΘ (as at 19<sup>38</sup>), as against the rec. πιστεύσῃτε (κACDNW).

ὅτι Ἰησοῦς ἴσθιν ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ. This reproduces the terms of Martha's confession of faith (13<sup>37</sup>), before Lazarus had been restored to her. But whereas, on her lips, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ was probably used only as a title of Messiah, as Jn. uses it here it appears to have a deeper significance (see on 1<sup>34</sup>). The faith of future believers is to be not only a faith in Jesus as the Christ (cf. 1st and Mk. 8th), but a faith in Him as the Son of God in the higher sense which has been suggested many times in the Gospel (1st, 3rd, 5th, 19th), and which is made explicit in the Confession of Thomas at its close (v. 28).

καὶ ἡν πιστεύοντες κτλ. This is the central message of the Fourth Gospel, that belief in Jesus Christ is the path to life. See 3rd, 14, 20, 1 Jn. 5th. "In Him was life" is proclaimed in the Prologue (1st), and the purpose of His coming was that men might have life; cf. 5th, 6th, 10th.

The order of words suggests as the natural rendering "that, believing, ye may have life in His Name." The sequence "life in His Name" (ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ) does not occur elsewhere; but the prayer of Christ was that His faithful disciples might be "kept in His Name" by the Father (17th, 18), and this perhaps provides a sufficient parallel. Cf. Acts 10th "to receive forgiveness of sins through His Name," and 1 Cor. 6th.

On the other hand, in the closely similar passage quoted above (1 Jn. 5th) it is those "who believe in the name (ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι) of the Son of God" that have eternal life. And at 7th (where see note) the authority to become children of God is for those who "believe in His Name." It would thus be more explicitly in accordance with Johannine teaching if we disregarded the natural order of the words here, and rendered "that believing in His Name, ye may have life" (see on 3rd). It would seem from 16th (where see note) that to take ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι αὐτοῦ with πιστεύοντες, despite the intervention of ζωὴν ἔχητε, would be consistent with Johannine style.

After ζωὴν κτλ and Jam. 13 add αἰώνιον, probably through reminiscence of 1 Jn. 5th, but om. ABNWΔΘ. For ζωὴ and ζωὴ αἰώνιος, see on 3rd.

THE APPENDIX (CHAPTER XXI)

THE Fourth Gospel was plainly intended to end with 20th. Anything following this is of the nature of an anticlimax. No copy, however, of the Gospel, so far as we know, was ever issued without the addition of c. 21, which is quoted by Tertullian (Scorp. 15) and is treated by Origen in his Commentary as on a par with cc. 1-20. It is probable that the Appendix was added as an afterthought, before the Gospel was published, and various opinions have been held as to its authorship, purpose, and source.

We have first to ask if c. 21 is by the same hand as cc. 1-20. The only evidence by which such a question can be determined is the evidence of vocabulary and style; and it is hardly possible within the brief compass of twenty-five verses to collect sufficient data. ἄρτων (v. 6) does not occur in cc. 1-20, nor does σιάζω (v. 3) in the sense of catching fish; but then there is no fishing anecdote in the body of the Gospel. Similarly no stress can be laid on unusual words such as προσφθίσγων (v. 5), or ἐνετόθη (v. 7), τοῦλαῦν and ἰξείναι (v. 12) do not appear elsewhere in Jn., and this must be noted, for they might very naturally have been used. So too in v. 4 we find σπῆδι, while σπῆδι is the form adopted in 18th 20th. In 1st we have Σίμων ὁ ἀδελφὸς Ἰωάννου, while at 21st we have the shorter Σίμων Ἰωάννου. But against these differences may be set remarkable agreements in style between cc. 1-20 and c. 21. The use of ἀπὸν ἀμῆν at v. 18; the evangelistic comment at v. 23; the verbal correspondence between v. 19 and 12th, are among the more obvious. Such similarities might possibly be due to conscious imitation of the mannerisms of Jn. by the author of the Appendix, but there are others, more subtle, which can hardly be thus explained. ἀέδ in v. 8 is used exactly as at 11th; ὁμοίως in v. 13 just as at 6th; σὺν (v. 3) is rare in Jn., but it is found 12th, 18th; μέντοι (v. 4) is thoroughly Johannine (cf. 12th); and so is ἀεὶ σὺν (v. 9; see on 4th).<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Further arguments may be found in Lightfoot (Biblical Essays, p. 194), who accepts the Johannine authorship of the Appendix, as do Harnack (Chron. i. 676), Sanday (Criticism of Fourth Gospel, p. 81), and W. Bauer in his Handbuch; Pfeiderer (Primitive Christianity, iii. 79), Moffatt (Introd. to N.T., p. 572), and Stanton (The Gospels as Historical Documents, iii. p. 28) take the other side.

The view taken in this commentary is that the author of c. 21 is the person whom we designate as Jn. But, whereas throughout cc. 1-20 Jn. is accustomed to reproduce the reminiscences of John the son of Zebedee, often in the form in which the aged disciple dictated them, this cannot be affirmed with confidence of the earlier part of c. 21, although it is true of vv. 15-22.

The correspondence between 21<sup>1-19</sup> and Lk. 5<sup>1-11</sup> are so close that they demand investigation; and it is necessary also to take account of the Synoptic parallels to the Lucan passage. The story of the Call of Peter and Andrew, and also of James and John (Mk. 1<sup>16</sup>, Mt. 4<sup>18</sup>, Lk. 5<sup>14</sup>), is not given by Jn., who reports instead an earlier incident, when these four disciples were attracted to Jesus for the first time (2<sup>1-11</sup>). The Lucan narrative differs from that of Mk., Mt. in significant particulars:

(a) Lk. does not tell explicitly of any call of the fishermen, as Mk., Mt. do; while he ends his story by saying that the four left all and followed Jesus (Lk. 5<sup>11</sup>), sc. that James and John followed as well as Peter and Andrew. Cf. Jn. 21<sup>18, 20</sup> where John (who has not been invited to do so) follows as well as Peter, to whom alone the call "Follow me" is addressed.

(b) In Mk., Mt. the promise, "I will make you fishers of men," is explicitly given to Peter and Andrew, while the story suggests that it was intended for James and John as well. But in Lk. it is confined to Peter alone: "Fear not, from henceforth thou shalt catch men." This is in remarkable correspondence with the giving of the commission, Pascite oves meas, to Peter alone, in Jn. 21<sup>17</sup>.

(c) Lk. interpolates the incident, which Mk., Mt. do not report, of Peter's allegiance having been stimulated by a great catch of fish which he regarded as due to supernatural knowledge on the part of Jesus. So too in Jn. 21 it is Peter who is specially moved by the great success of the fishing due, again, to the direction of Jesus, and he alone plunges into the water to greet Jesus before the others (cf. at this point the story, peculiar to Mt. 14<sup>28-29</sup>, of Peter walking on the waters).

(d) That the vocabulary of Jn. 21 should recall that of Lk. 5 is not in itself remarkable, for in stories relating to successful catches by fishermen the same words would naturally occur; e.g. ἐμβάσιν "to embark" (Lk. 5<sup>3</sup>, Jn. 21<sup>3</sup>), ἀποβάσιν "to disembark" (Lk. 5<sup>3</sup>, Jn. 21<sup>3</sup>), ἄκρον (Lk. 5<sup>3</sup>, Jn. 21<sup>3</sup>). But the correspondence is not only one of vocabulary. In Lk. 5<sup>3</sup> the fishermen say δι' ἄλης νεκρῆς κοιλίας οὐδὲν ἐλάβομεν; cf. Jn. 21<sup>3</sup> ἐν ἰσθμῷ τῇ νεκρῇ ἐπίσταν οὐδέν. In both cases, it is by the direction of Jesus that they cast the net into deeper water (Lk. 5<sup>4</sup>, Jn. 21<sup>4</sup>, where see note); and in both cases they make a great catch. In Lk. 5<sup>4</sup> the nets were beginning to break (ῥαγίζοντο), but they did not actually break, for the fishermen managed to secure them full of fish; so in Jn. 21<sup>11</sup> it is noted that the nets were not broken. That this should be mentioned shows that there was danger of them breaking, as in Lk. 5<sup>4</sup>.

These correspondences between the stories in Lk. 5 and Jn. 21 of a great draught of fishes are so close that they cannot reasonably be accounted for on the hypothesis that they represent distinct traditions of two distinct incidents. Accordingly, two alternative explanations offer themselves.

(1) The author of Jn. 21 may have taken his story directly from Lk. 5, putting it in a different context (Wellhausen, Pfeleiderer). Pfeleiderer<sup>1</sup> regards Lk. 5<sup>4-11</sup> as itself only an "allegorical" narrative, and if this were the aspect under which it was viewed by Jn., his transference of the Lucan passage from one point to another would hardly call for comment. But that Lk. intended his story of the miraculous draught of fishes to be taken as an account of an incident that actually happened is not doubtful; nor is there any reason for thinking that Jn. understood it differently. Jn., however, corrects Synoptic narratives sometimes;<sup>2</sup> and it is conceivable that he has deliberately retold this Lucan story, and ascribed it, not to the early days of our Lord's ministry, but to the period after His Resurrection.

(2) A more probable explanation, however, is that Lk. 5<sup>1-11</sup> and Jn. 21 are derived, in part, from the same source, viz., a Galilean tradition (see on 20<sup>2</sup>) about the Lord's appearance to Peter after His Resurrection, and the restoration of Peter to his apostolic office.

(a) First, as to Lk. 5. We have seen that Mk. (followed by Mt.) tells that when Peter, Andrew, James, and John abandoned their fishing and followed Jesus, He promised two of them (if not all four) that He would make them "fishers of men." Lk. seems to have confused this promise with the commission afterwards given to Peter to feed the sheep of Christ; and accordingly in his account of the call of the disciples he has interpolated the tradition of a miraculous draught of fishes followed by a special charge to Peter. In Lk., the promise "henceforth thou shalt catch men" is for Peter alone.

Further, the words which Lk. ascribes to Peter, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man," (Lk. 5<sup>8</sup>) are not adequately explained by saying that Peter was moved to confess his sinfulness because of an extraordinary take of fish. But if such words were spoken when he met his Master for the first time after he had denied Him, they are very appropriate. This sentence in Lk.'s narrative suggests of itself that the narrative belongs to the period after Jesus had risen.

(b) Next, in Jn. 21 there are indications that the story was originally current as a tradition, not of the third appearance of the risen Jesus to the disciples, but of His first manifestation of Himself after His Resurrection.

It is difficult to understand how disciples who already had twice conversed with the Risen Christ (20<sup>19, 20</sup>) should fail to recognise Him when He presented Himself by the lake-side (but see note on 21<sup>4</sup>). That they should have gone back to their fishing after the extraordinary communication to them recorded in 20<sup>28, 29</sup> is strange enough (Chrysostom can only suggest that they had gone back to Galilee through fear of the Jews); but it would be stranger still if they were not sensitive, after such an experience, to every slightest indication of the presence of Jesus.

Again, the story, as narrated, suggests that this was the first occasion on which Peter met and conversed with Jesus since the night when he denied Him. Vv. 15-19 relate how he was questioned by his Master, and finally reinstated, with a new and great charge, in his apostolic office. Is it likely that the person who first wrote down this story believed that Peter had seen the Risen Lord at least twice before, and had, along with his companions, been already granted the gift of the Holy Spirit and a commission to forgive sins? The inference that 21<sup>14-19</sup> must not be taken as posterior to 20<sup>28</sup> is difficult to evade.

It must not be overlooked, in this connexion, that the genuineness of  $\epsilon\delta\omega\lambda\upsilon$  in 21<sup>4</sup> is doubtful. Different MSS. place  $\epsilon\delta\omega\lambda\upsilon$  at different points in this verse (see note in loc.), and one uncial, at least, omits it altogether. It is probable that the adverb  $\epsilon\delta\omega\lambda\upsilon$  in v. 1 and the whole of v. 14 ( $\tau\omega\sigma\tau\circ\ \phi\acute{\eta}\eta\gamma\ \tau\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\upsilon\sigma\alpha\sigma\theta\epsilon\ \kappa\tau\lambda.$ ) have been added by Jn. to his source to bring the tradition of an appearance in Galilee into harmony with those which he has already described at Jerusalem. V. 14 is obviously a parenthesis, for the narrative runs smoothly and consecutively from v. 13 to v. 15.

These considerations lead to the conclusion that Lk. 5<sup>1-11</sup> and Jn. 21 both go back to a current story that the first manifestation of the Risen Jesus to Peter (at any rate) was by the Sea of Galilee. According to Mk. 16<sup>7</sup> (followed by Mt. 28<sup>7</sup>), the disciples had been told that Jesus would meet them in Galilee, and Mt. 28<sup>10</sup> states that He actually did so (see on 20<sup>1</sup> 21<sup>1</sup>). Another instance of the survival of such a tradition is provided by the Gospel of Peter (second century), the extant fragment ending as follows: "It was the last day of unleavened bread, and many went forth, returning to their homes, as the feast was ended. But we, the Twelve (see on 20<sup>24</sup>) disciples of the Lord, wept and were grieved; and each one, grieving for that which was come to pass, departed to his home. But I, Simon Peter, and Andrew my brother, took our nets and went away to the sea, and there was with us Levi the son of Alphaeus, whom the Lord . . ."<sup>7</sup> That is to say, Pseudo-Peter makes the apostles remain at Jerusalem until the Passover Feast was over, but makes no mention of any appearances of the Risen Lord to them there. Instead, he represents them as returning to their homes, the Galilean fishermen going back to the Sea of Galilee. When the fragment ends, it seems as if an incident like that of Jn. 21<sup>14-16</sup> was being led up to.

Harnack holds<sup>2</sup> that this tradition, the source of Jn. 21<sup>1-13</sup> as of Lk. 5<sup>1-11</sup>, was narrated in the Lost Conclusion of Mark. It may be so—the evidence is insufficient for certainty; but it seems more probable that Mt. 28<sup>10</sup> gives us part of what was in the original Marcan narrative.

However that may be, we have reached the conclusion that Jn. 21 and Lk. 5 point back to a common source, viz. a Galilean tradition about the Risen Lord. The question then arises, why did Jn. add c. 21 to the already completed Gospel?

(1) It has been suggested that c. 21 was added as a kind of postscript, because it was thought important that the rehabilitation of Peter should be placed on record. Of this there is no account in the Synoptists or in Jn. cc. 1-20. His denial is narrated in detail by all the evangelists, but his forgiveness and restoration to apostolic leadership is assumed without any explanation. That at some moment after the Resurrection he regained his old position of leader is manifest from the narrative of Acts. How were the other apostles reassured as to his stability? The beautiful story of 21<sup>14-19</sup> is the only explanation that has been preserved, whatever be its source; and it is easy to realise that the Church at the end of the first century would be anxious to have it placed on record, more especially after Peter's career had been ended by a martyr's death. The statement in v. 24 that the story was certified by the Beloved Disciple, i.e. in our view by John the son of Zebedee, who at the time of its being added to the Fourth Gospel was the only living person who could bear witness to its truth, is in no way improbable. How Peter came to be restored to his apostolic office would not seem to the first generation of Christians to be a question of sufficient importance for inclusion in a Gospel, but when the second generation began to look back it was recognised as of peculiar interest.

(2) But the principal motive for the addition of c. 21 was, no doubt, that misapprehensions as to the meaning of some words of Jesus might be removed.

The enigmatical promise (Mk. 9<sup>1</sup> and parallels) that there were some among the disciples of Jesus who would not die until "the kingdom of God came with power" must have made a profound impression (see on 16<sup>13</sup>). Maran Atha was the watchword of apostolic Christianity (1 Cor. 16<sup>22</sup>), and at first it was expected that the Parousia (cf. 14<sup>3</sup> and 1 Jn. 2<sup>28</sup>) would come soon. Paul at one time thought that some of his contemporaries would live to see it (1 Thess. 4<sup>13</sup>, 1 Cor. 15<sup>51</sup>). By the time that the Fourth Gospel was written, the hope of the speedy return of Christ was dying out; but it was still believed by some that the Lord had promised (either in the words preserved in 21<sup>23</sup>, or in similar words such as Mk. 9<sup>1</sup>) that it would come to pass before all the apostles died. Accordingly, when the last survivor, John the son of Zebedee, was manifestly approaching the end of his course, there must have been some at least who were disconcerted. It was probably to reassure them that the story of the promise made by Jesus to John was added to the Gospel which was based on his reminiscences, and attention directed to its exact phrasing. Vv. 21-23 may have been written down after the death of John; but it seems more probable that the true account of this incident was gathered from his lips during the last days of his long life.

The Appendix, then, embodies a tradition that was current as to an appearance of the Risen Christ in Galilee, which is also used (but misplaced) by Lk. In c. 21, it appears in a version for some details of which the authority of the Beloved Disciple is expressly claimed (v. 24); but it would seem that it has been edited (vv. 1, 14) by Jn. so as to bring it into harmony with c. 20. The Gospel proper contained only such incidents and sayings of Jesus as would serve the special purpose of the writer (20<sup>31-33</sup>); but before it was issued to the Christian community it was thought desirable to add an Appendix embodying traditions about Peter and John of which incorrect versions were current.

fresh section of his narrative, and hardly means more than "another time."

ἐφάνησεν αὐτῶν. For φανέρω (cf. v. 14) and its use in Jn., see on 1<sup>38</sup>. It is the verb used in the Appendix to Mk. (16<sup>13, 16</sup>) of the manifestations of the Risen Jesus to the two at Emmaus, and to the Eleven. He was not visible continuously during His Resurrection and final Departure.

ὁ Ἰησοῦς. BC om. ὁ, but ins. καὶ NACNTA (see on 1<sup>38, 39</sup>).

τοῖς μαθηταῖς. Not to the Eleven, but to some of them only. οἱ μαθηταὶ might stand for "disciples" in the wider sense (see on 2<sup>2</sup>), but that is not probable at this point, as we shall see.

ἐν τῇ θάλασσῃ τῆς Τιβεριάδος, "by the Sea of Tiberias." For this description of the Sea of Galilee, see on 6<sup>1</sup>. According to the Marcan tradition (Mk. 16<sup>7</sup>, Mt. 28<sup>7</sup>), Jesus was to manifest Himself in Galilee (cf. Mt. 28<sup>10</sup>). Of any appearances there, the Gospels of Lk. and Jn. tell nothing, but in this Appendix to the Fourth Gospel one such manifestation is described in detail, implying (as the story is told by Jn.) that, after the three appearances at Jerusalem described in c. 20, some of the Eleven (at least) returned to Galilee, where Jesus met them. But see note above, p. 656.

πάλιν (a favourite Johannine word, cf. 1<sup>38</sup>) is placed before αὐτῶν by K<sup>2</sup> and before ἐφάνησεν by D. It is omitted by some cursives.

ἐφάνησεν δὲ ἄλλως. This brusque constr. does not appear again in exactly this form in Jn.; but cf. 4<sup>8</sup>, ἐκθίβετο αὐτῶν ἐν τῇ ἡμέρῃ.

2. According to Pseudo-Peter (see p. 691 above), the disciples remained in Jerusalem until the end of the Passover Feast, when some returned to their homes in Galilee. This falls in with c. 21.

Peter and the sons of Zebedee were fishermen, who took up their work in partnership, as they had been accustomed to do (Mk. 1<sup>19</sup>). ἦσαν ἄρσοι, "they were together," and with them were Nathansel and also Thomas. The words ἄλλα ἐκ τῶν μαθητῶν αὐτοῦ ὄδο suggest that all seven who were present were of the Twelve, for οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτοῦ generally represents the Twelve in the Fourth Gospel. οἱ μαθηταὶ (without αὐτοῦ) in vv. 4, 12 stands for the seven who have been already mentioned. See for this usage on 2<sup>1</sup>.

Nonnus, in his paraphrase of Jn., like Pseudo-Peter, says that Andrew was present on this occasion, and he may have been one of the two innominati; it would be natural that he would, as formerly, accompany Peter in his fishing. Pseudo-Peter represents "Levi the son of Alphaeus" as one of the company, and it is possible that this is a true tradition and that he was the second unnamed disciple, although we should hardly expect that a former tax-gatherer (Mk. 2<sup>14</sup>) would be of use in a fishing-boat. If we had to guess at the second innominatus, the name of Philip would naturally suggest itself. He was of Bethsaida, as were Peter and Andrew (2<sup>12</sup>), and in the lists of the apostles he always appears among the first five, with Peter, Andrew, and the sons of Zebedee (Mk. 3<sup>18</sup>, Mt. 10<sup>2</sup>, Lk. 6<sup>14</sup>, Acts 1<sup>13</sup>). He is also associated with Peter, Andrew, and John, and with Nathanael in 1<sup>7-18</sup>. The seven disciples present on the occasion now to be described would then be the seven most prominent in the Fourth Gospel; and the seven who are named first in Acts 1<sup>13</sup>. But the evidence as to the two innominati is not sufficient for certainty.

2. ἦσαν ἡμοῦ Ἰάκωβος Πέτρος καὶ Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος καὶ Ναθαναὴλ ὁ ἀπὸ Κανὰ τῆς Γαλιλαίας καὶ οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου καὶ ἄλλοι ἐκ τῶν μεθυστῶν αὐτοῦ δια. 3. λέγει αὐτοῖς Σίμων Πέτρος Ὑπάκου ἀδελφεύ. λέγουσιν αὐτῷ Ἐρχομεθα καὶ ἡμεῖς σὺν σοί. ἐξῆλθον καὶ ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον, καὶ ἐν ἑσπέρῃ τῇ γενετὴ ἐπίσταν οὐδέν.

Σίμων Πέτρος. See on 13<sup>12</sup> for the full name being used at the beginning of a new section, as is the habit of Jn.

Θωμᾶς ὁ λεγόμενος Δίδυμος. So he is described 11<sup>16</sup>, where see note; cf. 20<sup>24</sup>.

καὶ Ναθαναὴλ ὁ ἀπὸ Κανὰ τῆς Γαλ. There is no reason for supposing (with Schmiedel) that this description is made up from a comparison of 1<sup>46</sup> and 2<sup>1</sup>, or that it does not represent a genuine tradition as to Nathanael's home. See on 1<sup>46</sup>.

οἱ τοῦ Ζεβεδαίου. Zebedee's name is not mentioned elsewhere in the Fourth Gospel. "The sons of Zebedee," their names not being stated, is a phrase occurring Mt. 20<sup>26-27</sup>, 27<sup>28</sup>.

3. λέγει αὐτοῖς Σίμων Πέτρος. He characteristically takes the lead, saying, "I am off to fish." For ὄντα, see on 7<sup>26</sup>. The verb ἀδελφεύ occurs in the Greek Bible only once elsewhere, at Jer. 16<sup>10</sup>.

To repeat the full name Σίμων Πέτρος is not in accordance with Jn.'s habit (see on 18<sup>13</sup>); cf. vv. 7, 11, 15.

καὶ ἡμεῖς σὺν σοί. σὺν is not a favourite Johannine word, occurring only twice in Jn. (see on 12<sup>2</sup>, 18<sup>1</sup>).

ἐξῆλθον, "they went out," not necessarily from the same house, but from the place where they were all gathered.

ἀνέβησαν εἰς τὸ πλοῖον. For this phrase, see on 6<sup>17</sup>. The rec. has ἀνέβησαν. Probably τὸ πλοῖον was the large boat

4. πρῶτος δι' ἣν γενομένης ἔστη Ἰησοῦς ἐπὶ τὸν αἰγιαλόν' οὐ μέντοι βῆθεισιν ὁ μαθηταὶ δεξι Ἰησοῦς ἐστίν. 5. λέγει σὺν αὐτοῖς Ἰησοῦς which they were accustomed to use as they went about the lake with Jesus (see on 6<sup>7</sup>).

The rec. adds ἐθέσις; but om.  $\kappa\epsilon\beta\epsilon\tau\alpha\delta\lambda\eta\mu\omega\theta$ .

ἐν ἑσπέρῃ τῇ γενετὴ ἐπίσταν οὐδέν. This recalls Lk. 5<sup>8</sup>; the night is the best time for fishing, and yet they caught nothing. πιάσαν is used several times by Jn. (see on 7<sup>26</sup>) of "arresting" or "taking" Jesus; but to use it of the catching of fish, as here and at v. 10, is curious. Cf. Cant. 2<sup>18</sup>, Rev. 19<sup>20</sup>.

4. πρῶτος δι' ἣν γενομένης, "when dawn was now breaking," and the light not yet good. Jn. never has πρῶτος in the body of the Gospel, while πρῶτος occurs 18<sup>28</sup> 20<sup>1</sup> (see also on 1<sup>41</sup>). Mt. has πρῶτος (Mt. 27<sup>1</sup>).

μέντοι is a Johannine word; see on 12<sup>24</sup>.

For βῆθεισιν followed by the historic present ἐστίν, see on 1<sup>20</sup>. That disciples, who had so recently seen the Risen Lord twice, according to the Johannine tradition (20<sup>13</sup>, 26), should not recognise Him, even after He had spoken to them, might, perhaps, be accounted for by their distance from the shore and the dimness of the early morning light. Again, the failure of the two disciples at Emmaus to identify Him at first (Lk. 24<sup>16</sup>); and the failure of Mary Magdalene to recognise Him when she saw Him (20<sup>14</sup> σὺ βῆσαι δεξι Ἰησοῦς ἐστίν, words identical with those used here) may be taken as showing that the Risen Lord was not recognisable, unless He chose "to manifest Himself." The latter may be the true explanation.<sup>1</sup> But the present instance of the disciples' failure to recognise Him is perplexing, for (according to Jn.) they had already seen Him; even if we do not lay stress on the Marcan tradition according to which they had been told that they might expect to see Him in Galilee.

μαθῆται is not put into the mouth of Jesus in any other

Παῖδια, μή τι προσφάγιον ἔχετε; ἀπεκρίθησαν αὐτῷ Οἱ. 6. δ. 6 δὲ ἔειπεν αὐτοῖς Βάλετε εἰς τὰ δεξιὰ μέρη τοῦ πλοίου τὸ ἄγκυρον, καὶ

Gospel passage, when He is addressing His disciples. It is a colloquial form of address, as we might say "My boys," or "lads," if calling to a knot of strangers of a lower social class. παιδιῶν is thus used in Aristophanes (Νηδ. 137, Καν. 33). The use of παιδία in 1 Jn. 2<sup>13</sup>, 13 is different.

Jesus says ταπεινά to the disciples at 13<sup>35</sup>, but to have employed a tender term of this kind would at once have betrayed His identity by the lake-side.

μή τι προσφάγιον ἔχετε; i.e. "have you caught any fish?" Wetstein (approved by Field) quotes a scholium on Aristoph. Clouds, 731, viz. ἔχεις τι; schol. χαριμένους τὸ ἔχεις τι τῇ τῶν ἀγροτικῶν λείψι χρώμενος· τοῖς γὰρ ἀλλοῦν ἢ ἀντιθυρασταῖς οὕτω φασὶν ἔχεις τι; That is to say, ἔχεις τι is the phrase in which a bystander would say to a fisherman or Fowler, "Have you had any sport?" προσφάγιον, lit. a "relish," something to season food, is a Hellenistic word like ὄψον or ὀψάριον for "fish," which was the relish in common use. See on v. 10 below. προσφάγιον is not found elsewhere in the Greek Bible.

The form of the question, beginning with μή, suggests that a negative answer is expected (see on 6<sup>30</sup>),<sup>1</sup> so that we may render "Boys, you have not had any catch, have you?" And, accordingly, they answered, "No." See on 4<sup>30</sup>.

6. Then Jesus, perhaps having noticed from the shore that a shoal of fish was gathering at the farther side of the boat, calls to the fishermen, "Cast your net towards the right of the boat, and you will have a take."

εἰς τὰ δεξιά μέρη τοῦ πλοίου is a cumbersome phrase for which no linguistic parallel seems to be forthcoming. In Lk. 5<sup>4</sup> the advice of Jesus was similar, although expressed differently, viz. to let down the nets in deeper water. As the story is told, it would seem that Peter jumped into the water on the side of the boat nearest the land, being unimpeded by the net which now was on the other (the right) side, farther from the shore.<sup>2</sup> ἄγκυρον does not occur again in Jn., and is the word used Lk. 5<sup>4, 6</sup>; but nothing can be inferred from this, as it is the common word for a fishing-net.

εὐθρόετα. ἔββαλον οὖν, καὶ εὐέτη ἀπὸ θαλάσσης ἰσχυρῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ πλοίου τῶν ἰχθύων. 7. λέγει οὖν ὁ μαθητὴς ἑαίνου ἐν ἡμέτερα δ' ἡγοῦσθε τῷ Πέτρῳ Ὁ Κεῖραὶ ἴσταν. Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος, ἀκούσας ὅτι ὁ Κεῖραὶ ἴσταν, τὸν ἐκειῶντην διεξέωσατο, ἦν γὰρ γυμνός, καὶ ἔββαλον interpolate Lk. 5<sup>4</sup>, "but they said, Master, we toiled all night and took nothing; but at Thy word we will let down the net." This interpolation shows that the similarity between the two narratives of a great draught of fishes in Lk. and Jn. had been observed long before the dawn of modern criticism.

καὶ εὐέτη ἀπὸ θαλάσσης ἰσχυρῶν. The rec. has ἰσχυρῶν but the more vivid ἰσχυρῶν is read by ABCDLN. For the verb ἑαίνου see on 6<sup>34</sup>. ἰσχυρῶν is not found in the body of the Gospel.

ἀπὸ τοῦ πλήθους τῶν ἰχθύων. For the same constr. cf. 2 Chron. 5<sup>5</sup> of the animals that "could not be numbered for multitude," οὐδὲ λογισθῆσονται ἀπὸ τοῦ πλήθους. Nothing is said here of the breaking of the net, which Simon and Andrew feared in the parallel story (Lk. 5<sup>6</sup>).

The Sea of Galilee still swarms with fish;<sup>1</sup> and it is noteworthy that this great catch is not described as a σημεῖον, nor is it suggested that it was miraculous.

7. We have identified the Beloved Disciple with John the son of Zebedee (see on 13<sup>23</sup>, and Introd., pp. xxxvii.). This identification agrees well with the statement of v. 2 that the sons of Zebedee were present on this occasion; although v. 2 does not by itself prove this, for the Beloved Disciple might be one of the two innominati.

The Beloved Disciple is the first to recognise Jesus, while Peter is the first to act on the knowledge that the stranger on the beach is He. This is entirely congruous with all that the Gospels tell of the two men, the one a spiritual genius, the other an eager, impulsive, warm-hearted leader.

Σίμων οὖν Πέτρος. See on v. 3.

Peter, while working the boat and the nets, was γυμνός, i.e. he was naked except for a waist-cloth; but before leaping into the water, he threw on his upper garment, and fastened it with a belt. εὐεθούτης is not found elsewhere in the N.T., but cf. 1 Sam. 18<sup>4</sup> where Jonathan presents David with his εὐεθούτης as a personal gift. Meyer says that the Talmud takes over the word in the form מְעֻבָּתָה, using it to describe a labourer's frock.

The verb διεξέωσατο signifies that Peter tucked the garment up into his girdle before he waded ashore in the shallow water (cf. 13<sup>d</sup>).

Syr. sin. adds, after the words "he cast himself into the sea," the gloss "and came swimming." The paraphrase of Nonnus also speaks of Peter swimming; and this may be intended by the Greek, but in fact the ἐπιβήσας or long garment which Peter put on would only have been an impediment if he had to swim ashore.<sup>1</sup>

Nothing is said of any conversation between Peter and the Risen Jesus at this point of the story (cf. contra, Lk. 5<sup>o</sup>).

8. The other disciples wished to get to shore as soon as they could, and to bring their catch with them; but the big fishing boat (τὸ πλοῖον, v. 3) could not come closer in the shallow water, so they came (there were only six of them) in the dinghy (τὸ πλοῖον, cf. 6<sup>o</sup>) and the note there, the distance being only about 100 yards.

ἀπὸ πηχῶν διακοσίων, "200 cubits off." For this constr. of ἀπὸ see on 11<sup>o</sup>. πηχῶν is contracted into πηχῶν as in Ezek. 40<sup>o</sup> 41<sup>o</sup>, Rev. 21<sup>o</sup>, etc.

σίρωστος τὸ δίκτυον κτλ., "towing the net full of fishes," i.e. having attached the ropes of the net to the dinghy. σίρειν does not occur again in Jn.; it is used, as here, of dragging towards one a net full of fish by Plutarch, de solertia animalium c. 26.

9. ἀπέβησαν, "they disembarked." ἀποβαίνω does not occur again in Jn.; and it is noteworthy that the only other place in the Greek Bible where it is found in the sense of "disembark" is Lk. 5<sup>o</sup> (cf. Abbott, Diat. 1763).

For ἀνθρώπων, see on 18<sup>o</sup>. The Vulg. rendering of ἀνθρώπων κειμήνην is stramas positas; but some O.L. texts have carbones positos, while others (a d c f g r) have carbones incensos, as if they read ἀνθρώπων καιμώμενην. It is possible that this is the original reading, for καιμώμενην would readily be corrupted into κειμήνην, more especially as ἐπιειμένον follows in the next line. ὡς οὖν ἀπέβησαν. ὡς οὖν is thoroughly Johannine; see on 10<sup>o</sup>.

ὄψαρον. We have had the word ὄψαρος already at 6<sup>o</sup>, where it probably means "dried fish" (see note in loc.).

10. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ἐσέκατε ἀπὸ τῶν ὄψαρων ὧν ἐτίνασθε νῦν. 11. ἀπέβη σὺν Ἰωάννῃ Πέτρος καὶ εἰλκυσεν τὸ δίκτυον εἰς τὴν γῆν μετῶν ἰχθύων μεγάλων ἑκατὸν πενήκοντα τριάκοντα καὶ τοσοῦτων ὄντων

But here the ὄψαρον (v. 10) are the fresh fish which had just been caught, and in v. 11 the net is said to have been full "of great fishes." In fact, despite the derivation of the word, ὄψαρον came to mean "a fish" or "fish" vaguely, whether fresh caught or dried; just as πῶν τὸ ὄψος τῆς θαλάσσης in Num. 11<sup>o</sup> means "all the fish of the sea." See on v. 5.

The ὄψαρον which was cooking on the fire was not one of the fish which had just been caught; for it is only after the disciples see it that the net is drawn ashore. It was provided, along with the bread, by Jesus. Some have thought that the singular forms ὄψαρον, ἄρτον, are significant; and that there is here an allusion to a sacramental meal—one fish, one loaf. But neither ὄψαρον nor ἄρτον necessarily signify one fish or one loaf only; both may be taken generally as "fish," "bread." See further, on v. 13.

The story of Lk. 24<sup>o</sup>, where the disciples give Jesus a piece of broiled fish (ἰχθύος ὀρετοῦ μέρει), presents some likeness to the present passage, but there the Risen Jesus asks for food (cf. 21<sup>o</sup>) and eats it. Jn. does not say that He ate anything, but only that He presided at the meal by the lake-side.

10. Ἐσέκατε ἀπὸ τῶν ὄψ. κτλ., "bring of the fish which you caught just now." Prima facie, the story suggests that the fish on the fire was for the breakfast of Jesus Himself, and that He now invites the fishermen to bring some of the fish that they had caught, to cook them, and join Him at His meal. But this is not said directly.

For πᾶντες, see on v. 3. For νῦν, "just now," cf. 11<sup>o</sup>.

11. ἀπέβη σὺν Σ. Π. "So Peter," in obedience to the authoritative direction of Jesus, "went aboard" the dinghy, or little boat. Peter is always foremost in action.

καὶ εἰλκυσεν τὸ δίκτυον κτλ., "and drew the net to land," which was easier to do than to haul it over the gunwale into the dinghy.

μετῶν ἰχθύων μεγάλων κτλ. Cf. Lk. 5<sup>o</sup> ἰχθύων πλῆθος πολὺ. Unlike the story in Lk., where the net was breaking (διεσπῆγγον τὸ δίκτυον), it is noted here as remarkable, οὐκ ἐσχίσθη τὸ δίκτυον.

The simplest explanation of the number of fish, 153, being recorded, is that (as fishermen are wont to do, because the catch has to be divided into shares) the fish were counted, and their great number remembered as a notable thing. But commentators, both ancient and modern, have not been con-

οὐκ ἐσχίσθη τὸ δίπτερον. 12. λέγει αὐτοῖς ὁ Ἰησοῦς Δεῦτε ἀριστήσατε. οὐδεὶς ἐτάλαμα τῶν μαθητῶν ἔξετάσαι αὐτὸν Σὺ τίς εἶ; εἶδότες ὅτι ὁ Κύριός ἐστιν. 13. ἔρχεται Ἰησοῦς καὶ λαμβάνει τὸν ἄρτον καὶ teat with this, and have sought for a symbolic meaning in the number 153, which they (in modern times at least) assume was invented in order to suggest something esoteric. See Introd., p. lxxxvii.

12. Jesus calls to the disciples, Δεῦτε ἀριστήσατε, "Come and break your fast" (cf. for the constr. δεῦτε, Deere κτλ., 4<sup>27</sup>). ἀριστων was the morning meal (Mt. 22<sup>4</sup>, Lk. 11<sup>36</sup> 14<sup>13</sup>); the verb ἀριστῶν occurs again in N.T. only at Lk. 11<sup>37</sup>. Nothing is said of the cooking of any of the fish that had been caught, but the command of v. 10 suggests that it was thus that the disciples' breakfast was provided.

οὐδεὶς ἐτάλαμα κτλ. The intimate familiarity of the old days had passed; they knew that it was Jesus who was speaking to them, but they did not dare to question Him as to His identity (cf. 4<sup>27</sup>). Chrysostom says that they sat down for the meal in silence and trepidation, which may be implied.

οὐδεὶς . . . τῶν μαθητῶν. For this constr., without ἐκ before the gen. plural, as usual in Jn. (see on 1<sup>20</sup> 7<sup>12</sup>), cf. 13<sup>30</sup>. On μαθηταί, see 2<sup>1</sup>.

εἶδότες ὅτι ὁ κύριός ἐστιν. It was not as at the Emmaus supper, where He was not recognised until He blessed and broke the bread (Lk. 24<sup>30</sup>); here He was recognised before the meal began.

ταλμᾶν and ἐξετάζειν do not occur in the body of the Gospel. For ἐξετάζειν, "to cross-examine," cf. Mt. 2<sup>8</sup>, Ecclus. 11<sup>7</sup>; it is a natural word to use in this context.

13. ἔρχεται has been thought to imply that Jesus was standing at a distance from the lighted fire, and that He came to it only when the disciples were gathered for their breakfast. But ἔρχεται goes with λαμβάνει which follows (cf. ἔρχεται . . . καὶ λέγει, 12<sup>25</sup>), and hardly needs explanation, or a reference to 20<sup>26</sup>.

The rec. οὐν (NΘ) after ἔρχεται is om. by κBCDLW.

λαμβάνει τὸν ἄρτον καὶ δίδωσιν αὐτοῖς. Syr. sin. and D insert εὐχαριστήσας before δίδωσιν, this being evidently introduced from 6<sup>11</sup>, to the language of which v. 13 is closely similar. No eucharistic meal is implied at 6<sup>11</sup> (see note in loc.), and there is here even less suggestion of such a thing. τὸν ἄρτον and τὸ σῆμαρον do not indicate one loaf and one fish (see on v. 9); indeed the command "bring of the fish which you caught" (v. 10) implies that several fish had been prepared for the disciples' breakfast. That Jesus "took"

δίδωσιν αὐτοῖς, καὶ τὸ σῆμαρον ἕμισον. 14. τούτου ἤθη τρίτον ἐφανερώθη Ἰησοῦς τοῖς μαθηταῖς ἑγερθεὶς ἐκ νεκρῶν.

15. Ὅτε οὖν ἤρτισθησας, λέγει τῷ Σίμωνι Πέτρῳ ὁ Ἰησοῦς Σίμων and "gave" them bread and fish, as before (cf. Mk. 6<sup>41</sup> 8<sup>8</sup>, Mt. 14<sup>19</sup> 15<sup>26</sup>, Lk. 9<sup>16</sup>), means only that He presided at the meal, as His custom had always been.

With τὸ σῆμαρον ἕμισον, cf. δμοίως καὶ ἐκ τῶν σῆμαρον (6<sup>11</sup>).

14. With the constr. τούτου ἤθη τρίτον, cf. τούτου πάλιν δεύτερον σῆμαρον (4<sup>26</sup>), and see 2<sup>11</sup>. In both these passages (2<sup>11</sup>, 4<sup>26</sup>), Jn. implies a correction of Mk.'s narrative, and it is probable that here too a correction of the Galilean tradition as to the appearance by the lake-side is intended. Jesus did not first manifest Himself to the apostles in Galilee (Mt. 28<sup>16</sup>); He manifested Himself to them twice at Jerusalem (20<sup>19</sup>, 30<sup>7</sup>), and not until after that (τρίτων) did He show Himself in Galilee. V. 14 seems to be an addition made by Jn. to his source.

ἐφανερώθη Ἰησοῦς. Cf. v. 1 and see on 1<sup>21</sup>.

After μαθηταῖς the rec. has αὐτοῖς, but om. κABCCLWO. ἑγερθεὶς ἐκ νεκρῶν. Cf. 2<sup>28</sup> 12<sup>27</sup>. ἀναστῆναι was the verb used 20<sup>9</sup>.

The restoration of Peter to his apostolic office (vv. 15-17)

15. ὅτε οὖν ἤρτισθησας, when the breakfast was over. Jn. is fond of these notes of time. See on 1<sup>20</sup>.

Σίμων Ἰωάννου. This is the better reading (κ*BCDLW), as against Σίμων Ἰωάν of the rec. text; and so also at vv. 16, 17. Note that we have here Σίμων Ἰωάννου three times, instead of Σίμων ὁ υἱὸς Ἰωάννου, as at 1<sup>21</sup>.

Jesus addresses him by the personal name by which he was generally known, "Simon, son of John," as He was accustomed to do. See on 1<sup>21</sup> for the designation Peter, which, it is to be observed, Jesus only uses once (Lk. 22<sup>26</sup>) in addressing the apostle. Cf. Mt. 16<sup>17</sup>, Lk. 22<sup>28</sup>.

Peter had thrice denied His Master, and the solemn questioning of him, in the company of his fellow-disciples, as he prelude to his restoration to the Master's favour and the renewal of His confidence, was fittingly repeated thrice. As Augustine has it, he was questioned "donec trina voce amoris, solueret trinum uocem negationis."<sup>1</sup> The questioning has reference to one thing only, and that is Peter's love for Jesus. He is not asked to renew his confession of faith (probably that had never quite left him, his Master having prayed that it should not fail, Lk. 22<sup>32</sup>), nor is he asked if he is sure that he will be more courageous in the future than in the past. The Lord does not remind him in words of his failure when the great test came. If he loves, that is enough. This is the one essential condition of the apostolic office and ministry.

Attention has often been directed to the use of the two verbs ἀγαπᾷ and φιλᾷ in these verses; Jesus asking ἀγαπήσει με twice, Peter answering φιλῶ σε, and on the third occasion of His query, Jesus changing the verb and saying φιλῶς με, taking up Peter's own word. This distinction of verbs is not treated as significant by the ancient commentators, Syriac, Greek, or Latin (Ambrose in Lc. s. 176 being perhaps an exception); and, when the delight of Origen, s.g., in playing on words is remembered, this is sufficient to show that the patristic expositors did not venture sharply to differentiate ἀγαπᾷ from φιλᾷ. But in modern times, the exegesis of the passage has largely turned on the idea that whereas Peter will say φιλῶ σε, he does not presume to claim that he can say ἀγαπῶ σε, ἀγαπᾷ being the more lofty word.<sup>1</sup> It is necessary, then, to examine the usage of ἀγαπᾷ and φιλᾷ more closely.

ADDITIONAL NOTE ON φιλᾷ AND ἀγαπᾷ

Of these two words it may be said that φιλᾷ is the more comprehensive, and includes every degree and kind of love or liking, while ἀγαπᾷ is the more dignified and restrained. But even so vague a distinction cannot be pressed very far. Both verbs are used in classical Greek to express sexual love (cf. Lucian, Ver. Hist. li. 25, and Aristotle, Topica, i. 15 [106, 23]).<sup>2</sup> So, in like manner, in the LXX sexual love is indicated by ἀγάπη, ἀγαπᾷ, at 2 Sam. 13<sup>4</sup>, Cant. 2<sup>7</sup> 7<sup>6</sup> etc., and by φιλέω at Eccles. 9<sup>7</sup>, Prov. 7<sup>19</sup> (in which latter passage Aquila and Theodotion give ἀγάπη). In Xenophon (Memorabilia, ii. vii. §§ 9 and 12), φιλῶ and ἀγαπᾷ are used interchangeably, both indicating in turn affection (not sexual) and esteem. Cf. Elian, Var. Hist. ix. 4, where it is said of a man's relations with his brothers, πάνω σφόδρα ἀγαπῆρας αὐτοῖς καὶ ἔσ' αὐτῶν φιλοῦσθαι ἐν τῷ μέρει.

An analysis of the passages in which φιλᾷ and ἀγαπᾷ occur in Jn. shows that they are practically synonyms in the Fourth Gospel.

Both verbs are used of God's love for man: ἀγαπᾷ at 3<sup>14</sup> (where see note) 14<sup>20</sup> 17<sup>20</sup>, 1 Jn. 4<sup>19, 20</sup>, etc., but φιλᾷ at 16<sup>27</sup> (cf. Rev. 3<sup>17</sup>).

Both verbs are used of the Father's love for the Son: ἀγαπᾷ at 3<sup>35</sup> 10<sup>17</sup> 15<sup>9, 17, 21, 22, 23</sup> (cf. δὲ υἱὸς μου δὲ ἀγαπήσθαι, Mk. 9<sup>7</sup>), but φιλᾷ at 5<sup>40</sup>.

Both verbs are used of Jesus' love for men: ἀγαπᾷ at 1<sup>14</sup> 13<sup>1, 22, 23</sup> 14<sup>20</sup> 15<sup>9</sup> 16<sup>21, 26</sup>, but φιλᾷ at 11<sup>5, 20</sup> 20<sup>3</sup>. The last reference is specially noteworthy, as at 20<sup>3</sup> the beloved disciple is described as he ὁ ἐμίσηται δὲ Ἰησοῦς, while we generally have ὁ ἠγάπητα (13<sup>30</sup> 19<sup>30</sup>).

Both verbs are used of the love of men for Jesus: ἀγαπᾷ at 8<sup>42</sup> 14<sup>21, 22, 23, 24, 25</sup> 21<sup>15, 16</sup>, but φιλᾷ at 16<sup>27</sup> 21<sup>15, 16, 17</sup> (cf. Mt. 10<sup>27</sup>, 1 Cor. 16<sup>22</sup>).

The love of men for God is generally described in the LXX by ἀγαπᾷ (Ex. 20<sup>9</sup>) or ἀγάπη (Wisd. 3<sup>7</sup>); but in Prov. 8<sup>17</sup> we have φιλῶ (ἐγὼ τοῦτο ἐμὲ φιλοῦντας ἀγαπᾷ). In this sense we have ἀγάπη at 4<sup>19</sup>, 1 Jn. 2<sup>15</sup> 3<sup>17</sup>, and ἀγαπᾷ at 1 Jn. 4<sup>19, 20, 21</sup> 5<sup>2</sup> (not in the Gospel).

The love of Jesus for the Father is mentioned only once in the N.T., viz. at 14<sup>31</sup> (where see note), and there the verb is ἀγαπᾷ.

Having regard to these facts, it would be precarious to lay stress on the change of ἀγαπᾷ in vv. 15 and 16 to φιλᾷ in v. 17. And a closer examination gives further reason for treating them as synonymous here.

First, it is clear that the author uses them as synonymous. Jn. purports to give a translation in Greek of Aramaic words spoken by Jesus. He makes Jesus say ἀγαπᾷ με in vv. 15, 16, and φιλᾷ με in v. 17; but by prefixing τὸ τρίτον το φιλᾷ με in the latter passage (cf. δεύτερον in v. 16), he seems to make it plain that the verbs are to be taken as identical in meaning, and to exclude the idea that a new thought is introduced by the use of φιλᾷ.

Secondly, Peter is represented as saying "Yes" to the question ἀγαπήσει με; καὶ, φιλῶ σε is his answer. This is fatal to the idea that Peter will not claim that he loves Jesus with the higher form of love called ἀγάπη, but that he ventures only

<sup>3</sup> Note that the same Hebrew word נָשֵׂה is variously rendered by ἀγαπᾷ and φιλᾷ in this verse.

Ἰησοῦ, ἀγαπᾷ με πλεον τούτων; λέγει αὐτῷ Ναὶ, Κύριε, σὺ οἶδας to say that he has φιλία for his Master. For why should he say "Yes," if he means "No"?

Thirdly, the Syriac versions (both Old Syriac and Peshitta) use the same word to render ἀγαπᾷ and φιλεῖν in this passage, although two Syriac words were at their disposal. And this is the more remarkable because the Curetonian and Peshitta in rendering ἀγαπᾷ at 14<sup>21</sup>, where it occurs 3 times, use both the available Syriac words without distinction.<sup>1</sup>

In this connexion it is significant that ἀγαπᾷ and φιλεῖν are indifferently used in the LXX to translate the Hebr. אָהַב; this Hebrew root being nearly always behind ἀγαπᾷ, and always behind φιλεῖν except when φιλεῖν means "to kiss," when it represents קָשַׁב.

The Vulgate Latin distinguishes ἀγαπᾷς and φιλεῖς by the respective renderings diligis and amas;<sup>2</sup> but the O.L. texts a s have amas throughout, in this agreeing with the Syriac. No distinction is drawn between ἀγαπᾷς and φιλεῖς here in the Arabic version of Tatian's Diatesaron.

We conclude that we must treat ἀγαπᾷς and φιλεῖς in vv 15-17 as synonymous, as all the patristic expositors do.

ἀγαπᾷ με πλεον τούτων; πλεον (KBCDL) must be preferred to the rec. πλείους.

What is the meaning of πλεον τούτων? It has been generally understood as meaning "more than your companions, the other apostles, love me"; and this yields a good sense. Peter had claimed that his loyalty surpassed that of the rest (Mk. 14<sup>28</sup>; and cf. 13<sup>27</sup>). He had taken precedence of the others, in speech (6<sup>28</sup>) and act (18<sup>28</sup>), more than once. And the question of Jesus may mean, "Do you really love me more than the others do, as your forwardness in acting as their leader used to suggest?" But (a) if this be the meaning, the construction is elliptical and ambiguous. We should expect the personal pronoun σὺ to be introduced before or after ἀγαπᾷς to mark the emphasis; (β) comparisons of this kind, sc. between the love which this or that disciple displays or entertains, seem out of place on the lips of Jesus. To ask Peter if his love for his Master exceeds the love which, e.g., the Beloved Disciple cherishes for Him, would be a severe test; and the question would be one which Peter could never answer with confidence.

ὅτι φιλεῖ σε. λέγει αὐτῷ Βόσκει τὰ ἄρνια μου. 16. λέγει αὐτῷ

Does, then, ἀγαπᾷ με πλεον τούτων; mean "lovest thou me more than these things?" sc. the boat and the nets and the fishing, to which Peter had returned after the Passion and the Resurrection of his Master. This interpretation is, indeed, unattractive; but it may possibly be right, and it is free from some difficulties which beset the usual interpretation.

At any rate, Peter in his reply takes no notice of πλεον τούτων. If he had ever intended to claim that his affection for his Master was greater than that of his companions, he does so no longer. Nor does he rest his answer on his own feelings alone. His fall had taught him humility. "Yes, Lord, thou knowest (σὺ οἶδας) that I love thee" (φιλεῖ σε, with which cf. 16<sup>27</sup>). He rests his case on the Master's insight into his heart.

The answer of Jesus accepts Peter's assurance: "Feed my lambs." The Lord "confides those whom He loves to the man who loves Him" (Luthardt). At the time of his call, the charge to Peter was that he was to be a "fisher" of men (Mt. 4<sup>19</sup>, Mk. 1<sup>17</sup>, Lk. 5<sup>10</sup>); and such was his work as an apostle, during the days of his Master's visible presence and control. But that would not be sufficient for an apostolic ministry, when Jesus had departed. Henceforth the ministry consists not only of "catching" men, but of guiding and guarding them in their new spiritual environment. And so the image now used at Peter's second "call" is not that of the fisher, but of the shepherd, whose tender devotion must take as its exemplar the life of the Good Shepherd of 10<sup>11-18</sup>.

φιλεῖ σε is all that Peter will say. But it is enough.

Βόσκει τὰ ἄρνια μου is the charge committed to him by the Chief Pastor in the first instance. The charge is repeated in varying forms in vv. 16, 17, and it is not easy either to determine the true text in each case or, having determined it, to decide whether the changes of verbs and nouns are significant for Jn.

In vv. 15, 17, the verb is βόσκει; in v. 16 it is ποιμαίνε. In the Synoptists βόσκειν is always used of feeding swine; but it is regularly used in the LXX of feeding sheep (e.g. Gen. 29<sup>7</sup> 37<sup>23</sup>), and in Ezek. 34<sup>8</sup> in a metaphorical sense (as here) of a pastor feeding his flock with spiritual food.

ποιμαίνε is, etymologically, a verb of wider connotation, covering all duties that pertain to a ποιμήν or shepherd, guiding and guarding, as well as feeding the flock. It occurs again Lk. 17<sup>7</sup>, 1 Cor. 9<sup>7</sup>, in its literal sense, and in the spiritual sense of "shepherding" Acts 20<sup>28</sup>, 1 Pet. 5<sup>2</sup>, Rev. 2<sup>27</sup> 7<sup>13</sup> etc. But it is doubtful if ποιμαίνε of v. 16 should be understood as different from bōske of vv. 15, 17. ποιμαίνω is used in the LXX of feeding sheep, exactly as bōskein is (e.g. Gen. 30<sup>2</sup> 37<sup>1</sup>), and so too in its spiritual significance, e.g. Ps. 23<sup>1</sup> ὁ κύριος ποιμαίνει με, and Ezek. 34<sup>10</sup> τοὶ μὴ ποιμαίνοντες τὰ πρόβατα μου.

The Vulgate has in vv. 15, 16, 17, pasce . . . pasce . . . pasce, no attempt being made to distinguish the Greek verbs; and it would be rash to assume that different Aramaic words lie behind bōske and ποιμαίνω respectively in the present passage, more particularly as in the LXX bōskein and ποιμαίνω are used indifferently to translate ποιῶ.

We now turn to the various words used to describe the flock who are to be tended, and here we have to do with conflicting readings:

In v. 16, πρόβατα is read by BC as against πρόβατα, which has the support of  $\kappa\alpha\delta\eta\tau\alpha$ .

In v. 17, πρόβατα is read by  $\kappa\alpha\delta\eta\tau\alpha$ , as against ABC, which have πρόβατα.

A careful study of the Syriac versions by Burkitt leads him to the conclusion that ἀρνία . . . πρόβατα . . . πρόβατα were probably the original Greek words behind the Syriac.<sup>1</sup> With this, the Latin Vulgate agnos . . . agnos . . . oves agrees, for πρόβατα as a diminutive may be very well represented by agnos. The O.L. versions, for the most part, do not distinguish, and give oves three times; but there are also traces of a reading ovivulus in vv. 16, 17.

These variants indicate, as it seems, that two or three different Aramaic words lie behind the Greek, although such an inference is not certain, having regard to what has been said above in relation to ἀγαπήν-φιλῶν and βόσκειν-ποιμαίνω. And we incline to adopt the readings ἀρνία . . . πρόβατα . . . πρόβατα in vv. 15, 16, 17 respectively, although the uncial evidence for πρόβατα in v. 16 is not very strong. Hence the charge to Peter first entrusts to his care the lambs, then the young sheep, and lastly the whole flock, young and old.

With ἀρνία, πρόβατα, may be compared ρνεία of 13<sup>20</sup>. This use of diminutives indicates a tenderness in the speaker's words. ἀρνίων occurs in the N.T. elsewhere only in the Apocalypse, where it is used 20 times of the Lamb of God (see on 1<sup>20</sup>): it is infrequent in the LXX. πρόβατων does not appear again in the Greek Bible.

Some commentators (who find in the delivery of the special charge "Feed my lambs, . . . my sheep" to Peter individually, an indication of his being entrusted with a higher

πᾶν δεύτερον Σίμων Ἰωάννου, ἀγαπᾷς με; λέγει αὐτῷ Ναί, Κύριε, σὺ οἶδας ὅτι φιλῶ σε. λέγει αὐτῷ Ἰωάννης τὰ πρόβατά μου. 17. λέγει αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον Σίμων Ἰωάννου, φιλᾷς με; ἀνεκρίθη ὁ Πέτρος ὅτι εἶπεν αὐτῷ τὸ τρίτον Φιλᾷς με; καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Κύριε, πάντα σὺ commission than that of the other apostles) interpret the "lambs" the faithful laity, while the "sheep" whom Peter was to feed typify other pastors. This is anachronistic exegesis, but hardly more so than the interpretation which finds in this passage an anticipation of the primacy of the Roman See. Such thoughts were outside the purview of Christians at the time when the Fourth Gospel was published.<sup>1</sup>

16. λέγει αὐτῷ πᾶν δεύτερον. For this tautological phrase, see on 4<sup>24</sup>.

Σίμων Ἰωάννου, ἀγαπᾷς με; The "more than these" of v. 15 is now dropped. And Peter's answer is the same as before: ναί, . . . φιλῶ σε. The reply ποιμαίνω τὰ πρόβατά μου is only to be distinguished from βόσκει τὰ ἀρνία μου (v. 15) or βόσκει τὰ πρόβατά μου (v. 17), in so far as it entrusts a different section of the flock to the pastoral care of Peter. To distinguish ποιμαίνω from βόσκει here is a modern subtlety, unknown to Christian antiquity; and it has been shown above to be without support from the LXX use of these verbs, which consistently represent the same Hebrew root.

17. τὸ τρίτον. Cf. δεύτερον in v. 16. This is the same question as before, repeated for the third time, and not a new question, as it would be if φιλᾷς με; were different in meaning from ἀγαπᾷς με; of vv. 15, 16.

Why has ἀγαπᾷς here, as in v. 15, 16.

ἀνεκρίθη ὁ Πέτρος. He knew that he had given cause for the doubting of his love, and it grieved him that his repeated assurance that it still inspired him was not treated as sufficient by his Master. For ὁ Πέτρος here, see on 18<sup>2</sup>, καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ.  $\kappa\alpha\delta\eta\tau\alpha$  prefix καὶ, which is omitted by A. For εἶπεν (BC $\delta\alpha$ ),  $\kappa\alpha\delta\eta\tau\omega$  have λέγει.

Peter leaves out ναί in this third answer. He appeals to the knowledge of his feelings which he is assured Jesus must have.

πάντα σὺ οἶδας (cf. 16<sup>20</sup>). Long before this, the chosen companions of Jesus had learnt that His insight into human character and motive was unerring; cf. 2<sup>20</sup> αὐτὸς γὰρ ἐγίνωσκεν ἡμῖν ἐν τῇ ἀνθρώπων, the verb γίνωσκω, of immediate observation, being used there, as here.

Ἰησοῦς; om.  $\kappa\alpha\delta\eta\tau\omega$ , ins. AN $\delta\alpha$ . BC om.  $\delta$ .

18. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγει σοι, ὅτε ἦς νεώτερος, ἕλθοντες σεαυτῶν καὶ περιεβάτε ὑπο ἡβάλας· ὅταν δὲ γηράσῃ, ἕκαστος τὰς χεῖράς σου, θόσκα τὰ πρόβατά μου. This is the final charge, pasce oves meas. τὰ πρόβατα includes the whole flock, young and old.

Prediction of Peter's martyrdom (Jn. 18, 19); and a misunderstanding saying about John (vv. 20-23)

18, 19. Ἀμὴν ἀμὴν λέγει σοι. When Jesus warned Peter that he would deny Him, he prefaced the warning by the same impressive phrase (13<sup>36</sup>; see on 1<sup>23</sup>).

There is no explicit reference to Peter's death in the words which follow. He has been hidden to feed the Lord's sheep, and he is reminded that, although, when he was young, he was unfettered and able to follow his own wishes, yet when he grew old he would be obliged to yield to the will of others. At this time he was no longer a youth; he had been married for some time (cf. Mt. 8<sup>19</sup>), and was approaching middle life. The words ἕλθοντες σεαυτῶν . . . ἄλλος ἕσται σε may point only to the contrast between the alertness of youth and the helplessness of old age, which cannot always do what it would; and ἕκαστος τὰς χεῖράς σου may refer merely to the old man stretching out his hands that others may help him in putting on his garments, whereas the young man girds himself unassisted, before he sets out to walk (περιπατεῖν).

Further, ἕλθοντες (only again at Acts 1<sup>2</sup> in the N.T.) is always used in the LXX, as in Greek generally, of girding on clothes or armour,<sup>1</sup> and no instance is forthcoming of its use in the sense of binding a criminal, which must be supposed to be the meaning of ἄλλοι ἕσται σε if the Lord's words are taken as predictive of Peter's martyrdom. The order of the clauses in v. 18 is also strange if crucifixion was in the mind of the speaker; for we should expect the extension of the hands to be mentioned last.

On the other hand, this feature of death by crucifixion, that the hands were extended upon the cross, is specially mentioned as its characteristic by other writers. Wetstein quotes Arten. Orig. i. 76, κασιόργος δὲ ὡν στανουθήσεται διὰ τὸ ὄψος καὶ τὴν τῶν χειρῶν ἔκτασιν, and Arrian, Epict. iii. 26, ἐκείνους σεαυτῶν ὡς οἰστανωμένοι. Field adds a quotation from Dion. Hal. Ant. vii. 69, οἱ δ' ἄγοντες τὸν δεξιόπυγα ἐπὶ τὴν τιμωρίαν, τὰς

More significant than these parallels, however, is the fact that several early Christian writers treat ἕκαστος τῶν χειρῶν or a like phrase as a sufficient description by itself of crucifixion. Thus Barnabas (§ 12) finds a νότος στανουτοῦ in the extension of Moses' hands during the battle with Amalek (Ex. 17<sup>12</sup>). Justin has the same idea: Μωυσοῦς . . . τὰς χεῖρας ἕκαστερος ἐκτετάσας, and again, διὰ τοῦ νότου τῆς ἐκτάσεως τῶν χειρῶν (Tryph. 90, 91). Irenæus reports the same exegesis as that of one of his predecessors, ὡς ἔφη τις τῶν προβηβηκότων, διὰ τῆς (θείας) ἐκτάσεως τῶν χειρῶν (Hæc. v. 17. 4; cf. Dem. 46).<sup>2</sup> Origen, again, the words of Isa. 65<sup>2</sup>, "I have spread out my hands all the day to a rebellious people," are regarded as a prophecy of the Crucifixion by Barnabas (§ 12), Justin (Apol. i. 35), Irenæus (Dem. 79), and Cyprian (Test. ii. 20). Cyprian in the same passage quotes also Ps. 88<sup>7</sup> and Ps. 141<sup>2</sup> as predictive of the Cross, although there is nothing in either verse suggestive of it, except that the Psalmist speaks of the "spreading out" or the "lifting up" of his hands in prayer. And, finally, the sign of the Cross in the heavens before the Last Judgment<sup>3</sup> is baldly described in the Didache (xvi. 6) as σημεῖον ἐκτετάσεως ἐν οὐρανῷ.

It is, then, intelligible that the writer of the Appendix to Jn. should regard the words ἕκαστος τὰς χεῖράς σου in v. 18 as an unmistakable prediction of martyrdom by the cross. But whatever the meaning of v. 18, the text clearly embodies a genuine reminiscence of words spoken by the Lord. If the author of the Appendix is right in his interpretation of them, "this He said, signifying by what death He should glorify God," he must be taken as relying on memory or tradition for his report of the words used; for, if he desired to place sentences of his own making in the mouth of Jesus, which should contain a prophecy of Peter's crucifixion, he would have phrased them with less ambiguity.

It is possible (see on 2<sup>21</sup> and the references there given) that the comment of v. 19 is a mistaken one. But even in that case we have a clear indication that the narrator, at the time of writing, believed that Peter was dead, and that he had died a martyr's death by crucifixion. This became the tradition of the Church. The earliest appearance of it is in Tertullian (Scorp. 15, about 211 A.D.); and it is noteworthy that he makes reference to the words of Jn. 21<sup>18</sup>: "Tunc Petrus ab altero καὶ ἄλλος ζῶσει σὲ καὶ οἰσε ἔσων ὁ θάλας. 19. τοῦτο δὲ εἶπεν σημαίνων τοῖς θαυμάτοις δοξάζει τὸν Θεόν. καὶ τοῦτο εἰπὼν λέγει αὐτῷ Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι. 20. ἐπιστραφεὶς δὲ Πέτρος βλέπει τὸν μαθητῆρα cingitur, cum cruce adstringatur," interpreting ἄλλος ζῶσει σὲ of the binding of the martyr to the cross. Origen (ap. Bus. H.E. iii. 1, if indeed the report is Origen's, which is doubtful) is the first to tell that Peter was crucified with his head downward, ἀνεσκαλοίσθη κατὰ κεφαλῆς, a statement which appears, embellished with legend, in the Acta Petri and in many later writers. The notices of Peter's death are perplexing,<sup>1</sup> and the subject cannot be pursued here; but it is plain that the tradition of his crucifixion goes back to Jn. 21<sup>18, 19</sup>.

With the comment τοῦτο δὲ εἶπεν κτλ. should be compared 12<sup>23</sup>, τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγεν σημαίνων τοῖς θαυμάτοις ἤμελλον ἀποθνήσκειν. For ἤμελλον ἀποθνήσκειν we have δοξάζει τὸν Θεόν. We should expect ἤμελλον δοξάζειν . . . , but δοξάζει places the narrator back in the scene described, when the martyrdom of Peter was still in the future. It is characteristic of the style of Jn. (see on 1<sup>40</sup>), that the writer does not stay to tell explicitly that Peter was dead, for this is a fact which the whole Church knew.

The phrase descriptive of a martyr's death, by which he was said to "glorify God" in his sufferings, occurs again in 1 Pet. 4<sup>14</sup>, where a man who is threatened with suffering ὡς Χριστιανός is exhorted thus: δοξαζέτω δὲ τὸν Θεόν ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι τοῦ Κυρίου. The phrase is common in the martyrologies. See on 13<sup>21</sup>, where it is pointed out that this thought must be distinguished from the thought that in his death a martyr "is glorified" by God.

Ἀκολουθεῖ μοι. See 1<sup>42</sup> for the invitation to Philip expressed thus, and the Synoptic references there given. It would seem from v. 20 that ἀκολουθεῖ μοι here signified a literal following of Jesus as He moved away from the assembled disciples, Peter and John alone going with Him. But the words may well have recalled to Peter the invitation extended to him in early days, "Come, and I will make you a fisher of men" (Mt. 4<sup>19</sup>, Mk. 1<sup>17</sup>, Lk. 5<sup>10</sup>); and he could hardly have failed to remember a recent occasion when his eager offer to follow Jesus was put aside by the Master (Jn. 13<sup>36</sup>). See p. 529 above.

ἐν ἡμέραις ὁ Ἰησοῦς ἀκολουθοῦντά, δε καὶ ἀπέκτισεν ἐν τῷ δεξιῷ ἐπὶ τὸ στήθος αὐτοῦ καὶ εἶπεν Κύριε, τίς ἔσται ὁ παραδόξος σὲ; 21. τοῦτον σὺν Ἰδῶν δὲ Πέτρος λέγει τῷ Ἰησοῦ Κύριε, οὐκ ὄντι; 22. λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς Ἐὰν ἰδῶς μένειν ἕως ἔρχομαι, τί πρὸς σέ; σὺ μοι ἀκολουθεῖ. 23. ἔξῃθεν σὺν οὐκ ὄντι ὁ λόγος εἰς τοὺς that he was welcome, whenever Jesus called his close friend Peter. See Introd., p. xxxvii.

The "disciple whom Jesus loved" (v. 7, 13<sup>23</sup>) is more closely described by recalling his action, when, at the instigation of Peter, he asked who the traitor was. ἀπέκτισεν reproduces ἀναπεσῶν of 13<sup>23</sup> (where see note).

21. τοῦτον σὺν. The rec. om. σὺν with ΑWTΔΘ, but ins. κBCD. Peter has been told that he will die by crucifixion, and he at once asks what is to be the fate of his friend. Latham notes in his character "a peculiar kind of curiosity, which we find in people of very active minds,"<sup>1</sup> and cites 13<sup>23</sup>, where Peter is eager to ascertain at once who is the traitor in the company.

οὐκ ὄντι; "This man, what?" To this the answer is a rebuke, such as Jesus gave more than once to people who were curious about the duty or the destiny of others (see on 14<sup>20</sup>). Dods (in loc.) recalls a man sketched by Thomas à Kempis: "considerat, quod alii facere tenentur, et negligit, quod ipse tenetur" (Imit. Chr. ii. 1)

22. Ἐὰν ἰδῶς ἔθλω κτλ. "If it is My will (θέλω) is here the θέλω of masterful authority, cf. 17<sup>26</sup>) that he should tarry (μένειν) is used of survival, as at 1 Cor. 15<sup>5</sup>) until I come, what is that to thee?"

ἕως ἔρχομαι is literally "while I am coming" (see on 9<sup>4</sup> for ἕως with the pres. indic. in Jn.), but it means here, as at 1 Tim. 4<sup>13</sup>, "until I come."

The emphasis is on ἐὰν θέλω. Jesus is not represented as saying that it is His will that the Beloved Disciple would survive; but if it was His will, that was no concern of Peter's.

That ἕως ἔρχομαι is meant to be interpreted by the Second Coming of Christ is not doubtful (cf. 14<sup>4</sup>). To apply it to the coming of Christ at a disciple's death is a desperate expedient of exegesis; and thus interpreted, the saying is meaningless, for every one "taries" until Christ comes in that sense σὺ μοι ἀκολουθεῖ. "As for you (is is very emphatic), follow me," repeated from v. 19. This is the last precept of Jesus recorded in the last Gospel; and it is the final and essential precept of the Christian life. See on v. 19.

23. ἔξῃθεν σὺν οὐκ ὄντι ὁ λόγος κτλ. "So this saying went forth," etc. Cf. Mk. 1<sup>26</sup> for a similar use of ἔξῃθεν.

ἀδελφοὺς ὅτι ὁ μαθητὴς ἑκάστος οὐκ ἀποθήσκει· οὐκ εἶπεν δὲ αὐτῷ ὁ Ἰησοῦς ὅτι οὐκ ἀποθήσκει, ἀλλ' Ἐάν αὐτὸν θέλω μείναι ἐως ἔρχομαι, τί πρὸς σέ;

οἱ τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς. "The brethren" are the Christian community, who were to each other as brothers (see on 13<sup>34</sup> for the new commandment which enjoined this). The expression is not used thus in the Gospel narratives, where indeed it would be anachronistic, the sense of Christian brotherhood not being realised until after the Resurrection; but we have it often in the Acts (1<sup>18</sup>, 5<sup>29</sup>, 10<sup>25</sup>, etc.), and it appears in Eph. 6<sup>29</sup>. τ Jn. 3<sup>16, 18</sup>, 3 Jn. 8<sup>1</sup>.

ὅτι ὁ μαθητὴς ἑκάστος οὐκ ἀποθήσκει. ὅτι is recitantis, introducing the words of the reported saying. The use of ἐκάστος is Johannine (see on 1<sup>9</sup>).

οὐκ εἶπεν δέ. This is read by  $\kappa\text{BCW}$  33, a strong combination; but the position of δέ is unusual, "perhaps without parallel in Johannine Greek" (Abbott, Diat. 2075). AD, followed by a b e f, have καὶ οὐκ εἶπεν, καὶ being used for καίτοι, a frequent Johannine usage (see on 3<sup>11</sup>). If the original were . . . ΑΠΟΘΗΝΕΣΚΕΙ . . . καὶ might easily have dropped out by accident, and then δέ would be added to make the sense clear.

The comment of the writer upon the saying which he has recorded is quite in the manner of Jn. (see on 2<sup>21</sup>), as are the repetition of the saying itself (cf. 16<sup>18-19</sup>), and the use of the word λόγος for a "saying" of Jesus (see on 2<sup>22</sup>).

τί πρὸς σέ; is om. in this verse by  $\kappa^$ , but is found in  $\kappa^\text{ABCW}\Delta\Theta$ .

Concluding notes of authentication (vv. 24, 25)

24. The Appendix to the Gospel needed a conclusion; it could not have ended with v. 23. V. 24 identifies the Beloved Disciple, of whom vv. 22, 23 tell, with the author (in some sense) of the Gospel; an identification which has not hitherto been made explicitly; and v. 25 adds that much remains unrecorded about the works of Jesus.

V. 24 (like 19<sup>26</sup>), being an explanatory comment on what has gone before, is thoroughly Johannine (see on 2<sup>21</sup>). Jn., i. e. the actual writer of the Gospel, explains that the narratives which he has recorded were derived from the "witness" of the Beloved Disciple. For the present participle μαρτυρῶν, the Sinai Syriac has "bare witness," perhaps implying that the μαθητὴς was dead at the time when the Appendix (or at any rate the postscript) was added. But the language used and the tense of μαρτυρῶν rather suggests that he was alive; cf. "he Apocryph" at 19<sup>26</sup>.

24. Οὐδὲς ἔστιν ὁ μαθητὴς ὁ μαρτυρῶν περὶ τούτων καὶ ὁ γράψας ταῦτα, καὶ οὐδ᾽ αὖτις ὅτι ἀληθὴς αὐτοῦ ἡ μαρτυρία ἐστίν. 25. Ἔστιν

περὶ τούτων probably refers to the whole content of the Gospel, and not merely to the episode recorded in c. 21, although it includes at any rate the latter part of this.

καὶ ὁ γράψας ταῦτα. Prima facie, this indicates that the Beloved Disciple actually wrote the Gospel with his own hand, including the Appendix, and not only that his reminiscences are behind it. But γράφειν is sometimes used when dictation only is intended. E. g. "Pilate wrote a title and put it on the cross" (19<sup>19</sup>) means that Pilate was responsible for the wording of the titulus, but hardly that he wrote himself on the wooden board. So Paul says, "I write the more boldly to you" (Rom. 15<sup>19</sup>), while it appears from Rom. 16<sup>26</sup> that the scribe of the epistle was one Tertius. Cf. Gal. 6<sup>11</sup>, and 1 Pet. 5<sup>12</sup>. The employment of scribes was very common. Further, in Judg. 8<sup>26</sup> the LXX has ἔγραψεν πρὸς αὐτὸν (v.l. ἀνεγράφητο), where the meaning is "he described," i. e. "he caused to be written down," not necessarily that the young prisoner wrote down the list of names sub manu. This is the meaning which we attach to ἔγραψεν in the present passage. The elders of the Church certified that the Beloved Disciple caused these things to be written. They were put into shape by the writer who took them down, and afterwards published them, not as his own, but as "the Gospel according to John." See Introd., p. lix.

καὶ οὐδ᾽ αὖτις ἐστίν. Chrysostom (in loc.) seems to have read οὐκ ἔστιν . . . , and this would give a good sense. "I know," that is, the writer whom we call Jn. knew, that the testimony of the aged disciple was truthful; but it was not to be taken as a complete account of all that Jesus did, μὲν in v. 24 being balanced by δέ in v. 25. Such an attestation, however, by a writer who conceals his name and identity, would not be so impressive as οὐδ᾽ αὖτις (which all the versions follow), the plural representing the concurrence of the presbyters of the Church at Ephesus where the Gospel was produced. For the early traditions to this effect, see Introd., pp. lvi, lix.

Jn. is prone to use οὐδ᾽ αὖτις when he wishes to express the common belief and assurance of the Christian community, e. g. 1 Jn. 3<sup>2, 14</sup> 5<sup>15, 18, 20</sup>; see also on 5<sup>11</sup>.

ὅτι ἀληθὴς αὐτοῦ ἡ μαρτυρία ἐστίν. So BC\*DW, while the rec. has ἀληθ. ἐστίν. ἡ μαρτ. αὐτοῦ, with  $\kappa\text{ACT}\Delta\Theta$ . Cf. 3 Jn. 12.

ὅτι καὶ ἄλλα πολλὰ ἔποίησεν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, ἃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἰκανὸν γράφειν καθ' ἕνα, οὐδ' αὐτὸν οἶμαι τὸν κόσμον χωρῆσαι τὰ γραφόμενα βιβλία.

ὁδὸς ἐστὶ ἡ μαρτυρία ἡμῶν ἐλήθησεν ἵσταν, as well as the parallel 19<sup>m</sup>, where see note. In the paraphrase of Nonnus this attestation clause is omitted at 21<sup>m</sup>.

For the stress laid by Jn. on "truth" and "witness" see on 17<sup>m</sup>, 14, and cf. Introd., p. xci.

25. This verse was omitted from his text by Tischendorf, because he had concluded that it was not in the original text of  $\kappa$ , but had been added by a corrector. His judgment was challenged by Tregelles, and was finally shown by Gwynn to be untenable.<sup>1</sup> There is no documentary authority for omitting the verse; the only MS. which does not now contain it (cursive 63) has lost a page at the end, as Gwynn demonstrated in 1893: ἵσταν 84. These words do not appear in the Sinai Syriac, nor does Chrysostom betray knowledge of them.

Wetstein cites several passages from the Talmud couched in hyperbolic language similar to that of v. 25. A remarkable parallel occurs in Philo, de post. Caini, 43, where it is said that if God wished to display the riches of His creation, the whole earth, land, and sea would not contain them (χωρῆσαι). Cf. 1 Macc. 9<sup>m</sup>, where, however, the figure is not so exaggerated.

ἵσταν ἕως κτλ., " whatsoever things may be written," etc. The constr. is irregular, but the meaning is hardly doubtful. Origin, however, interpreted the verse as meaning that the world would not be equal to the record of such great acts as those of Christ, not merely that it could not contain the books which told of them (see Abbott, Diat. 2414).

The singular οἶμαι, following the plur. οἰδαμεν of v. 24, has been thought to show that vv. 24 and 25 are separate notes from different hands. But this is not necessary to suppose. The writer associates others with himself in the attestation of v. 24, but in the editorial reflection or colophon of v. 25 he speaks only for himself.

ἔμψ, with which the rec. ends, is not part of the true text.

THE "PERICOPE DE ADULTERA"

(VII. 53-VIII. 11)

THE section (περιπέτῃ) of the Fourth Gospel which contains this incident is contained in many late manuscripts and versions, but it cannot be regarded as Johannine or as part of the Gospel text.

It is not found in any of the early Greek uncials, with the single exception of Codex Bezae (D), being omitted without comment in  $\aleph$ NTW<sup>9</sup>. L and  $\Delta$  omit it, while leaving a blank space where it might be inserted, thus indicating that their scribes deliberately rejected it as part of the Johannine text. A and C are defective at this point, but neither could have contained the section, as the missing leaves would not have had room for it.

The section is omitted also in important cursives, e.g. 22, 33, 365 (in which minuscule there is a note that the scribe knew of its existence). The Ferrar cursives, i.e. fam. 13, do not give it in Jn., but place the section after Lk. 21<sup>m</sup>, where it would be, indeed, in better agreement with the context than before Jn. 8<sup>11</sup>. Cursives 1, 132, 15, the fourth century Coptic Q (see p. xvi). Some of the O.L. MSS. are also without it, e.g. a f<sup>18</sup> g.

The Old Syriac vs. (whether in Tatian's Diatessaron, Syr. sin. or Syr. cur.) betray no knowledge of the passage, nor is it contained in the best MSS. of the Peshitta. In like manner the Coptic vs. omit it, i.e. the fourth century Coptic Q (see p. xvi). Some of the O.L. MSS. are also without it, e.g. a f<sup>18</sup> g.

Even more significant is the absence of any comment on the section by Greek commentators for a thousand years after Christ, including Origen, Chrysostom, and Nonnus (in his metrical paraphrase), who deal with the Gospel verse by verse. The earliest Greek writer (Euthymius Zigabenus or Zygiadenus) who comments on it lived about 1118, and even he says that the accurate copies of the Gospel do not contain it.

Further, the evidence of vocabulary and style is conclusive against the Johannine authorship of the section. The notes which follow demonstrate this sufficiently. Nor in its traditional place does it harmonise with the context. It interrupts the sequence of 7<sup>11</sup> and 8<sup>11</sup>; while 7<sup>11</sup> is not in harmony with what goes before, and has no connexion with 8<sup>11</sup>.

The early Greek evidence in favour of the medieval view that the section is an authentic part of the Fourth Gospel reduces itself to the witness of Codex Bezae (D), a manuscript with many other Western interpolations. The section is found in the great mass of later uncials and cursives, whatever be the reason of this intrusion into the more ancient text. To be borne in mind, however, is the significant fact that in many of the later MSS. which contain it, the Pericope de adultera is marked with an obelus (e.g. S) or an asterisk (e.g. EMA).

appears in several O.L. texts, e.g. b s (sec. v.) and ff. (sec. vii.), as well as in Jerome's Vulgate. Jerome says expressly, "in multis graecis et latina codicibus inuenitur de adultera," etc. (adv. Pelag. i. 17). Augustine (de cons. adu. l. ii. 0) accounts for its omission from some texts, by hinting that the words of Jesus which it records might seem too lenient.

The section is found also in some late Syrian and Coptic texts, while omitted in the earlier and better versions.

These facts show that the authorities on the side of the Pericope are almost wholly Western, and do not become numerous in any language until after the acceptance by Jerome of the section as Johannine. Jerome seems to have followed here some Greek MSS. not now extant. This evidence is, however, wholly insufficient to justify the inclusion of the narrative in the Fourth Gospel. The ignoring of it by the early Greek MSS., viz., and commentators is thus left unexplained.

Nevertheless, the story of the adulteress seems to be an authentic fragment of early tradition as to the sayings and actions of Jesus. The story is mentioned (although not referred to the Fourth Gospel) in the Apostolic Constitutions (ll. 24), a passage which goes back to the fourth century or perhaps even to the third. It must have been current as a tradition in the third century at any rate. Eusebius probably refers to it when he says of Papias that "he relates another story of a woman who was accused of many sins before the Lord which is contained in the Gospel according to the Hebrews" (Bas. H.E. iii. 39). Whether Papias got the story from the extra-canonical "Gospel according to the Hebrews," or from some other source, is not certain. But that the Pericope de adultera is the story which Papias told has been accepted by many critics; and accordingly, in Lightfoot's Apostolic Fathers the passage [L. vii. 53-viii. 11] is printed as one of the surviving fragments of Papias, bishop of Hierapolis.

This is highly probable, but is not certain. All we can assert with confidence is that the passage is very like the Synoptic stories about Jesus; while its tenderness and gravity commend it as faithfully representing what Jesus said and did when a woman who had sinned unchastely was brought before Him.

No reason for the ready acceptance in the West of the story as evangelical, and of its incorporation in the Latin Gospels as early as the fourth century, can be assigned with certainty. It is perhaps significant that in the Apostolic Constitutions (ll. 24), where we find the narrative for the first time, it is cited as a lesson to bishops who are inclined to be too severe to penitents. Now writers like Origen, Tertullian, and Cyprian, who discuss at length the problems of discipline for adultery, never mention this case. Like the rest of the Church, East and West, in the second and third centuries, they held that punishment for fornication ought to be very severe, inasmuch as it seemed essential to mark the divergence of Christian ethics from heathen ethics on this point. But by the time we reach the fourth century, ecclesiastical discipline began to be relaxed and to be less austere; and a story which had been formerly thought dangerous because of its apparent leniency would naturally be appealed to by canonists and divines as indicating the tenderness with which our Lord Himself rebuked sins of the flesh. It was but a short step from quoting the story as edifying to treating it as suitable for reading in Church. It would thus get into lectionaries, and in the Greek Menology it is the lecture for St. Pelagia's day. From its insertion in Evangelistaria, it readily crept into Gospel texts, from which Jerome did not feel it

vii. 53. Καὶ ἐπαρήχθη ἑστάναι εἰς τὸ σκεῦος αὐτοῦ. viii. 1. Ἰσχυαί ἐστι ἐπαρήχθη εἰς τὸ ὄπισθ' ἑκείνου. 2. Ὁμοῦν δὲ πάλιν παρεγένετο εἰς τὰ ἑσθία, καὶ αὐτὴ ἦν ἁλοῦσα πρὸς αὐτόν, καὶ κατέλας ἐπιθεῖσαι αὐτόν. 3. Ἄγουσιν δὲ οἱ γραμματεῖς καὶ οἱ θαραῖται ἡγοῦσιν εἶναι μοιχὴν κατελομαμένην, καὶ ἐπιpracticable to expel it. Perhaps thus, or somewhat thus, is that adopted by the testes recensius of the Fourth Gospel to be so explained.

The text of the Pericope which is given here is that adopted by Hort. The various readings are more numerous than in any other part of the N.T., and a large number of explanatory glosses were added to the text in ancient times. Hort's analysis of these can hardly be improved. We have to do here only with the later uncials, and these are cited by the customary letters (EGH, etc.) as explained by Gregory or Scrivener. We cite the cursive 1077 because of its remarkable agreement with D in this section. (See K. Lake, Texts from Mount Athos, p. 1481.)

VII. 53. ἐπαρήχθη. So D, etc., with O.L. and vg.; the rec. has ἐπαρήχθη with minor uncials and fam. 13.

παρήχθη εἰς . . . occurs only at 7th in Jn., who prefers σπ. σπ (cf. 14th 16th 20th); the constr. is common in the Synoptists.

VIII. 1. τὸ ὄπισθ' ἑκείνου is, again, a Synoptic term, not occurring again in Jn. When Jn. introduces a place-name for the first time he is apt to add a word of explanation (4th 11th), but nothing of the kind is here.

Mention of the Mount of Olives would fall in with the story referring to the week before the Passion, when Jesus lodged at Bethany; cf. Mk. 11: 1-2.

2. ὁμοῦν is Lucan (Lk. 24th; cf. Acts 5th); Jn. does not use it, but has σπ instead (18th 20th 21th).

The frequent use of σπ in this section to the exclusion of Jn.'s favourite εἰς (see on 1st) marks the style as non-Johannine.

παρήχθη. D 1077 have παρήχθη. The verb occurs in Jn. only once (5th), σπ is read by fam. 13.

ἁλοῦσα is found in Jn. only twice (11th 18th); he prefers εχλοῦσα, which some MSS. give here.

The clause καὶ αὐτὴ ἦν ἁλοῦσα . . . ἐπιθεῖσαι αὐτόν is omitted by fam. 13; while D om. καὶ κατέλας ἐπιθεῖσαι αὐτόν.

For αὐτόν, as describing the attitude of Jesus when teaching see on 6th (cf. Mk. 13th). Jn. generally specifies the nature of Jesus' teaching in the Temple (cf. 7th 8th), but at 7th he writes simply ἐπιθεῖσαι as here.

3. For ἄγουσιν εἰς, fam. 13 gives αὐτὴν παρελομαμένην εἰς.

οἱ γραμματεῖς. There is no mention of scribes in Jn. "Scribes and Pharisees" is a frequent Synoptic phrase for the opponents of Jesus, whom Jn. prefers to describe briefly as "the Jews" (see on 18th).

The woman was not brought before Jesus for formal trial, but in order to get His expression of opinion on a point of the Mosaic law, which might afterwards be used against Him (see v. 6), of which other examples are given by the Synoptists (cf. Mk. 12th 14).

Some minor uncials ins. σπ εἰς before ἡγοῦσιν, but om. D 1077 and fam. 13.

εἶναι μοιχὴν is supported by the uncials MSUTA and fam. 13; εἶναι μοιχὴν is read by EGHKL, and is smoothed down in D 1077 to εἶναι μοιχῆν.

κατελομαμένην. κατελομαμένην, "to overtake," occurs in Jn. 1st 12th. Milligan gives from a fourth- or fifth-century papyrus an exact parallel to the present passage, where it is used of detection in sin, viz.: ἡγοῦσιν καταλομαμένην ἐπὶ τῷ ψευδοῦσιν μετὰ μοιχῆν.

οὐρανὸν ἀνοίξῃ ἐν μέσῳ, 4. λέγουσιν αὐτῷ διδασκαλοὶ, ἀπὸ γὰρ τῆς καρδιᾶς ἐκ' αὐτοῦ ῥέουσιν ψαλμοὶ; 5. ἐπὶ δὲ τῷ ῥόμῳ τῶν Μωυσῆς ἐνετέτατο τὰς ταφάδας καθίστασθαι οὐδὲ τί λέγουσιν; 6. τοῦτο δὲ ἔλεγον ταπεινὸν αὐτῷ, ἵνα ἔκωσεν σφραγίσαντες αὐτῷ ἐν μέσῳ (ἐν τῷ μέσῳ, John. 13). Cf. Acts 4<sup>1</sup> for the phrase descriptive of "setting" people in the midst of bystanders for the purpose of examining them.

4. After αὐτῷ, D adds ἐκτετατότερον αὐτῷ, and EGHK 1071 κερδοῦντες only. The phrase with ἐκτετατότερον is Lucan; cf. Lk. 10<sup>44</sup>.

For καθίστασθαι, see on 1<sup>24</sup>.

For κερδοῦντες, (D 1071), MSA and John. 13 have αἰσῆται, while EGHK 1071 give κεραιφόροι.

ἐκ' αὐτοῦ ῥέει, "in the act" The phrase does not occur again in the Greek Bible, but is thoroughly classical. Cf. Philo, de spec. leg. iii. 10, ῥέουσι δὲ τὰς ψαλμοὺς ἀπέθανον ἐκ μέσου. Milligan illustrates from a second-century papyrus τὰς καρφάδας ἐκ' αὐτοῦ ῥέουσιν.

κεραιφῶν does not occur in Jn., but several times in the Synoptists.

5. ἐπὶ δὲ τῷ ῥόμῳ κτλ. In an ordinary case of adultery (e.g. Lev. 20<sup>10</sup>) the penalty was death for both parties, but the manner of execution is not specified, the Talmud prescribing death by strangulation. But in the exceptional and specially heinous case of a betrothed woman's unchastity, death was to be by stoning (Deut. 22<sup>24</sup>). It was an unusual case like this that was put before Jesus.

These severe laws were rarely put in force, but nevertheless the dilemma was neatly framed. If He said that the guilty woman should be stoned, He would have been subject to the Roman law for inciting to murder; and although the Roman authorities were lax on occasion about such acts of violence (as in the case of Stephen, Acts 7<sup>59</sup>), there would have been a good pretext for handing Him over to them to deal with. If, however, He inclined to more merciful treatment, as was probably expected of Him, He would have been declared by His critics to be a blasphemous person who did not accept the sacraments of the sacred law. Cf. Mk. 12<sup>24</sup> for the dilemma about the tribute money; and Mk. 10<sup>10</sup> for the question about divorce, which, however puzzling, would not involve difficulty with the Roman authorities.

Augustine, however, puts the dilemma in a simpler way: "Si ut inberet occidi perderet mansuetudinis faciem; si autem inberet dimitti incurreret, tanquam reprehensor legis, calumniam" (Enchir. s. Ps. l. 58). This may be right, but it does not recall the attempts to entrap Jesus recorded by the Synoptists.

For the first clause D has Μωυσῆς δὲ ἐν τῷ ῥόμῳ τέλειον. For ἀβέβαιον (cf. 10<sup>26</sup>), which is read by DMSU 1071 and John. 13, the rec. has ἀβεβήσιον (the verb used Deut. 22<sup>24</sup>) with EGHK.

After λέγουσιν ἵνα τῷ αὐτῷ MSA John. 13 c. ff.

6. From τοῦτο δὲ τῷ σατυρ. αὐτῷ is om. by DM, the clause appearing in the rec. supported by SUL John. 13 (in the form κεραιφῶν κατ' αὐτῷ). Such laying of traps for Jesus is often mentioned in the Synoptists, e.g. Mk. 8<sup>14</sup>, Lk. 11<sup>16</sup>.

κατ' is retained used by Jn., but cf. κεραιφῶν κατ' followed by a genitive, at 18<sup>26</sup>.

κἀνα κήφας is read here, but κεραιφῶν at v. 8, "having stooped down," καταστάντων occur again in the Greek Bible only at 4 Kings 9<sup>24</sup>, in the sense of "peeping out"; see, for κεραιφῶν, on 20<sup>1</sup>. For καταστάντων, "to stoop," Milligan cites Aristotle Et. 1.

κατ'αὐτῷ. So DEGHMS, but KUFJ John. 13 have ἑταίρου. κεραιφῶν does not occur again in N.T., but appears several times κεραιφῶν αὐτῷ. δὲ τὸ ἱερὸν κἀνα κήφας τῷ θεῷ κατ'αὐτῷ εἰς τὸν γῆρ. 7. ἃς δὲ ἐπέταρον ἑταίρους αὐτῷ, ἀπέχετο καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ ὅ in LXX, often meaning "to register," a sense also found in papyri. It indicates a record or register of something blasphemously in Job 13<sup>7</sup>, 1 Esdr. 2<sup>10</sup>, Eccles. 4<sup>14</sup>; and this meaning is accepted in some ancient comments, both here and at v. 8.

In a short recension of the story found in an Armenian MS. of the Gospels of A.D. 989, we have: "He Himself, bowing His head, was writing with His finger on the earth, to declare their sins; and they were seeing their several sins on the stones."<sup>1</sup> And again, after τὸν γῆρ in v. 8, U and some curatives add ἑταίρου αὐτῷ τὰς ἀμαρτίας, as if Jesus was writing down the names and sins of the several accusers. Jerome has the same tradition: "Jesus inclinans digito scribebat in terra, eorum, uidelicet qui accusabant et omnium peccata mortalium, secundum quod scriptum est in prophetia. Religiones tuas autem in terra scribentur" (adv. Pelagianum li. 17, citing Jer. 17<sup>18</sup>).

There is, however, no evidence that Jesus was writing anything by way of record. That He was able to write may be assumed, although in no other place in the N.T. is He said to have written anything. But it is probable that on this occasion He was only scribbling with His finger on the ground, a mechanical action which would suggest only an unwillingness to speak on the subject brought before Him, and preoccupation with His own thoughts.<sup>2</sup>

If, however, the meaning of επιγράφει for κεραιφῶν is to be pressed, the emphasis must be placed on εἰς τὸν γῆρ: "He began to register the accusation in the dust," as if He would have no permanent record.

After γῆρ the rec. adds, with EGHK, the gloss πῶς προσετίθειτο, "affecting that it was not so," sc. "as though He heard them not." This is a classical use of προσετίθειτο with a neg. (cf. Thucyd. iii. 47); the verb occurs again in the N.T. only at Lk. 24<sup>34</sup> (cf. 1 Sam. 21<sup>11</sup>, προσετίθειτο, "feigned himself," sc. to be mad).

7. ἑταίρου ἑταίρους, "they went on asking," as at Acts 13<sup>24</sup> ἑταίρου κητόν. ἑταίρους does not occur in Jn.

D om. αὐτῷ, ἑταίρους; then being used absolutely or intransitively, as in the (unusual) instance of Jn. 17<sup>7</sup>.

ἀπέχετο κτλ. So D 1071. The rec., with EGHK, has ἀπέχεσθαι (cf. v. 10), while John. 13 give ἀβέβαιον. In the N.T. ἀβέβαιον is found again only Lk. 13<sup>14</sup>, 21<sup>28</sup>, "to lift oneself up"; ἀβέβαιον is in all the Gospels.

εἶπεν αὐτῷ. So DSUP 1071 John. 13. M om. αὐτῷ. EGHK have ἑταίρῳ αὐτῷ, the rec. reading.

ἀ ἀμαρτίας ἑταίρῳ. "Let him that is faultless," etc. This is the true Synoptic note. ἀμαρτίας does not indicate only innocence of overt sins of the flesh, but freedom from sinful desire cherished and

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps Seeley's comment hits on the truth: "He was seized with an intolerable sense of shame. He could not meet the eyes of the crowd, or of the accusers, and perhaps at that moment least of all of the woman. . . . In His burning embarrassment and confusion He stooped down so as to hide His face, and began writing with His fingers on the ground" (Eccle Homo, c. ix.).

ἀναστάντες ἄνω πρῶτος ἐν ἄστρον βαλέτω λίθον. 8. καὶ ἄλλοι κατακρίνας ἔγραψαν εἰς τὴν γῆν. 9. οὐ μὲν ἄκουσαντος ἐπιβήσαντο εἰς καθ' ἐξ ἀφ' ἑαυτῶν ἀπὸ τῶν προσβιβάτων, καὶ καταπέδη μόνου, μὴ φ' ἦν ἐν μέσῳ αὐτοῦ. 10. ἀνακρίνας δὲ δ' Ἰησοῦς εἶπεν αὐτῷ, ἴσους, τοῦ εἶπε; οὐδέ τις ἀπεκρίθη; indulged in. Cf. Mt. 5<sup>m</sup>. ἀναστάντες does not occur again in N.T., but is found Dent. 29<sup>14</sup>, 2 Mac. 8<sup>14</sup>, 12<sup>14</sup>.

For πρῶτος (D 1071), EGH give πρῶτον. βαλέτω λίθον. So D and fam. 13. Other uncials read τὸν λίθον, to bring out the point that the casting of the first stone was the duty of the witnesses who testified to the crime (Dent. 17). But the allusion is the same, even if τὸν is omitted. The question of Jesus asks, in fact, who is to be the executioner in this case? (cf. Augustine, Sermo xiii. § 4).

8. καὶ ἄλλοι κτλ. Jesus again indicates His unwillingness to discuss the matter with the Pharisees. He begins to scribble on the dust for the second time. τὸ δακτύλον ἐστὶν here after κατακρίνας by D 28, 74, 1071 ff.; but om. fam. 13.

As at v. 6, fam. 13 support ἔγραψαν for κατέγραψαν (so D 28, 31).

9. The rec., following EGHKs, after ἀκούσαντες interpolates the explanatory gloss καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς συνειδήσεως ἐπιβήσαντο: om. DMUFA fam. 13, 1071 and the Lat. ver.

For the whole clause of δὲ δὲ . . . καθ' ἐξ, D gives only ἑαυτοῦς δὲ τῶν ἰουδαίων ἐβήσαντο, while fam. 13 have only ἐβήσαν εἰς καθ' ἐξ.

After προσβιβάτων the rec. adds, with SUA fam. 13, ἡτοι τῶν ἐπιβήτων, while D 1071 add ὅστε πάντες ἐβήσαν, but both additions are om. in EGHKMT, etc. Westcott-Hort suggest that πάντες ἀπεβιβάσαντο (cf. M 264) originally followed προσβιβάτων as an independent clause.

The glosses are unnecessary, although doubtless right in the explanations they offer. The elder men (προβιβάται, a word not occurring in Jn.; cf. 2 Jn. 1, 3 Jn. 1) were naturally the first to leave, having taken the lead in trying to ensnare Jesus, and having been silenced by His suggestion that they must have felt the power of the temptation which had overcome the woman. If the scene is to be placed in the week following the Triumphal Entry, their acquiescence in the moral authority which Jesus exercised is more readily intelligible. They dared not press the moral issue before the admiring and awe-struck people.

For εἰς καθ' ἐξ, cf. Mk. 14<sup>18</sup>: it is not a Johannine phrase. καὶ καταπέδη μόνου. μόνου is om. by fam. 13. Perhaps some disciples were present, and nothing is said of their going away, but the words may mean that Jesus and the woman were left quite alone (as the rec. text indicates), the onlookers feeling the painfulness of the scene. Augustine says: "Remansit magna miseria et magna misericordia" (Ennar. in Fr. l. § 8). Yet the woman remained ἐν μέσῳ, which suggests the presence of a little group; and, furthermore, the words that Jesus said to her were overheard and were preserved.

καταπέδη. The verb καταπέδη is not used by Jn.

10. For ἀνακρίνας (cf. v. 7), fam. 13 with ἄ τινος ἀνακρίνας. After δ' Ἰησοῦς the rec., with EGHK, adds the gloss καὶ ἀμύθηθαι θεοσέμειον πλὴν τῆς γυναίκος, but om. DMS and fam. 13. πλὴν ἐξ is never used by Jn.

D 1071 have εἶπεν τῷ γυναικί, but MSUT fam. 13 have εἶπεν, ἴσους. The rec., with cursive support, has εἶπεν αὐτῷ, ἢ γυναι, the nom. with the article being used for the vocative, a Hebrew use that occurs Mk. 14<sup>31</sup>, Mt. 11<sup>25</sup>, Lk. 10<sup>41</sup>, but not in Jn. (see on 17<sup>21</sup>).

11. ἢ δὲ εἶπεν Οὐδέτις, κίριος. εἶπεν δὲ δ' Ἰησοῦς Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω πρῶτος, ἀπὸ τοῦ τῶν μαρτύρων ἀπάρατος.

τοῦ εἶπε; The rec. adds ἀκούων καὶ κατέγραψεν σου, and fam. 13 has the gloss, omitting ἀκούων; but om. DMUFA 1071.

οὐδέ τις κατακρίνας; The compound κατακρίνας is not Johannine. In this verse, Jesus is represented as waiting for a little before He spoke. "Has no one proceeded to condemn you?" is His question at last.

11. Οὐδέτις, κίριος. "No one, sir." That is all the woman says from beginning to end. Indeed, she has no excuse for her conduct.

Οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω. The verbal similarity of these words to ἐγὼ δὲ κίριος of 8<sup>m</sup> (where see note) may have suggested the position which the interpolated section occupies in the rec. text, viz. at the beginning of c. 8. But κατακρίνας conveys condemnation in a degree which the simple verb εἶπεν does not connote. Jesus does not say here that He does not pass judgment, even in His own mind, upon the woman's conduct, but that He does not condemn her judicially or undertake the duty of a judge who had to administer or interpret the Mosaic law (cf. Lk. 12<sup>41</sup>). Still less does His reply convey forgiveness; the woman who was forgiven in Lk. 7<sup>48</sup> was a penitent, but there is no hint of penitence in this case.

Probably, the apparent leniency of the words οὐδὲ ἐγὼ σε κατακρίνω (which could readily be misunderstood) led to their omission in the tenth-century Armenian MS. quoted above on v. 6, and also in a Syriac paraphrase given by Dionysius Barsalibi.<sup>1</sup> The Armenian codex ends, "Go in peace, and present the offering for sins, as in their law is written," while the Syriac paraphrase has only, "Go thou also now and do this sin no more."

The warning εἶπεν ἀπάρατος is found also at 5<sup>11</sup>, where (as here) the person addressed has not confessed any sin. The woman had still time to repent.

ἀπὸ τοῦ τῶν ἐστὶν by fam. 13, but ins. DMUFA 1071. The phrase is Lucan (Lk. 1<sup>16</sup> 5<sup>18</sup> 12<sup>42</sup> 22<sup>20</sup>) but not Johannine.
